Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with representatives of other Governments concerning the implementation of the United Nations declaration No. 261.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of India to implement the United Nations resolution calling for a referendum in the disputed territories of Jammu and Kashmir.

Mr. Sainsbury: Britain voted in favour of the various United Nations resolutions on Kashmir. Much has happened since, including the 1972 Simla agreement on bilateral relations between India and Pakistan. We believe that the status of Kashmir can be settled only by agreement between the two sides.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Governments of India and Pakistan concerning Kashmir; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have made clear in our regular contacts with the Indian and Pakistani Governments that we believe that the status of Kashmir can be settled only by agreement between the two sides. We have also made it clear that we have no sympathy with those who espouse violence for political ends.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has recently made concerning civil rights in Kashmir; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: In our recent contacts with the Indian Government we have recognised the serious problems of violence they face in Jammu and Kashmir, and expressed our hope that they will deal with the situation with restraint. We have also made clear that we have no sympathy with those who espouse violence for political ends.

Foreign Aid

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs further to his answer in the Official Report, 31 January, column 190, what funds are included under the heading United Kingdom gross bilateral aid.

Mr. Waldegrave: Gross bilateral aid comprises financial and technical co-operation provided to recipient countries on a government-to-government basis for agreed projects and programmes, investments by the Commonwealth Development Corporation, support for British institutions concerned with overseas development, including support for the voluntary agencies working overseas, food aid and humanitarian assistance, and aid debt relief.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the last five years (a) the flows of aid from the United Kingdom to (i) Argentina, (ii) Brazil, (iii) Colombia, (iv) El Salvador, (v) Mexico, (vi) Nicaragua, (vii) Panama and (viii) all remaining South American nations and (b) the proportions in each case of this aid tied to trade deals involving United Kingdom companies.

Mr. Waldegrave: The answer is as follows:

Footnote:

The United Kingdom does not provide aid to the Government of South Africa but does give aid to black South Africans disadvantaged by apartheid, through the TC programme for black South Africans. It is excluded from gross public expenditure as South Africa is not classified by OECD as a developing country. The amounts given through this scheme were as follows (in £ thousands): 494 in 1984, 691 in 1985, 772 in 1986, 1,577 in 1987, 4,288 in 1988.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the last five years (a) the flows of aid from the United Kingdom to (i) Angola, (ii) Ethiopia, (iii) Kenya, (iv) Tanzania, (v) Uganda, (vi) Zaire and (vii) all remaining central and eastern African nations, listing those classified under this regional grouping and (b) the proportions in each case of this aid tied to trade deals involving United Kingdom companies.

[2]Ireland not included in 1980 and 1981 as figures not available.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, further to his reply, Official Report, 31 January, column 190, he will list those countries included under the headings South America, Africa and Asia and the middle east as being beneficiaries of United Kingdom bilateral aid and trade flows; and if he will list any other beneficiaries not classified under these three groupings.

Mr. Waldegrave The following countries were beneficiaries of funds from the aid and trade provision in the period 1984-88:

South America
Brazil
Colombia
Paraguay
Peru

Africa
Botswana
Cameroon
Egypt
Kenya
Madagascar
Malawi
Mauritius
Mozambique
Tunisia
Zimbabwe

Asia and Middle East
Burma
China
India
Indonesia
Jordan
Malaysia
Philippines
Sri Lanka
Thailand
Yemen Arab Republic

Other Beneficiaries
Belize
Cyprus
Panama
Turkey
Leeward Islands

Further details can be found in "British Aid Statistics 1984-88," a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement as to the anticipated consequences for developing and under developed countries of the European Communities 1992 programme, in respect of their aid and trade relations with (a) the European Community, (b) individual European Community nations and (c) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waldegrave: The creation of a single market in 1992 will not affect the way the European Community and individual member states decide their aid programmes to developing countries. The United Kingdom maintains a substantial and effective aid programme and will continue to do so. The single market programme will integrate the economies of the EC member states more closely. By removing barriers to trade and increasing the size of the market it should provide new opportunities for those of our trading partners outside the Community.

Cambodia

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on the Australian proposal to partition Cambodia into two zones, one held by the Khmer Rouge and the other by Phnom Penh.

Mr. Waldegrave: Senator Evans' proposal for a UN-administered interim authority in Cambodia pending free and fair elections does not envisage the partition of Cambodia. We strongly support the Australian initiative which the permanent members of the UN Security Council are actively pursuing.

Rain Forest

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he hopes to meet non-governmental organisations on the rain forest; and if he will make a statement to the House subsequent to the meeting.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development has regular contact with representatives of the non-governmental organisations on environmental matters including the rain forests. She or ODA officials are ready to meet NGO representatives at short notice if issues arise which require this.

South Africa

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the South African authorities concerning the human rights implications of the continued imprisonment of those persons who have refused to serve in the South African defence forces for reasons of faith.

Mr. Waldegrave: The South African Defence Act makes provision for conscientious objection on religious grounds. We understand why some young South Africans choose to refuse military service and we respect the strength and sincerity of their views. Such decisions are, however, a matter for the individuals concerned.

CIVIL SERVICE

Code of Practice

98. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service how many complaints were made to him during 1989 about the operation of the Civil Service code of practice.

Mr. Luce: Individual complaints about the operation of the conduct provisions of the Civil Service pay and conditions of service code are dealt with by the Department concerned. I receive representations of a more general nature from time to time.

Trade Unions

101. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service when he last met representatives of the Civil Service trade unions; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Luce: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, Central (Mr. Fisher).

Racial Discrimination

102. Mr. Soames: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service how he intends to counter racial discrimination in appointments to the Civil Service.

Mr. Luce: The Civil Service is an equal opportunity employer; selection is on merit by fair and open competition. Action to support this policy includes monitoring recruitment procedures, validating selection tests for different racial groups and equal opportunity training for those involved in selection.

Vetting

100. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement on the vetting procedures in the Civil Service.

Mr. Luce: The vetting system is an important element of the protective arrangements which exist to counter threats to security. It is not the practice to give detailed information about the system.

Obligations to the Crown

103. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service pursuant to his answer of 6 February, if he will make a statement on the meeting between the Civil Service unions and the head of the home Civil Service to discuss wider obligations to the Crown in Parliament.

Mr. Luce: The head of the home Civil Service met the Civil Service unions on 7 February to discuss a range of matters, including the proposed revision of the paragraphs of the Civil Service pay and conditions of service code which deal with the use of official information. He has undertaken to write to the unions confirming assurances given to them at the meeting that there is no inconsistency between proposed code revision and the note by his predecessor on the duties and responsibilities of civil servants in relation to Ministers, which was published in the Official Report on 2 December 1987, and in particular that the proposed revision does not impose duties and obligations on civil servants which conflict with any statutory or other responsibilities they may have.

Civil Service College

Mr. Battle: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the quality of service performance indicators that have been introduced into the Civil Service college since its establishment as an agency.

Mr. Luce: Since the beginning of 1990, ratings of the quality of the Civil Service college's training, accommodation, catering and support services have contributed to an overall value for money indicator. This new performance indicator complements the course evaluation indicator which was in operation before the transition to agency status.

Agencies

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the Civil Service agencies that have been established with the dates and the number of staff employed in each case.

Mr. Luce: The information requested by the hon. Member is set out in the table.

Agency	Established	Staff
Vehicle Inspectorate	1 August 1988	1,550
Companies House	3 October 1988	1,150

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Exports

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement on the action which he is taking to increase British exports.

Mr. Redwood: My Department and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office provide through the export initiative a package of measures offering a wide range of practical help, advice and support to United Kingdom exporters.

Our clear aim is to encourage potential exporters to consider selling overseas and existing exporters to sell more. The decision to export of course rests with individual firms: it is they who will determine whether they are successful. Our role is to help them in their decision-making and to provide the services they require to enter export markets. Our services are closely monitored to ensure they continue to meet the needs of exporters.

It is encouraging to see that the volume of exports, excluding oil and erratic items, was 10 per cent. higher in 1989 than in 1988.

Japan

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the steps being taken to open the Japanese market to exports from Britain.

Mr. Redwood: The Government have two main trade policy objectives with regard to further opening the Japanese market to exports from Britain. First, to encourage the Japanese authorities to pursue structural reforms to sustain the shift in the balance of their economy from growth led by exports to growth led by domestic demand. Secondly, to secure the removal of the remaining specific barriers to market access. We have been successful: few such barriers remain, and where they do the Government campaign vigorously for their removal in cooperation with the European Commission. We are also strenuously promoting business awareness of the opportunities in the Japanese market and the improvement of our businessmen's skills in the Japanese language. Last year United Kingdom exports to Japan increased by £525 million to £2·3 billion, an increase of 30 per cent. over 1988.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received regarding access to the Japanese market for British exports.

Mr. Redwood: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Industry on 6 December. Last year, our exports to Japan increased in value by 30·1 per cent.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans his Department has to promote exports from the north-east to eastern European countries.

Mr. Redwood: My Department is encouraging business men to look hard at the new commercial opportunities in eastern Europe. DTI Ministers are playing their part both by receiving incoming delegations and by leading business missions themselves. At the end of last year the Minister for Trade and I led business teams to the USSR and Hungary respectively. In the course of the next two months the Secretary of State and I will be taking business men to the USSR, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Romania while the Minister for Trade will be visiting British stands at the Leipzig fair in the GDR.

My Department is also encouraging British business to take full advantage of the several United Kingdom, EC and multilateral assistance schemes becoming available to help explore the new opportunities for direct investment, joint ventures, and other forms of industrial cooperation. Potential exporters from the north-east can take advantage of the advice from my Department's export service staff in the regional office in Newcastle.

Leeds Task Force

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the work of the inner-city task force in Leeds with regard to securing jobs and training for local people and giving assistance to existing local firms and start-up businesses; and how many private sector companies have supported task-force projects in Leeds.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government's Chapeltown and Harehills task force has committed £5 million to support some 130 projects. These should create over 340 jobs and more than 3,500 training places for residents of the area. Seventy-three existing businesses and 137 new businesses have received assistance, primarily through the task force's development fund. More than 50 of the projects involve private sector funding.

Cosmetics (Additives)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what controls exist over the use of additives in cosmetics; if he will publish a list of those additives whose use is permitted in cosmetics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The ingredients of cosmetics are regulated by the Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1989 SI 1989 No. 2233. Suppliers are permitted to use only those preservatives and colourants on the "permitted lists" in schedules 3 and 4, and in future no further anti-oxidants are to be prescribed by future directives.

Electric Vehicles

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on non-governmental research being carried out in the United Kingdom to develop road vehicles powered by electricity.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Companies carrying out research into various aspects of electric vehicle (EV) technology include Chloride EV Systems which has a joint venture with General Motors to develop the electric "G Van" and Lucas Industries (UK) which is collaborating with United States and Swedish companies to develop traction batteries.

Garston Amhurst

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to exercise his powers under the Financial Services and Companies Acts to trace funds invested in the Garston Amhurst Associates Group (a) in an account at Barclays bank, Lewisham and (b) overseas.

Mr. Redwood: On 25 January 1990 the Official Receiver was appointed provisional liquidator of five companies in the Garston Amhurst Associates group, following petitions for compulsory winding-up orders to be made against the companies by the Securities and Investments Board. The Official Receiver's inquiries into the assets of the companies are continuing. I am satisfied that the Official Receiver has sufficient powers under the Insolvency Act 1986 to carry out his functions as provisional liquidator.

Television Sets

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many television sets were imported into Great Britain in 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The number of television sets imported into the United Kingdom in 1989 was 1,885,000.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many television sets were manufactured in Great Britain in 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The number of television sets manufactured in Great Britain in 1989 is provisionally estimated at 2·6 million.

Reeve Leisure Limited

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning timeshare promotion schemes of Reeve Leisure Ltd., of Kings avenue, New Malden; and what action he proposes to take.

Mr. Forth: I have received a number of complaints about the promotional activities of Reeve Leisure Ltd. as well as complaints about other timeshare companies. My hon. Friend will be aware that I asked the Director General of Fair Trading in June 1989 to undertake a review of the whole range of timeshare problems and to let me have his recommendations in the early part of this year.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement on the recycling of chlorofluorocarbons from the foam in refrigerators.

Mr. Forth: There are technical difficulties in extracting chlorofluorocarbons from the foam in refrigerators, and I know of no full-scale system operating anywhere at present. My Department has commissioned Coopers and Lybrand to carry out a wide-ranging study into chlorofluorocarbons use, including the technical and economic options for their recovery, recycling and destruction. That study is due to be completed shortly.

Loan Sharks

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the increasing activities of loan sharks on council estates in Manchester; what reply he is sending; if there is any action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The only representations my right hon. Friend has received are those contained in the right hon. Member's letter of 1 February, to which a reply will be sent shortly. The law, in particular the consumer Credit Act 1974 and the Administration of Justice Act 1970, provides the enforcement authorities with appropriate powers to protect the public from loan sharks. The Director General of Fair Trading and local authorities have the duty of enforcing consumer credit legislation whilst enforcement of other relevant laws is a matter for the police.

Ferranti Defence Systems

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Office of Fair Trading began its investigation into the planned GEC acquisition of Ferranti Defence Systems; and when it hopes to report.

Mr. Redwood: The Director General of Fair Trading has submitted his recommendation on the merger to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, who announced on 9 February 1990 that he has decided, in accordance with the director general's recommendation, not to refer the proposed acquisition by the General Electric Company plc of Ferranti Defence Systems Group and of Ferranti International plc's interests in Ferranti Italia SRL to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Japanese Car Plants (United Kingdom)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is aware of any requirement by Japanese car manufacturers in the United Kingdom for United Kingdom component manufacturers in future to enter into joint ventures with Japanese companies in order to be qualified to tender for work in United Kingdom-located Japanese car plants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Japanese car manufacturers based in the United Kingdom operate no general rule of this kind. If there are any instances in which a Japanese car manufacturer has told a potential United Kingdom component supplier that a joint venture will be necessary, that is a matter for commercial negotiation between the parties.

Agencies (Performance Indicators)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the quaity of service performance indicators that have been introduced into Companies House, the National Weights and Measures Laboratory, the Warren Spring Laboratory and the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, respectively, since their establishment as agencies.

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the replies given to my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) on 15 January 1990.

Mining Engineering

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to meet the directors of mining engineering companies in the west Yorkshire area to discuss production and export drives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have no present plans to meet the directors of mining engineering companies in the west Yorkshire area.

Citizens Advice Bureaux

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what have been the Government's contributions to the citizens advice bureaux in each of the past five years.

Mr. Forth: My Department does not fund individual citizens advice bureaux. However, my Department funds the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux (NACAB) which covers bureaux in England and Wales and Citizens Advice Scotland (CAS). Total grant-in-aid paid by my Department to NACAB and CAS during the last five years is as follows:

1985-86	7·993
1986-87	8·604
1987-88	8·954
1988-89	9·405
[1]1989-90	9·927

[1] Estimated.

ECGD Insurance Services Group

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy that the insurance services group of the Export Credits Guarantee Department will only be privatised on condition that the purchaser is domiciled and registered in the United Kingdom and that all the directors are United Kingdom citizens.

Mr. Ridley: No.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy that the insurance services group of the Exports Credits Guarantee Department, should not be sold in whole, or in part, to companies controlled outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ridley: No.

Accounting Standards

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether accountants employed by firms criticised by his Department will be appointed to the accounting standards task force.

Mr. Redwood: I understand that Sir Ronald Dearing has no present plans to make further appointments to the accounting standards task force.

THE ARTS

Arts Funding

80. Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether the plans to meet the chair of Greater London Arts to discuss the effect of the uniform business rate on arts funding in London.

90. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he intends to meet the chair of Greater London Arts to discuss the effect that the uniform business rate may have on arts funding in London.

Mr. Luce: I have no plans to do so. Greater London Arts is currently compiling information on the effects of the change and I am asking it to keep me informed.

84. Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he intends to meet the chairman of the Welsh Arts Council to discuss the effect of the uniform business rate on arts funding.

89. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Minister for the Arts what plans he has to meet the chairman of the Welsh Arts Council to discuss the impact of the uniform business rate on arts funding.

Mr. Luce: I have no plans to do so. I am asking the Welsh Arts Council to monitor the effects of the change and to keep me informed.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister for the Arts what assessment he has made of the implications for arts funding of the uniform business rate.

Mr. Luce: The Arts Council is assessing the implications of the uniform business rate on performing arts organisations, and I have asked it to keep me informed. There are no immediate implications for the national museums and galleries, since (except for the national museums and galleries on Merseyside) they do not at present pay rates. I am keeping the situation under review.

European City of Culture

81. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he intends to attend any events connected with Glasgow's European City of Culture celebrations.

Mr. Luce: Yes, I shall be in Glasgow from 1-3 March for the official inauguration and associated events. I shall also be in Glasgow on 14 March, to open the Arts Council of Great Britain's conference, "Arts without Frontiers".

Autumn Statement

82. Mr. Watts: To ask the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received following the settlement for the arts in the Autumn Statement.

Mr. Luce: I am pleased to say that I have received many letters of appreciation from chairmen and directors of institutions which benefited from revised allocations.

Business Sponsorship

83. Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister for the Arts what progress has been made with the business sponsorship incentive scheme in the north-west; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I am delighted that the business sponsorship incentive scheme has brought over £1 million of new money to the arts in the north-west since it began in 1984. (Fifty arts organisations have won awards and 54 first-time and 20 existing sponsors have supported the arts.)

85. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he intends to change the rules and funding of the business sponsorship incentive scheme.

Mr. Luce: I recently announced changes in the rules of the business sponsorship incentive scheme to enable it to focus on companies considering arts sponsorship for the first time. Under the new rules, which will operate from 1 April 1990, first-time sponsors will continue to be matched pound for pound. However, existing sponsors will be matched in the ratio of £1 for every £4 of additional sponsorship and businesses which have sponsored the arts for more than three years will no longer be eligible. The increased budget for the scheme of £3·5 million will be divided into six bi-monthly budgets in order to spread these resources more evenly throughout the year. Arts organisations will continue to be eligible for two awards each financial year up to the maximum of £25,000.

Leicester

86. Mr. Janner: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he next intends to visit the city of Leicester.

Mr. Luce: I have no plans at present to visit Leicester, which I last visited in September 1988.

Arts Council

87. Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister for the Arts what has been the allocation to the Arts Council in current prices for each year since 1985.

Mr. Luce: The grant-in-aid to the Arts Council in 1985-86 was £105 million, which at 1989-90 prices, using the GDP inflator, is equivalent to £131 million. The figures for the following years were: 1986-87 £135·6 million (£163·9 million at current prices); 1987-88 £139·3 million (£159·9 million); 1988-89 £150 million (£160·5 million); and 1989-90 £155·25 million. The figure for next year will be £175 million, equivalent to £166·7 million at today's prices, using the GDP forecast. Over the next three years, the compounded increase will be 22 per cent., compared to a projected compound increase of 12 per cent. in the GDP inflator over the whole of that period.

Youth Arts Organisations

88. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister for the Arts what steps he is taking to encourage the work of the national youth arts organisations.

Mr. Luce: It is the role of the Arts Council to encourage such bodies. However, I understand that it has decided to allocate £3,000 next year to each of four youth organisations, the National Youth Theatre, the National Youth Orchestra, British Youth Opera and the National Youth Music Theatre. These grants are intended to help the companies with the professional aspects of their work.

Ballet

91. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he last attended the ballet in an official capacity.

Mr. Luce: I last attended the ballet in an official capacity on 30 October 1989, when I went to a performance of "Swan Lake" at the Royal Opera House.

Admission Charges

92. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Minister for the Arts what recent studies he has commissioned of the consequences of compulsory charges to enter galleries and museums.

Mr. Luce: The Government's repeatedly stated policy is that the decision whether or not to operate a system of admission charges, or voluntary donations, should be for the board of trustees responsible for each institution.

Similarly, it is for the trustees of each institution to decide whether or not to commission studies into the consequences of charges.

Merseyside Arts

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he plans to meet the chairman of Merseyside Arts to discuss the Wilding review on the funding of the arts in Liverpool.

Mr. Luce: I discussed Mr. Wilding's report with the chairman and representatives of Merseyside Arts on 1 December 1989. I also discussed the report with the chairman of the Arts Council and the chairmen of the regional arts associations on 1 February 1990.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by location, where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Cope: There are no creche facilities provided by the Northern Ireland Civil Service or the Northern Ireland Office.

The Northern Ireland Civil Service and the home Civil Service are, however, considering how child care arrangements for staff could be improved. Two holiday playschemes have been established, on a pilot basis, within the Northern Ireland Civil Service. One scheme, based in Londonderry, ran during the 1989 summer school holidays, whilst the scheme based in the Stormont estate ran during the 1989 summer and Christmas holiday periods. The schemes were also open to home Civil Service staff in Northern Ireland. A holiday playscheme in Westminster, Elephant and Castle, Kensington and Croydon was available to London-based staff during 1989.

In the Northern Ireland Civil Service a joint management and trade union side working group on childcare, which is responsible for the holiday playscheme initiative in the Province, is considering the feasibility of providing creches for the children of civil servants. In view of the small number of London-based staff in the Northern Ireland Office, it would be impracticable to organise a separate creche. Nevertheless, creche facilities are being sought with larger Government Departments.

Fire Service

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what training, advice and guidance is given to members of police forces from Great Britain who may be visiting or seconded to the Royal Ulster Constabulary regarding fire safety and prevention; and what arrangements exist for liaison with the Northern Ireland fire service for this.

Mr. Cope: No formal training programme is given by the Royal Ulster Constabulary to visiting or seconded police officers. Most visiting officers would normally have already received some form of fire prevention training within their own force. Visitors staying in police establishments are briefed on fire exits and so on to be used in the event of a fire or terrorist attack. Liaison with the Northern Ireland fire authority is carried out through the police authority and the works service of the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland).

Meetings

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list any meetings involving Sir Robert Andrew, Mr Colin Sampson and Sir Philip Myers on matters relating to Northern Ireland which took place in 1986.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 25 January 1990]: There was one such meeting, on 12 June 1986, involving Sir Robert Andrew, Mr. Colin Sampson and Sir Philip Myers, and also Sir Lawrence Byford.

Life Sentence Review Board

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any proposals for change in the structure of remit of the life sentence review board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: No. We shall, however, be examining our life sentence review procedures in the light of the Government's response to the recently published report of the House of Lords Select Committee on murder and life imprisonment, which included recommendations about the review system in Great Britain.

Fine Default

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any proposals to abolish imprisonment for fine default; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: There are no such proposals at present.

Republic of Ireland (Economic Co-operation)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of moves towards increased cross-border economic co-operation between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Cope: The Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference initiated last year a systematic programme of assessment of all the main sectors, to determine where the process of social and economic co-operation can most fruitfully be expanded. A joint Northern Ireland-Republic of Ireland paper on cross-border matters has been prepared for presentation to the EC under its cross-border programme and it is hoped to submit this shortly.

Stormont

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what purpose the new construction work is being carried out in the Stormont complex; and at what cost.

Mr. Cope: A variety of work is in progress for the purpose largely of relieving pressures on accommodation, modernising telecommunications and pursuing maintenance programmes. The final cost is not available.

Kincora Boys' Home

Mr. McMamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what attempts have been made by the Royal Ulster Constabulary to question Mr. F. Holroyd about his knowledge of events at the Kincora boys' hostel.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 8 February 1990]: I understand that Mr. Holroyd has been inteviewed by officers of the Royal Ulster Constabularly on a number of occasions. During those interviews he was questioned about, inter alia, the extent of his knowledge of events at the Kincora boys' hostel.

Devolution

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made on plans for devolution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 9 February 1990]: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) on 1 February. I expect to have further discussions with the leadership of the main consitutional political parties in Northern Ireland in the near future.—(Official Report, Vol. 166, No. 42, col. 417).

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made on proposals for the Ulster Defence Regiment to carry plastic bullets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 9 February 1990]: A decision was taken last year that plastic baton round equipment could be made available to the Ulster Defence Regiment for use in carefully prescribed circumstances. There has been no change in the role of the regiment, which will continue not to be employed on crowd control duties.

ENVIRONMENT

Assured Tenancies

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes have been provided in the private rented sector as a result of the assured tenancy initiative, both in total for the United Kingdom and by region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: It is too early to assess the overall impact of deregulation on the supply of rented accommodation, but there are clear signs of increased interest in residential lettings. In particular, over £370 million has been invested in business expansion scheme companies letting on assured tenancies, which will provide some 7,000 new homes to let in Great Britain. In addition, some 18,000 homes will be completed by housing associations in England in the current financial year, for letting on assured tenancies.

Palace of Westminster

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Dover of 29 January, if he will take steps to speed up the programme of works for cleaning and restoring the inner courtyards in the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Chope: I shall keep the programme under review.

Quangos and Advisory Bodies

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report a list of all the quangos and advisory bodies he has established since July 1989, the membership of each body, the rate at which the members are remunerated, whether they are full or part-time, the number of civil servants attached to each body, their grades and salary level, the number of quango and advisory bodies he has abolished since July 1989, and the consequential saving to the Exchequer.

Mr. Chris Patten: The following table lists the current membership of the authorities and members' remuneration of bodies established since July 1989. All posts are part-time. There are no civil servants attached to either body.

National Rivers Authority

	Remuneration
Chairman: Lord Crickhowell	Remuneration per annum £42,210
Members: P. Brandt J. P. Coverdale Lady Dione Digby (appointed by Welsh Office) Professor R. Edwards Sir Hugh Fish D. Kinnersley Lord Mason (appointed by MAFF) D. Mitchell Mrs. K. Morgan (appointed by MAFF) J. H. M. Norris W. J. Rogers-Coltman R. J. F. Taylor J. Wheatley	£6,450-£15,050 depending of time commitment.

Chief Executive and ex-officio member: Dr. John Bowman (not paid as board member).

London Pensions Fund Authority

	Remuneration
Chairman: Sir George Blunden	The post attracts a remuneration of £9,600 per annum but the Chairman is currently serving without payment
Deputy Chairman: M. C. Roberts	£8,000
Members: Sir Nigel Althaus Councillor E. D. Barkway Councillor S. Bullock Professor R. Franklin Councillor A. King Councillor A. S. Lourie C. J. Messer	£3,000

The following public bodies have been abolished since July 1989; New Towns Staff Commission, South Yorkshire Residuary Body and Greater Manchester Residuary Body. The Merseyside Residuary Body will be formally wound up on 30 March 1990. The residuary bodies were not funded by the Exchequer; the abolition of the New Towns Staff Commission has led to a saving of the order of £800 a year for the fees and travelling and subsistence expenses of members.

House Purchases and Sales

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any proposals to seek to reduce the costs of (a) buying and (b) selling a home.

Mr. Chope: We want house buying and selling to be as simple, inexpensive and as fair as possible to both parties involved. This is best achieved by healthy competition between those offering services to house buyers and sellers, and by the development of efficient practices. For further information, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 6 February 1990 by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, Official Report, Vol. 166, col. 545.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the increased rate levy on business under the uniform business rate over previous rate charges on business in (a) central London, (b) outer London, (c) the west midlands and (d) the south-east; and what research studies he has commissioned into the economic and social consequences of taking out these extra sums each year on (i) prices in the areas concerned, (ii) rents and (iii) attraction of the areas to inward investment.

Mr. Chope: As a result of the 1990 revaluation and the introduction of a uniform business rate on 1 April, the aggregate change in rate bills before taking account of the transitional arrangements will be:

(a) Inner London—an increase of £610 million.
(b) Outer London—an increase of £20 million.
(c) West Midlands—a reduction of £220 million.
(d) South East—an increase of £250 million.

The total amount payable by businesses as a whole will be broadly the same in real terms in 1990-91 as in 1989-90: but there will be a shift in the burden of rates of around £900 million from the north and the midlands to London and the south.

This will give a boost to existing businesses and stimulate investment in areas such as Grimsby, where rates will fall on average by 21 per cent. in cash terms without transition.

Because at national level the effect of the new system is broadly neutral the changes will not be inflationary. Where properties face large increases in rate bills there will be consequential downward pressure on rents.

Rent Revisions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received for amendments to landlord and tenant legislation to prohibit contracts which allow only upward rent revision and to make provision for both upward and downward revision mandatory; what proposals he has for legislation in the matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: We have received three representations about upward-only rent reviews since the main legislation for business tenancies, the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 part II, was reviewed in 1985. Following consultation it was concluded that the balance between tenant and landlord rights and obligations was being maintained and that overall the Act continued to work well. That remains the position and the Government do not intend to intervene further in the business lettings market.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what percentage of net weekly income a household in each of the regions on a weekly net income of (a) £100, (b) £150, (c) £200, (d) £250, (e) £300, (f) £400 and (g) £500 will pay in poll tax in (i) 1990-91, (ii) 1991-92 and (iii) 1992-93;

(2) what percentage of net weekly income a household in Greater London on a weekly net income of (a) £100, (b) £150, (c) £200, (d) £250, (e) £300, (f) £400 and (g) £500 will pay in poll tax in (i) 1990-91, (ii) 1991-92 and (iii) 1992-93;

(3) what percentage of net weekly income a household on a weekly net income of (a) £100, (b) £150, (c) £200, (d) £250, (e) £300, (f) £400 and (g) £500 will pay in poll tax in (i) 1990-91, (ii) 1991-92 and (iii) 1992-93.

Mr. Chope: The figures requested are not available.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made as to the amount towards the cost of local government that will be contributed under the community charge system by the top 10 per cent. of all households by income, taking tax payments to central Government into account, and the amount that will be contributed by the poorest 10 per cent. of households by income.

Mr. David Hunt: About 15 times as much will be contributed to the cost of local government by the top 10 per cent. of households by income compared with the poorest 10 per cent.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what poll tax payments are due from a full-time mature student on a full grant but with no other source of income who owns his own home, which has no other occupants, and who is living and studying away from home.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: A person who is following a full-time course of education for the purposes of the student relief will be liable to pay 20 per cent. of the personal community charge at his term-time address. If that person also owns domestic property in which there is no person solely or mainly resident, he will be subject to the standard community charge in respect of that property. However, guidance already issued by the Department has suggested that local authorities should use the wide discretion available to them to specify this class of circumstance as one where the standard community charge multiplier is zero.

Council Services (Privatisation)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities in the north-west have privatised council services; which authority has privatised the most services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Local authorities are required to put certain of their services out to competitive tender under the terms of the Local Government Act 1988 in accordance with a timetable prescribed in the Local Government Act 1988 (Defined Activities) (Competition) (England) Regulations 1988, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. These require those authorities which were not able to claim exemption on de minimis grounds to put one specified service out to tender by 1 August 1989 and a second service by 1 January 1990. Different services were prescribed for different authorities. In addition, all authorities which were not subject to a de minimis exemption were required to put at least 20 per cent. of their ground maintenance work out to tender by 1 January 1990.

The results of a questionnaire on the first round of tendering under the 1988 Act are not yet available. Information about tendering for services not covered by the Local Government Act 1988 is not collected centrally.

Community Charge (Nurses)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance has been issued to community charge officers on levying of the community charge on nurses living in hostel accommodation during the week and returning to their own homes at weekends.

Mr. Chope: Guidance on determining an individual's sole or main residence for the purposes of registration for the personal community charge is contained in community charge practice note No. 9. Where an individual is regarded as solely or mainly resident will depend on the facts of each case. Advice to charging authorities on the standard charge in respect of unoccupied property has recommended them to consider a special class for property which is empty because the owner is required to live elsewhere as a condition of his or her employment.

Waste Disposal, Bradford

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many licences relating to waste disposal facilities have been issued by Bradford council; how many licence applications have been refused; how many inspections are made annually of waste dumps in

Bradford; and how many operators have been prosecuted for breach of licence conditions in respect of waste dumps in Bradford;

(2) how many waste dumps there are within the area of Bradford metropolitan district council; how many have been abandoned; how many are safely capped; and what information he has on plans issued by Bradford council for dealing with wastes;

(3) if he will arrange for all waste dumps in Bradford to be inspected and action taken to stop waste contaminating ground water and drinking water supplies; and if he has received any representations expressing concern about the risks of waste dumping in Bradford contaminating drinking water supplies.

Mr. Trippier: These are matters for the West Yorkshire waste management joint committee as waste disposal authority for the area. Details of current licences are contained on registers held by the waste disposal authorities.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to ban co-disposal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: No. Co-disposal of wastes is a recognised landfill technique which, in suitable circumstances, can offer environmental benefits. It requires careful site assessment and operational control and these are matters for site operators and regulatory authorities to consider within the waste disposal licensing system.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to require companies that dump waste to pay the costs of making waste dumps safe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Environmental Protection Bill contains provision that a licence shall remain in force after the final deposit of waste until a certificate of completion is obtained which certifies that the waste regulation authority is satisfied that the land is unlikely to cause pollution of the environment or harm to human health. The licensee will remain responsible for the land until that time and will have to bear the costs of any work that needs to be carried out.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will establish as a matter of urgency a ministerial working party charged with recommending a national waste disposal policy and ensure that the working party represents all interested parties and receives evidence on the widest possible basis;

(2) if he will introduce a national waste disposal policy.

Mr. Trippier: No working party is required to prepare national policies in this area.

Co-ordinated central Government advice and guidance on waste management is given to local authorities to assist them in determining, in accordance with their statutory duties, local waste disposal strategies for their areas, consulting other bodies as necessary. Additional guidance is being prepared in relation to the proposed duties for local authorities under part II of the Environmental Protection Bill.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake a new national survey of waste tips in England and Wales; if he will take steps to establish a register of old waste dumps; and what action he is taking to tell the National Rivers Authority the location of waste dumps which pose a risk or serious risk of contamination to drinking water supplies.

Mr. Trippier: A national survey is not required. The Environmental Protection Bill contains proposals for waste regulation authorities to seek out and keep records of any land which has ever been used for waste disposal and to inspect and monitor closed sites.

Waste disposal authorities are required to consult the NRA over all applications for waste disposal licences, and the NRA has extensive programmes for monitoring ground and surface waters, which are currently being reviewed.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when was the list of waste dumps near water supplies first received by his Department; what prompted an examination of 19 of the tips on the list; what were the conclusions of that investigation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The recently publicised survey was a desk assessment carried out with the co-operation of local authorities and the then river authorities during 1973 and 1974. Subsequently, as part of a research programme, detailed investigations were undertaken by independent consultants at 19 representative sites. The research report was published in 1978 and concluded that controlled landfill was acceptable in a range of geological circumstances and confirmed previous experience with this disposal method.

Control of Pollution Act

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to bring the first section of the Control of Pollution Act into force; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: It is no longer appropriate to seek to bring section 1 of the 1974 Act into force in view of the proposed replacement of part I of that Act by the provisions in part II of the Environmental Protection Bill.

Gipsy Sites, Bradford

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has yet reached a decision under the Caravan Sites Act on the recent application of Bradford metropolitan district for designation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to reach a decision on the application submitted by Bradford council to designate traveller sites within the metropolitan district; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will consider the city of Bradford metropolitan council's application for designated status when the local authority submits the outstanding response to its consultation exercise. The matter will then be dealt with as speedily as possible.

Private Landlords

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that landlords reduce rents by an amount equivalent to the rates element after the introduction of the community charge.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 8 February, Official Report, Vol. 166, column 756.

Nuclear Waste Disposal

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on whether Nirex or any other statutory body plans to dispose of nuclear waste (a) at or near Parys mountain or (b) any other location in the constituency of Ynys Môns.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend has no information about any plans to dispose of nuclear waste in the constituency of Ynys Môn. If the investigations being carried out by United Kingdom Nirex Ltd. at Sellafield and Dounreay are favourable, the company intends to develop a repository at one of these two sites. If both sites prove unsuitable Nirex will look elsewhere, but no decisions have yet been taken.

Agencies

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the quality of service performance indicators that have been introduced into the Queen Elizabeth II conference centre and the historic royal palaces, respectively, since their establishment as agencies.

Mr. Chris Patten: Quality of service indicators are being finalised and will be included in the corporate plans of both agencies which I shall be considering shortly. On the Queen Elizabeth II conference centre, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 18 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith), Official Report, Vol. 165, col 369, which sets out the targets presently approved.

Ancient Monuments

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites in total are protected as scheduled ancient monuments.

Mr. Trippier: At present, approximately 13,000 monument sites in England are included in the Secretary of State's schedule of ancient monuments.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will amend circular 8/87 to detail the ways in which local authorities can apply the principle of recognising the preservation of monuments as a material consideration in the planning process.

Mr. Trippier: No; but we shall shortly be issuing draft planning policy guidance on "Archaeology and Planning" for public consultation, which will include advice to local authorities on the weight to be given in planning decisions to the preservation of archaeological remains.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he plans to instruct local authorities to include archaeological policies in their local and district.

Mr. Trippier: We will shortly be issuing a consultation paper on Archaeology and Planning. This will incorporate advice on development plan policies for archaeological sites.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will issue a planning circular giving guidance to local authorities about their use of planning conditions (a) to preserve and (b) to investigate archaeological sites.

Mr. Trippier: I hope shortly to announce the issue for public consultation of draft planning policy guidance on "Archaeology and Planning". This will include advice to local planning authorities on the use of planning conditions in this context. Some guidance is already extant in circular 1/85 on the use of planning conditions to allow archaeologists access to sites for the purposes of recording remains in advance of development.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make it his policy to give ancient landscapes the status of scheduled ancient monuments.

Mr. Trippier: This is not simply a question of policy. Any decision to schedule ancient landscapes would involve a number of considerations. The term "monument" is defined in section 61(7) of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979. Assuming an ancient landscape falls within this definition, it would also need to be of national importance judged against the criteria to which I referred in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, South (Mr. Cormack) on 29 January 1990, Official Report, col. 67-68.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish a table detailing the sites designated as scheduled ancient monuments in each of the past five years.

Mr. Trippier: The following is a table detailing the number of sites scheduled in each of the past five years.

Hertfordshire County Council

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will set out the number of (a) full-time and (b) part-time employees of Hertfordshire county council for the most recent date for which the county council has filed a manpower watch return.

Mr. Chope: Hertfordshire county council employed (a) 20,077 full-time and (b) 20,856 part-time staff in March 1989, the latest available date.

Common Land

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any proposals to introduce legislation to safeguard common land on the basis of the common land forum.

Mr. Trippier: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 4 December 1989, Official Report, Vol 163, c. 35.

Right to Buy

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the results of his survey of right to buy performance in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Last November I announced that I would be reviewing the extent of right to buy delays in London and the effect of the tenant's sanction measures which came into force in March 1989.

The tables show London boroughs' right to buy activity during September 1989. A total of 21,886 cases were awaiting completion and boroughs had failed to issue 12,811 RTB2 and S125 notices within the statutory time limits. More than half the overdue notices were in Lambeth, Hackney, Brent, Southwark and Hounslow.

The information collected about the use of the new tenant's sanction measures shows that 12 boroughs received no notices of delay, but tenant's sanction notices have been used extensively in boroughs where the number of overdue cases is high. In a single month, 18 boroughs received 271 initial notices (RTB6) and 53 operative notices of delay (RTB8). Another borough estimated that it had received 1,305 initial notices and 780 operative notices between March and November.

The most common reason for serving initial notices was delay in completing sales, followed by delays in advising tenants of the price and other terms of sale (S125 notice) and by delays in confirming the existence of a right to buy (RTB2 notice).

The Department has been receiving monthly reports from 12 monitored boroughs. The number of overdue RTB2 and S125 notices in these boroughs fell by 25 per cent. between March and September. The measures introduced last March have not only given tenants a sanction against unreasonable delays, but they have encouraged local authorities to improve their right to buy performance.

I have decided that monthly monitoring should continue for Brent, Camden, Hackney, Haringey, Hounslow, Islington, Lambeth, Lewisham, Newham, Richmond, Southwark and Tower Hamlets. Hammersmith, Waltham Forest, Ealing and Hillingdon, not monitored at the moment, are being asked to provide right to buy information for three months so that I can decide whether they should be monitored.

Radioactive Waste

292. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the advisability of co-disposal of radioactive waste with pig slurry infected with anthrax spores.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 5 February 1990]: There would be no practical advantages in combining such disposals.

Rugby Borough Council

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 27 November 1989 referring to Rugby borough council.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 1 February 1990]: I have written to my hon. Friend today.

Cornwall County Council

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1984-85 the expenditure of Cornwall county council in (a) cash terms and (b) constant price terms.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The information is as follows:

Mr. Neale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1984-85 the manpower watch return for Cornwall county council for the third quarter of each year.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The available information is as follows:

Mortgages

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average outstanding mortgage in 1989-90 in (a) England and (b) each region.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The estimated average balance outstanding on building society mortgages in the United Kingdom at the end of 1988 was £21,000. Comparable information is not available for other lenders or below national level.

Housing Corporation

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the problems in financial control systems which have led to the overspend by the Housing Corporation in 1989-90.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 30 January (Official Report, column 175) that the capital resources available to the Housing Corporation in 1989-90 would be increased by £120 million, with a corresponding reduction in 1990-91, to reflect a greater speeding up of housing schemes by housing associations than had been forecast. This adjustment is not expected to affect the Housing Corporation's total expenditure and output over the two years taken together.

An independent examination of the Housing Corporation's financial systems in the autumn of 1989 found that the corporation's expenditure forecasting model was soundly based. The model has now been updated to take account of faster development times. The Housing Corporation will also be introducing cash plannning targets for associations in 1990-91 which will enable the corporation more accurately to predict and control the flow of expenditure.

SCOTLAND

Local Enterprise Councils

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the procedures to be used to monitor expenditure by local enterprise councils.

Mr. Lang: Once in operation, local enterprise companies will work to annual budgets agreed initially with the Training Agency and the Scottish Development Agency, and subsequently with Scottish Enterprise. Monitoring of expenditure within the agreed budgets will primarily be the responsibility of the local enterprise company itself. In addition, prior to the vesting of Scottish Enterprise, the Scottish Development Agency and the Training Agency will jointly monitor local enterprise companies' performance through the local enterprise company unit; and thereafter, Scottish Enterprise will have this function. Such monitoring will be selective and will focus on propriety and whether management arrangements agreed with the local enterprise company in its business plan are functioning effectively and are promoting value for money.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arising from theft or misappropriation in his Department;

(2) whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss-prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mr. Rifkind: The Scottish Office has developed and maintains controls to prevent fraud and to ensure that if it does occur it will be detected promptly. It is the responsibility of all staff to ensure that departmental funds are not misappropriated. The activities of the Scottish Office audit unit include responsibility to satisfy the accounting officer for Scottish Office administration costs that financial management and control systems are adequate. Nine of the audit unit staff hold professional qualifications and a further 15 are qualified to Treasury-approved training standards. No specific assessment of preventable losses has been made.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were employed in manufacturing industry in 1979; how many there were at the latest date for which figures are available; and what percentage of the total labour force they constituted on each occasion.

Mr. Rifkind: The table gives the number of employees in employment in manufacturing industries in Scotland in September 1979 and 1989, the latest date for which information is available. The figures are also shown expressed as a percentage of all employees in employment and as a percentage of the civilian work force in employment on these dates.

Earnings

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing gross average weekly earnings for full-time male employees on adult rates in Scotland for every year from 1979 to the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: The information requested is given in the table.

Service Industries

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the number of employees in service industries in Scotland in June 1979 and at present, broken down into separate totals for men, women, full-time employees, part-time employees and those on Government training schemes.

Mr. Rifkind: The table gives the number of employees in employment for June 1979 and September 1989, the latest available date. Figures are given separately for all men and for women working full time and part time. Information on the number of men working part time is available only for years for which there is a census of employment. Estimates of employees in employment include those with a contract of employment who are on Government work-related training schemes. There is no separate information available on the number of employees in Scotland in the service industries who are also on Government work-related training schemes.

Industrial Output

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table with an index of industrial output for Scotland, taking 1979=100, giving a separate breakdown for production industries, divisions 1-4, energy and water supply and manufacturing, divisions 2-4 and showing the changes for each year from 1979 till the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: The information requested is in the table.

Manual Workers

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the average gross hourly earnings in Scotland for full-time manual workers, full-time non-manual workers, part-time manual workers and part-time non-manual workers at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: The latest available information, for April 1989, is provided in the table:

Average gross hourly earnings (excluding overtime) of employees in Scotland on adult rates

	£ per hour
Full-time manual employees	4·23
Full-time non-manual employees	6·28
Part-time manual employees	2·87

Private Schools (Rating)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to enact measures to bring the non-domestic rating system as it applies to private school accommodation in line with the practice south of the border.

Mr. Rifkind: Certain questions about the treatment for valuation and rating purposes of pupil accommodation at boarding schools in Scotland are currently the subject of appeal to the Lands Tribunal for Scotland. Against the background of my general desire to secure harmonisation between Scotland and England, I am considering whether there are any steps I should take.

Prison Ombudsman

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any proposals to appoint a prison ombudsman; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. I and my Department will be considering the relevance to the Scottish situation of the recommendations, including the one relating to the creation of a prison ombudsman, contained in the recently published Home Office working group report on an improved system of grievance procedures for prisoners' complaints and requests.

Ambulance Dispute

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ask the chief constables for reports detailing the cost per policeman of deploying police officers on ambulance duties within their spheres of authority.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Association of Chief Police Officers (Scotland) is currently considering the basis on which forces should cost the assistance given in relation to the ambulance dispute and in the light of draft guidance prepared by the Scottish Home and Health Department which reflects previously agreed practice.

Beaches (Pollution)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a list of the 10 worst polluted beaches and give details of the most recent measurements of pollution on each of these beaches.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The condition of beaches is a matter for the local district or islands council while river purification authorities are concerned with the quality of waters. River purification boards monitor waters for compliance with standards set in the EC bathing water directive. For details in respect of the 23 identified waters in Scotland, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) on 25 January 1990, at columns 844-45.

Rivers (Pollution)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a list of the 20 worst polluted rivers and give details of the more recent measurements of pollution in each of these rivers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Day-to-day control of pollution of rivers is the responsibility of the river purification authorities. Annual reports of the seven river purification boards contain detailed information about pollution in their areas and are available in the Library. The Scottish Development Department, in co-operation with the river purification boards, publishes periodic reports which give a broad assessment of the condition of Scottish waters. The last of these, also available in the Library, was produced in 1985, and the hon. Member may like to refer to the maps contained in it which show the lengths of rivers in each of four categories. A further report, based on conditions found during the current year, is now being planned.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by what measures the accountant in bankruptcy assesses remuneration of a trustee in sequestration, in cases where the remuneration of the trustee is to be met from moneys provided by Parliament; and if there is any specific maximum hourly rate for chartered accountants and unqualified persons.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In terms of section 53(4) of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 the accountant in bankruptcy is required in assessing remuneration to have regard to the work which was reasonably undertaken by the trustee in relation to the value of the debtor's estate and the extent of his responsibilities in administering that estate. There are no specific maximum hourly rates laid down for this work.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each year since the commencement of the Bankruptcy Scotland Act 1985 the total sum paid out of moneys provided by Parliament in terms of section 76 of the said Act.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Gross expenditure, including payments to trustees and the administration costs of the office of the accountant of court and the office of accountant in bankruptcy, has been as follows:

Financial year	Gross expenditure (£'000)
1986-87	256
1987-88	706
1988-89	2,918

Sequestration

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many decrees of sequestration there have been in Scotland for each year since 1974.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of sequestrations registered annually by the accountant in bankruptcy until 1 April 1986 under the provisions of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1913 and thereafter under the provisions of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 are as follows:

Year	Number of awards registered
1974	104
1975	148
1976	128
1977	132
1978	130
1979	105
1980	151
1981	185
1982	217
1983	280
1984	296
1985	298
1986	437
1987	826
1989	2,294

The 1985 Act introduced in Scotland provisions for the public funding of bankruptcies where there are insufficient assets in the bankrupt's estate to meet the expenses of sequestration. No such facility was available under the 1913 Act, and this is reflected in the increase in sequestrations registered from 1986 onwards.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each year since 1974 the total sum paid out of moneys provided by Parliament for remuneration for trustees in sequestration.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The remuneration from public funds of trustees in sequestration was introduced by provisions of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 which came into effect on 1 April 1986. Gross payments made these provisions to trustees are as follows:—

Financial Year	Gross Payments (£'000)
1986-87	13
1987-88	418
1988-89	2,415

Buses (Women Travellers)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will require bidders for bus companies to include in their bids their proposed policy on safety of women travellers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. In addition to necessary company and financial details, bidders will be required to give information on their general employment policy, their proposals regarding the disabled and elderly, and a statement of their future intentions for the company. There are already strict safety requirements governing all bus operators in the interests of all bus travellers. Bus operators require an operator's licence and buses must be tested annually and are also subject to spot checks on the road. If sufficient services are not available commercially local authorities have powers to subsidise those services they consider socially necessary, including, for example, late evening or night services.

Paedophiles

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will set up a special police unit or units specialising in the detection and elimination of the criminal activities of paedophiles.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I am aware that chief constables place a high priority on investigations into criminal activities against children. The question whether a special unit or units would help in this task is an operational matter for them to decide.

Land Use

Mr McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the Government will initiate a comprehensive review of public support for land uses such as agriculture and forestry in Scotland, and their effects on wildlife and the countryside, with a view to reducing conflict between conservation and these land uses.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Secretary of State in exercising his functions in relation to agriculture and forestry has a duty to take environmental considerations into account. The Government keep under review their various measures of support for agriculture and forestry and these are increasingly directed at conservation or enhancement of the environment.

Green Pound

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to arrange for the green pound to be introduced into the European monetary system in order to restrict the disadvantage of Scottish farmers from 20 to 6 per cent. and thereafter to parity.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The entry of sterling into the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system would have no direct effect on green rates or agricultural support prices. The disadvantage to our producers will be overcome by reducing monetary gaps through devaluing the green pound. Green currency devaluations are normally considered in the EC price-fixing negotiations. In the current round we shall be seeking a substantial devaluation as part of our commitment to remove all monetary gaps by the end of 1992.

Flood Damage

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to recompense farmers of Scotland in the short term of flood damage and other losses caused by recent inclement weather.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have every sympathy for farmers who sustained damage from the latest storms and floods. Indeed, the floods are so recent that damage is still hidden by water so that many will not yet know the full extent of their losses. My noble Friend the Minister of State has called for full reports as soon as practicable. In the meantime, it is important to stress that successive Governments have followed well-established policy not to pay compensation to farmers for the effects of severe weather, particularly where risks are insurable. Assistance is however available under the farm capital grant schemes. These schemes will be operated as flexibly as the rules will allow to take account of the effects of the storms.

Medical Priority Status

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will establish a commission to examine the plight of elderly and disabled people who have top medical priority status and yet who cannot be immediately rehoused.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 8 February 1990]: Individual authorities are required by statute to consider the housing needs of their areas and to have regard to the special needs of chronically sick or disabled persons. My right hon. and learned Friend does not believe that a commission would assist authorities in this duty. Individual authorities are themselves best placed to determine particular needs and to identify solutions for meeting those needs either in council housing or other housing.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of people on council waiting lists who have top medical priority status.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to ensure that councils have the resources to rehouse elderly and disabled residents with top medical priority status in suitable housing.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 8 February 1990]: Housing capital allocations to local authorities take account of their overall housing needs as set out in their housing plans and capital programmes. Within the allocations made it is the responsibility of local authorities to decide how the resources should be used in the light of local priorities.

Training Agency Schemes

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the budget for each Training Agency scheme in Scotland in 1990-91; and what it was in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 5 February 1990]: It is possible to provide full-year budgets for Training Agency schemes in Scotland only for the years 1989-90 and 1990-91. The planned expenditure for 1988-89 for the Training Commission was £210,083,000: a detailed breakdown of Training Agency scheme budgets in Scotland is not available for that year. The information available is set out in the table.

Training Agency Budgets (Scotland): £'000s

EMPLOYMENT

Workplace Nurseries

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how may workplace nurseries exist; and what is the regional distribution of these nurseries.

Mr. Nicholls: This information is not available. Figures in the "IMS Manpower Commentary No. 43, Retaining Women Employees" suggest that the percentage of organisations currently providing workplace nurseries is small, only about 3 per cent. However, indications are that the provision of such facilities is growing.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many Health and Safety Executive inspectors have responsibility for the construction industry (a) now and (b) 10 years ago.

Mr. Nicholls: On 1 December 1989, the latest date for for which figures are available, the Health and Safety Executive had 103 inspectors regularly engaged on the inspection of construction activities. On 1 January 1980, the total was 87.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the breakdown of expenditure within the Health and Safety Executive's latest budget by industry classification.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available. The expenditure of the Health and Safety Executive is not broken down by standard industrial classification.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what functions of the Health and Safety Executive are currently being placed within the remit of local authorities.

Mr. Nicholls: Under the Health and Safety (Enforcing Authority) Regulations 1989, from 1 Apri 1990, local authorities will be responsible for the enforcement of health and safety legislation for certain additional activities including various leisure activities; cosmetic and therapeutic treatments, display or demonstration of goods at an exhibition; church worship and religious meetings; and certain internal construction work.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the cost of the following departmental publications; and what was their intended respective purpose (a) "People and Companies, Employee Involvement in Britain", (b) "Small Firms in Britain" and (c) the "United Kingdom in Europe, People and Progress Fact Pack".

Mr. Eggar: The cost of producing "People and Companies, Employee Involvement in Britain", was £83,000 minus what has been recouped from this being a priced publication (HMSO £5); the cost of producing "Small Firms in Britain" was £77,000; and the cost of the "United Kingdom in Europe, People and Progress Fact Pack" was £9,000.

The purpose of "People and Companies" was to describe the British approach to employee involvement and explain Government policy on the subject.

"Small Firms in Britain" was produced to meet the needs of advisory agencies, chambers of commerce and other representative organisations, as well as professional and academic bodies for an authoritative report on the key statistics, issues and trends in the small business sector, and the basis of the Government's policies and programmes to support small businesses.

The purpose of the "United Kingdom in Europe Fact Pack" was to explain the Government's concerns about the European Commission's proposed social charter; and to set out the approach to encouraging employment, individual opportunity and enterprise the Government believe will best enable Britain, as a full and active member of the European Community, to prosper in a Europe without barriers.

National Council for Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to seek to extend the remit of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications to Scotland.

Mr. Nicholls: The remit of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications is kept under review.

Employment Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if employers' financial contributions to employment training are to be increased in 1990-91 to 1992-93.

Mr. Nicholls: Employers' financial contributions to employment training are for local negotiation. The Government aim to encourage more employers to participate in employment training and for employers to make a greater investment in training. The formation of training and enterprise councils will be a major step towards those objectives.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the number of claimants who have had their (a) benefit claim referred to an adjudication office and (b) benefit withdrawn as a result of refusing a place on an employment training scheme in terms of its actively seeking work conditions.

Mr. Eggar: Employment training is a voluntary programme. Social security legislation does not provide for disqualification or disallowance of unemployment benefit where a person refuses to apply for or accept a place on employment training.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the number of continuing training grants made available in respect of trainees recruited by employees before completion of the employment training action plan between September 1988 and December 1989 inclusive for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the companies that have withdrawn from employment training between January 1989 and December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number for employment training of (a) training agents and (b) training managers in Great Britain on the most recent date for which figures are available.

Mr. Nicholls: As at 8 February 1990 there were 191 training agents and 1,362 training managers participating in employment training.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of employment training trainees who entered permanent employment in the period December 1988 to December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of training agents that went into receivership between September 1988 and December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls: No training agents in employment training went into receivership between September 1988 and December 1989.

YTS

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the total number of (a) YTS trainees with employment contracts in December 1989 and for each of the standard regions, Scotland, Wales and Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is in the table.

Numbers of trainees with employed status, in training at 31 December 1989

	Number
Great Britain	114,421
South East	16,725
London	8,450
South West	10,258
West Midlands	12,483
East Midlands and Eastern	15,772
Yorkshire and Humberside	12,817
North West	17,617
Northern	4,666
Wales	6,338
Scotland	9,295

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which are the 10 largest managing agents involved in YTS; what is the total number of trainees contracted to them; and what was the total Government expenditure on them in December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls: The table shows the 10 largest single contract managing agents in Great Britain, together with the number of agreed places.

Managing Agents	Agreed Places
Construction Industry Training Board (CITB) Non-Electrical Programme	34,000
CITB Electrical Programme	9,500
Clothing and Allied Products Industry Training Board	7,228
Sight and Sound	4,515
Motor Agents Association	4,000
Association of British Travel Agents	2,650
British Rail	1,900
British Association of Professional Hairdressing Employers	1,830
Hairdressing Training Association	1,760
County of Avon Youth Training Scheme	1,750
Total number of places	69,133

The total amount paid to these managing agents during December 1989 was £11,516,489·93.

YTS and Employment Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will outline the steps being taken to minimise the cost of paying management fees for unfilled places on YTS and employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: Management fees are not paid for employment training places. Under current YTS rules, there is provision for recovering management fees for unfilled YTS places. This is done wherever appropriate.

Skills Training Agency

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the amount of fees paid to Deloitte, Haskins and Sells up to 31 October 1989 for the initial feasibility study and for the work on the offer for sale of the Skills Training Agency.

Mr. Nicholls: At 31 October 1989, Deloitte, Haskins and Sells had been paid fees of £132, 425 for the feasibility study, and fees of £85,023 for work associated with the offer for sale. Both figures exclude expenses and VAT.

Training Agency

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of employees in the Training Agency and previously the Manpower Services Commission in each of the years 1984-85 to 1989-90 outturn and planned for 1990-91 to 1992-93, planned for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls: The number of permanent employees in the Training Agency in 1988-89 and planned numbers up to 1992-93, are as follows:

12,462	12,009	9,719	9,214	9,214

Information for earlier years is not available on a comparable basis.

HIV Testing

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what guidance his Department has issued on the use of pre-employment HIV testing by employers.

Mr. Nicholls: The booklet "AIDS and Employment" published by my Department and the Health and Safety Executive in 1986 advises employers that, since in almost all occupations there is no risk of infected persons passing on HIV to others, having the virus or belonging to a particular group is not a reason for being treated differently from any other job applicants. It follows from this advice that there is generally no reason for employers to require a job applicant to take an HIV antibody test. Further updated guidance on "AIDS and the Workplace" is to be published shortly.

Training Costs

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the estimated gross cost per trainee week for employers, on a comparable basis to the figures in Cm 1006 of £50 and £33 for the gross public cost per trainee week, for (a) 1989-90 and (b) 1992-93; and what is the likely overall cost to employers of the transfer of costs.

Mr. Nicholls: An increasing element of empoloyer contributions is expected. It is impossible to forecast the gross cost per trainee week for employers, as this depends on the efficiency with which TECs, providers and employers can deliver training.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the number of applications to industrial tribunals under section 58 of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 in the period 1984 to 1988 and indicate how many were complaints under section 58(1) (a) and (b) compared with the number under section 58 (1) (c); and if he will give the outcome of these cases under the two separate categories and indicate (a) the number of Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service conciliated settlements, (b) withdrawal, not via Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service, (c) successful at tribunal hearing, (d) dismissed at tribunal out of scope, (e) dismissed at tribunal hearing, other reasons and (f) disposed of otherwise.

Mr. Nicholls [pursuant to his reply, 6 December 1989, c. 245-46]: I regret that some of the figures for 1987-88 in table 2 of the original reply were incorrect. The correct figures are set out in the table.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Workfare

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will institute a further study of workfare in the United States of America to investigate how workfare has helped in recent years to alleviate the problems associated with single-parent families and paternal maintenance.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: While we are, of course, interested in the arrangements made by other countries for lone-parent families, we have no plans to institute a study of workfare. Lone parents in the United Kingdom are not required to be available for work as a condition of receiving benefit. They are able to decide for themselves what is best for them and their children and we believe this is right. But maintenance is also very important. We are particularly concerned about the number of lone-parent families on benefit here who receive little or no maintenance. Regular payments of maintenance can be a great help to lone parents who work to move from dependence on benefit into work. We are therefore examining the whole maintenance system to establish how it can be improved. As part of this process we are examining maintenance arrangements abroad, including those in the United States, to see whether there are any lessons to be learned from them.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps his Department has, and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: For unclassified but sensitive systems the Department is expected to follow Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency guidance covering all aspects of IT security and the application of this has been tightened recently. CCTA advice is kept under continuous review and is based on analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as CCTA's risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM), which has also been made commercially available.

More stringent conditions apply to classified systems.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss-prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is not possible to give an answer in the form requested as the Department does not employ a specific class of loss prevention officers. There is a general exhortation to all staff to take proper care of property and services for which they are responsible and for line managers to ensure that there is sound management of such resources. Internal audit procedures are undertaken by staff with appropriate training and security guard services are provided by a mixture of departmental staff and private companies.

Disabled People

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to meet the needs of very severly disabled people with high care cost.

Mr. Scott: The arrangements proposed in "Caring for People" (Cm. 849) by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health are designed to enable local authorities to provide help with the care needs of very severely disabled people. Financial help with the costs of domestic assistance and personal care is currently also available through the independent living fund.

Disability Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take steps to ensure that claimants of the care element of the new disability allowance will receive invalid care allowance.

Mr. Scott: We propose that people who care for recipients of the highest or intermediate level of care component of the new disability allowance will receive invalid care allowance, provided they satisfy the conditions of entitlement.

Family Credit

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families in (a) west Leeds, (b) Leeds, (c) west Yorkshire and (d) England are in receipt of family credit; what estimated proportion these families represent of those entitled to this benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest available information about the familes receiving family credit is as follows:

Number who, at the time their award was made, were living in:

	number
a. West Leeds	[1]2,800
b. Leeds	[2]4,500
c. West Yorkshire	[3]15,600
d. England	257,000

[1] Total in the area covered by the Leeds West, Leeds North West and Leeds North local Social Security offices.
[2] Total in the area covered by all the local Social Security offices in Leeds.
[3] Total in the area covered by all the Social Security offices in West Yorkshire.

Information about the total number of families eligible for family credit can be obtained only for Great Britain, and only retrospectively, from family expenditure survey data.

Benefits

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of persons dependent on both social security and housing rebates in 1979-80 and 1989-90 and the forecast for 1990-91.

Mr. Scott: Information is not available in the precise form requested, since claimants may receive more than one benefit at any one time, and may also receive benefit for one or more dependants. Broad-based survey data suggest, however, that in 1979, and also in 1987, the latest year for which such estimates are available, the social security system contributed to the incomes or family incomes of around 38 million people. For 1989-90 and 1990-91 figures for the estimated average number of people receiving individual benefits, including housing benefit, are shown in the table:

Loan Sharks

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations the Minister for Social Security and the disabled has had about the increasing dependence on loan sharks of people who live on state benefits; what reply he is sending; if there is any action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: None.

Community Charge

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he proposes to change the capital rule for community charge rebate to take account of the fact that the charge is being levied on individuals whereas the capital rule is applied to couples jointly.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans to change the rule for Community charge benefit for couples. It is a fundamental principle of the income-related benefit schemes that the partners in a married or unmarried couple are treated as sharing their income and capital resources. The fact that the community charge is being levied on individuals does not affect this principle.

Departmental Leaflets

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many copies of leaflet SB 1 and IS 100 were printed for publication in October 1989; how many correction leaflets IS 100 indicating different rates for the enhanced pensioner premium were printed; what were the reasons for the incorrect rates being published; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In October 1989 3,322,000 copies of leaflet SB1 were printed, 4,525,668 copies of leaflet IS 100 were printed and 2,460,000 copies of the correction leaflet for IS 100 were printed because of a proof-reading error in the original leaflet.

Pensioner Premium

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the criteria for the payment of the enhanced pensioner premium; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The enhanced pensioner premium is part of the premium structure in income support, housing benefit and community charge benefit. From April 1990, this premium will be fixed at £14·40 a week for a single person and £21·60 for couples. It is awarded automatically when the claimant, or where appropriate, his partner, reaches the age of 75 years, and replaces the pensioner premium which is paid at a lower rate. Where a higher rate premium is in payment, that premium will continue. When it was introduced last October, this improvement provided extra benefit, for those who qualified for it, of up to £2·50 a week for single people and £3·50 a week for couples in time for the winter months. At the same time we increased the higher pensioner premium by the same amounts. This premium applied, automatically, to all income-related benefit recipients at the age of 80 years, and to disabled people aged 60 to 79 years. Overall, we estimate that 2·6 million people, including spouses, benefited from these substantial improvements.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cold weather payments have been made so far during the 1989-90 winter; which Department of Social Security offices made such payments; and which weather stations covered these Departments of Social Security offices.

Mr. Scott: The latest information available relates to the two months ending 31 December 1989, by which time social fund cold weather payments totalling £73,500 had been made. The national climatological message (NCM) stations that have had an average temperature of 0 deg C for a seven-day period during this winter and the Department's local offices linked to them are shown in the table:

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many new claims for reduced earnings allowance have been allowed each year since the benefit was established; how many people currently receive reduced earnings allowance; how many recipients are above pensionable age; how many are employed earners; and how many are on income support.

Mr. Scott: The available information is as follows. The net estimated number of reduced earnings allowance awards made from 1 October 1986 (when the benefit was introduced) to 1 April 1987 was about 5,000. The corresponding figures for the years 1987-88 and 1988-89 were 11,000 and 14,400. Of the 150,000 people estimated to receive the allowance (which includes those who previously received special hardship allowance), approaching 60,000 are over pensionable age. Of those under pensionable age, approximately one in four is estimated to be in work. No information is available on the numbers of REA recipients who also receive income support.

Community Care

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of the community care grant budget had been spent by each Merseyside office on 1 December 1989.

Mr. Scott: Information about the levels of expenditure in each local office from the community care grants budgets is available in the Library.

Employment Training

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether claimants can benefit from employment on trial if during the 26 weeks prior to a trial period they were participating in an employment training scheme or a YTS scheme, with and without employee status.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Those in either employment training or YTS without employee status during the 26 weeks before commencing employment may benefit from the employment on trial provisions.

Correspondence

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will answer the letter from the hon. Member for Birkenhead dated 12 August 1989 and followed up on 1 December 1989 about his constituent Robert Holmes, of 4 Clarence road, Birkenhead.

Mr. Newton: I have writen to the hon. Member today on the point of policy he raised in his correspondence, and I regret that it has taken some time to consider.

Resettlement Agency

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the quality of service performance indicators that have been introduced into the Resettlement Agency since its establishment as an agency.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Resettlement Agency has been set a target to devise a scheme to assist resettlement unit managers to compare the effectiveness of units on a common basis. It also intends to undertake a study to examine clients' perceptions in an effort to help establish common standards for the units.

Local Offices (Interpreters)

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will indicate for each of the Department's local offices in the Greater Manchester area his estimate of the percentage of callers who have a very low understanding of the English language; and whether these offices maintain lists of staff who are willing and able to act as interpreters for ethnic minority customers.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: All the 23 DSS local offices in the Greater Manchester area estimate that up to 10 per cent. of their callers have a very low understanding of the English language. Of these, 12 offices—Bury, Cheetham, Chorlton, Failsworth, Farnworth, Hyde, Openshaw, Rochdale, Rusholme, Sale, Stockport North and Wigan—hold lists of staff willing and able to interpret for ethnic minority customers. Eleven offices—Ashton, Bolton, Leigh, Longsight, Manchester (Central), Middleton, Oldham, Salford North, Salford South, Stockport South and Wythenshawe—maintain effective arrangements for communicating with customers who have a very low understanding of the English language by other methods, such as the use of volunteer interpreters from the local community, including relatives and friends.

Transitional Benefit

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are still in receipt of transitional benefit payments (a) in west Yorkshire and (b) throughout the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 8 February 1990]: It is estimated that immediately before the annual benefits uprating this April, the number of claimants in Great Britain receiving income support transitional protection will have reduced to under 500,000. A breakdown of this figure by individual regions or parts of regions is not available.

At the end of January, 99,897 applicants in Great Britain were receiving housing benefit transitional protection. This figure included 9,457 applicants in west Yorkshire.

Information for Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the amount in transitional payment benefit paid per person since its introduction; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 8 February 1990]: Just over £58 million has been paid out to 202,797 recipients of housing benefit transitional payments since July 1988, averaging £4·19 a week.

Income support statutory transitional protection paid to former supplementary benefit recipients is estimated to amount to some £340 million from April 1988 to the end of this financial year. Further information on these payments is not available in the form requested. However, during the period protection has been paid to just over 1·5 million claimants. The average weekly amount per claimant immediately after the April 1989 uprating is estimated at £3·30.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the transitional benefit payments to end; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The length of time for which individuals will need protection cannot be predicted.

Income support normal transitional protection reduces as the claimant's total benefit income under the new scheme catches up with that under the former supplementary benefit scheme either at annual upratings or through changes in circumstances. Special transitional protection does not normally erode at all; it is uprated annually.

Special arrangements for protecting ordinary boarders through their income support will have ceased by March 1990 in the majority of cases. However, longer-term arrangements exist for people living in supported lodgings while they remain in the support environment and for hostel dwellers who were eligible for special transitional payments from October 1989 until they leave the hostel. In both cases payments cease if income support entitlement ceases or if the claimant's normal benefit entitlement reaches the protected level.

We have made it clear from the beginning that housing benefit transitional payments will be reduced as increases in other benefits make them less necessary. We have decided on a flat rate reduction of £2·00 in these payments from April. This is the same level of reduction as the one applied in 1989 and, because of this occasion social security benefits are being increased by larger amounts, will ensure that the vast majority of recipients gain overall in cash terms from the uprating.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Safety

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what investigation his Department is making of Dutch, Danish and German research programmes into testing for food safety to ensure that the United Kingdom based food processing and production industry does not suffer adversely from foreign competition following the closure of the Bristol laboratory of the Institute of Food Research.

Mr. Maclean: The United Kingdom has initiated a major European concerted activity relating to food safety, on, "Predictive Growth and Survival of Micro-organisms in Foods", which is to be supported under the European Commission's FLAIR programme and will be operational in 1990. This activity will provide an opportunity to draw on all relevant European data of benefit to the United Kingdom food processing and production industry and thus protect its competitive position.

Fishing (Greenland)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow can expect to receive a reply to his letter of 9 January, concerning British fishing in Greenland waters.

Mr. Curry: A reply to the hon. Member's letter of 9 January 1990 concerning British fishing in Greenland waters was dispatched on 7 February 1990.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library copies of instructions given by him to local authorities and the state veterinary service concerning the inspection of bovines for bovine spongiform encephalopathy and the payment of compensation in respect of confirmed and unconfirmed cases.

Mr. Maclean: Instructions to the state veterinary service are for internal use and not appropriate for placing in the Library. Where local authorities have enforcement responsibilities for legislation relating to BSE, they are provided with the appropriate statutory instruments. In addition, the Ministry's divisional veterinary officers have ensured that meat inspection authorities at non-EC approved slaughterhouses are aware of BSE, its clinical signs and the action they should take if they identify suspected cases.

Animal Foodstuffs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to indicate to other countries the dangers inherent in using meat and some meal of United Kingdom origin in animal foodstuffs; and if he will indicate when such steps were taken.

Mr. Maclean: Comprehensive information about bovine spongiform encephalopathy, including the probable role of meat and bone-meal in its development, has been provided to the EC Commission and member states on a regular basis since the disease was first identified. Similar information has been passed to the Office International des Epizooties (OIE) for dissemination to third countries. Inquiries received from individual countries are answered as they arise.

ENERGY

Onshore Oil Production

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many barrels of oil are produced each day from onshore drilling sites in the United Kingdom; how many such sites are currently in operation; and if he will make a statement of his proposals for licensing future onshore oil production.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Production from onshore oilfields averaged 14,700 barrels per day in 1989. This level is expected to increase substantially when production from the Wytch Farm field expands later this year. Twelve fields and a number of small sites in the east midlands are currently in production. Companies are free to apply to my Department for licences to produce oil from onshore discoveries at any time. No such applications are under consideration at present. Existing licensees require consent for their detailed plans to develop oil discoveries. My right hon. Friend has two applications for such consent currently under consideration.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give the names and dates of post-1980 NATO exercises in which the United Kingdom national oil board and the eastern branch of the NATO wartime oil organisation have participated.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 8 November 1989, Official Report, column 652; it would not be appropriate for me to supply the detail requested.

Marketing Advisers

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many companies submitted tenders for the contract to be special marketing and public relations adviser to him won by Lowe Bell.

Mr. Wakeham: Three firms were invited to submit tenders in respect of the appointment of a special marketing and PR adviser for the Secretary of State. One of the firms declined to participate.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many companies submitted tenders for the marketing and public relations advisers contract with his Department and the electricity supply industry won by Dewe Rogerson.

Mr. Wakeham: Three firms were invited to submit tenders in respect of the joint appointment of a marketing and PR adviser for the Government and the electricity supply industry. One of the firms declined to participate.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will place in the Library a copy of his contract with Lowe Bell Communications as special marketing and promotional advisers.

Mr. Wakeham: Detailed information concerning contracts with individual advisers is commercially confidential.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the target objectives laid down in his contract with Lowe Bell Communications as special marketing and promotional advisers.

Mr. Wakeham: Lowe Bell Communications will provide independent marketing and public relations advice to the Department of Energy as required in respect of electricity privatisation. Detailed information concerning contracts with individual advisers is commercially confidential.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the target objectives set down in the contract with Dewe Rogerson as marketing and public relations advisers to his Department and the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Wakeham: The Secretary of State for Energy and the electricity supply industry (ESI) have jointly appointed Dewe Rogerson to be marketing and public relations advisers for the privatisation of the ESI in England and Wales. Dewe Rogerson will be responsible for the development of the marketing strategy and will undertake specific marketing and public relations tasks, as required. Detailed information concerning contracts with individual advisers is commercially confidential.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what will be the distinct roles of Lowe Bell and Dewe Rogerson in providing him with special marketing and marketing advice, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: Dewe Rogerson as a joint appointment will provide marketing and public relations advice to both the Department of Energy and the electricity supply industry. Lowe Bell Communications will provide marketing and public relations advice solely to the Department of Energy.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will place in the Library a copy of the contract for marketing and public relations advice between Dewe Rogerson and his Department and the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Wakeham: Detailed information concerning contracts with individual advisers is commercially confidential.

Electricity Supply Industry

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are his current proposals for employee shareholdings in the electricity supply industry in terms of individual employees and as a percentage of total shares respectively.

Mr. Wakeham: No decision on the type of offers that will be made to employees has yet been taken.

Electricity Boards (Assets)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his current estimate of the value of the assets of the Central Electricity Generating Board, the 12 area boards and each of the Scottish electricity boards.

Mr. Wakeham: Asset values are contained in the relevant annual report and accounts, copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

Information about the Scottish electricity boards is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Peak Demands (Cold Weather)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his Department's current estimate of severe weather peak demand for electricity, this year and for each succeeding year up to 1995.

Mr. Wakeham: In the financial year 1988-89 average cold spell system maximum demand for electricity in England and Wales was 48·1 GW. The Department has no estimate of this number for future years.

(2) what was the total of electricity imported from France in 1989 in (a) kilowatt hours and (b) 1986 values.

Mr. Wakeham: Provisional data for the period December 1988 to November 1989, as published in the overseas trade statistics, show that electricity imports from France amounted to 14,045 GW hours. This equates to £346 million at 1986 prices. The figure at 1986 prices has been derived by applying the unit value of electricity imports in 1986 to the volume imported in 1989. There were no exports of electricity recorded for this period.

Energy Exports and Imports

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what were the total exports of coal, natural gas and oil in December 1989 expressed in tonnes and at 1985 values;

(2) what were the total imports of coal, natural gas and oil in December 1989 expressed in tonnes and at 1985 values.

Mr. Wakeham: I refer the hon. Member to my reply given on 1 February 1990, Official Report, col 264.

Cormorant Alpha

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) of what material the leg of the Cormorant Alpha platform, damaged by explosion on 22 April 1989, was made; what was the extent of the damage to the leg; whether there was any water seepage into the leg at any point; whether the structural integrity of the platform, or of the leg where the explosion occurred, has been affected; what internal and external inspections have been carried out on the damaged leg; what frequency of inspection of the damaged leg his Department will require in the future; what repairs have been carried out to the leg; and whether repairs so far carried out have been approved by the appropriate certifying authority;

(2) what advice he has given to operators of offshore installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf consequent on the explosion on the Cormorant Alpha platform on 22 April 1989; and if he will publish the results of his Department's investigation into the causes of the explosion;

(3) where the explosion on the Cormorant Alpha production platform on 22 April 1989 occurred; what work was being carried out at the time; and what was the cause of the explosion;

(4) whether he intends to pass a copy of his Department's report on the explosion on the Cormorant Alpha platform on 22 April 1989 to the procurator fiscal in Aberdeen for consideration of prosecution.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The explosion occurred in one of the legs of the platform during the installation of an additional emergency shutdown valve on the gas riser. A small component failed allowing a safety plug in the gas riser to be ejected causing a gas leak. the valve and the riser were closed, isolating the riser, but residual gas in the leg found an unidentified ignition source. All personnel had been evacuated to a safe area and precautionary down-manning of the installation had commenced before the ignition occurred.

The legs of the Cormorant Alpha platform are constructed of concrete. There was no primary structural damage as a result of the explosion and the structural integrity of the platform had not been affected. Repairs to some minor internal damage to trunking and hatch covers have been carried out and have been approved by the certifying authority. Regular surveys of the platform will be undertaken by the certifying authority in accordance with statutory requirements. Although water from the deluge system entered the leg, there was no abnormal sea water seepage following the incident.

In October 1989 my safety directorate issued a discussion document on protection against fire and explosion on offshore installations.

A report on my Department's investigation into the incident has been passed to the procurator fiscal in Aberdeen. As the report is an integral part of the procurator fiscal's consideration of whether any prosecution should be initiated, it would not be appropriate to release it.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when the Cormorant field will begin production of oil and gas; and what has been the total loss of production from the Cormorant field caused by (a) the shutdown of the platform and (b) the shutdown of the pipeline system running through the Cormorant Alpha platform.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Production from the North Cormorant platform restarted late in May 1989. Production from the Cormorant Alpha platform is expected to restart later this month. It is not expected that there will be any long-term loss of production, but some 0·6 million tonnes of Cormorant production was deferred while the pipeline system was shut down and a further 1·1 million tonnes has been deferred while the Cormorant Alpha platform only has been shut down.

Ninian Central

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what advice he has given following the leak of gas, which occurred on the Ninian Central platform in the week ended 8 October 1988, to other operators on the United Kingdom continental shelf; if he will publish his Department's report into the incident; and if he intends to pass a copy of his Department's report to the procurator fiscal in Aberdeen for consideration of prosecution;

(2) what was the cause of the gas leak which occurred on the Ninian Central platform in the week ended 8 October 1988; what remedial steps have been taken to prevent a recurrence; and what was the total cost of lost production of oil and gas as a result of the shutdown of the platform.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The incident was caused by undue manual force being applied when attempting to open a small valve. This resulted in the fracture of a drain line on a separator vessel, causing a high pressure discharge of condensate through a 0·75in hole. All similar drain connections on the operator's platforms were inspected and found to be in order.

My safety directorate issued a safety notice (5/89) on 21 February 1989. This made it clear that owners of installations should take steps, including safety assessments and hazard and operability studies where appropriate, to ensure that their systems and procedures are adequate to prevent gas releases from pressurised systems and to provide effective fire and gas detection and water deluge systems.

It is not proposed to publish the report by my inspectors into this incident. Careful consideration was given to whether there were grounds for prosecution, but it was concluded that such action was not appropriate.

The total value of lost and deferred production was some £7 million in prices of the day, of which some 40 per cent. represented deferred rather than lost production.

Fulmar FSU

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what advice he has given to offshore operators on the United Kingdom continental shelf consequent on the incident in the week of 25 December 1988, when the Fulmar FSU broke loose from its moorings; if he will publish a copy of his Department's report into the incident; and if he intends to pass a copy of his Department's report to the procurator fiscal in Aberdeen for consideration of prosecution;

(2) what was the cause of the Fulmar FSU breaking loose from its moorings in the week of 25 December 1988; what was the loss of production caused by this incident; and what technical changes have been advised or required of operators of this and similar operations, to prevent a recurrence and earlier warning of serious incidents.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Fulmar FSU broke loose from its single anchor leg mooring buoy when critical latch components at the base of the buoy fractured during severe weather conditions. The buoy was of a design unique on the UKCS and any lessons learnt are largely specific to it. As a result of requirements by my safety directorate, the operator has made a number of design modifications and has installed a new position reference system and a propulsion facility to enable the direction of drift to be controlled. In addition, my safety directorate laid down specific technical requirements prior to the reinstatement of the Fulmar FSU. Similar advice has been given to one other operator planning to procure a floating storage unit.

My Department's investigation report will be sent to the procurator fiscal in Aberdeen and will form an integral part of his consideration of whether any prosecution should be initiated. It would not therefore be appropriate for it to be published.

It is not expected that there will be any long-term loss of production as a result of this incident, but production of some 2·25 million tonnes of oil was deferred until later in the field life.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the loss of oil spillage as a result of the Fulmar FSU breaking loose from its moorings in the week of 25 December 1988; what steps were taken to control the resulting oil slick; what arrangements were in place at the locus to deal with oil spills; what was the maximum spillage that existing facilities could contain; and what instructions or guidance he has given to operators as a result of this incident to improve the oil spill response capacity on the United Kingdom continental shelf.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Approximately 1,300 tons of oil were spilled following the incident. The oil slick was closely monitored by air and sea surveillance. No action was taken when it was found to have dispersed naturally.

The standby vessel for the Fulmar FSU held a maximum of 5 tons of dispersant capable of dealing with 100 tons of oil.

Primary responsibility for responding to oil spills from offshore installations rests with the operators who are required to have oil spill contingency plans. The industry has a counter-pollution capability on a collective basis, and the resources of the marine pollution control unit of the Department of Transport are available for dealing with oil spills requiring greater resources than those provided by the industry. No additional guidance as a result of Fulmar FSU incident is considered necessary.

Offshore Installations (Corrosion)

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what research his Department has undertaken into the problem of corrosion under insulation, in offshore installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf; what specific instructions or guidance he has given to operators on this matter; and what assessment he has made of the loss of production as a result of corrosion under insulation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My safety directorate has appointed an independent consultant to carry out a survey to determine the procedures and systems in use for monitoring and controlling corrosion and erosion of pipework and plant, including corrosion under insulation, on offshore installations. The aim in sponsoring this work is to issue, if necessary, improved guidance to the industry.

My Department is also sponsoring the development of a system to detect corrosion of process pipework without removing the insulation cladding. A company has demonstrated the feasibility of the concept and is now proceeding with prototype manufacture prior to experimental evaluation.

My Department is not aware of any loss of production due to corrosion under insulation on offshore installations.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of the proportion by which electricity prices will have risen for heavy industrial users between the years 1986-87 and 1990-91.

Mr. Baldry: Prices for all industrial users have risen by 12 per cent. in current terms, equivalent to a reduction of 5 per cent. in real terms, between 1986-87 and the first two quarters of 1989-90. Figures beyond the second quarter of 1989-90 are not yet available.

Nuclear Levy

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the electricity consumers in England and Wales who will be exempt from the nuclear levy.

Mr. Baldry: Electricity customers benefit from the security of supply which diversity helps ensure, and therefore should contribute to the costs of achieving that security. The cost of nuclear power is already included in electricity prices. This will not change after privatisation. The fossil fuel levy will simply indentify this cost.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consultations he has carried out on the level and scope of the nuclear levy.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy earlier today.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the maximum number of supply interruptions allowed in one year of a supply contract for electricity generated from nuclear sources for it to count towards the non-fossil fuel quota.

Mr. Baldry: Arrangements which allow a generator at his discretion to interrupt the supply, do not provide security of supply. Such arrangements will therefore not be capable of contributing towards the non-fossil fuel obligation.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the supply contract for nuclear electricity from France will count towards the non-fossil fuel quota.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells) on 29 January at column 86.

Leukaemia

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will meet the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board to discuss the timetable for publication of the study commissioned by the board in 1988 into electro-magnetic fields emanating from power lines and the incidence of adult leukaemia;

(2) if during his next meeting with the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board, he will discuss the publication date of the report it commissioned into the link between electro-magnetic fields emanating from power lines and adult leukaemia.

Mr. Baldry: The national grid division of the CEGB is managing this work on behalf of the electricity supply industry. It is supporting investigations by independent researchers of good standing and it is expected that the results will be published in due course in scientific journals following the normal peer review process.

TRANSPORT

Tachographs

12. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to ensure the enforcement of tachograph regulations for heavy lorries; how many tachograph inspectors have been appointed by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Checks on HGV drivers' tachograph records are conducted by the Department's traffic examiners at the roadside and in follow-up investigations at operating bases. Charts are also checked in the 11 traffic area offices using computerised analysis equipment.

Over 1·4 million tachograph charts will be checked in 1990-91. Twenty-five traffic examiners were recruited in 1989, and a further recruitment drive is planned for 1990 to bring the grade up to its full strength of 235 posts.

London Underground

14. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will hold discussions with London Underground Limited on options for a special extra line service from Embankment to Charing Cross stations following any eastward extensions of the Jubilee line route.

Mr. Portillo: The existing Northern line and Bakerloo line services from Embankment to Charing Cross stations will be unaffected by the proposed extension of the Jubilee line, and it is proposed that Jubilee line passengers will benefit from new interchanges at Westminster, Waterloo, London Bridge and points east of there.

18. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are being taken to implement the major upgrading programme of London's Underground, proposed in the central London rail study.

Mr. Portillo: Action to implement the £1·5 billion modernisation programme is in hand on both the Underground and Network SouthEast. Examples on the Underground include the modernisation of the Central line at a cost of about £720 million; the development of similar plans for the Northern line; improvements to increase the capacity of other lines; and works to increase the capacity of some of the most heavily congested stations.

28. Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to how many London Underground stations have been closed for all or part of the day to staff shortages so far this year.

Mr. Portillo: London Underground will close a station when insufficient numbers of staff are present to permit safe operation.

There were 153 station closures during the first four weeks of this year. Sixty-eight of these occurred during the first week, when additional staff had to be recruited to carry out the hourly fire inspections required by the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority.

Airline Users Committee

15. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has met the chairman of the Airline Users Committee to discuss its annual report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend met the chairman and director general of the committee on 26 September 1989 before publication of the report. I shall be meeting the committee again on 14 February to discuss matters of mutual interest.

London Regional Transport

16. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to meet the chairman of London Regional Transport; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Parkinson: The date of my next formal meeting with Mr. Newton has not yet been fixed.

41. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of London Regional Transport; and whether matters of safety were discussed.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend and I frequently meet the chairman of London Regional Transport. The most recent meeting was on 5 February when the chairman and I discussed a wide-range of matters including safety.

42. Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the total net saving to London Regional Transport due to competitive tendering.

Mr. Portillo: London Regional Transport estimates that it has secured cost savings of some 15 per cent. as a result of letting bus routes by competitive tender. It is not possible to quantify the impact of competitive tendering on other areas of its business.

74. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much grant aid he is providing for London Regional Transport to implement the findings of the Fennell report during 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Portillo: London Underground estimates that by the year 2000 it will have spent more than £1 billion on improving safety. The improvements go much wider than the recommendations of the Fennell report. Government grant to London Regional Transport is not attributed to specific projects or activities, but the successive increases in grant announced in the last two Autumn Statements will be more than sufficient to enable London Underground to secure its planned improvements in safety standards. Grant is planed to rise by 115 per cent. over the public expenditure survey period.

Road Accidents

17. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to introduce to reduce the number of road accidents involving children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Cutting child casualties is one of our top road safety priorities. Since September we have introduced compulsory rear seat restraints, launched "conspicuity" and "safe route to school" campaigns, and are developing other safety measures which will benefit particularly child pedestrians and cyclists. I am looking to local authorities in their road safety plans to foster local initiatives with schools, hospitals, parents and all concerned with the safety and well-being of children.

Network SouthEast

19. Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the extent to which fares on Network SouthEast are presently subsidised and on the effect on Network SouthEast of the phasing out of the public service obligation grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Network SouthEast is planning to invest some £1·2 billion over the next three years. The level of investment in British Rail was recently described by its chairman as "about the maximum rate we can physically manage".

According to BR's plans Network SouthEast's investment can be achieved through modest real fares increases while subsidy falls from 13 per cent. to zero.

M25

20. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when work will commence on the M25 spur to the A12 at Chelmsford.

Mr. Atkins: Our programme provides for award of the design commission later this year and announcement of a preferred route in 1993. Progress after that will depend on the outcome of the statutory procedures, including a public inquiry if one proves necessary.

British Rail

21. Mr. Barns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of British Rail; and what matters were discussed.

24. Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of British Rail to discuss investment for Network SouthEast.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend last met the chairman of British Rail on 17 January to discuss a range of subjects.

29. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by which date he intends British Rail to be ready for privatisation.

Mr. Portillo: We have taken no decisions yet on British Rail privatisation.

36. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of British Rail; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will next meet the chairman of British Rail; and what matters he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Members to the answer my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, Moorlands (Mr. Knox) earlier today.

64. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on investment in the line between Waterloo and Southampton.

Mr. Portillo: Since 1988 the main line from Southampton to Waterloo has been served by a fleet of modern class 422 Wessex electrics which cost £46 million. Network SouthEast has carried out numerous station improvements in the Southampton area often with funding contributions from local authorities. Eastleigh station was recently rebuilt at a cost of £1·8 million. The £16 million Portsmouth-Southampton electrification scheme is due for completion in May.

67. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the Government grant of money to the Sheffield-St. Pancras midland line for each successive year since 1979.

Mr. Portillo: The public service obligation grant is not based on an allocation between routes, and it is not possible to specify the sums paid in respect of services on the Sheffield-St. Pancras midland line. No grant has been paid for Inter-City services on any line since April 1988.

Air Traffic Control

22. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to ensure better co-ordination of European air traffic control systems.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government have launched various initiatives through Eurocontrol and the European civil aviation conference to promote integration of European air traffic control systems. I am glad that good progress is being made.

37. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on proposals by the Civil Aviation Authority to increase the number of air traffic controller cadets in 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Civil Aviation Authority is embarking on an enhanced programme for training air traffic controller cadets and is aiming to increase its recruitment from 80 in 1988 to 240 by 1991.

50. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by how much the Civil Aviation Authority's new en route air traffic control centre will increase air space capacity.

Mr. McLoughlin: The new en route centre is expected to increase airspace capacity, in the en route sectors over England and Wales by at least 40 per cent. when operational in 1996.

65. Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much will be invested by the Civil Aviation Authority to improve air traffic control over the next three years.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Civil Aviation Authority plans to spend £260 million over the next three years on civil air traffic control-related projects.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what length of training is now required before full qualification as an air traffic controller and what was the period of training undertaken before qualification in 1980.

Mr. McLoughlin: A simple comparison between the length of training now and the length of training in 1980 is not possible. I am therefore asking the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority to reply to the hon. Member with detailed information.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of persons out of the last intake commencing training as air traffic controllers, whose training has now been completed successfully completed their training course and qualified as air traffic controllers.

Mr. McLoughlin: The last intake which completed its training to qualify as air traffic controllers had 13 successful members out of 18 who commenced; of the five who were unsuccessful, three had their training terminated due to failure and two resigned.

Freight Transport

23. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to increase freight transport by the waterways to ease the demand by heavy goods transport on the roads; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: It is for customers to choose the mode of transport best suited to their needs. The role of Government is to ensure that fair conditions of competition exist between the modes.

M1, Leicestershire

25. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent measures he has taken to improve the flow of traffic on the M1 in Leicestershire.

Mr. Atkins: A number of measures are being prepared, some for imminent implementation. Junction improvements and widening of the M1 in Leicestershire were announced in the White Paper "Roads for Prosperity" in May 1989. In the meantime, improvements to assist traffic flow at junctions 21 and 24 are planned for this year.

Railway Investment

26. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will arrange to meet his West German counterpart to discuss railway investment.

Mr. Parkinson: I am looking forward to seeing all my European colleagues at the next EC Transport Council meeting on 29 March.

Channel Tunnel

27. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a further statement on plans for the high-speed railway link to the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: British Rail is continuing negotiations with its joint venture partner on a detailed agreement. The aim remains to introduce a Bill for the project later in the year.

31. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has discussed with British Rail its proposed levels of freight and passenger service between the north-west and the prospective Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: Ministers had the chance to see a presentation from British Rail very shortly before it published its proposals for passenger and freight services in its section 40 plan on 14 December.

38. Sir John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further consideration he has given to the proposals of the Ove Arup partnership with regard to the route of the Channel tunnel rail links; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave on 4 December to my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter), Official Report, at columns 87-88.

49. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the latest plans by British Rail for the Channel tunnel line through London.

51. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current situation regarding British Rail's plans for a high-speed rail link to the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: I refer to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bexleyheath (Mr. Townsend).

56. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current arrangements for the Euro tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: The Channel tunnel is a private sector project, to be constructed and operated in accordance with the Channel fixed link treaty, the Channel Tunnel Act and the concession agreement between the United Kingdom and French Governments and Eurotunnel.

Eurotunnel and TML, the construction group, have recently reaffirmed 15 June 1993 as the target date for completion. British Rail announced in December its plans for international rail services for the United Kingdom.

Bus Services (Privatisation)

30. Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of privatisation of the bus services.

Mr. Portillo: Privatisation of all 72 subsidiaries of the National Bus Company was completed in April 1988. Eight local authority bus companies have also been privatised and other sales are in the pipeline. Privatisation of the Scottish Bus Group is to begin shortly. I intend that privatisation should also occur in London.

Traffic, London

32. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many letters he has received in response to stage two of the east London assessment study.

Mr. Atkins: About 900.

45. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many responses he has received to the "Traffic in London" discussion paper.

Mr. Atkins: As of today, 59. The consultation period expires on 28 February.

55. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he has commissioned into the effects of traffic restrictions and measures in London.

Mr. Atkins: My Department studies a wide range of measures aimed at easing congestion in London, and these have included a preliminary study of the possible implications of introducing electronic road pricing in London.

71. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many responses he has so far received to the London assessment studies consultation.

Mr. Atkins: About 3,000.

Roads

33. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road schemes have been completed since 1979.

Mr. Atkins: Since April 1979, 282 trunk road schemes, totalling 970 miles and including 107 bypasses and relief roads, have been completed.

Marchioness

34. Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will make a decision as to whether a public inquiry will be held to investigate the Marchioness collision.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will decide whether to order a formal investigation into the Marchioness accident when he has received the report from the chief inspector of marine accidents.

Road Pricing

35. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to publish proposals on road pricing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My Department has no proposals to introduce road pricing at present.

Driving Instructors

39. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any proposals to change the regulations governing the qualifications of people supervising learner drivers.

Mr. Atkins: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, South (Mr. Sumberg) on 20 December 1989, Official Report, Vol. 164. c. 278.

Association of Chief Police Officers

40. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the Association of Chief Police Officers to discuss matters within his responsibilities; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Atkins: The Department has regular contacts with ACPO and with individual chief constables. These discussions cover all aspects of road, vehicle and driver safety. I met the chairman of the ACPO traffic committee on 8 November for a general discussion on all these matters.

Road Repairs

43. Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the value of penalties for late completion of repair works to trunk roads received in the last year.

Mr. Atkins: Penalty charges are payable under lane rental contracts for late completion of major maintenance works. In 1988-89 there were 12 lane rental contracts and, while no penalty charges were incurred by contractors, an estimated £6 million in delay costs to road users were saved when compared with doing the work under conventional contracts, which would have taken longer.

Road Casualties

44. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department has taken to achieve the projected reduction in road casualties by a third by the year 2000.

Mr. Atkins: The steps that we are taking to reduce road casualties are outlined in the reply to the hon. Member on 9 January columns 584-85. These are set out more fully in the second annual progress report "Road Casualty Reduction", a copy of which is in the Library.

MV Marine

46. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he proposes to take regarding the loss of the MV Marine.

Mr. McLoughlin: As the Marine is a Bahamian registered vessel, the investigation into its loss is being conducted by the Bahamian authorities. However, as all the six crewmen were British, the marine accident investigation branch has asked for, and been promised, a copy of the Bahamian administration's report.

Severn Crossing

47. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about progress on the proposal to build a second Severn crossing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells) on 17 January, Official Report, column 241.

Railfreight

48. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many container ship routes in Britain operated by Railfreight use non-British ships and crews; and if he will make a statement on the usage of local labour on such routes.

Mr. McLoughlin: Railfreight does not operate any ships. I understand that it buys container space from operators on three routes from United Kingdom ports, all using non-British vessels and crew. The routes are: Ellesmere Port to Belfast, Holyhead to Dublin, and Harwich to Zeebrugge. The choice of operators is a matter for British Rail's commercial judgment. Crewing decisions are matters for the operators, subject to any requirements of the flag state or restrictions in charter agreements.

Regional Airports

52. Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to encourage the growth of regional airports.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government encourage the maximum use of regional airports, both to meet local demand and to relieve pressure on the London airports.

Over the past decade more than £300 million of capital expenditure has been facilitated, through special borrowing approvals for the development of local authority airports. I announced on 9 January that special borrowing approvals totalling £59 million will be available for 1990-91, facilitating investment which the airports concerned estimate could total some £117 million in that year.

We also very much welcome the contribution to the development of local authority airports which the private sector already makes through direct investment and joint venture schemes; and we look to the airports concerned and their local authority owners to take full account of the opportunities for private sector involvement as they formulate their plans for further expansion.

We are continuing to pursue liberalisation policies, both in the European Community and in bilateral negotiations, which increase further the scope for services from our regional airports.

Trust Ports

54. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of the trust ports.

Mr. McLoughlin: We believe that there are advantages in the main commercial trust ports being transformed into companies. So far we have not been able to make room ourselves for the legislation needed to bring about such a change. Meanwhile the Clyde and the Tees and Hartlepool port authorities have promoted their own private measures.

British Midland

57. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of British Midland Airways Ltd; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend met the chairman of British Midland Airways Ltd. on 29 January to discuss developments in the airline industry.

A1/M1, South Yorkshire

58. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date he expects the proposed A1/M1 link started in south Yorkshire to be completed.

Mr. Atkins: The proposals for an A1/M1 link road in south Yorkshire concern county roads which are the responsibility of the local highway authorities, Barnsley and Doncaster metropolitan district councils. Decisions on timing are for the councils, but I understand that construction work has not yet commenced.

Bypasses

59. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bypasses, for which his Department was responsible, were opened last year.

Mr. Atkins: Twelve bypasses were opened to traffic on trunk roads in 1989. Many other schemes, although not designated as bypasses, also took through traffic out of towns and villages.

Lockerbie Air Disaster

60. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received seeking a public inquiry into the Lockerbie air disaster.

Mr. McLoughlin: Since 15 December, when the Lord Advocate announced his decision to set preparations in hand for a fatal accident inquiry, representations have been made by the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, East (Mr. Prescott) and representatives of relatives of those who died in the disaster.

Environmental Protection

61. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what environmental protection measures his Department takes when constructing new roads.

Mr. Atkins: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Fearn) on 2 February. My right hon. Friend will make a further statement on the environmental treatment of trunk road schemes when the roads report is published shortly.

Roads, Essex

62. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial allocation has been made for road building in Essex over the next five years; and what schemes have priority.

Mr. Atkins: Detailed Government funding is for only one year at a time and depends on completion of statutory and other procedures, although there are forward programmes. The Department's expanded trunk road and motorway programme includes a number of important schemes in Essex, notably widening of M25 and the new motorway from the M25 to Chelmsford. The major A127 Rayleigh Weir junction improvement is already under way.

For local roads Essex county council will in 1990-91 receive transport supplementary grant of £6·686 million towards capital expenditure, including work on the A120 Dovercourt bypass stage 2 and the A414 Caves lane improvement. This represents an increase of over 30 per cent. compared with 1989-90.

Motorway Lane Closures

63. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate how many lane closure days have been saved by motorway lane rental contracts.

Mr. Atkins: Since their introduction in 1984 lane rental contracts on motorways in England have saved over 2,000 days of lane closures compared with estimates of the length of time the works would have taken under conventional contracts.

Luton-Dunstable Line

66. Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any further information from British Rail as to what its decision will be concerning the proposed reopening of the Luton to Dunstable line for passenger traffic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The British Railways Board is still appraising several options. It tells me that a decision will be taken soon.

Road Construction

68. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much he expects his Department to spend on road construction in 1990-91.

Mr. Atkins: Spending on road construction in 1990-91 will total £1,282 million. This is a 40 per cent. increase in real terms on the original provision for 1989-90.

Road Accidents

69. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to reduce the number of alcohol-related traffic accidents.

Mr. Atkins: The most effective way of reducing such accidents is the increasing recognition by drivers that society will not tolerate drinking and driving. I welcome this change in attitude, reflected in the reduced number of accidents linked with alcohol misuse. But it is still a major cause of death and injury on the road. We shall continue through publicity, through working with the drinks industry to encourage responsible behaviour, through enforcement action by the police and through effective application of the law to seek to cut this waste of human lives.

70. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the latest available annual figure for road deaths to (a) children and (b) adults killed near pedestrian crossings.

Mr. Atkins: In 1988, a total of 281 adults and 28 children were killed in road accidents that took place within 50m of a zebra or pelican crossing and, in particular, 222 of the adults and 24 of the children were pedestrians at the time of the accidents.

Of the pedestrian fatalities, 41 per cent. of the adults and 50 per cent. of the children were in the carriageway using the pedestrian crossing. Most of the remainder were in the carriageway, either within the zig-zag lines on the approach and exit to the crossing, or at some other point within a distance of 50m of the crossing. One child and six adults were on the footpath at the time of the accident.

Docklands Light Railway

72. Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans London Regional Transport has to extend the docklands light railway.

Mr. Portillo: Work is under way on extending the docklands light railway to Bank in the City of London and through the royal docks area to Beckton. London Regional Transport is developing a case for a southern extension under the River Thames to Greenwich and Lewisham.

Inner Cities (Access)

73. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to improve access to inner-city areas.

Mr. Atkins: Assisting local road schemes through transport supplementary grant; constructing trunk roads where appropriate; providing grant under section 56 of the Transport Act 1968 for public transport; and consolidating the regeneration of London's docklands with the approval of the Jubilee line extension.

A6 Bypass

75. Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects work to start on the A6 bypass of Rushden and Higham Ferrers.

Mr. Atkins: Subject to the satisfactory completion of statutory procedures, work could start in the summer of 1992 with completion towards the end of 1993.

RAF Aldergrove

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his reply of 30 January, Official Report, column 31, what type of radar there is at RAF Aldergrove; and whether it detects meteorite activity or tracks attributable to associated ionisation effects on Saturday 11 November 1989, at or around 2028 GMT, particularly on or near a position three nautical miles east of Kirkistown and at around 11,000 ft.

Mr. McLoughlin: There is no radar at RAF Aldergrove. There is a National Air Traffic Service Plessey Watchman EN 4000 radar at Belfast (Aldergrove) airport. It did not detect any unusual activity on 11 November 1989.

Irish Lights

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how Irish Lights is funded; what contribution is made to it by the Governments of the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland; and whether fishing boats from the Republic of Ireland are required to pay similar levies to Irish Lights to those paid by Northern Irish vessels.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Commissioners of Irish Lights are funded from the general lighthouse fund established by section 1 of the Merchant Shipping (Mercantile Marine Fund) Act 1898. The fund's principal income is from light dues levied on shipping using ports in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland. Following an agreement entered into in 1985, the Irish Government make an annual contribution into the fund which, when added to light dues collected in the Republic, now meets half the costs of the Commissioners deemed to be incurred in the Republic. The most recent such contribution was in January 1990 in the sum of £2 million Irish pounds. The United Kingdom Government make no contribution to the fund. Light dues in the Republic are determined by the Irish Minister of the Marine and the Irish Government have made no decision to extend light dues to fishing vessels in the Republic. Such vessels are liable to the United Kingdom dues if they call at a United Kingdom port.

Company Cars

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of company cars sold in the United Kingdom in 1989 were made in the United Kingdom

Mr. Atkins: Of the cars registered for the first time in a company name in 1989, 51 per cent. were produced in Great Britain.

The figures for Northern Ireland are not available. Therefore, figures given are for Great Britain only.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much is raised in vehicle excise duty from owners of cars which have (a) a 1 litre engine, (b) a 1·5 litre engine, (c) a 2 litre engine, (d) a 2·5 litre engine and (e) a 3 litre engine; and what is the income and regional distribution of the car owners in each of these cases.

Mr. Atkins: The Department's estimates of vehicle excise duty revenue from cars of different engine sizes are as follows:

Estimated vehicle excise duty revenue from cars 1988-89

Engine size in litres	Estimated vehicle excise duty revenue £ million
1 to 1·5	795
1·5 to 2	765

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much petrol prices would have to be raised for a revenue neutral budget if vehicle excise duty was (a) abolished, (b) frozen at its current rate, (c) abolsihed for cares of less than 1·5 litre engines and (d) abolished for cares of less than 2 litre engines; and what would be the impact on the retail prices index in each of these cases.

Mr. Atkins: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Air Traffic

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the growth of air traffic throughout the United Kingdom over the next five years.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Department's most recent air traffic forecasts, published in December 1988, predict that in 1995 passenger movements at United Kingdom airports will be in the range of 120 million to just under 140 million. In 1988, the first year for which complete statistics are available the corresponding total was 93·2 million.

Whaley Bridge Bypass

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the reports by Allol and Lomax, consulting engineers, into the performance of the consulting engineers employed on the Chapel-en-le-Firth-Whaley Bridge bypass; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Atkins: The report is not yet completed. Phase (iii) of the geotechnical investigation is in hand and phase (iv) may be necessary, depending on the outcome of phase (iii). When the full report is available, consideration will be given to placing a copy in the Library.

Chiltern Lines (Signals)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the chairman of British Rail about new signalling systems on the Chiltern lines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: A scheme to resignal the Chiltern lines forms part of a package of measures to modernise the infrastructure on the route and is one of the prototype schemes for automatic train protection. The railway inspectorate will be discussing the details with British Rail at the appropriate time.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on (a) the percentage of signals (i) nationally and (ii) on the Chiltern lines which are paraffin-lit and (b) that are currently out of action.

Mr. Portillo: I have no such information. If the hon. Lady has a particular concern about the use of paraffin-lit signals she might wish to write to me.

Mersey Tunnel

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he received Merseytravel's submission for Government assistance in relation to the Mersey tunnel's debt issue; when Merseytravel is required to settle its budget and declare its levy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: We received Merseytravel's submission for Government assistance on 28 November 1989, some two months later than expected. We have been considering it carefully. Merseytravel is due to set its budget on 14 February, and we hope to respond by then.

Escalator (St. John's Wood)

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his reply on escalators at St. John's Wood to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, Official Report, 29 January, column 55, what explanation he received from London Underground as to why that escalator was still out of service on 7 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: This is a matter within London Underground's management responsibility, for which it should answer. However, the information given in my previous reply was given in good faith. I understand the repair is taking longer than expected, and that the work should now be complete by 26 February.

Vehicle Inspectorate

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the quality of service performance indicators that have been introduced into the Vehicle Inspectorate since its establishment as an agency.

Mr. Atkins: The main quality of service indicators that have been introduced by the Vehicle Inspectorate executive agency are:

i. The number of exemption certificates issued annually (an exemption certificate is issued if the Vehicle Inspectorate is unable to test a vehicle by the due test date).
ii. The time taken for dealing with requests for MOT-test documentation.
iii. The extent to which ministerial targets for defined enforcement activities have been met (eg inspections of heavy goods and public service vehicle operators' maintenance facilities; and inspections of MOT testing stations).
iv. The time taken between the receipt of an operator's application for a test appointment and the grant of an appointment.
v. The proportion of tests undertaken at the times and locations requested by operators.

Indicators (i) to (iii) along with other, secondary, measures are published in the inspectorate's 1989-90 business plan and 1988-89 annual report and accounts, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Indicators (iv) and (v) form part of the inspectorate's internal service quality monitoring system.

Historic Wrecks

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a table showing how many historic wrecks are protected by designation orders under the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973 (a) in total and (b) in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. McLoughlin: Designation orders have been made under the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973 in respect of 34 wreck sites of historical importance. The numbers of orders made in each of the past 10 years is as follows:

	Orders
1980	3
1981	2
1982	2

1983	1
1984	2
1985	1
1986	1
1987	—

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what sums he has made available to marine archaeological work in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. McLoughlin: In 1986 the Department contracted the university of St. Andrews to provide a team to inspect both sites proposed for designation under the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973 because of their archaeological or historical importance and sites already so designated. Under this contract the Department has incurred expenditure as follows:

1987-88	42,884
1988-89	52,242
1989-90	73,700

Lancashire-London Transport Links

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve travel between Lancashire and London over the next 10 years.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 8 February 1990]: There is already a good rail service between Lancashire and London, which will benefit further from British Rail's substantial programme of investment.

The trunk road network is undergoing a major programme of expansion, as announced in "Roads for Prosperity"; within this programme are a number of schemes which will benefit links between Lancashire and London, in particular the completion of the M40 and the Birmingham orbital, and widening schemes for the M1 between junctions 6A and 19, the M6 between junctions 1 and 4A, junctions 11 and 21A and junctions 30 and 32. The widening of all present dual three lanes sections of the M25 to dual four lanes will also facilitate travel. The cost of the widening schemes alone will amount to some £1·8 billion.

There is also a number of major schemes proposed linking Greater Manchester and other urban areas to the national motorway network. These include the Greater Manchester western and northern relief road, the Manchester outer ring road, the Blackburn southern bypass and the Preston southern and western bypass.

The Government are also considering the timing and scope of the possibility of competitive tendering in the private sector to provide a new route in the Birmingham to Manchester corridor.

The region's airports are controlled by the local airport authorities and are not therefore under the direct responsibility of the Department. It is the policy of the Department to encourage LAAs to develop services to meet fully the demand which exists.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department has, and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 9 February 1990]: For unclassified but sensitive systems Departments are expected to follow CCTA guidance covering all aspects of IT security and the application of this has been tightened recently. CCTA advice is kept under continuous review and is based on analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as CCTA's risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM) which has also been made commercially available.

Car Ownership

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the levels of car ownership by size of settlement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 9 February 1990]: In 1985-86 the average number of cars per household and the percentage of households with at least two cars was as follows:

Type of area	Population (thousands)	Average number of cars per household	Percentage of household with at least two cars
Urban	>250	0·67	12
Urban	100-250	0·78	15
Urban	50-100	0·75	13
Urban	25-50	0·76	13
Urban	3-25	0·86	16
Rural		1·06	27
Great Britain		0·78	15

Source: National Travel Survey

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the rates of change in car ownership by size of settlement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The increase in the number of cars per household between 1975-76 and 1985-86 was as follows:

Type of area	Population (thousands)	Average number of cars per household		Per cent. increase 1975-76 to 1985-86
		1975-76	1985-86

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has done into levels of car ownership by income; and what are the latest figures.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 9 February 1990]: This information is provided by the family expenditure survey 1987, which shows for example that 7 per cent. of households with an income of under £45 per week have a car or van available, 54 per cent. of those with incomes between £125 and £150 per week and 98 per cent. of those with incomes over £550 per week. Multiple car ownership occurs at almost all household income levels. At about average household income, 63 per cent. of households have one car or van available, 10 per cent. have two, and 1 per cent. have three or more.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has done into levels of car ownership in relation to communities comprising small scattered settlements.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The Department of Transport has done no research on this topic. The most appropriate source of data for this work would be the 1981 census, which can provide data at enumeration district level.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether in the course of research done in connection with the national road traffic forecast 1989 his Department looked at levels and rates of change in car ownership by size of settlement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The Department makes local forecasts of origins and destinations of car trips at the local authorities district level consistent with the national forecasts, but these forecasts are not differentiated by size of settlement.

Vehicles (Environmental Impact)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the environmental impact of road vehicles running on diesel as opposed to petrol; and what is his policy on the promotion of the use of diesel and petrol.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 9 February 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn (Mr. Jones) on 18 December 1989, Official Report, columns 12-14.

DEFENCE

Trident

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made as to the implications for the Trident programme of the successful completion of the next stage of the CFE talks (CFE II).

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The current CFE negotiations have yet to be completed; not until that has been accomplished can the Government assess possible further steps on conventional arms control. On the separate issue of nuclear arms control, the United Kingdom's position on including our strategic deterrent in negotiations is well known and I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 215 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989, volume 1 (Cm. 675-1).

Greenham Common

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the proposed use of the Greenham common airbase;

(2) what information he has on whether the United States European intelligence unit will be moving from Germany to Greenham common.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 6 February 1990, Official Report, columns 591-92.

Military Bases (Closures)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what closures of North Atlantic Treaty Organisation or United States bases have been notified to him this year.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In the United Kingdom the United States authorities have announced, after consultation with the United Kingdom Government, that RAF Wethersfield is to be returned to the Ministry of Defence by June 1991, RAF Greenham Common will revert to standby status on the departure of the remaining cruise missiles in May 1991 and RAF Fairford will become a standby base in October this year.

Classified Documents

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions have security classified documents been lost or mislaid in each of the last 10 years by classification.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Records are not held of the number of classified documents lost or mislaid.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what review has been undertaken of his Department's filing system arising from the loss and rediscovery of documents.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Filing systems and other procedures are reviewed as part of the investigations which follow the reported loss of classified documents.

Air-to-Surface Missiles

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has in regard of the relative costs of the SCRAM-T missile and the Anglo-French air-to-surface missile; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I assume that the question relates to the assessment of options for the replacement of the WE177 free-fall bomb. These studies are continuing, and it is not yet possible to identify potential costs with any accuracy. However, company costs will be commercially confidential and, in accordance with normal procedures, will not be made public.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make the final decision on the replacement for the WE177 bomb with a tactical air-to-surface missile.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre (Mr. Mans) on 24 October 1989 at column 429.

RAF Chicksands

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the amount of money that has been authorised in the United States budget FY91 for the construction of a satellite communication terminal at RAF Chicksands.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I understand from the United States authorities that a project for the construction of a satellite communication terminal at RAF Chicksands has been submitted for inclusion in the United States fiscal year 1991 budget. The budget has not yet been approved.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on what the primary function of the satellite communication terminal to be constructed at RAF Chicksands will be.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I understand from the United States authorities that the satellite communications terminal planned for RAF Chicksands, if approved, would be a facility of the United States defence communications system (DCS). The terminal would provide communications services for United States forces at that site and radio relay facilities for other forces in the United Kingdom and Europe.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average length of time taken for a precautionary inspection of a nuclear submarine's reactor facility; and what is the average cost.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Planned inspections take place during scheduled refits and maintenance periods. With regard to the programme of inspections currently under way, the time taken will vary from one submarine to another. The additional costs of carrying out these inspections are likely to be small, but have not been separately identified.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the meaning of the term "come alongside" when the decision is taken as a precautionary measure to inspect the reactor of a nuclear submarine.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In this context the term "come alongside" means to berth in a naval harbour.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether his Department has found it necessary to revise its risk estimates of a nuclear submarine reactor accident either at sea or in dock as a result of faults reported in one of Britain's nuclear-powered submarines;

(2) if he has any plans to revise the current risk estimates for the likelihood of a maximum design accident as a primary containment failure of a nuclear submarine in dock; and if he will make a statement with special reference to the spread of radiation emitted in the course of an accident in dock into the atmosphere.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We continue to be guided by the advice of our independent safety advisers on the operation, in accordance with rigorous safety standards, of our nuclear-powered submarines. Submarines alongside have reactors closed down and present no hazard to the public.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if it is necessary for a nuclear submarine to enter a refit berth in order for an inspection to be carried out;

(2) how many refit berths there are for nuclear submarines; and whether there is sufficient refit berth capacity to make inspections of the nuclear submarine fleet without unnecessary delay.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to release details of our nuclear refit capacity. However, a refit berth is not required for the current inspections being carried out on our nuclear submarines.

Leopard II Tank

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities his Department is providing for Krauss Maffei Company to promote the Leopard II tank in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Krauss Maffei is aware that we are seeking industrial participation proposals from potential overseas suppliers competing for the Chieftain replacement requirement. The company will accordingly be undertaking a round of seminars as part of its marketing strategy to improve its knowledge of the United Kingdom defence market and to identify possible United Kingdom subcontractors. As with General Dynamics earlier, the Defence Export Services Organisation, in consultation with local chambers of commerce and regional development authorities, will be assisting Krauss Maffei in organising these seminars.

HMS Vulcan

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what defects were discovered in the HMS Vulcan P1 prototype reactor; and why it was closed down.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No defects were discovered in HMS Vulcan's PWR1 prototype reactor, which was shut down at the end of its programmed life.

Belgian Troops (Germany)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for the British Army of the Rhine of a withdrawal of Belgian troops from the Federal Republic of Germany.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Belgian authorities have made it clear that they have no current plans for large-scale unilateral troop withdrawals from the Federal Republic of Germany.

United States Air Force 401st Wing

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the projected cost of the transfer of the United States air force 401st wing from Spain to Italy; and what part of the cost is projected as falling to (a) Britain, (b) the United States of America and (c) other NATO allies.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The provisional assessment of the total cost is £424 million. Of this £37 million would fall to be met by the United Kingdom, £198 million by the United States of America, and £189 million by other NATO nations.

Submarine Bases

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was paid in rates each year for the past 10 years by his Department in respect of the Clyde submarine base, Faslane and Coulport, to the local authority.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have been asked to reply.

The contributions in lieu of rates paid in respect of the Clyde submarine base, Faslane and Coulport, are set out in the table.

Clyde submarine base

	Faslane		Coulport
	Non-domestic £	Domestic £	Non-domestic £	Domestic £

THE ARTS

Libraries (Beetles)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister for the Arts what recommendations he has made to historic libraries on protecting their collections of books against the Australian spider beetle and the biscuit beetle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The national preservation office, funded by the British Library, maintains a free inquiry and advice service to libraries in the United Kingdom on all aspects of preservation and security, including the protection of books against beetle.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Privatised Industries

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the possible renationalisation of privatised industries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: None.

Profit-related Pay

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many profit-related pay schemes are linked to the profitability of the firm as a whole rather than to a smaller unit; and how many people are affected.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information is not readily available.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to the Exchequer in each year of the profit-related pay scheme.

Mr. Lilley: The information is as follows.

Year	Estimated cost of income tax relief £ million
1987-88	negligible
1989-90	15

Costs are expected to increase in future.

Payroll Taxes

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made of different levels of payroll tax on the costs of industry.

Mr. Lilley: A payroll tax levied as a percentage of total payroll would raise an estimated £1¼ billion for each 0·5 per cent. of the tax rate.

Personal Equity Plans

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for each year that PEPs have been in operation what is (a) the number of people with PEPs, (b) the average holding per person in a PEP and the distribution of holdings and (c) the distribution of PEP holdings by region.

Mr. Lilley: Information is not available in the form requested. The number of plans taken out since the introduction of personal equity plans is estimated as follows:—

Year	Total
1987	270,000
1988	120,000
1989	300,000
Total	690,000

The average value of the investment in each plan is as follows.

Year	£
1988	1,800

An estimate for 1989 is not available yet and there is no information available on the distribution of the level of investments or the regional distribution of investors.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence he has on whether the existence of PEPs has increased (a) personal shareholdings and (b) savings.

Mr. Lilley: Personal equity plans offer a simple and cheap way of owning shares and have been very successful in shares and encouraging the spread of share ownership.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the distribution of personal equity plan holdings by income in each year of the scheme's existence.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information is not available.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the proportion of (a) non-United Kingdom shares and (b) shares in privatised companies held on average in each PEP and their distribution.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information is not available. Non-United Kingdom shares may not be held directly in a PEP.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of PEP savings he estimates are diverted from other forms of savings, and what information he has as to what these other savings are.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Tax

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the amount and share of pre-tax income accruing to (a) the top 1 per cent., (b) the top 5 per cent., (c) the top 10 per cent., (d) the top 25 per cent., (e) the bottom 70 per cent., (f) the bottom 5 per cent. and (g) all taxpayers in each year from 1978-79 to 1989-90 and the amount and share of tax liability for each of these groups.

Mr. Lilley: Estimates are given in the tables for 1978-79 and 1983-84 to 1989-90. Information for other years could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All estimates of income are based on information reported to tax offices and collected through the annual surveys of personal incomes. For years before 1985-86, estimates exclude employees' contributions to occupational pension schemes and some investment income on which tax is deducted at source. Estimates are based on the surveys of personal incomes for years up to 1987-88 and projections of the 1987-88 survey for subsequent years; the latter are therefore provisional. I regret that information on the bottom 5 per cent. of taxpayers is not available.

Revenues

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revenues have been received by Government for each year from 1979-80 to the present and in aggregate in real terms from (a) North sea oil, (b) privatisation proceeds and (c) other sales of land or property of central or local government.

Mr. Lilley: Such information as is readily available is included on the CSO database (identified by the database codes) and published in the 1990 public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 1021) as follows:

(a) total north sea taxes—database, code ABLG
(b) privatisation proceeds—Table 21.5.13 of Cm. 1021
(c) sales of land and buildings—Table 21.2.17 of Cm. 1021 implied GDP (at market price) deflator—database code DJDT

Tax Avoidance

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will adopt the Keith committee proposal to require taxpayers to disclose tax avoidance transactions.

Mr. Lilley: The recommendation of the Keith committee that the taxpayer should be obliged to tell the inspector where he has taken the benefit of any doubt whether any item ought to be declared, or any relief or deduction allowed, was rejected, following extensive public consultations, because it was found that it would be both burdensome and impracticable.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he intends to take measures to prevent fringe banks from funding tax avoidance schemes.

Mr. Lilley: No. Banks must be free to decide whether to fund any legitimate activity.

Bankruptcy

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he intends to take to protect the interests of the Inland Revenue in personal bankruptcy cases involving moneys held by Isle of Man or Channel Islands based trusts.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue will continue to use all measures available to it under the insolvency legislation.

Workplace Nurseries

Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received seeking assistance through the tax system to employers setting up nurseries.

Mr. Lilley: Employers can already obtain tax relief for most of the costs of setting up and running workplace nurseries. As to the provision of any further assistance, I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement.

Child Care

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he received about the taxation of the use of child care facilities.

Mr. Lilley: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of bank provision against less-developed country debt will be accepted for the financial year 1989-90 as appropriate to offset against corporation tax liability.

Mr. Lilley: Banks are entitled to a tax deduction for the proportion of doubtful debt which is estimated to be irrecoverable. The amount will be negotiated between the Inland Revenue and the banks when the banks submit their accounts for the year.

Electric Vehicles

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has recieved, and from whom, seeking encouragement through the use of the tax system for the development or use of electrically powered road vehicles.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has received few representations concerning tax concessions for the development or use of electrically powered road vehicles.

Day Vee

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Inland Revenue has sought the return of any former directors of Day Vee to the United Kingdom to help with its investigations into the company's tax liabilities.

Mr. Lilley: Such information is confidential.

Interest Rates

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from small businesses regarding the effects of interest rates.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer and I have received a number of such representations.

Investment

Mr. Adley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will arrange to meet his West German counterpart to discuss investment policy.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend regularly meets the West German Finance Minister at the European Community's Economic and Finance Council. In our countries business investment has been buoyant in the last two years: in the United Kingdom it grew by over 30 per cent. in the two years to 1988, owing to the success of the Government's policies in fostering confidence in the future of the United Kingdom economy.

Taxation Revenue

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in rank order the total revenue raised from the 21 different forms of taxation.

Mr. Lilley: The information can be found in tables 3.13, 3.14 and 3.15 in "Financial Statistics", published by the Central Statistical Office.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in order of amount collected by the Treasury each of the different and separate forms of taxation in the United Kingdom for 1988-89.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The information can be found in tables 3.13, 3.14 and 3.15 in "Financial Statistics", published by the Central Statistical Office.

Inland Revenue Office, Cumbernauld

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons employed at the Inland Revenue office in Cumbernauld are registered as disabled; and what percentage this represents of the total work force.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue employs 26 registered disabled staff in its office at Cumbernauld; this represents 2·47 per cent. of the total staff at 9 February 1990.

Paymaster General's Office

Mr. Soames: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to move the Paymaster General's office from Crawley.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 12 February 1990]: No.

Mortgage Tax Relief

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the additional annual cost or yield to the Exchequer in tax relief on mortgage interest payments of every 1 per cent. rise or reduction in mortgage interest rates.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: An increase or reduction of one percentage point in the level of mortgage interest rates would increase or reduce the annual cost of mortgage interest relief on the current stock of mortgages by about £550 million.

Tax Receipts

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give figures showing total receipts from capital transfer tax and inheritance tax for each year from 1980 expressed (a) in cash terms at 1990 prices and (b) as a percentage of total Inland Revenue receipts.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The receipts of capital transfer tax and inheritance tax for each financial year since 1980-81 are:

Year	Receipts at forecast 1990-91 Prices £ million	Percentage of total Inland Revenue Receipts
1980-81	760	1·3
1981-82	781	1·2
1982-83	758	1·1

1983-84	869	1·3
1984-85	909	1·3
1985-86	1,156	1·6
1986-87	1,263	1·7
1987-88	1,299	1·7
1988-89	1,203	1·6
[1]1989-90	1,200	1·5

[1] Converted using the GDP market price deflator and Autumn Statement forecast.

Beverage Containers

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue would be raised if value added tax was levied at (a) 20 per cent. (b) 25 per cent. and (c) 30 per cent. on non-returnable beverage containers.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 12 February 1990]: No measurable extra revenue would accrue because beverage containers are normally taxed at the same rate as their contents when the goods are supplied.

Company Cars

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost of not taxing company cars at their full value.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The benefit of the private use of a company car is taxed by reference to fixed scale charges, but the value of private use to any particular employee depends on a wide range of factors. Information about these is not available, so it is not possible to provide an estimate of the aggregate extent to which the private use of company cars is undertaxed.

Inflation

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the impact on inflation of raising £1 billion from (a) tobacco products, (b) beer, (c) wine and spirits, (d) petrol (e) value added tax and (f) vehicle excise duty.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The estimated impact on the retail prices index of raising £1 billion from each of the specific taxes and duties is shown in the table.

Source	Effect on retail price index (per cent.)
Tobacco	0·64
Beer	0·48
Wines and spirits	0·91
Petrol	0·29
VAT	0·32
VED	0·24

These estimates are subject to a considerable margin of error given the large duty changes implied.

Petrol Duties

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the impact on the retail price index of increasing excise duties on petrol by twice what is needed for indexation, and raising excise on the other areas by as much as is necessary to achieve the same overall revenue for the Exchequer as would be achieved by full indexation only of all items.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 12 February 1990]: 0·47 per cent.

Income Tax

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual reduction in income tax for a married man earning (a) £160,000 per year and (b) £260,000 per year as a result of the changes brought in by the 1988 Budget.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 12 February 1990]: A married man earning £160,000 in 1989-90 and claiming no reliefs of allowances other than the married man's allowance has income tax liability of £25,045 less than if the allowances and thresholds in 1987-88 had been indexed to 1989-90 and the tax rates had remained unchanged at 1987-88 levels. A married man earning £260,000 would have a corresponding reduction of £45,045.

Pension Schemes

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the general conditions of approval of occupational and personal pension schemes by the Inland Revenue are such as to permit the provision of payments out of such a scheme of an amount related to a person's accrued or prospective retirement pension under the scheme, such payments to be made throughout any period in which that person is entitled to the payment of an invalidity pension from the national insurance fund and to cease at the end of that period.

Mr. Major [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The main purpose of occupational and personal pension schemes is to provide an income in retirement. The tax approval conditions for such schemes allow benefits to be paid before retirement age if a person is incapable of continuing in employment. There is no requirement on schemes to provide a pension before retirement age. Decisions on whether an incapacity pension is payable are matters for the scheme trustees and their criteria might differ from entitlements to invalidity pensions. Incapacity pensions are normally payable for life.

HMSO

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the quality of service performance indicators that have been introduced into HMSO since its establishment as an agency.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 12 February 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) on 15 January 1990 at column 98.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Taxis

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the circumstances under which police records are made available to the authorities concerned with the licensing of hackney-carriage and private hire drivers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information from police records is not generally made available for these purposes. In London records are available for the purpose of licensing hackney-carriage drivers, since the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis is the licensing authority.

Boundary Commission (Wales)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total expenditure of the parliamentary boundary commission for Wales during the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The parliamentary boundary commissions for England and Wales share a common secretariat and premises. Although work now in hand will enable costs to be identified for each commission separately, at present it is possible to give only the total combined expenditure of the two commissions, which for 1988-89 was £252,160. Members of the parliamentary boundary commissions receive no remuneration or attendance alowance, but are recompensed for any reasonably actual expenses incurred.

Summer Time

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received from Scotland concerning any proposed change to British summer time.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A total of 5,475 representations, including signatures on petitions, were received from Scotland.

Shotgun Certificates

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to whether any disciplinary action has been taken against any officer in regard to the renewal of the shotgun certificate of Mr. G. W. Phillips.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the chief constable that no such disciplinary action has been taken.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to whether a receipt was issued for the shotgun, the property of Mr. G. W. Phillips, when it was taken into the possession of the Gwent constabulary.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The local administration of the firearms licensing system is a matter for the chief officer of police concerned.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to what training has been given to police officers on the procedures for dealing with applications, renewals and variation of firearms and for shotgun certificates under (a) the Firearms Act 1968 and (b) the Firearms Act 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. Training in the local administration of firearm licensing procedures is a matter for the chief officer of police concerned.

Security Service

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the security service tribunal is declining to accept complaints against the security service which relate to matters that took place prior to any given date.

Mr. John Patten: The tribunal is subject to paragraph 9 of schedule 1 to the Security Service Act 1989.

Personal Data

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will set out the procedure within his Department for authorising transfers of personal data to other Government Departments; and at what level such decisions are authorised;

(2) on what grounds decisions are taken to transfer personal data held by his Department to other Government Departments;

(3) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from his Department to other Government Departments; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(4) what internal guidelines covering the transfer of personal data to other Government Departments are available to staff in his Department; and whether he will place a copy of any such guidelines in the Library;

(5) what kind of personal data held by his Department, whether on computer or manually, are transferred to other Government Departments;

(6) what plans exist in his Department for the transfer of personal data via the Government data network; and what new procedures have been adopted within the Department to prevent unauthorised transfers of such data;

(7) what records are kept of transfers of personal data from his Department to other Government Departments; and whether the Data Protection Registrar has access to the relevant records;

(8) whether records will be kept of all personal data transferred to other Government Departments via the Government data network;

(9) whether the rules governing the transfer of personal data from his Department to other Government Departments are the same for data held manually as for data held on computer.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Where information comprising personal data is computerised, disclosures are made only as permitted by the appropriate registration under the Data Protection Act 1984 or by one of the statutory exemptions embodied within the Act. The general guidance issued to staff is that dealing with the application of the Data Protection Act 1984, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. This is the position whether or not there is any connection to the Government data network; and there are no plans at present to maintain records of, or issue central guidance dealing with, the transfer of personal data over the Government data network.

As regards non-computerised personal data, depending on the nature of the information held appropriate local procedures determine to whom the information may be disclosed, and who may authorise the disclosure. The Home Office holds many millions of records containing personal data, both manual and computerised, on a wide range of subjects: in consequence, the remaining detailed information sought in these questions is not readily available and could not be obtained save at disproportionate cost.

Drugs

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his proposed international drugs conference in London.

Mr. Mellor: The world ministerial summit to reduce the demand for drugs and to combat the cocaine threat is being organised by Her Majesty's Government in association with the United Nations and will take place in London from 9 to 11 April 1990.

It is to be opened by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, who will be joined for the opening session by the President of Colombia and the Secretary General of the United Nations. Expert speakers from around the world will address the working sessions. It is hoped that the summit will strengthen our knowledge of ways to tackle the drug problem and will lead to an even greater commitment internationally to reduce the demand for all drugs and to combat the production and traffic in cocaine.

Management Consultants

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the contracts his Department has given to outside management consultants in policy areas concerning his Department since January 1985 and the date of completion and cost of each contract.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [pursuant to the reply, 31 January 1990, c. 203]: A contract awarded to Deloitte, Haskins and Sells to investigate the "Practicality of Private Sector Involvement in the Remand System", completed in February 1989 at a cost of £207,865 (exclusive of VAT), should have been included in my right hon. and learned Friend's answer of 31 January 1990.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Women Staff

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of Overseas Development Administration staff are women in (a) all positions within the ODA, (b) ODA staff based in the United Kingdom, (c) ODA staff based overseas, (d) ODA staff at or above the level of grade seven, and (e) ODA staff at or above the level of grade five.

Mrs. Chalker: On 2 January 1990 the numbers of women employed in the ODA were:

	Total	Women	per cent.
All grades	1,525	662	43·3
Staff in United Kingdom	1,475	653	44·3
Staff overseas	50	9	18·0
Staff at or above grade 7	259	26	10·0
Staff at or above grade 5	50	5	10·0

These figures exclude casual staff and staff on special leave without pay.

Education Conference

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will be representing Her Majesty's Government at the world conference on education for all in Thailand on 5 to 9 March.

Mrs. Chalker: Her Majesty's Government will be represented by the Overseas Development Administration's chief education adviser and by the Under-Secretary for international relations at the Department of Education and Science.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Antrim Technology Park

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the cost to the Exchequer of developing the Antrim technology park in the period up to 31 March 1989; and how many jobs have been created by the expenditure to date.

Mr. Needham: The cost of developing the park and constructing the buildings has been £4,405,672. Present employment in companies located at the park is 234.

Police Services

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police services, other than the Royal Ulster Constabulary, operate within Northern Ireland; what is the location of work for each of these services; how many personnel are employed as policemen and policewomen in each of these services; and what is the employing authority for each of these police services.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are three police services operating within the transport sector in Northern Ireland. They are:

a. Northern Ireland Airports Constabulary; 76 policemen and 7 policewomen; Northern Ireland Airports Ltd.

b. Belfast Harbour Police; 35 policemen, Belfast Harbour Commissioners.

c. Larne Harbour Constabulary; 16 policemen; Larne Harbour Limited.

Fire Service

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for the last three years for which information is available all those occasions when the fire service has had to attend Royal Ulster Constabulary police stations or other facilities, stating whether the incident was due to terrorist action, fire, arson or other cause; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: During the years 1987, 1988 and 1989 the brigade attended the following incidents to RUC stations and other police facilities in the Province.

Date and Location	Reason
6 April 1987—RUC Station, Lisburn Road, Belfast	Explosion
8 September 1988—RUC Station, Main Street, Coagh	Explosion
11 April 1989—RUC Station, Enniskillen	Accidental fire
12 April 1989—RUC Station, Charlotte Street, Warrenpoint	Explosion
8 June 1989—RUC Station, Newtownabbey	Explosion
1 October 1989—RUC Station, Randalstown	Explosion
10 January 1990—RUC Station, Seapark	Accidental fire

It is believed that the explosions as listed above were as a result of terrorist attack.

Homelessness

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people the Housing Executive has accepted as homeless since 1 April 1989 to 31 December 1989; and how many people who claimed homelessness in that specified period were refused under the regulations as laid down in the Housing (NI) Order 1988.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive says that the information is not available in the form requested. Between 1 April 1989 and 31 December 1989, a total of 3,822 applicants were accepted as being either homeless or threatened with homelessness and 763 applicants were considered not to be homeless or threatened with homelessness under the provisions of the Housing (NI) Order 1988. A further 183 applications are still under consideration.

Youth Training

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from the Northern Ireland Association of Community Workshops about the proposed funding arrangements for the youth training programme which will come into effect on 1 April 1990.

Mr. Needham: I met representatives of the Northern Ireland Association of Community Workshops on 29 January 1990. In response to their representations I have made a number of modifications to the funding arrangements for the youth training programme to meet their concerns. I understand that the association has reacted positively to these changes.

Fire Authority

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether (a) the Fire Authority for Northern Ireland and (b) Mr. Kerr were legally represented at the hearing held by the Fair Employment Agency in the case of Kerr v. Northern Ireland Fire Authority.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: These are issues for the fire authority and Mr. Kerr. The fire authority was not legally represented at the hearing held by the Fair Employment Agency. Mr. Kerr was accompanied by his solicitor at the hearing.

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Fire Authority sought the advice of counsel (a) prior to the decision of the Fair Employment Agency on 6 December and (b) thereafter in the case of Kerr v. Northern Ireland Fire Authority.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is a matter for the fire authority whose chairman has informed me that the authority did not seek the advice of counsel either prior to the decision of the Fair Employment Agency on 6 December or thereafter. The fire authority took advice from its solicitor in relation to the FEA report and findings.

School Expenditure

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will update to the latest available date the answer given to the hon. Member for Barking (Ms. Richardson), 12 May 1989, Official Report, columns 553-54, on expenditure on books and equipment.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

Donaghadee Carpets

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed at the firm of Donaghadee Carpets; how many redundancies there have been at this firm in the last four weeks; whether the firm is receiving the support of the IDB.; and if he will make a statement on future employment prospects with this company.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 5 February 1990]: CV Carpets Ltd. employs 460 at Donaghadee. The management and trade union representatives are in discussion about manning levels and working practices, but no redundancies have been made or announced in the last four weeks. The company is in receipt of selective financial assistance from the IDB for a capital investment programme which should provide an increase in employment over the next 18 months; the extent of that support is, as usual, dependent on achievement of the forecast employment levels.

Fair Employment

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in relation to the fair employment draft guide to effective practice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Following consultation with a wide range of interested parties, the guide was published in its final form by the Department of Economic Development on 31 December 1989. It provides advice and guidance to employers and others on their responsibilities and obligations under the fair employment legislation and has become the first code of practice under section 8 of the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1989. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

PRIME MINISTER

European Parliament

Q5. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Prime Minister when she next intends to visit the European Parliament.

The Prime Minister: In the normal course of events, I would expect to visit the European Parliament during the British presidency of the Community in the second half of 1992.

Rugby League

Q39. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Prime Minister when she next intends to make an official visit to a rugby league ground.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Summer Time

Q110 Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations she has received on summer time.

The Prime Minister: The Home Office published a Green Paper entitled "Summer Time—A Consultation Document" (Cm 722) on 27 June 1989 inviting representations on three options for future summer time arrangement. I have received several representations. Over 30,000 have been received at the Home Office.

Homelessness

Q118. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister what further plans she has to meet homeless people in London.

The Prime Minister: I have no such plans at present. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is taking forward, with urgency, action following our review of the homelessness legislation. This includes the allocation of additional resources to relieve homelessness pressures in London. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and the Minister for Housing and Planning have had a number of meetings with homeless people in London and with voluntary agencies who work with the homeless.

Aberdeen

Q143. Mr. Doran: To ask the Prime Minister when she next intends to visit Aberdeen.

The Prime Minister: I hope to visit Aberdeen during the course of this year.

TUC

Q195. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to meet representatives of the Trades Union Congress; and what matters she intends to discuss.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Poland

Q216. Mr. Latham: To ask the Prime Minister if she will pay an official visit to Poland.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to visit Poland at present. I had a friendly and useful meeting with the Polish Prime Minister here yesterday.

European Monetary System

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the question of sterling and its relationship to the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have no present plans to do so.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the extent and purpose of the inquiries being initiated by the European Economic Community into the prospects for 1992.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so, but will not hesitate to discuss the studies, if that is likely to be useful. The 1992 prospects are for both opportunities and challenges to British business, and the outcome will depend on the way in which individual firms and industries respond to those opportunities and challenges.

Social Charter

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will invite the next meeting of the European Council to agree that the Commission should not present measures to implement the provisions of the social charter until the charter has been agreed by all member states; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The European Commission has the right to make proposals on any matters that fall within the competence of the Community as set out in the treaty of Rome. As I made clear in my statement following the last meeting of the European Council in Strasbourg in December—Official Report, 12 December 1989, column 858—we do not endorse the text of the social charter and, judging from their comments, I believe that many of my colleagues in Europe will have considerable difficulties with the Commission's specific proposals when they come forward.

Private Office

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Prime Minister what was the cost of her private office in each of the last five years.

The Prime Minister: The cost of the Prime Minister's office over the last five years is as follows:

Year	Total cost £
1985-86	4,405,852
1986-87	4,962,950
1987-88	5,418,455
1988-89	6,553,712
1989-90	[1]7,924,979

Salaries and wages, notional pension liability and administrative costs and the grant-in-aid to the Chequers Trust are included. My salary as a Cabinet Minister is not included, nor are my pay and allowances as a Member of this House.

Since 1985 there have been two developments which have affected the way in which costs are assessed. These are inclusion of costs for office services from 1986-87; and inclusion of the cost of redecoration of certain state rooms and of major security works in 1988-89 and 1989-90. When the effects of these developments are excluded (as far as it is possible to do so) and the results expressed in constant price terms at 1988-89 prices, the cost has increased by 6 per cent. between 1985-86 and 1989-90.

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Prime Minister what was the total number of people employed in her private office in each of the last five years.

The Prime Minister: The total number of people in my office in each of the last five years is as follows:

Year	Number
1986-87	66
1987-88	67
1988-89	67
1989-90	68

Security Services (Disinformation)

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Prime Minister if she will institute a wide-ranging inquiry into the dissemination of disinformation relating to public figures by the security services in the last 30 years.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the statement I made on 6 May 1987.

South Africa

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if she has issued a formal invitation to Mr. Nelson Mandela to visit her in Britain.

The Prime Minister: As we explained in our statement of 2 February I plan to do so now that he is free.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if she intends to make an official visit to South Africa this year.

The Prime Minister: I plan to visit South Africa in due course.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on her meeting with the Rev. Jesse Jackson on Monday 6 February.

The Prime Minister: We had a full discussion on the situation in South Africa. We share the objective of an end to apartheid through peaceful negotiations.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when was the last time she spoke to President de Klerk of South Africa.

The Prime Minister: We are in regular contact with the South African Government.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list all representations additional to that made by the Minister for Sport to the chairman of the Test and County Cricket Board on 2 August 1989 made by (a) herself, (b) any of her Ministers and (c) Government officials to dissuade the members of the rebel cricket tour of South Africa from undertaking the tour.

The Prime Minister: The Government's position on the cricket tour to South Africa is set out in my hon. Friend the Minister for Sport's letter of 2 August to the chairman of the Test and County Cricket Board. At my hon. Friend's request, his letter was copied to the players concerned.

Engagements

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 13 February.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 13 February.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 13 February.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 13 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I shall preside at a dinner in honour of the Prime Minister of Poland.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Civil and Political Rights

Mr. Allen: To ask the Attorney-General if he will take steps to incorporate the international covenant on civil and political rights into domestic law.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply. No.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. Lorrain Osman

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to his reply of 6 February, he will list the cases or proceedings which cause him to treat matters relating to Mr. Lorrain Osman as being sub judice.

Mr. Maude: Mr. Osman's fourth application for a writ of habeas corpus, launched on 2 February.

Western European Union

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on the WEU Assembly recommendation that the WEU Council work out the prior conditions necessary in the conceptual field for SNF negotiations to be resumed without delay after the implementation of the first CFE agreement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The comprehensive concept adopted by NATO Heads of State and Government at their summit in May set out the "prior conditions" for SNF negotiations, namely that once the implementation of an agreement on conventional arms is under way

"the United States in consultation with the Allies concerned, is prepared to enter into negotiations to achieve a partial reduction of American and Soviet land-based nuclear missiles of shorter range to equal and verifiable levels."

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on the Western European Union Assembly's recommendation that the Western European Union Council call for (a) a complete review of the COCOM lists in the light of a fundamental reassessment of the current state of Soviet technology, with a view to encouraging maximum opportunities for trade, (b) negotiations with proscribed countries for the introduction of verification procedures to accompany all future sales of western strategic technology in return for the further liberalisation of the COCOM list and (c) the establishment, within the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe framework, of a committee of experts to make recommendations for the sharing of high technology between East and West.

Mr. Waldegrave: On his first point I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 15 December at column 839 to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas).

On his second point I refer my hon. Friend to the comments made by my hon. Friend during the Adjournment debate on 21 December at column 632. There have already been contacts at official level between COCOM partners and Poland and Hungary. The results of these will inform the review of COCOM and its procedures now under way.

Finally, COCOM provides a forum for national experts to discuss the level of technology to be shared with or transferred to the proscribed destinations. Against the background of an existing military threat, this issue will receive increasing scrutiny in the meetings now under way to discuss technology transfer and developments in eastern Europe. The participating states in the CSCE process do not include all the members of COCOM and we would not see the establishment of a separate committee, with the same mandate, as providing any practical benefit.

EC (Security and Defence)

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken in the framework of the European Community to enable the European Commission to study security and defence questions.

Mr. Maude: The political and economic aspects of security are the subject of co-ordination among the member states in European Political Co-operation (EPC). The Commission is fully associated with EPC. The military aspects of security are not the subject of co-ordination in any Community framework.

Baron Max Khatchaturian

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the post in India will come to a decision on the application by Baron Max Khatchaturian and his family for recognition of their British citizenship and concerning which he has received correspondence from the hon. Member for Caernarfon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: In accordance with the guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases, issued to Members on 14 December 1988, I have referred the question to the correspondence unit of the migration and visa department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The hon. Member will receive a reply from the unit as soon as possible.

Education Conference

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government will protest at the participation of a member of the Khmer Rouge as the representative of Cambodia at the world conference on education for all in Thailand on 5 to 9 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The world conference on education for all is being organised and sponsored by four specialised agencies of the United Nations (UNDP, UNESCO, UNICEF and the World Bank). We understand that, as Cambodia's representatives at the UN, the National Government of Cambodia (formerly the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea) will have been invited to attend. This is normal practice for such UN-sponsored conferences.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Multi-racial Comprehensives

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration he has given to the issues raised in "School Effect: A Study of Multi-racial Comprehensives" produced by the Policy Studies Institute and the University of Lancaster, a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This study is based on research which followed the progress of 3,000 pupils in 20 urban comprehensives, starting in 1981. The research found striking differences between the schools surveyed in what they did and how they did it. The level of achievement of pupils of similar abilities, regardless of their ethnic or social background, varied markedly according to the school they attended.

This study reinforces the Government's determination to press ahead with the implementation of the national curriculum and with the arrangements for assessment and testing so that every child can have the best possible start in life. The study also suggested some profitable further lines of inquiry and my right hon. Friend is considering how best to pursue these.

Electric Vehicles

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research projects are receiving funding from his Department that are designed to contribute to the development of electrically powered road vehicles.

Mr. Jackson: The Science and Engineering Research Council, which is funded by the Department, has supported a number of research programmes in universities which are of relevance to the development of electrically powered vehicles. A collaborative programme between Durham university and Lucas plc, completed in 1987, developed a prototype hybrid electric/diesel vehicle. Two research programmes at Loughborough university, completed in 1989, and ongoing programmes at the university of Newcastle and London university's Imperial college are concerned with aspects of new battery systems.

PE Teachers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the number of physical education teachers for each year since 1979.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Information is available only in respect of 1984 and 1988. In 1984 the number of full-time teachers in maintained secondary schools in England who were teaching physical education was 37,900, including 15,600 for whom physical education was their main teaching subject. The equivalent figures for 1988 were 30,300 and 13,300. Over the same period the number of pupils in maintained secondary schools in England fell by about 16 per cent. (from 3·65 million to 3·07 million).

School Hours

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the average numbers of hours per year spent in school by schoolchildren in (a) England and Wales and (b) other European Community countries.

Mrs. Rumbold: Recent school staffing surveys in England indicate that pupils in primary schools spend on average some 860 hours in lessons (excluding registration, assemblies and break time) a year. The comparable figure for secondary pupils is some 900 hours. Figures for Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. European comparisons are not readily available.

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the numbers of hours of classroom teaching per year spent by teachers in (a) England and Wales and (b) other European Community countries.

Mrs. Rumbold: On the basis of information from recent school staffing surveys, we estimate that primary teachers spend on average some 790 hours a year in classroom teaching. The comparable figure for secondary teachers is some 680 hours. These figures exclude time spent in registration, assemblies and supervision. Figures for Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. European comparisons are not readily available.

Schools (Expenditure)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will update to the latest date available the answer given to the hon. Member for Barking (Ms. Richardson), 4 May 1989, Official Report, column 173-74, on expenditure on books and equipment.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information previously supplied has been updated to take account of latest data on actual local authority spending in 1987-88 as recorded in returns to the Department of the Environment; pupil numbers as recorded in returns to the Department of Education and Science; and price movements as recorded by the GDP deflator. Comparable data on spending in 1988-89 are not yet available. The table has been expanded to show two indices. The first shows the change in real-terms spending for each year compared with the base year 1978-79; the second, also shown in the previous table, shows the change in real-terms spending for each year compared with the previous year.

[1] The cash figures for earlier years have been repriced to 1987-88 prices using the Gross Domestic Product (Market Prices) Deflator.
[2] The figures for 1987-88 include spending in aursry schools. This reflects a change in the classification of the local authority spending returns to the DOE whereby spending on nursery provision was incorporated into the primary sector, rather than being shown separately.

[1] The cash figures for earlier years have been repriced to 1987-88 prices using the Gross Domestic Product (Market Prices) Deflator.
[2] The figures for 1987-88 include spending in nursery schools. This reflects a change in the classification of the local authority spending returns to the DOE whereby spending on nursery provision was incorporated into the primary sector, rather than being shown separately.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a breakdown of the overall increase in school unit costs shown in table 11.10 of Cm 1011 between 1979-80 and 1988-89 showing how much of that overall increase is due to increases in the level of school teachers' pay above the rate of inflation.

Mrs. Rumbold: Changes in overall spending on schoolteachers' pay reflect both changes in teacher numbers and successive pay settlements. As a broad estimate, the 42 per cent. increase in unit costs shown in table 11.10 of Cm 1011 may be analysed as follows:

	Percentage
Total increase in real terms spending per pupil:	42
Of which
Increase due to improvements in pupil:teacher ratio:	13
Increase due to improvements in teachers' pay above the GDP deflator:	16
Other increases, including improved provision for non-teaching costs such as equipment:	13

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the overall increase in real terms between 1979-80 and 1988-89 of (a) national average earnings, (b) average non-manual earnings outside the public sector and (c) school teachers' pay.

Mrs. Rumbold: Between April 1979 and April 1989 national average earnings rose by 28 per cent. in real terms, and teachers' average salaries by 30 per cent. in real terms. Over the same period the real terms increase in average non-manual earnings outside the public sector was 43 per cent. for men and 48 per cent. for women. A combined figure is not available.

Pupils (Exclusion)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will establish a national system for the collection of information about the exclusion of pupils from schools.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend is introducing a national system for reporting to him all permanent exclusions from maintained primary, secondary and special schools and from grant-maintained schools during the two-year period from the beginning of the summer term 1990. Heads, governors and local education authorities, as appropriate, will be asked to provide the Secretary of State with information on the background to such cases and on the decisions reached about the pupils concerned, who will not be named in these reports. In the light of this information, my right hon. Friend will decide on the future of the existing statutory provisions on exclusion.

Governing Bodies

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will identify by name and by size of governing body in each case only those colleges and polytechnics in the PCFC sector for which he has agreed revised instruments of government under the Education Reform Act 1988 where the size of the governing body is in excess of 21 persons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1990, c. 29-30]: Information given in the previous answer was not completely up to date. Additional nominee members were appointed to the governing bodies of a further seven institutions subsequent to the appointment of the other members of their boards. The following institutions, therefore, should also have been listed as having governing bodies in excess of 21 persons:—

Institutions	Number
Bath College of Higher Education	22
Bolton Institute of Higher Education	22
Bristol Polytechnic	22
Kent Institute of Art and Design	22
Kingston Polytechnic	22
Portsmouth Polytechnic	25
Worcester College of Higher Education	25

Child Benefit

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will state, on the same basis as his reply to the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett), 7 June 1988, Official Report columns 521-22, the total amount of child benefit, together with the number of families and children in respect of which it is paid, and the percentage which each figure represents for the income bands (a) under £5,000, (b) £5,000-10,000, (c) £10,000-15,000, (d) £15,000-20,000, (e) £20,000-25,000, (f) £25,000-50,000, (g) £50,000-100,000 and (h) £100,000 and over.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information about the incomes of families receiving child benefit is not routinely collected. The following estimates of the distribution of gross incomes of recipient families in 1989-90 are therefore made on the basis of sample survey data which are subject to normal sampling and response variation.

Band of Gross Income	Families receiving Child Benefit		Number of Children		Child Benefit Expenditure
	(000s)	Per cent.	(000s)	Per cent.	(£ million)	Per cent.
Under £5,000	430	6·3	490	4·1	180	4·1
£ 5–10,000	1,740	25·7	3,340	27·8	1,260	27·8
£10–15,000	1,520	22·4	2,620	21·9	990	21·9
£15–20,000	1,380	20·4	2,520	21·0	950	21·0
£20–25,000	740	10·9	1,340	11·2	510	11·2
£25–50,000	870	12·8	1,500	12·5	560	12·5
Above £50,000	100	1·5	190	1·6	70	1·6
Total	6,760	100	12,000	100	4,530	100

Notes:

1. Estimates are based on the 1985 and 1986 Family Expenditure Surveys, supplemented by the Survey of Personal Incomes, and updated to 1989-90 levels of earnings and benefit rates.
2. Income is measured on a gross basis, and is the family's total income from all sources including benefits.
3. No detailed breakdown is possible for an income band above £50,000 because of small sample sizes.
4. All figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000.
5. Figures may not sum due to rounding.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arising from theft or misappropriation in his Department.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest information about losses of items from the Department's offices relate to the 1988-89 financial year when the value of these losses came to £106,744.

Benefits Leaflet

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make leaflet FB2 generally available in post offices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Social Security leaflet FB2 "Which benefit?" is displayed in all main post offices (about 1,900 offices). Copies are also sent to around 19,000 sub-post offices, but there is no obligation for sub-postmasters/mistresses to either display them or to make copies available.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish for each parliamentary constituency in Lancashire details of the number of people presently receiving housing benefit and income support together with housing benefit; and what are the costs involved.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that information is not collected on a constituency basis. The table shows the available information by local authority area. Blackpool includes the constituencies of Blackpool, North and Blackpool, South, and Lancaster City covers the constituencies of Lancaster, and Morecambe and Lunesdale.

Local authorities	Housing benefit only Numbers	Housing benefit income support Numbers	Local authority estimated cost £ million

DSS Offices

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will open new Department of Social Security offices close to current Department of Trade and Industry regional offices in Leeds, Birmingham and Manchester.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: There are no plans to open new DSS offices near the regional offices of the Department of Trade and Industry in Leeds, Birmingham and Manchester.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many carers will benefit from the increase of the invalid care allowance earnings limit from £12 to £20.

Mr. Scott: I regret this information is not available. It is likely that a small number of carers earning between £12 and £20 per week will be able to qualify for invalid care allowance for the first time. Data are not collected on the numbers of existing recipients currently earning less than £12 who stand to gain by increasing their earnings to the new limit.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what will be the cost of the increase in the invalid care allowance earnings limit from £12 to £20.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 13 December 1989 at columns 663-64.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to publicise the increase in the earnings limit for the invalid care allowance.

Mr. Scott: We shall be publishing a revised version of the invalid care allowance leaflet in April, and we are considering what additional publicity we might provide to bring the increased earnings limit to the attention of those who might benefit.

Carer's Premium

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what data the Government have used to estimate that 30,000 carers will benefit from the introduction of a carer's premium.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The estimate was derived from information on recipients of invalid care allowance in the income support annual statistical inquiry.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans there are to publicise the introduction of a carer's premium;

(2) what plans he has to ensure that people who have not previously claimed invalid care allowance because of the overlapping benefit rules will now do so in order to benefit from the introduction of a carer's premium.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: People in receipt of invalid care allowance who get income support, housing benefit or community charge benefit will be awarded the new carer's premium automatically. For other people, we will be publishing revised versions of leaflets. We will also revise the guide to non-contributory benefits for disabled people, which is intended for advisers and members of the public who have a particular interest in disabled people. We are giving careful consideration to the question of additional publicity.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether the carer's premium will be awarded in addition to any other premium; and whether (a) people who start caring after reaching pension age and (b) pensioners who were carers before reaching pension age but did not claim invalid care allowance, will be able to receive the carer's premium.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The carer's premium will be awarded in addition to any other premium for which the claimant qualifies. The premium cannot be paid to people who start caring after reaching pension age, or who did not claim invalid care allowance before reaching that age.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of people who would receive the carer's premium with (a) income support and (b) housing benefit/community charge benefit if the premium was awarded to all claimants caring for someone receiving attendance allowance for at least 35 hours a week and not earning more than £20 a week, regardless of whether they were in receipt of invalid care allowance.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information needed to make such an estimate is not available.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what he estimates will be the cost of the additional pensions payable with invalidity benefit at 1989-90 prices in each of the tax years 1990-91, 2000-01, 2010-11, and 2020-21 (a) if clause 4 of the Social Security Bill is enacted (b) if the present position with regards to the computation of additional pension for the purposes of invalidity pension remains unchanged and (c) if the Bill is amended to provide for guaranteed minimum pensions in respect of tax years after 1990-91 to be deducted from the additional pension payable with invalidity pension but no other change is made with regard to the computation of additional pension for purposes of invalidity pension; and, in each case, what proportion of the cost he estimates will relate to persons then aged 60 years and over.

Mr. Scott: Projections of expenditure on additional pension with invalidity benefit at 1989-90 prices under current legislation and under the clause 4 proposals are as follows. These estimates are subject to considerable margins of uncertainty, particularly in the longer term.

Year	Current Legislation £ million	Clause 4 Proposals £ million
1990-91	565	565
2000-01	1,850	1,375
2010-11	2,225	1,200
2020-21	2,500	975

The figures illustrating the effect of the proposals in "The Way Ahead" show the gross effect on expenditure. The net effect of the proposals on social security spending will be less because of offsetting changes in invalidity allowance and income-related benefits.

I regret that information to answer (c) or to apportion the costs between persons under and over age 60 is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Community Charge

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to the reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker), Official Report, 5 February, column 524, by what percentage those portions of the income support, introduced in April 1989 to cover the 20 per cent. of the average community charge, will be increased in the April 1990 uprating; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Income-related benefit levels will generally be uprated by 5·2 per cent. from April.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list in the Official Report all departmental circulars issued by his Department in connection with the community charge giving in each case the date of issue and an outline of the contents; and if he will indicate whether or not copies of such have been placed in the Library.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is as follows:

HB(88)15 November 1988

Payments Trust to HIV infected haemophiliacs and their families.

Copies of all circulars have been placed in the Library.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people lost entitlement to unemployment benefit when the age limit at which occupational pensions affect entitlement was lowered in January 1989; how many had benefit reduced; how many subsequently sought a review and had money refunded; and whether he will make it his policy that all those who lost benefits will receive the correct entitlement via an extra-statutory payment if Mrs. D. Morris's case is upheld by the social security commissioner.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is estimated that, in a full year, 45,000 people will lose entitlement to unemployment benefit as a result of the age limit change. Of these, 14,000 would lose some, and 31,000 all, benefit. Following the local appeal tribunal decision in the case of Mrs. Doreen Morris, 1,552 people had, as at 31 December 1989, requested a review of their benefit disallowance. Further action will be considered once the decision of the social security commissioners is known.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Package Travel

94. Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the proposed European Community draft directive on package travel.

Mr. Forth: EC Ministers reached a common position on a proposal for an EC directive on package travel at the 21-22 December Internal Market Council, subject to finalisation of the recitals and amendments to the text. The common position is expected to be formally agreed by the Council in the near future. Thereafter, it will be subject to the EC co-operation procedure, whereby the European Parliament may give its opinion on the proposal before the Commission can put the draft directive to the Council for consideration of its final adoption.

Post Office Vehicles

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many bicycles the Post Office operates; and how many bicycles are maintained in house and how many by private contractors;

(2) how many vehicles the Post Office operates; how many are operated on long lease hire and maintenance contracts; and if he will list those postal districts where Post Office vehicles are maintained by a private contractor.

Mr. Forth: These are operational matters for the Post Office. I will ask the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Estate Agents

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any proposals for extending the Sale of Goods Act to estate agents; what representations he has received on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has no proposals to extend the provisions of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 to sales of land and has not received any representations on this matter.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on requiring estate agents to disclose personal interests in properties or sales and stopping them favouring bids which use mortgages or other services in which the estate agent has a personal interest; what proposals he has for legislation or regulations on these matters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors, the Incorporated Society of Valuers and Auctioneers, and the National Consumer Council, have copied to me their responses to the Director General of Fair Trading's consultation document on estate agency which includes proposals on disclosure of personal interests and on tie-in sales. The director general will be reporting the conclusions of this consultation shortly. I will study the director general's report most carefully, and consider what action may be necessary to give effect to any recommendations he may make.

Amateur Radio

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many representations he has received in support of and against the recommendations of the Dylis Gane report of 1984 on the self-policing of amateur radio bands; and if he will list the relevant organisations that are opposed to these recommendations.

Mr. Forth: The Gane report of 1984 was an internal Department of Trade and Industry efficiency scrutiny document dealing with the work of the radio investigation service. The report contained proposals for reordering the priorities of the radio investigation service. The thrust of the section dealing with radio amateurs was that amateurs should take on greater responsibility for resolving interference problems. That policy has been implemented and the Department has received representations both for and against this policy from organisations and individuals: it would not be practicable to list them.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the amateur radio observation network operated by the Radio Society of Great Britain is currently operational; and if he will list any occasions on which it has not been operational.

Mr. Forth: This is a matter for the Radio Society of Great Britain.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the amateur broadcasting licence fee is allocated to the radio investigation service; and what is the annual cost of that service.

Mr. Forth: The radio investigation service budget for 1988-89 was £6,284,000. Over 60 per cent. of the radio amateur licence fee represents the direct costs of licensing and enforcement. In addition all licensees benefit from the work of the radio investigation service in seeking to prevent interference and abuse of radio across the spectrum.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the radio investigation service is taking to prevent abuse on amateur radio repeaters.

Mr. Forth: The radio investigation service is currently holding discussions with the Radio Society of Great Britain (RSGB), which is the licensee for amateur repeater stations, about the minority of radio amateurs who act irresponsibly when using this service.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he is giving any consideration to the shutting down of the amateur radio repeater network until the problem of abuse has been resolved.

Mr. Forth: No. The majority of amateur radio repeaters are used by responsible licensees.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which parts of the United Kingdom had, for the purposes of the EC's structural funds' provisions, per capita gross domestic product of less than 50 per cent. of the Community average in the latest available year.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None.

Gas Supplies (Contract Customers)

Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether British Gas has offered undertakings about contracting for new gas fields following the recommendations of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's report on the supply of gas to contract customers.

Mr. Ridley: Yes. I have now accepted undertakings given by British Gas following discussions with the Director General of Fair Trading in the light of the Government's decision announced on 27 April 1989 about contracting for new gas fields. The undertakings are as follows:

1. British Gas plc ("British Gas") hereby undertakes to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry that it will in good faith give constructive support to the efforts of gas producers towards the achievement of the target that 10 per cent. of the gas coming forward from new gas fields and contracted to be sold after 31 May 1989 should be supplied to the industrial and commercial market in the United Kingdom by suppliers other than British Gas by:

(i) not purchasing more than 90 per cent. of the gas on offer to it in the period 1 June 1989 to 31 May 1991;

(ii) not requiring, in contracts for the purchase of gas entered into after 1 June 1989 under which British Gas does not buy the whole of the recoverable reserves of a field, the inclusion of terms which would unreasonably constrain the ability of the gas producers to dispose of the gas not sold to British Gas into the industrial and commercial market in the United Kingdom;

(iii) expeditiously co-operating in setting up and conducting negotiations for the securing of rights to have gas conveyed in its pipelines under Section 19 of the Gas Act 1986 (common carriage). In particular British Gas will, within four weeks of any application to it for such rights containing sufficient information for the purpose, provide to the applicant a full response thereto setting out the terms and conditions (including price) offered by it for the exercise of such rights or, as the case may be, an explanation of the reasons why such application cannot in full or in part be complied with. In the case of exceptionally complicated applications to which it is not possible to provide a full response within four weeks, British Gas will provide whatever information it can within that time and undertakes to provide a full response without unnecessary delay;

(iv) not otherwise doing anything calculated to obstruct the achievement of the target.

2. For the purpose of this Undertaking, in assessing the achievement of the 10% target level there shall be taken into account both gas coming from the United Kingdom Continental Shelf and gas imported from foreign sources.

3. British Gas will provide to the Director General of Fair Trading any information to which it has access which the Director General may require to assist the Government in ascertaining whether the target level has been achieved or the undertaking in paragraph 1 fulfilled.

The Government are very pleased that British Gas has given these undertakings which are a declaration of good faith by British Gas that it will co-operate in establishing competitive suppliers of gas. I would like to emphasise again the importance which the Government attach to the development of competition in the supply of gas to business users and their determination to encourage the emergence of such competition. This should give greater confidence to gas producers and independent gas suppliers selling gas directly to the market in competition with British Gas. I hope that they will take advantage of this new opportunity. If they have any concerns about the development of competition in the market they should make representations to the Director General of Fair Trading who will be able to look into the matter.

Flame-retardant Covers

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has to compensate retailers and small business men who have to destroy stock which does not have flame-retardant covers from 1 March.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 12 February 1990]: I have no plans to do so. It would be very difficult to justify the payment of public money to retailers and small businesses for complying with a safety requirement of the Furniture and Furnishings (Fire) (Safety) Regulations, which was announced almost two years ago, after a full consultation.

ENERGY

Petrol Prices

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the average equivalent pump price per litre and per gallon of (a) diesel, (b) leaded petrol and (c) unleaded petrol for each month since January 1989 (i) excluding Government taxes and duties, (ii) excluding Government taxes and duties and retailers' margin and (iii) including all Government taxes and duties, in the manner of his answer to the hon. Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter), of 27 July 1989, Official Report, columns 807-08.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Department of Energy does not have data on retailers' margins. Figures from the Commission of the European Communities on the pump price of diesel and on premium grade leaded petrol are given for each month of 1989 available at present. Comparable figures for unleaded are not available.

The figures are as follows:

Price in Pence/Litre

HEALTH

Expenditure

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for England for each year since 1974-75 (i) total National Health Service expenditure, (ii) current expenditure on the hospital and community health services, (iii) capital expenditure on the hospital and community health services, (iv) expenditure on the family practitioner services, (v) expenditure on centrally funded National Health Service services, and (vi) expenditure on personal social services, giving each in (a) cash terms, (b) adjusted using the relevant pay and prices index and (c) adjusted using the gross domestic product deflator; and if he will place in the Library details of the methods used to make these adjustments.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each year since 1959 (a) the total amount spent on health and (b) the capital expenditure, giving the figures at constant prices.

Mr. Freeman: Information, which is readily available only from 1974-75, has been placed in the Library.

Hospital Patients (Mortality)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital patients have died as a result of catching infection whilst in hospital for treatment for other conditions during each of the last five years.

Mr. Freeman: The exact information requested is not available. The number of deaths with the underlying cause of post-operative infection, England and Wales, 1984-88, is shown in the table.

Deaths from post operative infection,[1] England and Wales, 1984-88

[2]Provisional data.

Mentally Ill Patients

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the effect on services for mentally ill patients of the Government's proposals in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mr. Freeman: We have received several representations and are considering them all carefully.

Statutory Child Care

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many current cases there are of statutory child care; how many are not supervised by local authority social workers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Particulars of the number of children in the care of local authorities under the Children and Young Persons Act 1969, the Child Care Act 1980, and other legislation are published in the document "Children in Care in England and Wales", copies of which are available in the Library. Particulars of the numbers of children on child protection registers—some of whom are also in the care of local authorities—are contained in the "Survey of Children and Young Persons on Child Protection Registers", copies of which are also available in the Library. Information is not collected centrally about the numbers of child care cases not supervised by local authority social workers.

Sight Tests

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish figures indicating the change in the number of sight tests since 1 April 1989, nationally and regionally.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Data on the number of National Health Service eye tests carried out between April and September 1989 will be available in the spring. We do not collect statistics on the numbers of private sight tests carried out since April 1989. An independent sample survey has been commissioned relating to the first quarter of 1990. The results of that survey should be available in the early summer.

British Medical Association

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the British Medical Association; and what subjects were discussed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State last met representatives of the British Medical Association formally on 18 October 1989, when he had a friendly and constructive discussion about the implementation of the proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients". The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Lords) and I met representatives of the British Medical Association on 7 February to discuss the question of junior doctors' hours of work.

GPs' Contracts

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to monitor the impact of the new general practitioners' contracts.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to monitor the impact of the new general practitioners' contracts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We will monitor the GPs' new contract through family practitioner committees by collecting information about the services provided, by analysing claims for payment made by GPs and through research studies.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were inpatient and outpatient waiting lists (a) in 1979 and (b) currently; and what is his estimate for 1990-91.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The inpatient waiting list for England fell from 752,422 at 31 March 1979 to 704,724 at 31 March 1989, the latest date for which firm figures are available. Provisional figures for September 1989 suggest there has been a further reduction, particularly in the number of patients waiting over a year. We do not make forward estimates of the size of the waiting list, since this is subject to unpredictable factors such as variations in demand. No information is held centrally on numbers awaiting outpatient appointments.

Patient Involvement

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to increase the involvement of patients in the running of the National Health Service.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to increase the involvement of patients in the running of the National Health Service.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to increase the involvement of patients in the running of the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Members for Glasgow, Pollock (Mr. Dunnachie), for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle), for Renfrew, West and Inverclyde (Mr. Graham), and for Wigan (Mr. Stott) on 23 January at column 662.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to meet the chairmen of the regional health authorities; and what matters he hopes to discuss.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. and learned Friend's next meeting with chairmen of regional health authorities is on 21 March 1990 when the items for discussion will include the implementation of the NHS reforms and other matters of topical interest.

Acute Hospitals

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds of 31 January, Official Report, column 235, if he will list in the Official Report the names and locations of the acute hospitals in England with fewer than 600 beds in total, indicating which regional health authority is responsible for each.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Consultants

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultants now work in the Rugby health authority area; and how many did so in 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is not held centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to ask the West Midlands regional health authority which holds the contracts for consultants working in Rugby

General Practitioners

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the proposed pay increases for general practitioners.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department has received one letter on the GPs' pay increase.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make an up-to-date statement about the ambulance dispute.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 18 January 1990 at column 402.

Osteoporosis

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what level of resources his Department is committing to making women aware of the preventive effects of hormone replacement therapy with respect to osteoporosis.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department provided in 1989-90 funding totalling £63,000 to three voluntary organisations which inform women about hormone replacement therapy (HRT)—Women's Health Concern, the National Osteoporosis Society, and the Amarant Trust. The Health Education Authority has also produced a booklet on the menopause, which includes information on HRT and osteoporosis. The Department is also providing funding for research and recently gave funds to the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists towards holding a study group of experts on HRT and osteoporosis. The Department and health authorities allocate funds for the provision of courses and other educational activities for general practitioners, including courses on HRT and osteoporosis.

Pharmaceutical Investment

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the report, "Pharmaceutical Investment in the United Kingdom: the impact of the proposals in the White Paper, Working for Patients", submitted to his Department by the Economist Advisory Group.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The report, which was commissioned on behalf of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association of the USA, acknowledges the attractions over the years of the United Kingdom as a place for investment, highlighting research activities in view of this country's strengths in pure science and pharmaceutical innovation. While some concern was reported about future manufacturing investment, there is no reason why these attractions should disappear.

Information Technology

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on working paper No. 11 on information and information technology in the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: One response to the document has been received to date, about the needs of regional and supra-regional services, which will be taken into account as part of the consultation, the closing date for which is 30 March 1990.

Community Pharmacies

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish Alan Glanz's report on the role of community pharmacies in AIDS prevention and drug misuse; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The report was published on 8 February 1990 and copies have been placed in the Library.

The report indicates that the involvement of community pharmacies in preventive health education activities for drug misusers could be an effective way of making contact with those who are at high risk of HIV infection.

We welcome this news and acknowledge the good will displayed by many pharmacists who are prepared to supply injecting equipment to drug misusers, give out information materials and offer advice. Where the report has identified problems hindering the involvement of pharmacists, we are considering ways of making progress.

Almost £15 million has been allocated to health authorities in 1989-90 for the expansion and development of drug services in the light of HIV. We would expect that money from this allocation could be used for both the provision of individual sharps containers for drug users to place their used equipment in, and also the provision and servicing of larger sharps containers sited in pharmacies.

Pharmacists' training needs are currently being considered by the Department in conjunction with the relevant professional bodies, and we have encouraged liaison between pharmacists and local drugs services through the drug advisory committees established in every health district.

HIV

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe of 8 February, what steps have been taken to obtain evidence on the disadvantage after the infection has been discovered in respect of employment prospects and ability to obtain life insurance and mortgages, suffered by people who became infected with HIV via blood transfusions; and what comparisons have been undertaken between the situations of such people in the post-infection phase and that of haemophiliacs in the post-infection stage.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We do not believe that any useful purpose would be served by such a survey of the financial circumstances after infection of any particular group with HIV. Our ex-gratia payments to haemophiliacs recognise their wholly exceptional circumstances whereby they were doubly disadvantaged by their pre-existing haemophilia as well as the HIV infection. We have no plans to extend these special arrangements to other groups.

The full facilities of the National Health Service and a range of social security benefits are available to all those infected with HIV who suffer illness, unemployment or loss of earnings.

NHS Pay Increases

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what will be the total cost to health authorities of the increases in pay for hospital doctors from April; and how much of that sum will be provided by additional central Government funding;

(2) what will be the total cost to health authorities of the increases in pay for nurses from April; and how much of that sum will be provided by additional central Government funding.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The total cost in 1990-91 of pay increases for National Health Service review body staff groups is £884 million in the United Kingdom. The cost of the increases for nurses and midwives is £523 million, and for hospital doctors and dentists it is £146 million. Of the total United Kingdom cost, £635 million is already within existing National Health Service provision, and an additional £205 million will be provided from the reserve. This additional funding is not specifically apportioned between the different National Health Service review body groups.

Families

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average family size in the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Italy and the European Economic Community as a whole in 1970 and each five years thereafter, including data for 1989 or the latest available date.

Mr. Freeman: The table gives total period fertility rates —which are the only available reasonably comparable measures of average family sizes for the areas concerned. The total period fertility rate is the average number of children which would be born per woman if women experienced the age-specific fertility rates, as recorded at a particular point in time, throughout their entire childbearing lifespan.

Country	1970	1975	1980	1985	Latest estimate
United Kingdom	2·45	1·81	1·89	1·80	1·84 (1988)

"Caring for People"

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the percentage set out in chart 6 of "Caring for People" (Cm. 849) as the estimated cumulative rate of transfer will be affected if the costs of the continuing commitment to residents with preserved rights are higher than has been estimated.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 1 February 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

The transfer of resources from the Department of Social Security to local authorities will be determined in the 1990 public expenditure survey. Any subsequent changes in the amounts required by DSS in respect of residents with preserved rights will be a matter for future surveys and will not therefore affect the transfer.

TRANSPORT

Ports

89. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on labour efficiency in the ports.

Mr. McLoughlin: The abolition of the dock labour scheme has created the conditions for more efficient working in the ports. The effects of this reform have still to finish working through the ports industry.

90. Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what have been the effects of the abolition of the national dock labour scheme.

Mr. McLoughlin: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which I gave on 5 December to my hon. Friend the Member for Thurrock (Mr. Janman) at column 183.

91. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reports he has received of the progress of the docks in Hull since the end of the national dock labour scheme.

Mr. McLoughlin: None; but I would not expect any. However, according to press reports new flexible working arrangements have led to the reopening of the container terminal under new management, with a weekly service to Scandinavia, and to the establishment of new bulk trades at the port.

Taxis

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many hackney carriage and private hire drivers were granted licences in (a) 1985 and (b) 1989;

(2) what is the total number of licensed hackney carriage and private hire drivers in England and Wales.

Mr. Portillo: The licensing of hackney carriage and private hire drivers belongs to district councils. Statistics are not collected by central Government.

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many hackney carriage and private hire driving licences were revoked in the last year for which records are available; and what were the most common reasons.

Mr. Portillo: District councils have powers to revoke licences for a variety of reasons. They have not been asked to supply central Government with statistics on revocations.

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received regarding the protection of passengers in hackney carriage and private hire vehicles from drivers who have prison convictions for offences of a sexual or violent nature.

Mr. Portillo: Since October 1989 I have received five representations on the threat to passengers in hackney carriages and private hire vehicles from drivers who may have had criminal convictions.

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider making statutory provision for a declaration of previous offences of a sexual or violent nature by all applicants for hackney carriage or private hire licences.

Mr. Portillo: I have no plans to make such a provision. Local licensing authorities already have powers under legislation which enable them to require the submission of information by applicants as a means of assessing their suitability.

Bradford-Leeds Railway (Electrification)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive proposals from the West Yorkshire passenger transport authority concerning the electrification of the Bradford to Leeds railway and associated works; when he expects to reach a decision on such proposals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The West Yorkshire passenger transport executive has recently approached the Department of Transport about this project, which will be considered on its merits. More details will be needed before any decision can be taken.

Company Cars

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (a) how many people presently have cars registered in a company's name; (b) what is their income distribution; (c) how many are women and how many are men; (d) what is the regional distribution and (e) if he will give comparable figures for the information in (a) for each year since 1973-74.

Mr. Atkins: The latest figures available show that in 1988, approximately 2,391,000 cars were registered in a company name. These include cars held in pools, rather than being assigned to particular users. According to the 1985-86 national travel survey, about 11 per cent. of household cars were provided by companies. For 84 per cent. of these, the main driver was a man.

The distribution of these vehicles according to region and to the income of the main driver are given in the following tables.

Regions (1985-86)

	Per cent.
Great Britain	100
North	4
Yorkshire and Humberside	8
East Midlands	7
East Anglia	4
South East	39
South West	7
West Midlands	9
North West	11
Wales	3
Scotland	9

Income (1985-86)

£ per annum	Per cent.
Less than 5,000	14·4
5,000— 9,999	26·3
10,000—14,999	30·5
15,000—19,999	15·2
20,000—24,999	6·3
25,000 and over	7·3

The number of cars registered in a company name for 1983 to 1987 are given in the following table. Figures are not available for years prior to 1983.

Year	thousand
1984	1,917
1985	1,981
1986	2,038
1987	2,170

Motor Taxation

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total revenue raised from motor taxation in 1988-89; and what is his estimated revenue for 1989-90.

Mr. Atkins: The Department's estimates of revenue from motoring taxation are as follows:

Tax	Revenue 1988-89	1989-90
Vehicle excise duty	2·8	2·9
Fuel duty	8·5	8·6
Total	11·3	11·5

A40 (Lighting)

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the standard of lighting on the A40 Westway and of the A40 in the London boroughs of Hammersmith and Fulham and Ealing.

Mr. Atkins: A consultant's report on lighting standards on the A40 in the London borough of Ealing was received in February 1989. Remedial works are already in progress or planned on those parts of this section of the A40 where lighting was found not to conform with British standard BS5489. Although the A40 Westway was not included in this assessment, there is no reason to doubt that it conforms to the British standard.

Unleaded Fuels

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many and what proportion of (a) new cars use unleaded fuel, (b) car owners have converted their cars to unleaded fuel and what proportion this is of cars that can be converted and (c) new cars have a catalytic converter, (d) new cars made in the United Kingdom have catalytic converters, (e) car owners have had a catalytic converter fitted; and what were the figures in 1988.

Mr. Atkins Industry sources indicate that virtually all new cars can run on unleaded petrol without adjustment. Estimates are that about 20 per cent. of cars on the road were able to use unleaded petrol without adjustment at the end of 1989, against 10 per cent. at the end of 1988. An additional 50 per cent. could use unleaded with adjustment at the end of 1989, against 35 per cent. at the end of 1988. The current uptake of unleaded represent about 28 per cent. of the fuel market, and if the same proportion of the vehicle fleet uses unleaded fuel, and about 20 per cent. of that fleet can use unleaded without adjustment, up to 8 per cent. of the vehicle fleet may have been adjusted.

There were 186 new car models and two light van models on the market fitted with three-way catalysts, out of a total of about 1,000 models listed in the Department's "New Car Fuel Consumption" figures for October 1989. Of these, 24 models were known to be of British manufacture. We know of one model offered with a catalyst in 1988. There is no information available on the market share occupied by these models, but I understand that the industry proposes to collate these data for the future.

Tighter emission standards will take effect in 1992. The number of catalyst equipped cars on the market can be expected to increase rapidly during the next two years.

Information on the retrofitment of catalysts by individual motorists is not available.

St. Mary's Airport

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what decision has been taken on the request by the council of the Isles of Scilly for Government financial help towards the cost of repairing and extending the runway at St. Mary's airport.

Mr. McLoughlin: My Department wrote to the council on 5 February describing the financial basis on which it envisages the runway works at St. Mary's airport being carried out later this year. I am sending a copy of the letter to my hon. Friend.

M2-A2

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which year's budget contained the relevant expenditure, in relation to the relevant authorities, in respect of the following works on the M2/A2: (a) London boundary to M2 provision of lighting and provision of hard shoulders, (b) Brenley to Harbledown provision of lighting and provision of central reserve safety fencing, (c) Harbledown to Bridge provision of central reserve safety fencing, (d) Shepherdswell provision of lighting and (e) Jubilee Way to Dover alterations to road markings and removal of lay-bys.

Mr. Atkins: Expenditure was contained in the following years:—

A2

(a) London boundary to M2
Hardshoulders:	1985-86 to 1989-90 inclusive.
Lighting:	Not yet allocated
(b) Brenley to Harbledown
Lighting:	Not yet allocated.
Central reserve safety fence:	Not yet allocated.
(c) Harbledown to Bridge
Central reserve safety fence:	Not yet allocated.
(d) Shepherdswell
Lighting:	1989-90.
(e) Jubilee Way to Dover
Alterations to road markings:	1989-90
Removal of lay-bys:	1989-90.

Electric Vehicles

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research or other assistance his Department is funding for the development of electrically powered road vehicles.

Mr. Atkins: Electric vehicles have for some years been exempt from vehicle excise duty. A considerable amount of research related to electric vehicles has been carried out by the transport and road research laboratory. The Department of Transport and the Department of Trade and Industry have also funded research into higher energy density batteries and the Department of Industry has funded the development of electric vehicles. Although no further research is foreseen, officials keep in touch with developments in electric vehicles both in the United Kingdom and abroad.

Station Car Parks

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the capacity of station car parks in London in each of the last 10 years; and what is his current policy on the contribution station car parks can make to transport in London.

Mr. Portillo: The provision of station car parks has an important role to play in encouraging commuters to leave their cars outside central London and to travel in by rail. The rail operators are in the best position to judge where increases in capacity will lead to increased rail demand. Network SouthEast has a substantial programme of investment in improving and expanding its car parks. I regret that I cannot supply the data requested.

A66 Improvements

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to respond to the feasibility study on road improvements to the A66 near Longnewton in Cleveland carried out by Cleveland county council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: A decision on the feasibility study will be announced shortly.

Pedestrians and Cyclists (Accidents)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) pedestrians and (b) cyclists were killed and injured in each of the last five years due to drivers causing accidents while in excess of the blood alcohol limit; and what research his Department has done on the impact random breathalysing would have on these figures.

Mr. Atkins: The numbers of (a) pedestrians and (b) pedal cyclists who were reported by the police as killed or injured as a result of collision with a motor vehicle whose driver was established to have a blood alcohol level in excess of the legal limit or failed to provide a specimen are:

Pedestrians
killed	116	110	83	70	61
all severities	1,117	1,186	1,092	949	919
Pedal cyclists
killed	20	19	17	14	6
all severities	771	217	160	144	136

These figures confirm the significant success of our campaign against drinking and driving, to which increased enforcement activity by the police has made a major contribution. The impact of any extension of police powers would depend on the extent to which they were used and on the level of associated publicity. The extensive powers currently available to the police were set out in the recent statement by my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General (Official Report, 5 December, column 131). The Government fully support the full use by the police of these powers.

Personal Travelling Time

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what values for personal travelling time are given in departmental assessment methods for (a) bus passengers, (b) pedestrians, (c) motorists and (d) cyclists.

Mr. Atkins: The values of personal travelling time are given in the latest version of the "Highways Economic Note No. 2" issued in May 1989, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Goods (Road and Rail)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the tonnage of goods transported by road and rail in each year since 1985.

Mr. Atkins: The information requested is published in table 1.13 of "Transport Statistics Great Britain 1978-1988", a copy of which is in the Library.

WALES

Carmarthen Southern Bypass

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales with regard to the changes now being carried out to the roundabout at the junction of the Carmarthen southern bypass with the trunk road A40, why is the work necessary and what it is designed to achieve, how much it will cost, and who is responsible financially.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The improvement scheme at this roundabout scored very highly using the Welsh Office's computerised ranking programme for schemes costing less than £1 million. This programme takes into account a number of factors, including the incidence of accidents. The improvement scheme is being carried out at a cost of £500,000 to the Welsh Office.

Bed and Breakfast

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest figures for the number of people living in bed and breakfast accommodation.

Mr. Ian Grist: On 30 September 1989 there were 164 homeless families in Wales placed in bed and breakfast accommodation. Information on the number of individuals is not available centrally.

Public Bodies

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many nominees for the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to (a) each community health council in Wales, (b) each district health authority in Wales, (c) the All-Wales Advisory Panel on the Development of Services for People with Mental Handicaps, (d) each family practitioner committee in Wales, (e) the Health Policy Board and (f) the Health Promotion Board declared a political affiliation in their curricula vitae; and of those declaring a political affiliation, how many showed allegiance to (a) Conservative, (b) Labour, (c) Liberal Democrats, (d) the Social Democratic party, (e) the Green party and (f) Plaid Cymru;

(2) how many nominees for the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to (a) the Administration of Radioactive Substances, Advisory Committee, (b) the Advisory Committee on Borderline Substances, (c) the Agricultural Advisory Panel for Wales, (d) the Agricultural Valuation Committee (Wales), (e) the Agricultural Wages Committee, (f) the Ancient Monuments Board for Wales, (g) the Audit Commission and (h) the British Wool Marketing Board declared a political affiliation in their curricula vitae; and of those declaring a political affiliation, how many showed allegiance to (a) Conservatives, (b) Labour, (c) Liberal Democrats, (d) Social Democratic party, (e) Green party and (f) Plaid Cymru;

(3) how many nominees for the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to (a) the Farm Animal Welfare Council, (b) the Forestry Commission Reference Committee Panel for Wales, (c) the Historic Buildings Council for Wales, (d) Housing for Wales, (e) the Land Authorities for Wales, (f) the Library and Information Services Council (Wales), (g) the Local Government Boundary Commission and (h) the National Parks Committee, declared a political affiliation in their curricula vitae; and of those declaring a political affiliation, how many showed allegiance to (a) Conservatives, (b) Labour, (c) Liberal Democrats, (d) Social Democratic party, (e) Green party and (f) Plaid Cymru;

(4) how many nominees for the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to (a) the National Radiological Protection Board, (b) the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committee, (c) the Place Names Advisory Committee, (d) the Rent Assessment Panel, (e) the Saundersfoot Harbour Commission, (f) the Sports Council for Wales and (g) the South Wales Sea Fisheries Committee, declared a political affiliation in their curricula vitae; and of those declaring a political affiliation, how many showed allegiance to (a) Conservatives, (b) Labour, (c) Liberal Democrats, (d) Social Democratic party, (e) Green party and (f) Plaid Cymru;

(5) how many nominees for the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to (a) the Cardiff Bay development corporation, (b) the Committee for the Welsh Scheme for the Development of Health and Social Research, (c) the Committee on Opportunities for Volunteering, (d) the Council for National Academic Awards, (e) the courts and councils of (i) the National Library and (ii) the National Museum of Wales, (f) the Curriculum Council for Wales and (g) the Development Board for Rural Wales declared a political affiliation in their curricula vitae; and of those declaring a political affiliation, how many showed allegiance to (a) Conservatives, (b) Labour, (c) Liberal Democrats, (d) Social Democratic party, (e) Green party and (f) Plaid Cymru.

Mr. Peter Walker: I do not require candidates for public appointment to indicate their political affiliation, as this is not a qualification for appointment.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to (a) the National Radiological Protection Board, (b) the North Western and North Wales Sea Fisheries Committee, (c) the Place Names Advisory Committee, (d) the Rent Assessment Panel, (e) the Saundersfoot Harbour Commission, (f) the Sports Council for Wales and (g) the South Wales Sea Fisheries Committee are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information is shown in the following table:

YTS

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, by county, the number of YTS trainees in Wales and the number of YTS vacancies.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Figures for YTS trainees are not available on a county basis. The Training Agency in Wales provides statistics on an area office basis only which refer to the area in which training takes place rather than where the trainee lives.

At the end of January 1990, the numbers in training in Wales were 23,330 comprising South and Mid Glamorgan 7,337; Gwent 3,813; West Glamorgan and Dyfed 5,826; and Gwynedd, Clwyd and Powys 6,354.

At the end of January 1990 the number of unfilled places in Wales was 5,795 broken down as follows: South and Mid Glamorgan 1,889; Gwent 1,127; West Glamorgan and Dyfed 789; and Gwynedd, Clwyd and Powys 1,990.

Industrial Employment

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many persons in Wales were engaged in industrial employment, as described in article 9 of EC regulation No. 2052/88 of 24 June 1988, in each year from 1979 inclusive to the latest available year.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information requested is shown in the following table:

At June each year	No. of employees in Industrial Employment[1] ('000s)
1979	439
1980	411
1981	355
1982	333
1983	315
1984	310
1985	305
1986	293
1987	296
1988	309
1989	313

[1] Employees in employment in Wales in Divisions 1 to 5 of the Standard Industrial Classification 1980; ie. Energy and Water supply, manufacturing and construction.

The decline in employment in the coal and steel industries has resulted in a reduction of 60,000 in the numbers employed. I am pleased to say that increases in the service industries and the self-employed have more than compensated for this.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales into which NUTS level III territorial unit for the purposes of article 9 of EC regulation 2052/88 the area covered by the Llanelli borough council has been put.

Mr. Peter Walker: Llanelli borough council area comprises part of the Dyfed county council NUTS level III unit. For the purpose of article 9 of the EC regulation 2052/88, however, the Llanelli area is eligible for European Community assistance under objective 2 of that regulation because it is adjacent to West Glamorgan, a NUTS level III unit within the industrial south Wales objective 2 area, and because it satisfies all the Commission's criteria for objective 2 support.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the area covered by the Llanelli borough council is eligible for assistance under objective 2 of article 9 of the EC regulation 2052/88.

Mr. Peter Walker: Yes.

Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting Board

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made either jointly or solely by him to the Welsh National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: The board comprises 35 members; 24 are appointed by the Secretary of State following election by the profession and 11 are directly appointed by him. Twenty-four are women.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Welsh National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to committee nominees.

Mr. Grist: Total expenditure for 1987-88 (the latest figures available) was £5,812,206 with allocations of:

(a) £622,717 for administration;
(b) £2,500 for hosting of meetings and conferences; and
(c) £33,901 subsistence allowances for attending meetings.

There were no general allowances given to committee nominees.

Agricultural Advisory Panel

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the attendance record at meetings (a) since their appointment and (b) during 1989 of the current members of the Agriculture Advisory Panel for Wales appointed solely or jointly by him or his predecessor.

Mr. Peter Walker: All appointments to the Agriculture Advisory Panel for Wales are made solely by me. The full panel meets two or three times a year and the information requested is set out in the following table.

	Attendance record percentage since appointment	In 1989
Mr. R. E. M. Rees	95	100
Mr. J. A. Parry	95	100
Mr. D. F. R. George	92	100
Mr. C. J. Beynon	84	100
Professor M. Haines	100	100
Mr. T. H. Jones	90	100
Mr. D. L. Carey-Evans	100	100
Mr. D. R. Williams	100	100
Mr. R. C. Pratt	75	100
Mr. E. H. Perkins	100	100
Mrs. T. Adams	100	100
Mrs. P. Keen	100	100
Mrs. A. M. Rees	100	100

Industrial Decline

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next proposes to meet the EEC Regional Commissioner to discuss aid for areas affected by industrial decline; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: My officials regularly visit the regional policy directorate in Brussels and I am in close touch with developments. I will make contact with the Commissioner whenever I believe it to be necessary.

South Wales Sea Fisheries Committee

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to the South Wales sea fisheries committee are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: One.

Education Spending

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing the latest figure for expenditure per pupil on (a) books and (b) equipment and comparable figures for each year since 1978-79 in (i) primary schools, (ii) secondary schools and (iii) special schools in cash and real terms using an index of 100 for 1978-79.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Local authority expenditure per pupil on text books, library books, educational equipment, stationery and materials in primary, secondary and special education since 1978-79 is shown in the following table. Reliable information on text books and equipment is not separately available.

Table 1
Expenditure (£/pupil) on books and equipment at outturn prices

	Primary	Secondary	Special[1]
1978-79	11·9	20·9	35·1
1979-80	12·7	22·8	42·2
1980-81	14·6	25·2	40·9
1981-82	16·2	28·4	59·5
1982-83	18·5	33·5	54·7
1983-84	19·8	37·4	57·9
1984-85	17·9	39·9	67·1
1985-86	20·0	41·3	93·7
1986-87	22·5	57·4	80·7
1987-88	23·9	58·2	102·6

[1] Figures relate to the education of pupils at maintained special schools and other special education provided otherwise than at school. Expenditure on special education in primary and secondary schools is included in the primary and secondary school unit costs.

Index of expenditure (£/pupil) on books and equipment (1978-79 = 100)[1]

	Primary	Secondary	Special[2]
1978-79	100	100	100
1979-80	91·4	93·4	103·1
1980-81	88·9	87·1	84·2
1981-82	89·7	89·5	111·7
1982-83	95·9	98·6	96·0
1983-84	97·9	105·2	97·1
1984-85	84·4	107·0	107·1
1985-86	89·3	104·9	141·8
1986-87	97·1	141·2	118·2

[1] Primary includes nursery schools.
[2] Figures relate to the education of pupils at maintained special schools and other special education provided otherwise than at school. Expenditure on special education in primary and secondary schools is included in the primary and secondary school unit costs.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the value of development funding awarded to training and enterprise councils (a) in total and (b) by TEC.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The total value of development contracts at present is £311,620, broken down as follows: West Wales TEC £110,000; Mid Glamorgan TEC £103,500 and the North East Wales TEC £98,120.

The levels of development funding for the other TECs whose bids have been approved, North West Wales, South Glamorgan and Gwent, are still being negotiated.

Waste Disposal Sites

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hydrogeological surveys have been brought to the notice of the Welsh Office via the National Rivers Authority and the Welsh Water Authority in conjunction with planning applications to use quarries and other locations as landfill waste disposal sites.

Mr. Grist: The Welsh Office has no record of a hydrogeological survey brought to its attention via the National Rivers Authority and the Welsh Water Authority in conjunction with a planning application for a landfill waste disposal site.

Singleton Casualty Unit

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received for an extension of X-ray facilities at the Singleton casualty unit; and how many in opposition.

Mr. Grist: Since 1 June 1988, 102 individual representations and petitions have been received by the Department seeking expanded use of the minor casualty unit services at Singleton hospital, Swansea, the majority of which have explicitly sought improved access to X-ray facilities.

The district health authority has indicated to the Department that it would neither support nor encourage the development of radiology services for the minor casualty unit.

Mortgages

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will publish a table showing the average income of first time house buyers and average prices of houses in Wales in 1989-90;

(2) what is the average new mortgage in 1989-90 in Wales:

(3) what is the average outstanding mortgage in 1989-90 in Wales.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The available information for Wales relating to building society borrowers only for the first six months of the financial year 1989-80 is given in the following table:

First time purchases		April—September 1989 all Purchases
Average recorded income of borrowers[1]	Average house price	Average new mortgage	Average house price
13,291	33,209	30,026	45,615

[1] Different building societies have different conventions for recording the income of borrowers.

ENVIRONMENT

Foreign Taps

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to prohibit the importing of foreign taps which do not conform to British Standard 5412 with respect to the diameter of the taps' internal construction.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to prohibit the importing of foreign taps. Taps have to comply with the byelaw requirements of the United Kingdom water undertakers. Such things as the performance of taps and their value for money are largely matters for consumers to judge.

Lead Pollution

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the Department of the Environment pollution report No. 28.

Mr. Trippier: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on Thursday 8 February to the hon. Member for Dewsbury (Mrs. Taylor) (Official Report, Vol 166, col. 757).

Landfill Sites

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to establish a central register of landfill sites receiving low-level radioactive wastes.

Mr. Trippier: Any waste disposal site licensed by a waste disposal authority under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 (COPA) may receive low-level radioactive waste where this is authorised by HMIP under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960. Low-level radioactive waste authorised for disposal to local landfill sites with ordinary refuse is subject to certain conditions including activity limits. Disposals under these conditions present no hazard either to the refuse collector or at the disposal site and the destination of the waste is not recorded. It is therefore impracticable to establish a central register containing the information requested. Waste disposal authorities do, however, maintain registers of all disposal sites licensed under COPA in their areas.

Nirex

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not yet met representatives of UK Nirex Ltd.

Eco-labelling Scheme

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many companies to date have indicated their support and have offered assistance with the Government's product eco-labelling scheme.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State explained in his reply of 9 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. King) (Official Report, Vol 164, cols 589-91), we received over 80 responses to the discussion paper which we issued last August proposing the establishment of an EC-wide scheme of eco-labelling. Just over 30 of these responses were from individual companies, and they were overwhelmingly in support of our proposals. We shall, of course, want to work closely with interested groups in moving towards setting up a scheme.

Rivers

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the specific measurements of the substances that are to be present in or absent from river water in order to meet (a) the minimum clean water qualification standards of the National Rivers Authority and (b) the qualification standards set by the European Economic Community.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The requirements of the general river classification system currently in use throughout England and Wales are set out in the report of the 1985 river quality survey, a copy of which is in the Library. There is no EC legislation setting general quality standards for rivers, although there are directives relating to specific dangerous substances (76/464/EEC et seq, reproduced in Department of the Environment circular 7/89 (Welsh Office 16/89)), to the quality of designated fresh water needing protection or improvement in order to support fish life (78/659/EEC), and to the quality of surface water intended for the abstraction of drinking water (75/440/EEC).

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what system of classifying the quality of river water has been prescribed by his Department.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The general classification system for rivers currently in use throughout England and Wales is being reviewed and will not be formally prescribed until that review has been completed. In the meantime specific classifications have been established, by regulations made under section 104 of the Water Act 1989, for surface waters according to their suitability for abstraction by water undertakers for supply (after treatment) as drinking water (SI 1989 No. 1148) and for a range of specific dangerous substances (SI 1989 No. 2286).

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the results of the survey of rivers being conducted by the National Rivers Authority will be available.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I understand that the NRA expects to be able to publish results from its 1990 survey of river quality in England and Wales during the autumn of 1991.

Radiochemical Inspectors

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many radiochemical inspectors' posts (a) filled and (b) unfilled were provided for each year in respect of each organisation; what is the maximum period considered necessary between site visits by these organisations; and what statutory duties exist on these organisations to monitor, record and make public radioactivity emitted off-site from any site subject to inspection;

(2) how many radiochemical inspectors were in post for each year from 1986-87 to 1989-90, respectively for (a) the radiochemical inspectorate prior to April 1987, (b) Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, (c) Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution (Scotland), (d) Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution (Northern Ireland), and (e) the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food;

(3) how many sites were visited by radiochemical inspectors in each year from 1986-87 to 1989-90; and what is the average period between site visits;

(4) what statutory duties exist on users of radioactive materials as defined in the Radioactive Substances Act to (a) monitor, (b) record and (c) make public in each case amounts of radioactive emitted off-site from any site to which radiochemical inspectors have powers of entry or inspection.

Mr. Trippier: Organisations subject to control under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 (RSA60) must comply with strict conditions and activity limits imposed by HMIP in certificates of registration and authorisation issued under the Act. The issue of certificates follows careful assessment of the possible environmental impact where appropriate.

Conditions imposed vary with the circumstances, but in the case of radioactive waste disposals, these commonly require monitoring to take place. In all cases proper and detailed records must be maintained. All premises controlled under the Act are subject to scrutiny by HMIP inspectors under powers contained in section 12 of RSA60, to ensure compliance with the terms of certificates issued.

Although there is no requirement in the Act to make information public, details of monitoring of radioactive discharges from the nuclear industry are published annually both by the industry itself and by this Department.

The information available on the number and frequency of site inspections and on staff in the radiochemical inspectorate and HMIP, for the period 1986-87 to 1988-89 is contained in the Department's management information system returns (MINIS 8-10), available in the Library of the House. The MINIS 11 report covering 1989-90 will be placed in the Library in due course.

Matters relating to Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food are the responsibilities of their respective Secretaries of State.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites in the United Kingdom are subject to powers of entry or inspection by radiochemical inspectors.

Mr. Trippier: In England there are some 9,600 premises subject to regulation by HMIP under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 (RSA60). The administration of RSA60 in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland is a matter for the respective Secretaries of State for those countries.

Leakage

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will outline his responsibilities in respect of protecting water sources and in respect of controlling leakage from the distribution system.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The National Rivers Authority is primarily responsible for protecting water sources. The water undertakers are responsible for controlling leakage from the distribution system. But the Director General of Water Services will monitor their leakage control programmes to ensure that an appropriate balance is struck between capital and operational costs in the interests of local consumers.

Recycled Paper

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider introductionary measures that would encourage an increase in the proportion of recycled paper used in newsprint.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I am writing today to newspaper publishers to urge them to increase the proportion of recycled paper that they use. Copies of the letter have been placed in the Library.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what he is doing to ensure that those waste disposal authorities identified in the answer to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Sir H. Rossi) Official Report, 11 January, columns 684-85, submit waste disposal plans as they are required to do under section 1 of the Control of Pollution Act.

Mr. Trippier: I have today written to leaders of the 15 authorities concerned asking them to submit their plans by 30 November. My officials will be discussing with the authorities concerned the steps needed for completing the plans by this date. Officials are also writing to other authorities asking them to provide confirmation of their latest plans.

At the same time, we are proposing an amendment to the Environmental Protection Bill to allow my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to set deadlines for the preparation of waste disposal plans and to prescribe the factors to be taken into account in preparing such plans.

We attach considerable importance to having a comprehensive framework of such plans across the country. Under the Bill's provisions, we see these plans as providing a vital framework for informing investment decisions by public and private sector waste disposal interests as well as publicising required standards and enforcement policies by the new waste regulation authorities. We shall be reviewing the content and scope of these plans for the future and will be issuing, in due course, revised guidance to local authorities on how existing plans should be updated.

Housing Revenue Account

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will propose revisions to the housing revenue account subsidy determination of 21 December in response to requests by local authorities.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department is today sending to local housing authorities proposed amendments to the housing revenue account subsidy rules for 1990-91. These are designed to deal with questions put to us since the main rules were published on 21 December. They should reassure councils that rents next year can be kept within Government guidelines.

The new policy is designed to begin moving authorities towards a sensible patten of rents in which the rents of council housing broadly reflect the geographical variations in the value of property. The old system was a nonsense because we had to assume that rents would move by the same amount in every part of the country. None the less, we are not suggesting that council rents should reach market levels (except where these are low) and we will make sure that rents can stay within the reach of ordinary working people.

I know that many authorities have been doubtful about whether they can keep rent increases within our guidelines. I believe we have now removed the main outstanding problems, and that some of their worries have been unnecessary. I would urge councils to look closely at several aspects of the system that convey very considerable flexibility or help. Let me give a few examples.

Some authorities have been worried that they could no longer fund repairs and improvements from capital receipts from the sale of council property. But genuine capitalised repairs are not precluded by section 40 of the 1989 Act.

Today's draft rules confirm our intention that subsidy will be paid on works that have been financed through deferred purchase or leasing schemes.

Councils can carry forward balances up to £150 a dwelling or £5 million. Authorities can also look for economies and efficiency savings.

We have also, today, confirmed a rule change that was prompted by the action of Wakefield council, on 9 January. Wakefield reduced its rent for the last seven weeks of this year from £17·82 to £1·70 a week, solely to gain an extra £5 million in 1990-91 from a recalculation of subsidy. We believe this was wrong and, after formal consultations with the council, have revised the rules so that the January change in rents will not alter its subsidy entitlement next year.

As a result of today's revised rules, I believe authorities should be able to hold rent increases broadly in line with guidelines. Some may be above, some below. The final decision rests with councils themselves, which must decide on the levels of income and expenditure they want to budget for.

Council Houses

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses for rent have been built each year since 1970; and how many are planned to be built in each of the next five years.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 8 February 1990]: Numbers of house-building completions for rent by local authorities and new towns are as follows:

Year	Number
1970	127,700
1971	110,900
1972	89,400
1973	75,700
1974	95,600
1975	113,800
1976	116,200
1977	114,000
1978	92,100
1979	73,300
1980	73,500
1981	54,200
1982	30,800
1983	28,700
1984	28,400
1985	22,700
1986	18,900
1987	15,700
1988	15,300

The Government do not expect local authorities to add significantly to their stock of houses for rent. Our policy is that housing associations should become the major providers of new subsidised rented housing and public expenditure plans reflect this.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what evidence his Department has of pollution risk to water supplies or other health hazards from toxic waste deposited at Stanton road, Sandiacre, Pewit tip, Manners avenue, Ilkeston, and Long Eaton refuse tip, all in Derbyshire; what monitoring by pollution control authorities has been undertaken; and what information or advice has been given to Erewash local authority.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 9 February 1990]: In 1972-73, a desk study commissioned by my Department suggested that the sites presented the following potential risk to groundwater:

(a) Stanton road, Sandiacre—no recorded information;
(b) Pewit tip, Manners avenue, Ilkeston—some (risk) to minor (aquifer);
(c) Long Eaton refuse tip, Meadows lane—serious (risk) to minor (aquifer).

This information was passed to the local authority and water authority to assist them in their regulatory function.

My Department has no evidence that the sites are presenting a risk to water supplies or public health.

Irish Sea (Pollution)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ask for the radioactive and chemical pollution of the Irish sea to be placed on the agenda of the forthcoming North sea Environment Ministers conference; what other issues will be discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Given the geographical scope of the North sea conference, it would not be appropriate for matters concerning pollution in the Irish sea to be included at the third North sea conference in March.

The main purpose of the third North sea conference is to look at progress on the implementation of important measures agreed at the second conference in London in 1987. The conference will also review all the major activities which have an impact on the marine environment, including discharges of dangerous substances via rivers and the atmosphere, nutrients, dumping, shipping and offshore installations.

The measures agreed at the North sea conferences are applied to all our seas, including the Irish sea.

Ancient Monuments

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish a table detailing the cost of the annual applications by archaeologists to (a) his Department and (b) English Heritage for rescue archaeological work to record and excavate sites of national importance in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 12 February 1990] The total annual figure for applications approved for funding for rescue archaeological work is as follows:

Funding		£ million
(a) Department of the Environment	1981-82	6·700
Department of the Environment	1982-83	7·900
Department of the Environment	1983-84	[1]7·000
(b) English Heritage	1984-85	7·100
English Heritage	1985-86	8·745
English Heritage	1986-87	11·501
English Heritage	1987-88	12·230
English Heritage	1988-89	13·759
English Heritage	1989-90	7·107

Comparable figures are available only from 1981-82.

From 1989-90 English Heritage has adopted a rolling programme for funding rescue archaeological work and no longer accepts speculative applications. The total of the applications approved is therefore expected to correspond to the funds available.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish a table showing the amount of funding given by (a) English Heritage and (b) his Department to rescue archaeologist projects in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The figures are as follows:

		Spending £ million
Department of the Environment Funding	1981-82	4·000
Department of the Environment Funding	1982-83	4·877
Department of the Environment Funding	1983-84	5·100
English Heritage Funding	1984-85	5·538
English Heritage Funding	1985-86	5·680
English Heritage Funding	1986-87	7·437
English Heritage Funding	1987-88	7·422
English Heritage Funding	1988-89	6·877
English Heritage Funding	1989-90	[1]7·107

[1] Budgeted

Comparable figures are available only from 1981-82.

Figures from 1986-87 onwards include provision for the Greater London archaeology service, taken on by English Heritage following the abolition of the Greater London council.

Domestic Water Services

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment with what schemes, other than metering, the Government are offering help to the Director General of Water Services, so as to ensure that the changes in charging for domestic water services provide the best value for money; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 12 February 1990]: It is for each water company to decide on what basis to charge for its services once rateable values can no longer be used, and to apply to the Director General of Water Services for an interim adjustment of its price limit (k) to cover the additional cost of introducing and operating its choice of system. The costs of metering on a wide scale are currently more uncertain than those associated with other methods of charging. The Government are therefore providing financial support to a series of metering trials to ensure that the results are available in sufficient time to influence each company's choice of charging method and to enable the director general to have regard to the results when considering applications for interim adjustments. The director general may, however, commission research into other methods of charging if he considers it appropriate.

Flooding (Windsor and Maidenhead)

Sir Alan Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government will extend the Bellwin scheme or some other relief to cover the cost of the recent flood damage to Windsor and Maidenhead; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The Government have not yet decided whether to extend the scope of the Bellwin scheme to cover flood damage at Windsor and Maidenhead. We are monitoring the situation to assess whether an extension would be justified under the criteria for the scheme.

Council House Sales, Norwich

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much lower or higher on average the determinations of the district valuer are on council house sales in Norwich than the prices quoted by Norwich city council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: In the year ending 31 December 1989, the district valuer made 101 determinations of value under section 128 of the Housing Act 1985 on the application of tenants of Norwich city council. The value determined was lower than the council's opinion of value in 76 cases by an average of £3,334 or 6·52 per cent., higher in one case and the same in 24 cases.

Mortgages

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish a table showing the average income of first-time housebuyers and average prices of houses in (a) England and (b) each region in 1989-90;

(2) what is the average new mortgage in 1989-90 in (a) England and (b) each region.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The available information, which relates to building society borrowers only, is for the first six months of the financial year 1989-90:

		First time purchasers		All borrowers
		Average recorded income[1] £	Average house price £	Average mortgage advance £	Average house price £

DEFENCE

Classified Documents

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the Colin Wallace file was finally found; on what date; and what other documents were located with it.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the information given in the letter dated 2 February 1990, which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence sent to the hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone). A copy was placed in the Library.

General Dynamics

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the details of the memorandum of understanding with the General Dynamics Company of the United States of America concerning offset agreements for the purchase of goods and services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: No. The details of the MOU are commercially confidential.

Aircraft Disturbance

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any controlled experiments have been undertaken to assess the response of seabirds to aircraft disturbance which have involved either the active participation or co-operation of his Department including service personnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not aware of any Ministry of Defence involvement in experiments of this kind, which would be the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

SA 80 Rifles

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has taken steps to have armour-piercing ammunition for the SA 80 rifles used by the Army in Northern Ireland procured and issued in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our usual practice to discuss detailed operational capabilities.

SCOTLAND

Enterprise Councils

92. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the procedures to be used to monitor expenditure by local enterprise councils and training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Dumbarton (Mr. McFall) on local enterprise companies. Training and enterprise councils are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Employment, Glasgow

93. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to improve employment in the north-east of Glasgow.

Mr. Lang: The full range of training and employment services is available to help people in north-east Glasgow to acquire appropriate skills and find work. The training and enterprise development provision available to the people of Glasgow will be further enhanced by the establishment of a local enterprise company for Glasgow which will have responsibility for delivering and combining the training programmes of the Training Agency and the economic development and environmental activities of the Scottish Development Agency at local level in a way which best meets the needs of Glasgow's economy and labour market.

Investment

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the instances of inward investment since the formation of Locate in Scotland which have subsequently been closed down.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many inward investment projects from outside the United Kingdom were established (a) between 1964 and 1970, (b) between 1970 and 1974, (c) between 1974 and 1979 and (d) between 1979 and 1987 and how many of them survive today.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available for the period prior to the inception of Locate in Scotland in 1981. In the six years to 31 March 1987, LIS recorded 309 projects planned by companies. It is not possible to say how many survived to date, since not all the projects were in receipt of financial assistance and therefore subject to monitoring by the Department.

Water Charges

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) metered water charge and (b) non-domestic water rate in each water authority area for 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The metered water charges and non-domestic water rates for 1989-90 and 1990-91 are set out in the table. The figures for 1990-91 are unconfirmed at this stage.

Water Authorities (Debt)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the level of indebtedness of each water authority in Scotland at the most recent date for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The most recent figures available are given in the table.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the expenditure to be incurred by each water authority in Scotland in servicing capital debt in 1989-90 and 1990-91 and the proportion which that amount is of their total expenditure in relation to water supply.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is set out in the table. Figures for 1990-91, and on total expenditure in relation to water supply, are not yet available centrally.

Water Supply

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total expenditure incurred by each region and islands area in respect of their functions in relation to water supply.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest available figures for total expenditure, both current and capital, incurred by the regional and islands councils are for the year 1988-89 and are as follows:

Education Spending

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the latest figure for expenditure per pupil on (a) books and (b) equipment and comparable figures for each year since 1978-79 in (i) primary schools, (ii) secondary schools and (iii) special schools in cash and real terms using an index of 100 for 1978-79.

Mr. Lang: The information available is given in the following tables which have been compiled from local authority financial returns. Expenditure on equipment was not separately identified in these returns until 1982-83. There have been some variations from year to year in the recording of expenditure under these two headings. In particular some of the figures for expenditure on library books may include some expenditure on items of equipment.

Human Retrovirus

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what information he has as to the ownership and disposal of all material produced under the agreement between Cogent Ltd. and the CSA of the Health Service to carry out research work into the production of monoclonal antibodies against human retrovirus at Edinburgh university; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what was the total value of funding contributed by (a) the CSA of the Health Service and (b) Cogent Ltd. in pursuance of the contract between them to carry out research into the production of monoclonal antibodies against human retrovirus at Edinburgh university; and if he will make a statement;

(3) why the contract between the Common Services Agency of the Health Service and Cogent Ltd. to produce monoclonal antibodies against human retrovirus at Edinburgh university was terminated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The contract was suspended in June 1989 by Cogent Ltd. following attempts by UnivEd Technologies (the commercial arm of the university of Edinburgh) to negotiate with Cogent financial and intellectual property rights in the project to which Cogent were unable to agree. Discussions continue between the Common Services Agency and Cogent Ltd. with a view to arranging formal termination of the contract in such a way as to safeguard the interests of both parties.

The agreement between the Common Services Agency and Cogent Ltd. relates to the development of antibodies to human immunodeficiency virus which might prove of potential value in the treatment of patients. A number of antibodies were produced prior to suspension of the project although none was deemed suitable for development for patient therapy. The ownership and disposal of material produced under the agreement will require to be dealt with in terminating the agreement. The CSA has contributed £67,000 and Cogent Ltd. £175,000 to the project.

Horticulture Diversification

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications have been received by the Highlands and Islands Development Board under its horticulture diversification scheme; and how many have been approved.

Mr. Lang: Horticulture diversification is part of the Highlands and Islands Development Board's land diversification programme. Records of applications received and approved are not available.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what expenditure has been incurred by the Highlands and Islands Development Board in publishing promotional material on its horticulture diversification scheme and mailing it to potential applicants.

Mr. Lang: In 1989-90, expenditure of £38,000 has been incurred on the information leaflets "Patterns for Change" which promote land diversification.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision exists within the current budget of the Highlands and Islands Development Board for a horticulture diversification scheme; and whether any provision is being made for next year's budget.

Mr. Lang: The total budget for the Highlands and Islands Development Board's land diversification programme, including publication of promotional material, for 1989-90 is £107,000. The budget for 1990-91 is £90,000.

Cumbernauld—Kilsyth Road

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans for the construction of a new road between Cumbernauld and Kilsyth; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no such plans. The present road between Cumbernauld and Kilsyth is the responsibility of Strathclyde regional council but the minor local realignments to it which will be required because of the proposed M80 Stepps-Haggs trunk motorway cutting across it will be financed in due course from the trunk road programme.

New Hospital, Cumbernauld

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received any proposals from Lanarkshire health board for the construction of a new hospital at Cumbernauld; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Lanarkshire health board has recently submitted an option appraisal on the provision of geriatric and psycho-geriatric services. The options which include the development of a new 120-bed unit at Cumbernauld are being considered by my officials.

New Towns

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent advice he has given to new town development corporations on privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The White Paper "The Scottish New Towns: The Way Ahead" published on 11 July last year, stated the Government's view that a number of the new town development corporations' functions were suitable for privatisation. The Government consider that the privatisation of these functions is not only likely to ensure the continuity of service necessary to enable the development corporations to complete their remaining tasks, but offers the best prospect of safeguarding employment and opening up wider job opportunities for corporation employees.

Since the publication of the White Paper my officials have had extensive discussions with senior management of the five development corporations on the different options for the privatisation of the development corporations' services and functions, the appropriate methods of privatisation and other associated issues.

My right hon. and learned Friend met the chairmen and chief executives of the Scottish new towns on 1 December to discuss privatisation among other issues affecting the new towns. I am encouraged by the progress being made by the corporations in identifying privatisation options and in assisting their employees to explore these possibilities.

Cumbernauld Development Corporation

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, when he last met Mr. David Mitchell, chairman of Cumbernauld development corporation; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the chairman of Cumbernauld development corporation together with the chairmen of the other development corporations on Friday 1 December 1989, when he discussed a wide range of matters concerning the new towns.

Storm Damage

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much of the £600,000 in European Community storm aid to the United Kingdom announced in February will be made available to his Department.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Decisions on the allocation of EC storm aid to the United Kingdom have not yet been made. Arrangements to identify those affected are under way and any awards will be distributed as soon as possible.

Quarrying

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding the expansion of quarrying in the Highlands and Islands; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Representations regarding the expansion of quarrying in the Highlands and Islands have not been received.

It is recognised that there are particular mineral resources which, owing to the nature of the geology of Scotland, are more likely to occur in the Highlands and Islands. The extraction of such minerals can, with the appropriate environmental safeguards, bring social and economic benefits especially to remoter areas.

Any proposal for the development of quarrying would require planning permission and would, in the first instance, be the responsibility of the relevant planning authority.

Teachers

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements are made to enable persons who have qualified as teachers outside Scotland to upgrade their teaching qualification to meet the requirements of the Scottish Education Department.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Any person who proposes to teach in an education authority school in Scotland must be registered with the General Teaching Council for Scotland. Where an applicant's qualifications do not meet the requirements for registration, the council is normally able to recommend a course of study at a college or university to bring those qualifications up to its required standards.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Green Pound

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received regarding the level of the green pound.

Mr. Gummer: I receive frequent representations about the level of the green pound from farmers and their representatives.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence is available to him that the causative agent of bovine spongiform encephalopathy (a) is found in offal, other than brain tissue and (b) is not found in bovine tissue, other than offal.

Mr. Maclean: BSE was probably caused by the scrapie agent being transmitted to cattle through animal protein feed. Infectivity studies using various sheep tissues showed that the agent is most likely to be present in brain, spinal cord, spleen, tonsil, thymus and intestine, but not detectable in other tissues. These offals from bovines have therefore been banned from any use in human food as a precautionary measure, even though affected animals are slaughtered and destroyed. Infectivity experiments are being undertaken to confirm that the agent which causes bovine spongiform encephalopathy acts in the same way in terms of its presence or otherwise in relation to cattle offals and tissues.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions more than 50 per cent. compensation has been paid in respect of bovine spongiform encephalopathy confirmed cattle identified at abattoirs.

Mr. Gummer: The compulsory slaughter of animals suspected of suffering from bovine spongiform encephalopathy was introduced on 8 August 1988. Under the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Compensation Order 1988, compensation is paid to the owner of an animal in which infection is confirmed at the rate of one half of its market value, up to 62½ per cent. of the average market price.

I propose to introduce from tomorrow new arrangements for the assessment of compensation for the slaughter of animals in which infection is confirmed. Compensation will be at 100 per cent. of the market value of the animal or the average market price, whichever is the less. There will be no change in the basis of compensation for animals in which the disease is not confirmed.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further action he intends to take in the light of the discovery that bovine spongiform encephalopathy can be transmitted to mice through feeding stuffs.

Mr. Maclean: The mice to which bovine spongiform encephalopathy was transmitted were fed large quantities (at least half their own body weight) of brain and cerebrospinal fluid from advanced clinical cases of BSE cattle. This was a laboratory experiment and the method of infection used was completely unnatural. The results were not unexpected and provide further evidence that BSE is similar to scrapie, a disease for which there is no evidence whatsoever of its being a risk to human health. Further action in the light of these results is not therefore appropriate.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to ensure that bovine spongiform encephalopathy-infected tissues are prevented from entering the food chain of any other animals either in this country or abroad.

Mr. Maclean: All cattle suspected of having BSE are compulsorily slaughtered and their carcases destroyed. In addition the offals which might harbour the agent in cattle with sub-clinical infection are banned from human consumption. Protein material, including these offals, derived from ruminant animals, cannot be fed to ruminants in this country. However, there is no scientific reason why the offals should not be incorporated into feedstuffs for non-ruminant animals. It is up to countries importing protein material from the United Kingdom to determine the conditions under which such imports may take place in the full knowledge they have about the disease and its likely cause.

Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations has he received about the future of the Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Gummer: A number of individuals and organisations have made their views known including those representing the Milk Marketing Board and the Dairy Trade Federation. The issue is an important one, and it is right that there should be an open exchange of views.

Food Additives

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many substances of no nutritional value were permitted as food additives (a) in 1984 and (b) in 1989.

Mr. Maclean: There are approximately 320 additives permitted by regulation for use in food and these include additives of some nutritional value. This number has not altered substantially between 1984 and 1989. In addition, there are about 3,000 flavourings available to the food industry that are not specifically controlled by regulations. They are however subject to the general provisions of the Food Act and are used in very small amounts.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the enforcement of section 4(2) of the Food Act 1984 in respect of colouring additives with no nutritional value.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 29 January at column 75. The criteria that the Food Advisory Committee uses in assessing food additives was published in "Food Facts—Additives No. 7", a copy of which is being sent to the hon. Member.

Research and Development (Food)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what amount was spent on (a) research and (b) development on (i) food safety, (ii) food quality and (iii) food processing for each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The table sets out figures showing the expenditure by Government on food R and D over the past 10 years. Data on expenditure on food quality, safety and processing are not readily available before 1984-85. Figures for research and development separately are not available.

The Government are firmly committed to funding research on food safety and hygiene issues of concern to consumers, producers and industry.

Pesticide Residues

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what checks are carried out to check for pesticide residues, and in particular DDT residues, on imports of fruit and vegetables from Spain.

Mr. Maclean: The Government undertake a continuous monitoring programme of fruit and vegetables and other major food commodity groups from all sources, including Spain, to ensure that residue levels of DDT and other pesticides do not exceed statutory levels contained in the Pesticides (Maximum Residue Levels in Food) Regulations 1988. The results are published; the latest report covering the period 1985 to 1989 was published by HMSO in 1989 (Food Surveillance Paper No. 25).

Waste Disposal

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will name those materials categorised as inert or of natural origin currently dumped by the United Kingdom in the North sea under existing licences and those categorised under other headings.

Mr. Gummer: Materials licensed for dumping by the United Kingdom which are categorised by the Oslo commission as being inert and of natural origin are colliery stone and clean sand. Other material dumped includes port and navigation dredgings, which other North sea countries also dump at sea. In addition the United Kingdom licenses the dumping at sea of sewage sludge, liquid industrial waste and flyash. The disposal at sea of liquid industrial waste and flyash is being terminated as soon as environmentally acceptable land-based means of disposal can be introduced.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the specific waste materials mentioned in the United Kingdom's current applications for further industrial waste disposal licences relating to the practice of waste disposal in the seas around the United Kingdom, including the North sea.

Mr. Gummer: The United Kingdom has submitted information to the Oslo commission in accordance with the internationally agreed procedures in respect of the following wastes:

1. Wash waters from synthesis of Intal—a treatment for asthma and allergies.
2. Aqueous residues from preparation of paracetamol.
3. Salt solution from manufacture of O-tolyl-byguanide, exported for use in paint and soap manufacture.
4. Wash waters from synthesis of antibiotic and anti-ulcer medicines.

The crucial importance of some of these products will be obvious.

Since the date information was forwarded to the Oslo commission on the first waste an alternative means of disposal has been implemented. I have therefore rejected an application for renewal of the licence for the sea dumping of this material.

Alternative means of disposal are also being put in place for the third and fourth of these wastes and dumping at sea will cease later this year.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the Government's timetable for ending the current practice of the bulk dumping of various waste materials, including sewage sludge, in the North sea and in other maritime locations around the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: The dumping of flyash and liquid industrial wastes is being terminated as soon as environmentally acceptable land-based means of disposal are available. Considerable progress has already been made in reducing the number of sea dumping licences and alternative disposal methods are currently being developed and implemented for the few remaining licensed materials.

Nearly 70 per cent. of our sewage sludge production is already disposed of on land. Licences for the sea dumping of the remainder are issued in accordance with international agreements and are carefully considered on a case-by-case basis to ensure that sea dumping will cause no harm in the marine environment and to confirm that no practicable land-based means of disposal are currently available.

There is no international requirement to phase out the sea dumping of dredged materials, which are dumped by all North sea states, and inert materials of natural origin.

Eggs

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will undertake a review of the overall effectiveness of recent legislation affecting the egg producing industry.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 11 January 1990, c. 747]: As indicated to the House of Commons Agriculture Committee during its recent further inquiry on salmonella in eggs, I have been reviewing the compensation paid when flocks infected with salmonella are compulsorily slaughtered. I am now introducing new scales of values for calculating compensation which reflect increases in commercial prices since the scales were first drawn up. The scales will also be kept under regular review in future. If a producer disagrees with the Ministry's valuation he will continue to have the right to take the matter to arbitration.

I am also amending the orders on the registration and testing of poultry flocks for salmonella, to remove the provisions that require the registers to be open to public inspection. I am taking this step as I accept that the ready availability of the registers could jeopardise the security of poultry premises.

In our programme of measures to control salmonella, protection of public health continues to be our first priority, but, as these changes indicate, we are also alive to concerns expressed by the industry about certain aspects of our controls. I am also continuing to press hard for measures on salmonella to be introduced throughout the Community.

EMPLOYMENT

Unofficial Disputes

4. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of strikes result from unofficial action.

Mr. Howard: Approximately half all stoppages and one third of all days lost in 1988 were in unofficial disputes.

8. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many working days were lost last year as a result of unofficial industrial action.

Mr. Nicholls: Separate statistics on unofficial strikes ceased to be published as a regular series in 1981. However, information from a special exercise for 1988 was included in the Government's Green Paper "Unofficial Action and the Law", a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library. This showed that approximately 1·3 million days were lost to unofficial disputes in 1988.

Work Permits

14. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received in response to his consultation paper on the work permit scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Over 70 responses to the consultation exercise have been received. My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to announce the outome of the review in the near future.

Small Businesses

15. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any information about the growth of the small business sector in 1989.

Mr. Eggar: Early indications are that there was a net increase of some 80,000 businesses registered for VAT in 1989. This compares with an increase of 64,000 in 1988.

57. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his latest estimate of the number of jobs created annually by small firms.

Mr. Nicholls: The latest research commissioned by my Department estimates that between 1985 and 1987, firms employing between five and 19 people created 290,000 additional jobs, compared with just 20,000 in larger firms.

Enterprise Councils

18. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the representations made to him by the National Union of Civil and Public Servants and the Civil and Public Servants Association regarding the staffing of local enterprise councils and TECs.

Mr. Eggar: No.

Youth Training

20. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many and what percentage of young people aged 16 to 20 years receive training in Germany, Japan, the United States of America, Sweden and the United Kingdom for the most recent date for which information is available.

Mr. Howard: The figures available are for the proportion of 16 to 18-year-olds in education or training in 1986. They are as follows:

Country	Percentage
West Germany	90
Japan	79
United States of America	80
Sweden	78
United Kingdom	64

The figure for the United Kingdom rose to 69 per cent. in 1988. I agree that more needs to be done in the field of youth training. That is why we are setting up training and enterprise councils to ensure that more young people get training of the kind they need.

ACAS

21. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met the chair of the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. and learned Friend has not yet had the opportunity to meet the chairman of ACAS.

Local Offices

22. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to merge jobcentres with unemployment benefit offices.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service is working progressively to bring jobcentres and benefit offices together under one roof to provide a new and improved one-stop service.

Over the next few years, the employment service will be working to establish a national network of some 1,100 to 1,200 employment service offices.

Labour Statistics

23. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many full-time jobs have been (a) lost and (b) created in the inner city of Liverpool in the last six months.

Mr. Nicholls: This information is not available. The Department's statistics for local areas monitor only net changes in employment between census of employment dates, and the most recent figures are for September 1987.

24. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the current rate of employment in the United Kingdom and list those countries in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development whose rate of unemployment is higher.

Mr. Howard: In December 1989, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in the United Kingdom was 5·8 per cent. On the OECD international definition the unemployment rate was higher in Ireland, Spain, Italy, France, Netherlands, Belgium, Greece, Denmark and Canada.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the change in long-term unemployment since April 1986.

Mr. Nicholls: In October 1989, the number of unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom who had been unemployed for 12 months or more was down 743,194 or 54·8 per cent. compared with April 1986. The comparison is affected by the change of the count from September 1988 due to new benefit regulations affecting those young people aged under 18 years.

87. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the change in numbers of unemployed in the Norwich travel-to-work area since 1987.

Mr. Nicholls: In December 1989 the number of unemployed claimants in the Norwich travel-to-work areas was 5,918, a fall of 6,484 or 52·3 per cent. since the June 1987 election. The comparison is affected by the change in the coverage of the count from September 1988 due to the new benefit regulations affecting those aged under 18, and are not seasonally adjusted.

88. Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) men and (b) women over the age of 55 years were unemployed at the latest count (i) for less than six months, (ii) for between six months and 12 months, (iii) for between 12 months and two years and (iv) over two years.

Mr. Nicholls: The requested information is contained in the following table.

Unemployed claimants over 55 years old in the United Kingdom October 1989 (unadjusted)

Duration of unemployment	Male	Female
Less than 6 months	41,795	9,489
6 to 12 months	22,173	5,298
1 to 2 years	19,965	6,377
Over 2 years	69,167	23,027

83. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a statement on job losses in the east midlands in recent months.

Mr. Nicholls: There are no figures for job losses and job gains, but latest estimates show that the civilian work force in employment has risen by 34,000 over the year to September 1989. Estimates for the last year are as follows:

Civilian work force in employment in east midlands region unadjusted for seasonal variation

	Thousands
September 1988	1,777
December 1988	1,778
March 1989	1,782
June 1989	1,793
September 1989	1,810
Change September 1988 to September 1989	34
	per cent.
Percentage change September 1988 to September 1989	1·9

69. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many individuals are working in two jobs and are thus counted twice in the employment totals.

Mr. Nicholls: Evidence on the number of people with two jobs can be derived from the labour force survey (LFS), which estimated that 567,000, 2·6 per cent., employees in Great Britain had a second job as an employee in spring 1988.

However, the exact number of persons with two or more jobs included in the published employees in employment estimates is not known, since the estimates are based on figures collected from employers, who will not generally know if an employee is filling the post as a second job.

66. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest available unemployment rate for under-18s in the Holloway travel-to-work area.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available in the form requested.

53. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a statement regarding the current level of unemployment in the city of Sheffield.

Mr. Nicholls: In December 1989 there were 23,347 unemployed claimants in the local authority area of Sheffield, a fall of 47·7 per cent. since unemployment in Sheffield began on a downward trend in July 1986.

52. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by how much unemployment has fallen in Cumbria since June 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Between June 1987 and December 1989 the number of unemployed claimants in the local authority area of Cumbria fell by 8,192 or 42·3 per cent. The comparison is affected by the change in the coverage of the count from September 1988 due to the new benefit regulations affecting those aged under 18.

50. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the growth in jobs in Warwickshire since 1987.

Mr. Nicholls: It is not possible to give an estimate. The Department's statistics for the county monitor only net changes in employment between census of employment dates, and the most recent figures are for September 1987.

47. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest unemployment figure for the constituency of Liverpool, Riverside.

Mr. Nicholls: In December 1989, the number of unemployed claimants in the parliamentary constituency of Liverpool, Riverside was 7,425.

48. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the change in unemployment in the last year.

Mr. Nicholls: In the 12 months to December 1989 the level of unemployment, seasonally adjusted, in the United Kingdom fell by 402,500 or 20 per cent.

37. Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the fall in unemployment in the north-west from its peak to date.

Mr. Nicholls: In December 1989 the level of seasonally adjusted unemployment in the north-west region was 237,700, a fall of 189,700 or 44·4 per cent. since its peak in June 1986.

35. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the number and percentage of young people aged 16 to 20 years entering employment without training in Germany, Japan, the United States of America, Sweden and the United Kingdom for the most recent date for which information is available.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available in the form requested.

Employment Training

25. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a statement regarding the availability of places on employment training schemes for people recently made redundant.

Mr. Nicholls: In certain circumstances redundant workers can have immediate access to employment training without satisfying the normal six months unemployed condition. The main examples are people wishing to train in locally identified skill shortage occupations; those wishing to train in business start-up or enterprise training; people who require training in English as a second language; and people with disabilities.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if will give (a) the total numbers of lone parents on employment training receiving financial assistance towards child care costs and (b) the total expenditure involved between September 1988 and December 1989 for each standard region, Wales, Scotland and Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The estimated proportions of trainees receiving child care allowances at the end of December 1989, the latest date for which information is available, are given in table 1. As a guide, the in-training figure for 15 December 1989 has been provided for each region.

The total expenditure on child care payments between September 1988 and December 1989 is shown in table 2.

The information requested is not collected by standard region; the figures quoted are for Training Agency regions and Scotland and Wales.

Table 1
Employment training trainees in receipt of childcare allowances

Region	Per cent.[1]	Number[2]
South East	5	14,600
London	4	21,400
South West	3	12,200
West Midlands	4	23,100
East Midlands and Eastern	3	16,900
Yorkshire and Humberside	2	25,500
North West	3	29,200
Northern	2	24,600

Great Britain	11·770

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of training managers for employment training in (a) the private sector employer, (b) local authorities, (c) voluntary organisations and (d) private training organisations in December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The total number of training managers participating in employment training at the latest available date is as follows:

	Number
(a) Private sector employers	201
(b) Local authorities	195
(c) Voluntary organisations	366
(d) Private training organisations	507

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total amount of employment training allowance paid in each of the months April 1989 to December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The following table shows the total amount of recorded expenditure in employment training (ET) trainee allowances (excluding travel, childcare and other allowances) in the months April 1989 to December for Great Britain.

1989	£ Millions
April	[1]Nil
May	45·639
June	[2]1·663
July	73·259
August	45·730
September	49·332
October	42·169
November	46·540
December	47·094

[1] Other than for the final month of a financial year, expenditure on ET trainee allowances is normally recorded in the month following the period of training concerned.
[2] There was a delay in recording expenditure on trainee allowances in June 1989.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the employment training initiatives sponsored by his Department in Essex.

Mr. Nicholls: Employment training in Essex continues to play an important part in helping the unemployed obtain the skills and experience they need to get jobs and some 2,200 people are currently taking advantage of it.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's follow-up survey of employment training by region; and how many people who have proceeded through the scheme now have full-time employment.

Mr. Nicholls: The first results from the exercise to follow up all employment training leavers indicates that 58 per cent. of all those trainees completing their planned training enter employment, self-employment or full-time training or further education. Information at a regional level is not yet available.

85. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the procedure currently being deployed by his Department to monitor expenditure on employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department monitors closely the level of expenditure on employment training through its financial management and accounting system. It also operates a system of financial appraisal and monitoring for all organisations contracted to deliver employment training, to ensure that public money is properly protected and spent for the purposes intended.

73. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many trainees entered permanent employment immediately after leaving employment training in the period January to December 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available.

64. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was (a) the target for employment training places and (b) the number of filled places in the period from January to December 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: Targets for the number of employment training places are for internal management purposes only. The number of filled places on employment training increased from 111,000 to over 210,000 in the period January to December 1989.

40. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average length of time trainees spend on employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: Trainees spend an average of about six months on employment training.

Training and Enterprise Councils

26. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training and enterprise councils he anticipates giving approval to so that they will become fully operational on 2 April.

Mr. Eggar: A number of training and enterprise councils (TECs) will shortly be submitting their corporate and business plans for approval. The national training task force will consider these plans and will be making its recommendation to me.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest number of training and enterprise council groups awarded development funding.

Mr. Eggar: I have been very encouraged by the excellent response from employers throughout the country since we issued the invitation to form training and enterprise councils. Applications for development funding from 55 groups of senior employers from around the country have been approved. The table lists the areas which have received development funding.

List of TECs awarded development funding

1. South East
   - Essex
   - Hampshire
   - Heart of England (Oxfordshire)
   - Hertfordshire
   - Isle of Wight
   - Kent
   - Milton Keynes
   - Thames Valley

2. London
   - AZTEC (Kingston/Merton)

3. South West
   - Avon
   - Devon/Cornwall
   - Dorset
   - Gloucestershire
   - Somerset

4. West Midlands
   - Birmingham
   - Coventry/Warwickshire
   - Dudley
   - Sandwell
   - Staffordshire
   - Walsall
   - Wolverhampton

5. East Midlands and Eastern
   - Central and South Cambridgeshire
   - Greater Peterborough
   - Norfolk/Waveney
   - Northamptonshire
   - North Nottinghamshire
   - Suffolk

6. Yorkshire and Humberside
   - Barnsley/Doncaster
   - Calderdale/Kirklees
   - Leeds
   - North Yorkshire
   - Rotherham
   - Sheffield
   - Wakefield

7. North West
   - Bolton/Bury
   - Cumbria
   - East Lancashire
   - Manchester
   - Oldham
   - Rochdale
   - South and East Cheshire
   - St. Helens
   - Stockport/High Peak
   - Wigan

8. Northern
   - County Durham
   - Northumberland
   - Teeside
   - Tyneside
   - Wearside

9. Wales
   - Gwent
   - Mid Glamorgan
   - North East Wales
   - North West Wales
   - South Glamorgan
   - West Wales

77. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what will be the typical budget of a training and enterprise council.

Mr. Eggar: The budget for each training and enterprise council (TEC) will be negotiated locally and will vary according to the size of its area. Budgets will range from around £5 million to around £35 million per annum.

75. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will report on the progress of the training and enterprise council network.

Mr. Eggar: I have been very encouraged by the excellent response from employers throughout the country since we issued the invitation to form training and enterprise councils.

We expect to have a complete network of training and enterprise councils throughout England and Wales by the end of the year.

71. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training and enterprise councils have now been awarded development funding.

Mr. Eggar: I have been very encouraged by the excellent response from employers throughout the country since we issued the invitation to form training and enterprise councils. Applications for development funding from 55 groups of senior employers from around the country have been approved.

68. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements he is making to ensure that the training and enterprise councils are able to recognise a need in respect of the disabled which spreads beyond the immediate territory within which they will be operating.

Mr. Eggar: Training and enterprise councils (TECs) will set out their training proposals in their business plan. My Department will want to be satisfied that these proposals meet the training needs of all individuals in their local community, including people with disabilities, and encompass access to training outside the TEC's immediate locality where appropriate.

59. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects the first training and enterprise council to be operational.

Mr. Eggar: I expect the first training and enterprise councils to be operational in the spring.

28. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total sum of money for which training and enterprise councils will have executive responsibility.

Mr. Eggar: As TECs become operational they will assume responsibility for the vast majority of expenditure which is currently managed by the Training Agency. This amounts to around £2·5 billion in 1990-91.

Small Firms Service

27. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many requests for advice and information have now been received by his Department's small firms service.

Mr. Eggar: In 1989 the small firms service in England handled 314,625 inquiries and provided 50,013 counselling sessions.

Training

29. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the numbers of employees receiving training in Britain.

Mr. Nicholls: A recent survey of employers estimated that 8·6 million employees received training through their employers in 1986-87. The survey excluded the armed forces, agriculture, and firms with fewer than 10 employees.

More recent figures from the labour force survey show that in the spring of 1988 2·8 million employees received job-related training in the four weeks prior to the survey.

30 Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number and percentage of employees receiving training in the four-week period prior to the labour force survey in 1988.

Mr. Nicholls: A total of 2,773,000 employees of working age received job-related training in Great Britain in the four-week period prior to the labour force survey in 1988. This is 13·3 per cent. of all employees of working age.

34. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on training provisions available to the unemployed.

Mr. Nicholls: The Government make training available for young people aged between 16 and 18 who are not in full-time education or employment through YTS. Employment Training (ET) is available primarily for adults aged over 18 and under 60 who have been continuously unemployed for at least 26 weeks. It is also open to certain special groups who do not need to satisfy the 26 weeks' unemployment criterion.

Currently there are 386,000 YTS trainees and 207,000 ET trainees.

32. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the amount of expenditure on employer-based training as a percentage of gross domestic product in Germany, Japan, the United States of America, and Sweden and the United Kingdom for the most recent date for which information is available.

Mr. Nicholls: It is estimated that employers in Great Britain spent £18 billion in 1986-87 on training their work force. This is equivalent to 4·6 per cent. of gross domestic product.

Comparable figures are not available for the other countries listed.

Training Agents

31. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the total number of training agents who have (a) had their contracts terminated and (b) gone into receivership between January and December 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: Between January and December 1989, three training agents had their contracts terminated by the Employment Department Training Agency and none has gone into receivership.

Disabled People

33. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to improve employment services for disabled people.

Mr. Eggar: This Department's general employment services are designed to help meet the needs of as many people with disabilities as possible. They are supplemented as necessary by a range of provision specifically for people with disabilities including sheltered employment for those with severe disabilities. These services are the subject of a review, the results of which will be made available as soon as possible.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what criteria are used when issuing quota exemption permits under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944.

Mr. Eggar: Disablement resettlement officers are instructed to consider the availability of suitable registered disabled people, and the degree of commitment shown by employers towards meeting their obligations under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he intends to take to ensure that firms not meeting their quota obligations without permits meet their obligations under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944.

Mr. Eggar: This Department will continue to pursue a policy of education and persuasion designed to improve the policies and practices of employers in relation to the employment of people with disabilities. This includes advising them of their obligations under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act, and using the Department's wide range of services for the recruitment and retention of people with disabilities to help them meet those obligations.

Wages

36. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what monitoring his Department undertakes of wage levels for jobs being advertised at jobcentres.

Mr. Eggar: Jobcentres have a responsibility to check that employers notifying vacancies are complying with any relevant wages council orders. They also advise employers on locally prevailing rates of pay.

41. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of male and female manual workers earned less than £150 a week in earnings during (a) 1987, (b) 1988 and (c) 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The information for full-time adult employees in Great Britain is published in table 1 of part A of the new earnings survey reports for each of the years, and in table 124 of part E of the same reports for full-time employees of all ages. Copies of the reports are in the Library.

Japanese Enterprises

38. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many jobs have been created in Japanese industrial and commercial enterprises which have chosen to locate their main European research and development centres in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: Our figures on jobs created by Japanese concerns in the United Kingdom do not differentiate between manufacturing jobs and those in research and development. However, it is estimated that to date 36,000 jobs have been created by the 117 Japanese companies which have chosen to locate here.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report the number of employees working in the United Kingdom who are citizens of the empire of Japan; and how many United Kingdom citizens are employed in companies resident in the United Kingdom owned by commercial interests resident in the empire of Japan.

Mr. Nicholls: Data on the number of employees in the United Kingdom whose nationality is Japanese are not available.

The Department of Trade and Industry's Invest in Britain Bureau advises that there are 117 Japanese manufacturing companies known to be either currently operating in the United Kingdom or having announced a formal intention to operate. In total, it is estimated that these firms have created or will create some 36,000 jobs.

Social Charter

39. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions he has had with trade unions in the United Kingdom as to their views on the EEC social charter and employment opportunities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have received no representations from the trade unions on the social charter.

Fairground Inspection

42. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on progress on harmonisation of inspection rules for fairground equipment throughout the European Community.

Mr. Nicholls: The European Commission is currently preparing a proposal for a directive concerning trade in fairground equipment. The work is at an early stage but it seems likely that the proposal will cover the design, manufacture and initial testing of fairground equipment. It may also cover the installation and erection of fairground equipment as well as the systems of examination and testing which should be used. European Commission staff have indicated that a proposal for such a directive will be submitted to the Council of Ministers within about 12 months.

In anticipation of this directive, CEN (the European standards making organisation) has established a technical committee to prepare harmonised European standards for fairground equipment. These technical standards would support the directive by showing how its requirements could be met.

Farms

43. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many visits to farms have been made by inspectors of the Health and Safety Executive in the last year; and how many inspectors exist for this task.

Mr. Nicholls: In the financial year ended 31 March 1989, 37,274 visits to farm premises (including horticulture and agricultural contractors) were made by Health and Safety Executive inspectors; on 1 January 1990, 149 inspectors were employed in the agricultural inspectorate field force for this purpose.

Trade Unions (Transfer of Membership)

44. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he is planning to permit greater choice for trade unionists in transferring membership between unions.

Mr. Nicholls: None. This is entirely a matter for trade unions and their members.

Skills Shortages

45. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps his Department is taking to help tackle the problems of skills shortages among firms in the south-east.

Mr. Nicholls: It is for firms in the south-east, as elsewhere, to anticipate their future needs for skills and to deal with any existing shortfalls. In this they will wish to take full account of the challenges set by demographic trends, new technologies and international competition; and draw on the underused talents of unemployed people, women, ethnic minorities, older workers and people with disabilities.

The Government for their part have introduced a number of measures to help employers including the establishment of training and enterprise councils and launch of business growth training. We are also assisting young people and the unemployed to gain new skills through youth training (YT) and employment training (ET).

Job Creation

46. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met local authority representatives to discuss job creation.

Mr. Eggar: Neither my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State nor I have held meetings with local authority representatives to discuss job creation.

Training and Vocational Education Initiative

49. Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures he is taking to ensure that TVEI equipment in schools is kept modern and in good working order; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: TVEI is a development programme helping young people gain the skills required in the work force. Education authorities are given a fixed sum to deliver the TVEI programme, only a small proportion of which is normally spent on equipment.

TVEI was not designed to be a continuing source of funds. As TVEI becomes embedded into the learning experience, education authorities are expected to fund any further developments from within their existing resources.

European Commissioner for Employment

51. Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met the European Commissioner for Employment; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Howard: I met Mrs. Papandreou on 22 January 1990 when we discussed a range of employment issues.

Self-employment

54. Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently self-employed; and what was the figure in June 1979.

Mr. Nicholls: The number of people in self-employment in the United Kingdom in September 1989, the latest figure available, is 3,141,000. The estimate for June 1979 was 1,906,000. This shows an increase of 1,235,000.

78. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many self-employed people there are in Greater London; and how many there were in 1979.

Mr. Nicholls: Estimates for Greater London are not available for 1979. The available estimates of self-employed are as follows:

Self-employed in Greater London
Unadjusted for seasonal variation

Date	Thousands
September 1981	274
September 1989	415
Change September 1981-September 1989	141
Percentage change September 1981-September 1989	51·2 per cent.

Job Clubs

55. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people have received assistance through job clubs.

Mr. Eggar: Since the job club programme started in November 1984, over 365,000 people have received assistance. Of these over 200,000 have gone directly into jobs and over 52,000 have taken up some other options such as training, self-employment or further education.

80. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if job clubs are to become one of the conditions in the actively seeking work regulations implementing the Social Security Act 1989.

Mr. Eggar: For claimants to be regarded as seeking work actively, they must take reasonable steps to seek work in each week for which they claim. Active membership of a job club is a way of satisfying the new conditions and a good way of finding a job. Latest figures show that 69 per cent. of job club leavers go into a job, self-employment, further education or training. Membership is voluntary and the new legislation does not mean that claimants are required to join job clubs.

79. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will review the range of facilities available to users of job clubs in the more remote areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Members of job clubs in the more remote areas have available the full range of facilities available at other job clubs. These include payment of fares to attend job club. Additionally, an open learning package is provided to help members who cannot attend as often as is usual. The adequacy of facilities is kept under review.

The employment service seeks to provide access to job clubs for long-term unemployed people living in rural areas wherever possible. A further extension of the service occurred on 12 February 1990 with the opening of Portree job club on the Isle of Skye.

Creches

56. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the provision of workplace creches by employers throughout Britain.

Mr. Nicholls: Comprehensive information on the extent of provision of workplace creches by employers throughout Britain is not available. Figures in the "IMS Manpower Commentary No. 43, Retaining women employees" indicate that the percentage of organisations currently providing such facilities is small, only about 3 per cent. However, indications are that the provision of workplace creches by employers is growing.

Workplace creches can be successful but are only one possible way of helping parents with child care and are not necessarily the most appropriate in all cases. Other possibilities include help with child care costs in the local home area and rearrangement of working hours and holidays to fit in with school hours and terms.

Blacklisting

60. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to make blacklisting unlawful.

Mr. Nicholls: No.

Employment Service

61. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will report on the progress of the plan to launch the employment service as an executive agency.

Mr. Nicholls: As my right hon. Friend the Member for Sutton Coldfield (Sir N. Fowler) announced on 1 December 1989, Official Report col 461, the employment service will be launched as an executive agency on 2 April. The framework document and annual performance agreement will be published and made available to hon. Members then.

Tourism

62. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many self-employed people are currently employed in the tourism industry.

Mr. Nicholls: The latest available estimate from the labour force survey indicates that there were 204,000 self-employed workers in tourism-related industries in spring 1988, 4,000 more than in spring 1987.

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the total international tourism revenue figures for the United Kingdom for each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The table gives the earnings from overseas visitors to the United Kingdom for each of the last 10 complete years plus the current year to date, at current prices.

Year	Earnings (£ millions)
1980	2,961
1981	2,970
1982	3,188
1983	4,003
1984	4,614
1985	5,442
1986	5,553
1987	6,260
1988	6,193
[1]1989	6,285

[1]To November.

72. Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what the United Kingdom currently earns from international tourism; and what information he has on which countries earn more from international tourism than the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholls: It is estimated that overseas residents spent £6·2 billion in the United Kingdom in 1988. In 1987 the United Kingdom was ranked 5th in terms of international tourism receipts after the United States of America, Spain, Italy and France.

70. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the change in the number of jobs in the tourism industry in the 10 years to 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: Between September 1979 and September 1989, the estimated number of employees in employment in tourism-related industries in Great Britain rose by 216,000 to 1,374,000. In addition, it is estimated from the labour force survey that there were 204,000 self-employed workers in tourism-related industries in spring 1988, 41,000 more than in spring 1981.

67. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total value of expenditure in the United Kingdom by overseas visitors in 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: It is provisionally estimated that overseas residents spent £6,285 million in the United Kingdom during the first 11 months of 1989, the latest period for which results are available. This is 9 per cent. higher than in the equivalent period of 1988.

Inner Cities

63. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he intends to take to create employment opportunities for the inner city jobless men, women and youth.

Mr. Eggar: My Department will continue to place high priority on the encouragement of enterprise and new and existing businesses in the inner city, and on helping inner city residents improve their skills and qualifications for work. The Department operates a wide range of national but flexible programmes and services directly relevant to these aims, as well as special measures for inner city areas such as schools-industry compacts and the pilot job interview guarantee scheme.

The fact that unemployment in the 57 urban programme areas in England has fallen by over a third since March 1988 demonstrates the effectiveness of this approach, which is pursued in partnership and close collaboration with other Departments and agencies working to improve inner city conditions and economic prospects.

Economic League

65. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met the organisers of the Economic League; and what matters were discussed.

58. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met any member of the board of the Economic League; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. and learned Friend has not met the organisers of the Economic League.

Closed Shop

74. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employees are currently employed in workplaces with a closed shop.

Mr. Nicholls: The Green Paper "Removing Barriers to Employment", which was published in March last year, estimated that around 2·6 million people are employed in jobs which are covered by all forms of the closed shop. This estimate was derived from a specially commissioned survey carried out between 22 February and 6 March 1989, a summary of which has been placed in the Library.

Health and Safety

76. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current number of directives under consideration which require subordinate legislation on employment matters involving health and safety; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Four directives recently adopted under article 118A (Health and Safety of Workers), and a further four draft such directives currently before the Council of Ministers are expected to require implementing legislation. The intention is to implement mainly by regulations under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974, and in line with the regulatory philosophy of the Act. For those directives still in draft the present assessment is of course subject to final decisions on content. Implementation proposals will be published by the Health and Safety Commission for consultation in due course.

82. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. and learned Friend met the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission on 31 January when a range of matters relating to the responsibilities of the Health and Safety Commission and Executive were discussed.

Jobcentres

84. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of employees in jobcentres in Britain in 1979 and 1989.

Mr. Eggar: The gross numbers of staff employed in jobcentres as at 1 April 1979 and 31 December 1989 were 11,397 and 7,598 respectively.

No direct comparison can be drawn between the numbers of staff employed in jobcentres in Britain in 1979 and 1989, since a number of functions which would have been reflected in the 1979 figures are no longer carried out in jobcentres.

The 1989 figure does not include 4,781 counselling staff who work in unemployment benefit offices and other employment service premises.

YTS

86. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will examine the YTS run by Cleveland county council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Currently, Cleveland county council provides about 1,300 YTS places for a wide range of young people. Two thirds of those leaving the scheme either gain employment or go on to further training.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mr. Eggar: All staff employed by the Employment Department Group have a responsibility to safeguard cash and assets from misappropriation and theft. There are 34 auditors and 15 accountants who are specialised in their fields.

Labour Costs

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what labour costs were as a percentage per unit of output in manufacturing, by region, in the United Kingdom in 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: Regional data on manufacturing output are not available.

London Borough of Newham

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the reasons for the decline in unemployment in London being slowest in the London borough of Newham.

Mr. Nicholls: In the period December 1987 to December 1989 unemployment in Newham fell by 28·3 per cent. The two London labour market studies commissioned by my Department have included Newham. In addition to the normal range of training and employment measures available in Newham as elsewhere there are a number of special projects in Newham to help local people into employment.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 14 February 1990

ENVIRONMENT

Dog Registration

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many local authorities and organisations representing local authorities, responding to the paper "Action on Dogs", were in favour of registration as a means of tackling the stray dogs problem;

(2) how many responses were received from local authorities, and organisations representing local authorities, to the Government's consultation paper "Action on Dogs".

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Out of 462 local authorities and organisations known to represent them, 247 responded to our consultation paper and 207 of those who responded supported a dog registration scheme of some kind.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps have been taken to assess the dog registration scheme in Northern Ireland with a view to applying that scheme in the rest of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My officials have made contact with officials in the Department of Agriculture, Northern Ireland, with a view to discussing with them their experience of the operation of the various dog control provisions in force in Northern Ireland, and in particular the enforcement of the requirement for dogs to wear identification tags. We believe that the enforcement of this existing requirement would be more effective than an elaborate registration scheme in solving the problems caused by irresponsible dog owners. Officials from my Department will be visiting Northern Ireland shortly for this purpose.

Toxic Waste Tips

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the danger posed by toxic waste tips to drinking water supplies and on current filling and safety regulations in respect of toxic tips; and what plans he has to amend these regulations in the future.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are a range of statutory controls which provide effective protection of drinking water supplies. First, there is a requirement for waste disposal authorities—in considering applications for disposal licences made under the Control of Pollution Act 1974—to have regard to possible risks of water pollution, and to consult with the National Rivers Authority. Under provisions in the current Environmental Protection Bill, we propose to strengthen and extend the licensing controls. Secondly, under the Water Act 1989, water undertakings are under a statutory duty to supply wholesome water, and it is an offence to supply water which is unfit for human consumption. Thirdly, we have recently announced the formation of a new drinking water inspectorate whose job it will be to check that supplies meet the standards defined in the new water quality regulations. Fourthly, the NRA also have extensive programmes for monitoring the quality of ground and surface waters. Consequently, we now have a strong set of safeguards for drinking water supplies and I have no plans to amend the basic system of controls in this area.

Council Properties, Bolton

Mr. Thursham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council-owned properties in the Bolton metropolitan borough area were renovated in 1989 and during each of the last 10 years; and what was the amount of Government grants given in respect of this work during the same period.

Mr. Chope: The number of renovations completed on local authority-owned dwellings in England appears in "Local Housing Statistics" [volumes 55 (table 9), 58 (table 7) and table 4 of volumes 65, 69, 73, 77, 81, 85, 89, 90 and 91 (first half 1989)].

Copies are available in the Library.

The cost of renovation works undertaken by a council is included in the calculation of its entitlement to main housing subsidy. Bolton received £3,070,669 in subsidy in 1981-82 and £126,447 in 1982-83. It has since been out of subsidy.

Bed-and-breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures for the number of people living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation.

Mr. Chope: Latest estimates of households temporarily resident in bed-and-breakfast accommodation appear in table 4(a) of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the third quarter 1989. Supplementary Tables", which is in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates he has made of the percentage of persons listed on community charge registers who will fail to pay the charge in 1990-91 for English shire counties; and what guidance he has issued to local authorities as to the estimates they should make for default when deciding on the amount of charge to meet their planned expenditure.

Mr. Chope: The Department has made no estimates of the proportion of charge payers who may fail to pay community charges and sees no need to offer advice on this to charging authorities. We have issued practice notes on steps that charging authorities may take to minimise arrears, and more flexible instalment regimes and improved powers of enforcement should improve authorities' ability to obtain arrears compared with that under the domestic rating system.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the totals of spending in 1990-91 by (a) Somerset county council and (b) Taunton

Deane borough council assumed for the purposes of his calculations of illustrative combined capital value rates and local income tax published on 6 November 1989.

Mr. Chope: The assumed spending was the same as that used for the provisional assumed charges also published on 6 November.

The assumed spending figures for 1990-91 were:

	£ million
Somerset county council	222·367
Taunton Deane borough council	4·306

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East on 6 February, Official Report, columns 582-83, if he will list all departmental circulars, excluding practice notes, issued by his Department in connection with the community charge, giving in each case, the date of issue and an outline of the contents; and if he will indicate whether copies of such have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 13 February 1990]: No numbered departmental circulars have been issued about the community charge. A number of letters have been sent to all charging authorities. These are as follows:

Date of issue	Contents
1988
25 July	Community charge costs: Price Waterhouse study
5 August	Local Government Finance Act
15 December	Community charge regulations: Valuation and Community Charge Tribunals
16 December	Community charge preparation costs
1989
31 January	Community charge students regulations
31 January	Implementation of the community charge
28 February	Community charge implementation and minority language translations
17 March	Implementation of rates reform
3 May	Implementation of the community charge and NNDR: questionnaire
5 May	Leaflet: "The community charge (the so-called Poll Tax): how it will work for you"
5 May	Payment of specific grant for community charge
10 May	United Kingdom service personnel
10 August	Community charge registration and data protection
18 September	Amendments to practice notes
11 October	Safety net and transitional relief
13 October	Payment of specific grant for community charge preparation
20 October	Community charge transitional relief
20 October	Community charge bill
26 October	Amendments to practice notes
3 November	Exemption for those severely mentally impaired
9 November	Community charge transitional relief
16 November	Local Government and Housing Act 1989: amendments to Local Government Finance Act
22 November	Transitional relief scheme—details
15 December	Community charge bill—details
28 December	Community charge: amendments to practice notes
1990
10 January	Community charge transitional relief regulations
9 February	Designation of Ministry of Defence Establishments

Details of those letters amending practice notes are placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will provide comparable figures to his November estimate of the amount of poll tax payable in 1990-91 per adult as against rates for each region and each metropolitan area and county council.

Mr. Chope: The information requested has been placed in the Library. The figures are consistent with the assumed charges published on 11 January.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he proposes to use to charge-cap those authorities whose proposed community charge is unacceptably high; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I have nothing to add to the answer which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol North-West (Mr. Stern) on 17 January, Official Report, columns 252-3.

Rural Housing

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received over the shortage of council houses in rural areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend receives representations from time to time from hon. Members' interest groups and members of the public. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery) on 13 December 1989, Official Report, column 711.

Hazardous Wastes

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on control of the transfrontier shipment of hazardous wastes.

Mr. Trippier: Government policy is to encourage international action to reduce transfrontier shipment of hazardous waste for disposal to the environmentally justified minimum and to monitor and control effectively, those movements that are necessary. These objectives are being pursued in discussions with the European Community, OECD and UNEP and through the provisions of national legislation.

Waste Dumps

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in Northumberland the location of mine shafts currently in use as dumps for waste or special waste.

Mr. Trippier: My Department has no record of any mine shafts currently in use in Northumberland for the disposal of controlled waste.

Water Supplies

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the number of poison dumps which threaten water supplies; and what assessment he has made of the danger posed by such dumps to water supplies within the Newcastle-under-Lyme constituency.

Mr. Trippier: These are matters for waste disposal authorities. They are required to operate disposal licensing controls under the Control of Pollution Act 1974, acting in consultation with what is now the National Rivers Authority, in order to prevent risks of water pollution. Under provisions in the Environmental Protection Bill, waste regulation authorities will also be required to inspect and monitor closed landfill sites.

The recently publicised 1974 survey was a desk assessment to assist the relevant authorities in carrying out their statutory responsibilities. Since then, the Department has had an active research programme into the behaviour and characteristics of landfill sites, the results of which have been reflected in a series of waste management papers issued by the Department.

Council Contracts

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to prevent councils from avoiding competition by submitting contracts to tender in a way guaranteed to favour their own work force.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Department investigates all complaints of anti-competitive practices by local authorities on their merits. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has powers of sanction under sections 19A and 19B of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 and sections 13 and 14 of the Local Government Act 1988 and will use them where necessary. To date, notices under section 19A of the 1980 Act have been served on the metropolitan borough of Wirral and the London borough of Brent. A direction was subsequently given to the metropolitan borough of Wirral under section 19B of that Act. Notices under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988 have been served on five local authorities—the London borough of Hillingdon, Bristol city council, Wolverhampton metropolitan borough council, Knowsley metropolitan borough council and Charnwood borough council. My right hon. Friend is currently considering responses received from these authorities.

Homelessness

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures of acceptances of homeless households by local authorities in England and Wales.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Latest estimates of households accepted as homeless in England appear in table 1(a) of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the third quarter 1989. Supplementary Tables", which is in the Library.

For information about Wales, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Pollution

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to help Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and local authorities recover the costs of regulating pollution.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Mr. Evans), on Tuesday 30 January 1990, Official Report, columns 173-74.

Right to Buy

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to extend the right to buy to all tenants of non-resident landlords.

Mr. Chope: No.

Lambeth

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what loss of income will accrue to Lambeth council when uniform business rates are not paid within the year to which demands relate.

Mr. Chope: Under the Non-Domestic Rating Contributions (England) Regulations 1989 (SI 2435), charging authorities in inner London, in calculating their provisional contributions to the national non-domestic rating pool, may deduct an allowance for possible losses of 0·45 per cent. of their estimated rate yield for the year. The regulations provide for all losses to be offset against contributions to the pool at outturn stage, subject to audit. Provision may be made at outturn stage for amounts which may have to be written off, again subject to audit. These arrangements were agreed by the local authority associations.

Revenue Support Grant, Northamptonshire

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 1990-91 revenue support grant entitlement per head of population, before safety net adjustments, for each borough and district council in Northamptonshire, in descending order of magnitude.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is shown in the table:

1990-91 Revenue support grant per adult before safety net adjustments

Area	RSG before safety net (£ adult)
Northampton	239
Corby	233
Wellingborough	223
Kettering	222
Daventry	213
East Northamptonshire	212
South Northamptonshire	204

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has considered the issue of liability in respect of damage caused to the environment as a result of the release of a genetically engineered organism.

Mr. Trippier: Part VI of the Environmental Protection Bill refers to the setting up of a statutory control system for genetically modified (engineered) organisms, making provision for criminal offences in the case of breach, including the general duties for preventing damage to the environment. Express provisions relating to civil liability are not included. However, Lord Lewis, chairman of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, referred to the question of strict civil liability in his letter to the Secretary of State of 6 February. I am considering the position further.

Derbyshire County Council

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1981 the expenditure of Derbyshire county council in (a) cash terms, (b) constant price terms and (c) cash terms per head of population.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Net current expenditure—Derbyshire county council

	Cash terms	Real terms—1981-82 prices	Cash terms per head
	£ million	£ million[1]	£[2]
1981-82	268·0	268·0	294
1982-83	296·8	276·8	326
1983-84	313·3	279·2	344
1984-85	365·9	310·6	401

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1981 the staffing levels of Derbyshire county council (a) full time, (b) part time and (c) in total.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Derbyshire county council: All services at June

	Full-time	Part-time	Total
1981	20,517	17,891	38,408
1982	20,217	18,455	38,672
1983	20,765	18,342	39,107
1984	20,817	18,764	39,581
1985	20,764	19,252	40,016
1986	20,903	21,234	42,137
1987	21,412	23,501	44,913
1988	22,569	25,081	47,650
1989	22,712	23,593	46,305

Planning Appeals

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authority planning decisions were overruled by his Department in 1989.

Mr. Moynihan: The figure is 7,681. This amounts to less than 2 per cent. of all planning decisions.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) for what type of Property Services Agency the Thesis computer system has been designed;

(2) what is the projected cost of equipping the Property Services Agency with the Thesis computer system.

Mr. Chope: The Thesis system is designed to provide IT support to PSA's maintenance management and associated operations throughout the United Kingdom. The equipment is estimated to cost £12·8 million over the next two years. The system is reviewed periodically against PSA's changing requirements. A review is now in progress in the light of PSA's transition to a commercial organisation and subsequent privatisation.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the discussions between representatives of the United States air force and the Property Services Agency about the implications for the United States air force of Property Services Agency privatisation.

Mr. Chope: Talks are continuing, and I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 21 December 1989, Official Report, column 436.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the time it is expected to take for the Property Services Agency to move from vote accounting to full commercial accounting in a trading fund.

Mr. Chope: It is planned to introduce full commercial accounts with effect from 1 April 1991. So long as the PSA remains a Government Department, it will retain vote accounts in parallel. There are no plans to establish PSA as a trading fund.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many grades 6 and above were working in the Crown Suppliers on 1 February 1988, 1989 and 1990.

Mr. Chope: At 1 February 1988, there were eight grade 6 staff; four grade 5 staff and one grade 3. At 1 February 1989, there were eight grade 6 staff; three grade 5 staff and one grade 3. At 1 February 1990, there were six grade 6 staff; five grade 5 and one grade 3.

Waste Sites (West Sussex)

Mr. Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the environment what action his Department is taking to deal with the West Sussex toxic and domestic waste sites posing some risk to water in his Department's list of landfill sites in England and Wales.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The 1973-74 survey, featured in a recent newspaper article, was a desk assessment of possible risks to assist statutory authorities in controlling and monitoring waste disposal sites under public health legislation and, subsequently, the licensing requirements of the Control of Pollution Act 1974. The information was made available to the appropriate authorities at the time.

Since then, West Sussex county council and the Southern water authority will have monitored waste disposal sites and ground and surface waters in their areas in accordance with their responsibilities under the Water Act 1973 and the Control of Pollution Act 1974, which include powers to take action over pollution where this occurs.

Detailed, up-to-date information is not held centrally on the location of waste disposal sites and safeguards taken. Under the Water Act 1989, the National Rivers Authority now has responsibility for monitoring ground and surface waters and is currently reviewing the scope of these programmes. We are providing it with the list of sites identified in the 1973-74 survey for possible reference purposes.

SSAs, Yorkshire

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the reasons for the variations in the standard spending assessment between the Harrogate borough council on a per capita basis, York city council and Scarborough borough council.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The standard spending assessments for these three authorities have been calculated in accordance with the formulae set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England). The table gives details for the three authorities of the amount of SSA in £/adult which is attributable to each of the indicators used to calculate their SSAs. The indicators are defined in annex A to the distribution report.

Recycled Paper

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider financial measures that would encourage local authorities to use recycled stationery.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 13 February 1990]: Financial measures are not necessary; stationery made from recycled fibre can already fulfil most requirements adequately at a competitive price. It is important for local authorities to consider whether they are over-specifying and demanding a quality of paper that is too good for the purpose. An expert working group set up under the aegis of the recycling forum chaired by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Industry and Consumer Affairs is specifically considering such issues.

Metals (Recycling)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to encourage the recycling of metals.

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

My Department's environmental programme includes a number of initiatives aimed at increasing awareness of the economic and environmental benefits of recycling, and at achieving increases in the levels of United Kingdom domestic and industrial waste now being recycled. The recycling advisory group which I formed last year is currently considering the best means of securing such increases for a range of products and materials, including metal containers, and Warren Spring laboratory has been co-operating with industry on research into techniques to reclaim more metals from the waste stream. My Department has also helped to organise the recycling of metalliferous materials international conference to be held in Birmingham in April.

The Environmental Protection Bill also contains proposals which are intended to increase recycling levels, and it is the Government's intention to publish a White Paper on the environment later this year; this may also have implications for recycling.

Packaging

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the packaging industry about the need for minimum packaging policies to reduce waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

My Department's environmental programme has given priority to waste minimisation issues and the "Cutting Your Losses" brochure published last year emphasised the importance of reducing waste in all industrial sectors, including the packaging industry. We are now organising a design for the environment conference at the national exhibition centre on 28 March; this will consider environmental design problems and in particular will examine how products can be redesigned to minimise waste during the manufacturing and packaging process. The conference will act as a springboard for other design-related initiatives to promote awareness in this area. My Department is also of course in frequent touch with the packaging industry on the full range of environmental issues.

Forestry

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many hectares of forest have been planted in each year since 1980.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have been asked to reply.

The information is given in the table. This covers the total new planting undertaken or grant-aided by the Forestry Commission in the years stated, rounded to the nearest 1,000 hectares. It does not include the restocking of woodland after felling.

Year ended 31 March	Total new planting (hectares)
1980	24,000
1981	20,000
1982	23,000
1983	21,000
1984	25,000
1985	21,000
1986	23,000
1987	24,000
1988	29,000
1989	29,000

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Special Educational Needs

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science by what means his Department is monitoring Government policy on the integration of children with special educational needs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The principal means used by the Department are the statistical returns from local education authorities and schools, HMI reports, surveys and research projects. Evaluation studies of the Education Reform Act will also take account of the position of pupils with special educational needs, where appropriate.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, in the light of the findings of Her Majesty's inspector's report on education, he has proposals designed to improve the quality of education available to students with learning disabilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Government announced on 18 December their programme for the local education authority training grants scheme for 1990-91, under which £9·7 million will be devoted to six national priority areas in the field of special needs and issued for consultation on 9 January a draft circular on staffing for pupils with special educational needs, which sets out a number of considerations which local education authorities should take into account in reviewing local provision for these pupils in their areas. These measures will contribute to the achievement of the Government's education reforms which are intended to secure the best possible return from the resources which are invested in the education service and to raise the standards of achievement of all pupils, including those with special educational needs.

GCSE

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has received from schools complaining about the dates of the GCSE examinations in 1989 and 1990.

Mrs. Rumbold: We have received about 25 representations on this issue.

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the first and last dates of GCSE examinations in 1989 and in 1990 together with similar information for GCE O-levels in 1987.

Mrs. Rumbold: In 1989, the first GCSE examination was on 15 May, the last on 23 June. In 1990, the first examination will be on 14 May, the last on 22 June.

In 1987 the GCE O-level examinations of most of the boards ran from the beginning to the end of June.

Since GCSE replaced GCE O-level and CSE, any comparison must also take into account the dates of the CSE examinations: in 1987, these generally ran from the end of April or the beginning of May to mid-June.

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements exist for his Department to make representations to the GCSE examination boards about the dates of examinations.

Mrs. Rumbold: Officials are in regular contact with the examining groups about this issue.

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the policy of his Department about the proportion of the summer term which should be regarded as available for GCSE examinations and the relation of this to the spring bank holiday.

Mrs. Rumbold: The GCSE examining groups are independent bodies, wholly responsible for the administration of their own examinations. Ministers have no powers to intervene directly in their day-to-day affairs. Nevertheless, I am concerned that the examination season should not encroach unnecessarily on the summer term. I am assured that the groups are aware of the anxiety which has been expressed on this issue, and that although it is now too late to change the timetable for 1990, the groups are looking very carefully at the position for 1991 and beyond.

Neurosciences Projects

Mr. Rhodes James: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list for the years 1979-80 and 1989-90 (a) total applications, (b) alpha applications, (c) awards and (d) alpha applications unfunded in Medical Research Council grants to cell systems and neurosciences projects.

Mr. Jackson: The following table lists the figures for academic years 1979-80 and 1988-89. Figures for the academic year 1989-90 are not yet available.

Project grants and year	Neurosciences	Systems	Cell	Total
Total applications
1979-80	272	425	280	977
1988-89	322	380	290	992
Alpha applications
1979-80	147	225	179	551

Project grants and year	Neurosciences	Systems	Cell	Total
1988-89	231	233	207	671

1988-89	121	130	119	370
Alpha applications not funded
1979-80	6	5	4	15
1988-89	110	103	88	301

The Medical Research Council has reduced in recent years the proportion of funds available for short-term awards to universities in order to concentrate on long-term programmes both in universities and Medical Research Council establishments and to meet new problems such as AIDS.

Secondary School Buildings

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has for renovating secondary school buildings, in the light of Her Majesty's inspector's second annual report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Local education authorities are responsible for deciding which building projects to undertake at individual county and voluntary controlled secondary schools, in the light of local needs and circumstances. For 1990-91, £485 million is available in annual capital guidelines for capital expenditure on schools and colleges in England, compared with £352 million under the old system of allocations for 1989-90. Local authorities are free to spend above the level of their annual capital guideline, by using capital receipts as permitted within the flexibilities of the Local Government Acts. In addition, £118 million of grant is available for voluntary aided, special agreement and grant-maintained schools.

Computers

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what estimate he makes of the number of computers per 100 pupils in (a) maintained secondary schools and (b) city technology colleges.

Mr. MacGregor: Four per 100 in maintained secondary schools and 25 per 100 in the city technology colleges established to date, none of which yet has its full complement of pupils.

TRANSPORT

Trains (Punctuality)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will obtain a copy of the year-round survey produced by the Railway Development Society's "Yorkshire Rail Review", which covers express and local trains and records their punctuality; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I have a copy of this report and I have noted its contents.

London Docklands Railway

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the docklands light railway to meet the requirements of the docklands after its extension in 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I have asked the docklands light railway to prepare for my consideration a strategic review of the options for future development following the completion of the City and Beckton extensions, having regard to forecasts of demand and the planned extension of the Jubilee line to docklands.

Cyclists

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations his Department has given to the impact on cyclists of the plans to dual trunk roads; and what steps will be taken to minimise the effects.

Mr. Atkins: In planning new trunk roads and improving existing ones, close attention is paid to the suitability of the route for cyclists and to the design of junctions and other locations where cyclists are known to be at particular risk. Published material is available for the guidance of highway planners and engineers.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further research and publications his Department intends to undertake in 1990 to encourage cycling.

Mr. Atkins: We are pressing ahead with implementation of the remaining aspects of the cycle routes programme of research and application studies.

Research continues into innovatory traffic engineering techniques to help cyclists. Currently, the main projects are concerned with finding further methods of improving safety on roundabouts; refining the use of advance stop lines for cyclists; and identifying a more efficient form of shared use crossing for cyclists and pedestrians.

Our aim in undertaking research and publishing technical guidance on cycling issues is to assist highway authorities and others in efforts to create safer conditions for cyclists.

So far, four local transport notes and 27 traffic advisory leaflets have been produced using the results from our cycling research. Further material on cycling will be published as the results of studies become available.

Woolwich Ferry

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the maximum number of passengers permitted on the Woolwich ferry under existing safety regulations; and what steps are currently taken to ensure that this figure is not exceeded.

Mr. McLoughlin: Each of the three Woolwich ferries is allowed to carry a maximum of 300 passengers. The owner and master have the responsibility for ensuring that this number is not exceeded. Random checks are carried out by the Department's marine surveyors.

Severn Crossing

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has now decided upon the method of financing the proposed second Severn crossing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: No; the decision on whether to use private or public finance will depend on our final evaluation of the tenderers' corresponding proposals.

Mersey Tunnels

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he is in a position to respond to Merseytravel's case for Government financial assistance for the Mersey tunnels.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend has today written to Councillor Ingham of Merseytravel to say that we have considered very carefully the case presented for Government financial assistance for the Mersey tunnels. In that letter, he explained that the merits of the case did not justify Government assistance. Indeed, our examination of the case suggests that the tunnels could become financially self-supporting in a few years' time.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

European Convention

Mr. Allen: To ask the Attorney-General what guidance is issued to English courts in respect of references to the European convention in continuing domestic legislation.

The Attorney-General: It is not appropriate for the Government to issue guidance to the courts on how legislation should be interpreted, and they do not do so.

Land Covenants, Ashworth

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received about relator proceedings on land covenants at Ashworth.

The Attorney-General: The solicitors to the relators in the proceedings against Barratt Manchester Limited and Bolton metropolitan borough council have supplied me with a copy of the judgment of Mr. Justice Scott which is now being considered.

Tax Law

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Attorney-General (1) what discussions he has had with the Law Society concerning the introduction of a fair disclosure pact with the Inland Revenue in tax avoidance cases;

(2) what discussions he has had with representatives of the legal profession concerning the duties of solicitors and members of the Bar in cases of (a) tax avoidance, (b) tax evasion and (c) cases where the Inland Revenue seeks to discover documents to assess the difference between avoidance and evasion.

The Attorney-General: None. The Inland Revenue has statutory powers to require persons, including members of the legal profession to provide information in specified circumstances, where it is relevant to a taxpayer's affairs, except where the position is covered by privilege. In addition, the legal profession has codes of conduct which prevent members assisting clients in any unlawful activity, whether concerned with tax or otherwise.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Favell: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his response to the hon. Member for Norwood (Mr Fraser), Official Report, 12 February, column 67, if he will make a further statement on the role of the Crown prosecution service in relation to the case of Coren and Greenwood.

The Attorney-General: Primary responsibility for the enforcement of insider dealing legislation rests with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The case of Coren and Greenwood involved a civil servant within the Office of Fair Trading, and because of the relation between that office and the DTI, the Crown prosecution service undertook the conduct of the proceedings. My assertion that this case was brought by the DTI was therefore incorrect, and I regret the mistake.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Passports

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many individuals currently resident (a) in South Africa and (b) in the rest of the world (i) hold a British passport and (ii) have the right to return to live in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has no means of assessing accurately how many British nationals overseas hold British passports. British nationals resident in South Africa are estimated to number between 500,000 and 1 million. Most of them have the right to live in the United Kingdom. British nationals in the rest of the world, including dependent territories, are estimated to number 8 million to 8·5 million. Of these, it is estimated that 5 million have the right to live in the United Kingdom. However, many of these are likely to be dual nationals currently holding only the passport of their country of residence.

Chile

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes there have been in Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Chile since the democratic elections in that country.

Mr. Sainsbury: With our European partners, we have welcomed the transition towards democracy in Chile, and look forward to a deepening of our bilateral relations.

British Embassy, Bangkok

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) men and (b) women are awaiting interview at the British embassy in Bangkok for consideration for entry into the United Kingdom either as husbands or wives of British citizens.

Mr. Sainsbury: As at 13 February 1990 there were two men and 97 women awaiting settlement interviews at the embassy in Bangkok.

Hong Kong

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many suicide attempts have occurred in Hong Kong detention camps for Vietnamese boat people since the inception of the camps: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Eight people have inflicted injuries upon themselves in Hong Kong's detention centres since the closed camp policy started on 16 June 1988. One of those people was found to be suffering from a psychiatric illness and two gave their reasons for injuring themselves as family problems. Five people gave their reasons as a desire to protest against the policy of screening and repatriation. None sustained life-threatening injuries.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information is given generally to Vietnamese boat women in Hong Kong detention camps as to the health attributes of the contraceptive drug Depo Provera and its consequences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The Family Planning Association offers the usual range of contraceptive techniques to Vietnamese women. In offering Depo Provera it explains that it is a drug administered by injection and that it is effective for 12 weeks. It also explains all the possible side-effects. Depo Provera has been approved for use by the World Health Organisation. It is made available to Vietnamese women in detention centres on the same basis as it is offered to the general population in Hong Kong.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the staff in Hong Kong detention camps have administered the contraceptive drug Depo Provera to Vietnamese boat women held there; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Various methods of contraception are offered to Vietnamese boat people on an entirely voluntary basis by staff of the Family Planning Association. Some Vietnamese women have chosen to use Depo Provera.

Kurds

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning the reported poisoning of Kurdish refugees in Turkey; and whether he intends to raise the matter with representatives of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and of the Turkish Government.

Mr. Maude: Staff from HM embassy have been in touch with the office of the UNHCR in Ankara which confirms that approximately 100 Iraqui Kurds at Diyarbakir entered hospital on 1 February after eating contaminated bread. We understand that all have been discharged. Samples of the bread are being analysed by the Turkish authorities.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

David Lloyd George

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Lord President of the Council whether he will arrange for the Refreshment Department to offer a special menu to commemorate the centenary of the election of David Lloyd George, MP, ex-Prime Minister, to Parliament on 10 April 1890.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The hon. Member's request will be considered by the Catering Sub-Committee.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Duchy of Lancaster has not employed any security firms during the period in question.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on how many Metropolitan police officers and how many person hours were spent on observation duties of public lavatories in the N division between 1 September 1989 and 31 December 1989;

(2) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on how many men were arrested by Metropolitan police officers engaged on observation duties of public lavatories in the N division between 1 September 1989 and 31 December 1989;

(3) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on how many men were arrested by Metropolitan police officers engaged on observation duties of the public lavatories located at Highbury crescent, London N5, between 1 September 1989 and 31 December 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the only police observation duties of public lavatories in the N division area during the period were at Highbury crescent, London N5. The operation involved the deployment of four officers over a total period of 239 hours, and 35 arrests were made.

Personal Data

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of staff in his Department have been disciplined for breaching internal regulations on the disclosure of personal data held by his Department within the last five years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There is no central record of any disciplinary proceedings on such a basis in the last five years.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from his Department to the police; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(2) what kinds of personal data held by his Department are transferred to the police; and whether records are kept of such transfers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There are frequent transfers of personal data between the Home Office and the police as part of the day-to-day business of the Department. I regret that more detailed information about the basis and frequency of such transfers could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

NATO Courses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) Government Departments and (b) private or public bodies in the United Kingdom which send participants to the bi-annual courses on civil-military co-operation held by NATO at Oberammergau.

Mr. John Patten: Such courses cover civil emergency planning as well as civil-military co-operation, and are attended by civil and military personnel who are directly involved in NATO planning. Members of staff from a number of Government Departments and the armed services have participated in the courses. We are not aware that any representatives from private or other public bodies in the United Kingdom have so far attended.

Boundary Commission for Wales

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the attendance record at meetings (a) since their appointment and (b) during 1989 of the current members of the parliamentary boundary commission for Wales appointed solely or jointly by him or his predecessors.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The parliamentary boundary commission for Wales is an entirely independent body and the disclosure of internal management information of this kind is more appropriate for the commission itself.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the nominees for the current appointments made solely or jointly by the parliamentary boundary commission for Wales declared a political affiliation in their curricula vitae; and of those declaring a political affiliation, how many showed allegiance to (a) Conservatives, (b) Labour, (c) the Liberal Democrats, (d) the Social Democratic party, (e) the Green party and (f) Plaid Cymru.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The parliamentary boundary commission for Wales makes no appointments. From time to time my right hon. and learned Friend appoints assistant commissioners to conduct local inquiries for the commission. Before their appointment, candidates are asked for an assurance that they have not been involved in political activity. There are no such assistant commissioners at present.

Dart Guns

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dart gun firearms certificates have been granted; how many persons now have such weapons in England and Wales, broken down by police force areas; and how many are held by (a) deer farmers and (b) others.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reassess the answer of the Minister of State to the Adjournment debate on Colin Wallace's manslaughter conviction, Official Report, col 948-52, 27 June 1989, in the light of the most recent ministerial replies in relation to Colin Wallace.

Mr. John Patten: I have nothing to add to the answer given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel (Mr. Marshall) on 30 January 1990 at column 119.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he is going to publish guidance on the operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Guidance on the operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 has today been laid before Parliament, in accordance with section 21(1) of the Act. The Animal Procedures Committee has been fully consulted about this guidance, in accordance with section 21(3) of the Act. The guidance will be published tomorrow as HC182 and a copy will be sent to every holder of a certificate of designation issued under sections 6 and 7 of the Act.

The publication of this guidance is the last major step in the bringing into force of the 1986 Act. The changeover to the new legislation has been carried out swiftly and according to the timetable that we set ourselves. This is a major achievement, reflecting the positive response which the scientific community is giving to the 1986 Act. This guidance sets out fully how the strict controls of the Act are now operating.

THE ARTS

Royal Shakespeare Company

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the latest position concerning the work of the Royal Shakespeare Company and its funding, taking into account the recent announcement of an increase in funding.

Mr. Luce: It is for the Arts Council to determine the level of its grant to individual companies in the light of their artistic importance and a range of other factors.

In the case of the Royal Shakespeare Company, its national and international importance is not in doubt. The Arts Council has awarded the RSC an 11 per cent. increase in its grant for next year, taking it to over £6 million. This is a very substantial increase, well above the rate of inflation, and should help the company balance its books.

In 1984, the Government wrote off the RSC's deficit and increased its baseline grant in order to put the company on a firm footing from which to plan its future programmes. This was in response to two of the three recommendations of the Priestley report. The recommendation to index-link the RSC's grant was not accepted.

I understand that the company is to cancel the winter season planned at the Barbican for 1991. This is a management decision by the RSC, and it is entirely for it to make. It will continue production as normal in its other venues, and will reopen at the Barbican in spring 1991. It will continue to tour widely. I am sure that it will maintain its excellent attendance levels.

The company has generated substantial income from the box office and the private sector, including generous sponsorship from Royal Insurance of £1·1 million over three years. I have every hope and confidence that the RSC will continue to build on its success.

Works of Art

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Minister for the Arts if there have been any items accepted in lieu of tax or allocated since he last made an announcement on the subject to the House.

Mr. Luce: Since my announcement on 22 January at column 536, I am pleased to announce that four offers of items have been accepted in lieu of tax; a collection of 20 modern paintings, a collection of Anglo-Saxon and medieval coins, a painting by Constable and an 18th century harpsichord. In accordance with the condition on which it was offered the coin collection will be allocated to the Fitzwilliam museum, Cambridge. It satisfied £418,429·20 tax and followed the precedent set by the acceptance of Picasso's "Weeping Woman" in that the Fitzwilliam agreed to pay the owner the difference (£108,128·80) between that tax liability to be satisfied and the special price of £526,558. The collection of modern paintings satisfied £82,742 tax and will be allocated to the Abbot Hall art gallery, Cumbria. No decision on allocation has yet been taken regarding Constable's "Farm Cart with Horse in Harness" or the harpsichord which satisfied £50,025 and £25,432·79 tax respectively. These items will be advertised to institutions in the usual way.

Finally, I have decided that Cezanne's "Allée à Chantilly", accepted in lieu of tax in 1988-89, should be allocated to the National gallery.

CIVIL SERVICE

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Luce: My Department currently has two contracts with Securiguard Services Limited, to the annual value of £85,420 and £14,175. The contracts provide for five employees, four of them operating in shifts. The total value of all contracts with private security firms in each financial year since 1984-85 is:

Year	£
1985-86	48,000
1986-87	70,600
1987-88	77,200
1988-89	69,700
1989-90	84,600

Occupational Health Department

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service when he expects to computerise information held by the Civil Service occupational health department at Murray house.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 8 February 1990]: There are no plans to computerise the information held by the Civil Service occupational health service at Murray house. During 1990-91 a study is to be undertaken into the computerising of various financial and operational procedures, leading to the introduction of a new computer system serving the headquarters and all regional offices in 1991-92.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Waste Recycling

16. Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on the current level of incentive for industry to recycle its waste.

Mr. Forth: A very strong incentive—that of market economics—already exists, and I am pleased that many United Kingdom companies are saving money by recycling a very high proportion of their recyclable process scrap. I congratulate those companies but more could be done, and my Department is actively encouraging others to recognise the economic and environmental benefits of waste minimisation and recycling.

53. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to encourage investment in capital equipment for the purpose of recycling of waste materials in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Forth: Investment in capital equipment for this purpose will flow naturally when effective waste separation and processing systems are in place, when consumer demand for products manufactured from recycled materials is secure, and when commercial operations are in prospect. My Department is working closely with the Department of the Environment, industry, consumer groups and the voluntary sector to develop a coherent national approach to recycling, and this is also expected to lead to an increase in investment in capital equipment.

Post Office

19. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the chairman of the Post Office; and what was discussed.

40. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the chairman of the Post Office; and what was discussed.

84. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the chairman of the Post Office; and what was discussed.

Mr. Forth: I last met the chairman of the Post Office, Sir Bryan Nicholson, on 11 January. We discussed various matters of mutual interest.

Insider Dealing

20. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last reviewed the regulations to deal with insider dealing; and whether he has any plans to bring forward amendments.

39. Mr. Mesle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last reviewed the regulations to deal with insider dealing; and whether he has any plans to bring forward amendments.

Mr. Redwood: As I told the House on 8 December, the Government that day published a consultative document on proposals for changes to the law on insider dealing. A copy is in the Library. I will consider carefully any constructive proposals that may emerge from the consultation.

Product Safety

21. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is considering to ensure greater product safety.

47. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is considering to ensure greater product safety.

75. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is considering to ensure greater product safety.

Mr. Forth: Product safety will continue to be a high priority for my Department. Provision is being made for the collection and analysis of accident statistics, the promotion of effective safety campaigns to raise public awareness, and for comprehensive statutory protection against unsafe goods. The Consumer Protection Act 1987, for example, makes it a criminal offence to supply any consumer product that is not safe. This is supported by specific safety regulations where necessary, and by my approval of specific safety standards, and the promotion of reasonable standards of safety in the marketing of consumer products.

Telephones (Number Displays)

22. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make it his policy to encourage the telecommunications industry and Oftel to promote the introduction of telephones which display the caller's number.

Mr. Forth: The provision of calling line identification facilities is primarily a matter for the network operators. I know that the Director General of Telecommunications, Sir Bryan Carsberg, is keeping the position under close review.

Japan

23. Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current trade deficit with Japan; and how much of the deficit is accounted for by manufactured goods.

102. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current trade deficit with Japan; and how much of the deficit is accounted for by manufactured goods.

Mr. Redwood: In 1989 the deficit in total visible trade with Japan was £4·8 billion. In the same period the deficit for manufactured goods was £5·0 billion. Last year United Kingdom exports to Japan increased by £525 million to £2·3 billion, an increase of 30 per cent. over 1988.

Technological Standards

24. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what response he will be making to the report produced for the European Commission by the university of Louvain in respect of its assessment of the United Kingdom's technological standards; and if he will make a statement.

93. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what response he will be making to the report produced for the European Commission by the university of Louvain in respect of its assessment of the United Kingdom's technological standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The report does not actually highlight the United Kingdom's technological backwardness. The Government are well aware of the challenge of 1992 and we have policies in place to help firms in all regions to rise to it.

Trade Deficits

25. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the European Economic Community countries with which the United Kingdom has a manufacturing trade deficit.

61. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the European Economic Community countries with which the United Kingdom has a manufacturing trade deficit.

104. Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the European Economic Community countries with which the United Kingdom has a manufacturing trade deficit.

Mr. Redwood: In 1989 the United Kingdom had a manufacturing trade deficit with the following countries:

France
Belgium/Luxembourg
Netherlands
Federal Republic of Germany
Italy
Denmark
Portugal.

Public Ownership

26. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the Government's policy as to the circumstances under which they would consider taking an industry or company into public ownership.

37. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on taking industries or companies into public ownership.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government's policy is to return industrial and commercial activities to the private sector wherever practicable. I can think of no industry or company now in the private sector which would benefit from nationalisation.

Manufactured Imports

27. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the growth in imports of manufactured goods from the European Community since 1979.

105. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the growth in imports of manufactured goods from the European Community since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: Imports of manufactured goods from the European Community have risen from £16 billion in 1979 to £52·5 billion in 1989, an increase of £36·5 billion.

Credit Unions

28. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action his Department has taken to encourage the growth of the credit union movement in inner-city areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department has not taken any action to support credit unions in the inner cities.

Information Technology

29. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new plans to encourage research and development in information technology.

67. Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new plans to encourage research and development in information technology.

86. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new plans to encourage research and development in information technology.

Mr. Forth: DTI policy and arrangements to encourage research and development in information technology were set out in the White Papers "Information Technology" (Cm. 646) and "DTI—the department for Enterprise" (Cm. 278). The Government have no plans to change these arrangements.

Trade Barriers

30. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to ensure that the European Economic Community does not erect protectionist trade barriers.

Mr. Redwood: I am against protectionism. I will certainly ensure that any European Community proposals for protectionist trade policy action are rigorously opposed by the United Kingdom.

Monopolies and Mergers Commission

31. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to change the role of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

90. Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to change the role of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Ridley: I have no such plans.

Eastern Europe

32. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's balance of trade in manufactures in 1989 with (a) the USSR, (b) East Germany, (c) Poland, (d) Czechoslovakia and (e) Romania.

76. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's balance of trade in manufactures in 1989 with (a) the USSR, (b) East Germany, (c) Poland, (d) Czechoslovakia and (e) Romania.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier to the question of the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short).

46. Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to encourage increased trade between the United Kingdom and eastern Europe.

85. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his Department is doing to promote trade and investment by British companies in eastern Europe.

Mr. Redwood: My Department is encouraging business men to look hard at the new commercial opportunities in eastern Europe. DTI Ministers are playing their part both by receiving incoming delegations and by leading business missions themselves. At the end of last year the Minister for Trade and I led business teams to the USSR and Hungary respectively. In the course of the next two months the Secretary of State and I will be taking business men to the USSR, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Romania whilst the Minister for Trade will be visiting British stands at the Leipzig fair in the GDR.

My Department is also encouraging British business to take full advantage of the several United Kingdom, EC and multilateral assistance schemes becoming available to help explore the new opportunities for direct investment, joint ventures and other forms of industrial co-operation.

Financial Institutions (Self-regulation)

33. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of self-regulation of the financial institutions.

34. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of self-regulation of the financial institutions.

98. Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of self-regulation of the financial institutions.

Mr. Redwood: The Securities and Investments Board is responsible for ensuring that the appropriate standard of protection for investors is provided by the self-regulating bodies recognised under the Financial Services Act.

EC Financial Markets

35. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress is being made in discussions within the European Economic Community on the opening up of financial markets throughout the Community.

Mr. Redwood: We are fully committed to the liberalisation of the EC's financial services sector. It is a fundamental element of the single market programme not only because of the beneficial effects of liberalisation which will be passed on to other sectors.

The capital liberalisation directive adopted on 24 June 1988 will enable the free movement of capital across the Community. Remaining exchange controls will be abolished. Many member states have already removed most if not all their controls.

More recent progress includes the adoption of the second banking co-ordination directive on 15 December 1989, which sets out the conditions on which credit institutions (broadly banks and building societies) may establish a branch in, or provide a wide range of cross-border services into, another member state on the basis of home state authorisation. The related solvency ratios directive adopted on 18 December and own funds directive adopted on 17 April set out minimum standards of capital adequacy for credit institutions.

The life services directive awaits the opinion of the European Parliament. The directive lays down rules for the writing of life assurance by an insurer established in a member state other than that of the policyholder.

Other measures at an earlier stage of discussion will, when implemented, open further the single market in financial services. The investment services directive will provide a similar single passport for investment firms to that available to banks under the second banking co-ordination directive. The supporting capital adequacy directive has not yet been presented to the Council, but the Commission hopes to propose a draft text in March. Its aim is to set out capital requirements for firms doing investment business.

The Commission has recently announced plans for a single licence approach to life and non-life insurance, similar to the single passport concept in the banking and investment service fields.

Manufacturing Industry

36. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss manufacturing industry.

60. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss manufacturing industry.

71. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss manufacturing industry.

103. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss manufacturing industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department maintains regular and frequent contacts with the Confederation of British Industry at all levels on a wide range of matters relating to manufacturing industry.

78. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the prospects for manufacturing industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have met representatives of the Confederation of British Industry on several occasions recently, and discussed with them matters relevant to the prospects of manufacturing industry.

101. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the competitiveness of British manufacturing industry.

119. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the competitiveness of British manufacturing industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Most contacts that my Department has with industry and commerce involve matters having a bearing on United Kingdom competitiveness.

64. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the director general of the National Economic Development Council to discuss manufacturing industry.

79. Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the director general of the National Economic Development Council to discuss manufacturing industry.

106. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the director general of the National Economic Development Council to discuss manufacturing industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I expect to meet the director general of the National Economic Development Office on 4 April, at the next meeting of the National Economic Development Council. The council will discuss several items relevant to manufacturing industry.

Consumer Guarantees Bill

38. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has had from consumer organisations in respect of the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

97. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has had from consumer organisations in respect of the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

116. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has had from consumer organisations in respect of the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

Mr. Forth: There have been representations from various organisations both for and against aspects of the proposal. Unless agreed otherwise with the parties concerned, these representations have been made in confidence and it would be inappropriate to name the organisations or to indicate the interests they represent.

100. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the representations he has received for or against the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

117. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the representations he has received for or against the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

Mr. Forth: There have been numerous representations both for and against various aspects of the proposal. Unless agreed otherwise with the parties concerned, these representations have been made in confidence and it would be inappropriate to list them.

Technology (Co-operation)

41. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to submit new proposals for co-operation in technology within the conference on security and co-operation in Europe process at the forthcoming conference on economic co-operation in Europe to be held in Bonn on 19 March to 11 April.

Mr. Redwood: It is intended that proposals by the 12 member states of the European Community will be co-ordinated at Community level, but we will be considering whether or not to propose any separate national initiatives to complement the Community's efforts.

42. Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the European Commission to discuss the implications of 1992 for British industry.

52. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the European Commission to discuss the implications of 1992 for British industry.

Mr. Redwood: I continue to keep in close contact with the EC Commission across a broad range of issues.

118. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much money has been spent by his Department on awareness-raising about the implications of the single European market among British businesses; and if he will launch a survey of how many British companies are aware of the implications of 1992.

Mr. Redwood: Expenditure to date on the DTI's "Europe Open for Business" campaign to encourage businesses to prepare for the single market is £13·6 million. A weekly survey of business attitudes to the single market amongst firms employing 10 or more people is already undertaken on behalf of DTI. A hundred different firms are surveyed each week. The results show that business awareness of the single market is in excess of 95 per cent. Some 50 per cent. of firms are currently taking action to prepare themselves for the single market.

94. Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the most recent assessment that his Department has made of the effects upon British industry of the completion of the European single market in 1992.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The single market will provide enormous opportunities and challenges to firms in all parts of the United Kingdom. The overall impact will depend on how individual firms respond. About 50 per cent. of firms throughout the United Kingdom are now taking action to prepare for the single market and a further 10 per cent. are considering action.

Consumers' Association

43. Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Consumers' Association; and what was discussed.

91. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Consumers' Association; and what was discussed.

111. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Consumers' Association; and what was discussed.

Mr. Forth: I visited the Consumers' Association on 6 February 1989 and a number of current issues relevant to consumers were discussed.

EC Ministers

44. Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet his European Economic Community counterparts; and what subjects will be discussed.

63. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet his European Economic Community counterparts; and what subjects will be discussed.

109. Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet his European Economic Community counterparts; and what subjects will be discussed.

Mr. Redwood: I continue to keep in close contact with my EC counterparts on a whole range of matters.

Industrial Development

45. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has met the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss the financing of industrial development.

107. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has met the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss the financing of industrial development.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Yes. I find it most helpful to discuss industrial financing and other matters of mutual interest with the governor from time to time.

Privatisation

48. Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies have been returned to the private sector by his Department since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 9 January at columns 517-18. My Department has primary responsibility for returning seven companies to the private sector.

Product Warranties

49. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is considering taking to ensure that products carry effective warranties.

95. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is considering taking to ensure that products carry effective warranties.

99. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is considering taking to ensure that products carry effective warranties.

Mr. Forth: The issue is being considered in the context of the private Member's Bill on consumer guarantees being put forward by the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones). The Government are considering their position on the Bill and will make a statement in due course. The Government's concerns about the implications of the Bill are already on record.

Textiles

50. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which issues he will raise in relation to the international trade in textiles when he next meets his European Economic Community counterparts.

Mr. Redwood: The main issues for discussion with European Community colleagues will be the further development of the Community's position in the GATT Uruguay round negotiations on the return of trade in textiles and clothing to strengthened GATT rules. Discussion will be likely to focus on the method of phasing out the MFA after the current arrangements expire next year and the parallel strengthening of GATT rules and disciplines. These issues were fully debated in the House on 12 January 1990.

57. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in the textile industry.

88. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in the textile industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Latest available figures show that imports of textiles (SITC division 65) exceeded exports by £1,576 million in the 12 months to November 1989.

Hosiery and Knitwear

51. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the hosiery and knitwear industry in Leicestershire concerning the United Kingdom's trading position in this sector.

Mr. Redwood: The difficulties facing the knitwear industry in Leicestershire were the subject of an Adjournment debate in the House on 12 December 1989. They have also been the subject of correspondence and meetings between industry representations and my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Trade.

Securities and Investments Board

54. Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board; and what will be discussed.

56. Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board; and what will be discussed.

69. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board to discuss a range of topics concerning the regulation of financial services as frequently as is necessary. No date has been fixed for the next such meeting.

West Germany

55. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in manufactured goods with West Germany.

120. Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in manufactured goods with West Germany.

Mr. Redwood: In 1989 imports of manufactures from the Federal Republic of Germany exceeded United Kingdom exports to that country by £9·6 billion.

Structural Funds

58. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to encourage British firms to compete for structural funds-related business.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government attach considerable importance to British firms competing effectively for structural funds-related business. To that end, my Department has organised two major conferences. These have been supplemented by a number of regional events. The Department also offers an information service to United Kingdom business men interested in pursuing opportunities.

The more recent conference on 23 November 1989 was timed to coincide with the publication of the approved spending plans for the less developed regions of the Community. I addressed the conference and referred to the need for industry, Government and our diplomatic staff overseas to work together in order to identify the opportunities available. It is the efforts and enterprise of those in the private sector which will then determine how much of this new business is won by Britain.

Package Holidays

59. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he intends to introduce any further measures to offer greater consumer protection to people who contract for package holidays and travel arrangements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The Government have no imminent plans to introduce further measures in this area. However the common position reached by EC Ministers at the 21-22 December Council on the draft package travel directive portends that consideration will need to be given in due course to its implementation in the United Kingdom. The Association of British Travel Agents has already announced that its new codes of practice will take effect during this year.

Consumer Protection

62. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to increase consumer protection.

70. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to increase consumer protection.

73. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to increase consumer protection.

Mr. Forth: We intend to improve the protection given to consumers in a number of ways including the introduction of an order under the Prices Act 1974, as amended, on price indications and unit pricing, and changes to other legislation affecting consumers' interests.

Bankruptcies

65. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the latest figures for bankruptcies.

Mr. Redwood: During 1989, a total of 8,115 bankruptcy orders were made against individuals.

Exporters

66. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any new plans to assist British exporters.

83. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any new plans to assist British exporters.

Mr. Redwood: My Department and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office provide through the export initiative a wide range of practical help, advice and support.

It is only a year since my Department announced a significant package of improvements to our export promotion effort to ensure that it meets United Kingdom exporters' needs more effectively. Response to the package has been encouraging and we continue to monitor the performance and relevance of our services to United Kingdom exporters' demands closely.

Industrial Activity (North-West)

68. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to meet representatives of the Manchester chamber of commerce and industry to discuss the chamber's recent survey of industrial activity in the north-west.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I was pleased to see the results of the recent survey published by the Manchester chamber of commerce and industry, however I have no plans to meet any of its representatives.

Car Manufacturers

72. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the major car manufacturers; and what will be discussed.

115. Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the major car manufacturers; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the major car manufacturers; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government have regular contacts with the major car manufacturers on a range of issues of interest to the industry. No meetings are currently planned.

CBI Regional Bodies

74. Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met a Confederation of British Industry regional body; and what was discussed.

82. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met a Confederation of Business Industry regional body; and what was discussed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department maintains regular contact with the CBI at all levels on a wide range of matters relating to industry.

C. J. How

77. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will initiate an investigation under the Companies Acts into the activities of the finance company C. J. How.

Mr. Redwood: No. On 7 November 1989, a bankruptcy order was made in the Cheltenham county court against Mr. Christopher John How, financial consultant, of the Coach House, Winchcombe road, Sedgeberrow, near Evesham. His affairs are under investigation by the Official Receiver pursuant to section 289 of the Insolvency Act 1986.

Departmental Structure

80. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for the future structure of his Department.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans for the reorganisation of his Department.

Mr. Ridley: I am reviewing various aspects of the work of my Department but have no changes to announce at present.

Stock Exchange

81. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the chairman of the stock exchange; and what will be discussed.

110. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the chairman of the stock exchange; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Ridley: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Darling) earlier today.

Dixons Group (Takeover Bid)

87. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to reach a decision on the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the proposed acquisition of Kingfisher plc of Dixons Group plc.

Mr. Redwood: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission is due to submit its report on the proposed acquisition to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State by 27 April this year. The report will be published as soon as is practicable after that. It would be inappropriate to speculate about its possible findings.

Exports

89. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action is being taken by his Department to further increase exports.

Mr. Redwood: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter) on 12 February at column 45.

Electrical Goods

92. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has recently received about competition in the electrical goods sector.

Mr. Redwood: I have received various representations from hon. Members and others about competition issues, including representations specifically about the proposed acquisition of Dixons Group plc by Kingfisher plc which is currently under investigation by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Securities Industry (Supervision)

96. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is considering transferring any departmental securities industry supervision functions to the SIB.

Mr. Redwood: I have no plans for any major change in the distribution of powers between my Department and the SIB.

No-dividend Policy

108. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate his Department has made of the effects of a no-dividend policy upon British industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. Dividend policy is a matter for the directors of individual companies.

Sunderland

112. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last visited Sunderland; and what was discussed.

Mr. Ridley: My hon. Friend the Minister for Industry visited Sunderland on 5 October 1989, when he met Tyne and Wear development corporation, Sunderland borough council, the Wearside Opportunity and the Sunderland shipyards campaign committee. My right hon. Friend the then Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster visited Sunderland on three occasions in 1989. On these occasions discussion centred upon NESL and the package of remedial measures, following its closure. My hon. Friend the Minister for Industry was in Newcastle on 25 January and met representatives of Sunderland borough council to discuss these issues.

Regional Aid

113. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of regional selective assistance.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: An evaluation of regional selective assistance (RSA) by DTI and the Scottish and Welsh Offices was completed last year. Its main conclusions were that offers of RSA made in the evaluation period (1980-84) had assisted the creation or safeguarding of over 1·1 million net job years (or 56,000 permanent jobs) in assisted areas in Great Britain at a cost of some £580 per job year (or £11,600 per job), after taking account of jobs which were not additional and of displacement effects. The report on the evaluation is due to be published by HMSO in the near future.

North East Shipbuilders Limited

114. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are his current plans regarding the facilities of North East Shipbuilders Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: British Shipbuilders remains in discussion with the two parties interested in purchasing the assets of North East Shipbuilders Ltd. We are seeking to progress outstanding issues as quickly as possible. I hope these will be resolved soon.

Japanese-owned Industry

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the percentage of manufacturing industry output and employment in Britain which is Japanese owned.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The results of the latest (1987) annual census of production indicate that Japanese-owned companies had 0·22 per cent. of employment in manufacturing industry in the United Kingdom. The figures for gross output and net output respectively were 0·45 per cent. and 0·21 per cent.

Petrol

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will publish the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on petrol; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I am today publishing the report by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the supply of petrol by wholesale in the United Kingdom.

The Monopolies and Mergers Commission has concluded that petrol wholesaling is a competitive industry at present. It has found that neither the structure, the practices nor the profits in the industry operate against the public interest. The Monopolies and Mergers Commission has accordingly made no recommendations for change.

The supply of petrol is a key part of the nation's economy and a matter of considerable interest to individual consumers. Petrol alone accounts for 3 per cent. of consumer expenditure. Any defects in competition could have serious consequences for the public interest. It is right that issues that have caused public concern should have been subjected to close and careful scrutiny and I am grateful for the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's expert work in carrying out this investigation.

The main findings of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission are that:

- the price of petrol is primarily governed by movements in the underlying price of crude oil and the international market price for petrol, and particularly by their prices on the Rotterdam market;
- United Kingdom pump prices are not out of line with those in European countries or movements in consumer prices;
- price rises are not implemented more quickly than price falls;
- there is no evidence of collusion between the companies;
- petrol exchanges between wholesalers reduce costs to consumers and are pro-competitive;
- petrol company profits on wholesaling have been no more than moderate in recent years and on their downstream operations as a whole they have been low;
- there are no significant barriers to entry to the wholesale market;
- the hypermarkets and independent chains provide strong and growing competition in the retail market, and
- most consumers can choose from a range of prices and standards of service.

The Monopolies and Mergers Commission found that a complex monopoly exists in favour of 69 oil companies that supply over 95 per cent. of the market. However, it concludes that the facts found do not operate against the public interest, that no steps are being taken by the monopolists to exploit the situation, and that the market is a competitive one. Since there are no adverse findings in the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's report, the question of remedies does not arise.

I have received the Director General of Fair Trading's advice on the report. He endorses the overall conclusions the Monopolies and Mergers Commission has reached on the public interest. The director general agrees with the Monopolies and Mergers Commission that future changes could increase the scope for anti-competitive behaviour in the industry. Accordingly he believes that his office should, in three years' time subject to any developments in the meantime, carry out a review of company ownership in the industry and an assessment of developments in competition. In the meantime, he will keep under review any major changes which affect conditions of competition in the industry, though without seeking all the further more detailed information suggested by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. I agree that the director general should proceed in this way and I shall keep the House informed of any developments.

I accept the analysis in the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's report and am grateful to the commission for having produced a substantial document reflecting the outcome of a wide-ranging and intensive investigation.

Toyota Factory, Derbyshire

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the European Commission is conducting, or proposes to conduct, an investigation into the proposed Toyota factory in Derbyshire.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 12 February 1990]: When the Toyota project was announced in April 1989, the Government informed the European Commission that the company had decided to locate in the United Kingdom without seeking any financial assistance from the Government; that discussions were in progress between the company and the local authorities in Derbyshire about a possible modest package of local measures; and that, once the elements of the package had been defined, the Government would consider whether any of them required notification to the Commission under the terms of the Community's rules on state aids to the vehicle sector. My Department has recently told the Commission that in our view the package envisaged included nothing which could be regarded as an aid to Toyota. We have made clear our readiness to meet Commission officials to explain the content of the package and the reasons for our conclusion.

Amateur Radio

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many complaints concerning abuse on the amateur bands have been received by his Department from the Radio Society of Great Britain;

(2) how many complaints of abuse on GB 35L, GB 3BM and GB 3NA have been received by his Department;

(3) what response he has made to the Radio Society of Great Britain with regard to its criticism of amateur radio repeaters in the categories GB 35L, GB 3BM and GB 3NA which are licensed by his Department.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The Radio Society of Great Britain has raised the issue of abuse on amateur radio repeater stations with the Department, and my officials are holding discussions with them about the matter.

Paper Recycling

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will add improved pulping and de-inking technology used to recycle waste paper to those projects currently supported by his Department.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 13 February 1990]: Government involvement in research into de-inking and pulping has taken place for some years, particularly through support for projects at the paper and board division of PIRA, the research association for the paper printing and packaging industries. Current projects are specifically looking at de-inking (due to be completed in autumn 1990), the difficulties of pulping and refining raw materials of the future (completion due spring 1992), and a new project approved to commence in April 1990 to investigate recycling of waste paper into higher grades of paper.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will initiate a campaign to encourage the use of recycled paper in manufacturing processes.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 13 February 1990]: In 1989 United Kingdom paper and board manufacturers consumed approximately 2·5 million tonnes of waste paper. This represents 53 per cent. of the fibre requirement of the industry.

The Department is keen to promote the use of recycled fibre in production processes whenever it is technically and economically viable to do so. With this aim in mind, a joint DTI-industry working group has drawn up specifications for educational and computer papers containing 75 per cent. recycled fibre which will shortly be published. An advisory group set up by the Department is currently examining ways of increasing the utilisation of waste paper in all paper products.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will initiate a publicity campaign to encourage the use by the public of products made from recycled paper.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The Department is keen to encourage the use of products which are manufactured using recycled fibre. Currently an advisory group set up by the DTI is examining ways of increasing the utilisation of waste paper in all paper products.

Tissue Products

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will examine the regulations governing the content of waste newsprint in tissue products.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 13 February 1990]: There are no regulations governing the content of waste newsprint in tissue products. Members of the Association of Makers of Soft Tissues do, however, abide by an industry code of practice which recognises that recycled paper in various forms is a satisfactory substitute for virgin woodpulp after proper selection and treatment.

An advisory group set up by the Department is currently examining ways of increasing the utilisation of waste paper in all products.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information is not collected centrally for any of the bodies listed.

(a) Cardiff Bay Development Corporation.

(d) Council for National Academic Awards.

(f) Curriculum Council for Wales

(g) Development Board for Rural Wales

The hon. Gentleman may wish to write to the chairmen of each of these bodies.

(c) Committee on Opportunities for Volunteering.

The hon. Gentleman may wish to write to the secretary.

(e) The courts and councils of (i) the National Library and (ii) the National Museum of Wales.

The hon. Gentleman may wish to write to the respective presidents.

(b) The committee for the Welsh scheme for the development of health and social research.

This scheme is administered on my behalf by the university of Wales College of Medicine, to which the hon. Gentleman may wish to write.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to the Welsh health common services authority are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: None.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to the Sports Council for Wales are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: Four.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Sports Council for Wales during the last year where figures are available and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: The published accounts of the Sports Council for Wales for the year ended 31 March 1989 show total expenditure of £5,746,706.

(a) Expenditure on administration in general (including relevant staff costs and computerisation) was 14 per cent. of the total.

(b) Users of the Sports Council for Wales' facilities are charged a commercial fee. The costs of any meetings or conferences arising from the Sports Council for Wales' work are subsumed in the administrative costs.

(c) No payments are made for attending meetings. The total expenditure on reimbursement of members' travel and subsistence costs for 1988-89 was 0·4 per cent. of the total expenditure of the council.

(d) Nominees from outside bodies who attend council meetings receive no payment from the Sports Council for Wales.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many nominees for the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to the agricultural dwelling house advisory committee panel of chairmen, Wales, declared a political affiliation in their curricula vitae; and of those declaring a political affiliation, how many showed allegiance to (a) Conservatives, (b) Labour, (c) the Liberal Democrats, (d) the Social Democratic party, (e) the Green party and (f) Plaid Cymru;

Those marked * were appointed in December 1989 and were not able to attend the December meeting.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the agricultural dwelling house advisory committee panel of chairmen, Wales, during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: None. There are six panels of chairmen in Wales, whose members chair meetings of ADHACs on an ad hoc basis. One member of the panel chaired an ADHAC meeting in 1989 but he did not claim his fees or expenses. The minimal servicing costs for the meeting were absorbed by my Department.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the standing working group of the Wales advisory body during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information is not held centrally; the hon. Gentleman may wish to write to the secretary of the Wales Advisory Body for Local Authority Higher Education.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the training enterprise and education advisory group during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: Figures for expenditure on administration are not available. Between March 1989, when the group was established, and December 1989 accommodation and catering costs totalled approximately £1,055 and members' travel and subsistence costs approximately £1,238. The chairman of the group is paid £11,393 per annum; no other allowances are paid to members.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the urban investment appraisal panel during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: During 1989 urban investment grant appraisal panel expenditure was £719 of which £200 was spent on hosting of meetings, the balance of £519 being the cost of members' attendance at meetings.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Wales tourist board during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: Total expenditure by the Wales tourist board during 1988-89 was £11·709 million. Of this, £4·060 million or 34·7 per cent. is attributable to operating or administrative costs. Details of expenditure on meetings and conferences is not separately identifiable. Allowances for attending meetings are met from within the total travel and subsistence element of the board's operating costs, amounting to £0·337 million or 2·9 per cent. of the total expenditure in 1988-89.

In the period April to October 1988, actual salaries for part-time commitment paid to the chairman and other members of the board were £23,913 and £4,725 respectively. These rose to £24,234 and £4,790 in the period November 1988 to March 1989. In addition, board members were entitled to claim within an authorised scale travelling and incidental expenses incurred on the business of the board.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Welsh committee for postgraduate pharmaceutical education during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees of the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Welsh committee for postgraduate pharmaceutical education receives funding from my Department and from other sources. It is therefore not possible to provide a figure for total expenditure. However, my Department in the financial year 1988-89, provided funds for (a) the maintenance of the office of the director, his staff, and for some limited courses for hospital pharmacists in the sum of £71,938; and (b) a further £15,000 was expended on providing courses for community pharmacists.

Of the sum at (a) above, 80·77 per cent. was expended on administration in general, and 3·39 per cent. on members' allowances for attending meetings. There was no expenditure on the hosting of meetings, and since the committee has no nominees, there was no further expenditure under this heading.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Welsh committee on drug misuse during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Welsh committee on drug misuse is an advisory committee and as such does not have an operational budget. The only expenditure associated with it is as follows:

(a) Secretariat and administrative support is provided by staff of my Department as part of their wider duties.
(b) £4,601·18 (1988-89).
(c) Travel and subsistence claims are where possible met by employing authorities or organisations. Where this is not possible they are met centrally. The amount for 1988-89 was £2,198·06.
(d) Appointments are unpaid although a financial loss allowance is available to eligible members. The amount for 1988-89 was £206·25.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Welsh Development Agency during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information requested is contained within the agency's latest annual report and accounts, a copy of which is in the Library of the House, with the exception of expenditure incurred in hosting meetings and conferences. This information is not separately recorded.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Welsh health common services authority during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: During the last financial year, the Welsh health common services authority spent a total of £26,431,669. The further information requested by the hon. Gentleman is not available centrally.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Welsh industrial development advisory board during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: In the 1988-89 financial year, expenditure in respect of the Welsh industrial development advisory board totalled £3,783[1], of which £2,353 were travel and subsistence expenses for board members, and £1,430 was for hospitality at board meetings. No fees or general allowances are payable to board members.

[1] Excluding Welsh office administration costs, which are published annually in "Public Bodies".

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the Welsh language board during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: The total expenditure on administration of the Welsh language board during the financial year 1988-89 was £90,807, of which the amount spent on meetings and conferences was £654. Expenses paid for attending meetings of the board and its working groups totalled £6,833. Members of the board do not receive a fee for their work.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to the agricultural training board are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: One.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to the teamcare valleys steering group are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: One.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the attendance record at meetings (a) since their appointment and (b) during 1989 of the current members of the agricultural training board appointed solely or jointly by him or his predecessor.

Mr. Peter Walker: The attendance record is:

	(a) Since appointed	(b) During 1989
Mr. J. E. Smith (Chairman)	5 out of 5	4 out of 4
Mr. M. J. Curtis (Deputy Chairman)	5 out of 5	4 out of 4
Prof Kathleen Anderson	4 out of 5	3 out of 4
Mr. G. J. Baird	5 out of 5	4 out of 4
Mr. J. Burnett	5 out of 5	4 out of 4
Mr. A. H. Fooks	5 out of 5	4 out of 4
Mr. J. A. Kilgour	41 out of 46	5 out of 6
Mr. N. J. Mallett	5 out of 5	4 out of 4

Mr. M. D. Pollard	27 out of 27	6 out of 6
Mr. D. H. Roberts	26 out of 27	6 out of 6

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the attendance record at meetings (a) since the appointment and (b) during 1989 of current members of the court and council of the University of Wales, Bangor appointed solely or jointly by him or his predecessors.

Mr. Peter Walker: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Gentleman may wish to write to the registrar at the college.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the attendance record at meetings (a) since their appointment and (b) during 1989 of the current members of the teamcare valleys steering group appointed solely or jointly by him or his predecessors.

Mr. Peter Walker: There were only two meetings during 1989 of the teamcare valleys steering group, which was established on 1 June 1989.

Current membership and attendance record of the group is listed in the table:

	Attendance since appointed in 1989 Per cent.
Chairman—Dr. P. Elwood	100
Professor N. Stott	100
Professor T. Hayes	50
Professor B. Davies	100
Mr. J. P. Williams	100
Mr. J. Butcher	100
Mrs. E. M. Lovell	100
Dr. G. Graham	50

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure of the teamcare valleys steering group during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (a) administration in general, (b) hosting of meetings and conferences, (c) allowances for attending meetings and (d) general allowances given to nominees on the committee.

Mr. Peter Walker: The teamcare valleys steering group is an advisory body, established on 1 June 1989, and does not have an operational budget. The only expenditure of the group is as follows:

(a) Secretariat and administrative support is provided by staff of my Department as part of their wider duties;
(b) Nil to date;
(c) Travel and subsistence claims are, where possible, met by members' nominating authorities or organisations. No claims have been received to date;
(d) Appointments are unpaid although a financial loss allowance is available to eligible members. No claims have been received to date.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made by him to the council of University College, Lampeter, are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: None.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to the court and council of the University of Wales, Bangor, are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: None.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to the court and council of the University College of Wales, Aberystwyth, are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: None.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the current appointments made solely or jointly by him to the court of University College, Swansea, are held by women.

Mr. Peter Walker: None.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the attendance record at meetings (a) since their appointment and (b) during 1989 of the current members of the council of University College, Lampeter, appointed solely or jointly by him or his predecessor;

(2) what is the attendance record at meetings (a) since their appointment and (b) during 1989 of the current members of the court and council of the University College of Wales, Aberystwyth, appointed solely or jointly by him or his predecessor;

(3) what is the attendance record at meetings (a) since their appointment and (b) during 1989 of the current members of the court of University College, Swansea, appointed solely or jointly by him or his predecessor.

Mr. Peter Walker: This information is not held centrally. The hon. Gentleman may wish to write to the registrars at the colleges.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Rain Forest

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has for the international convention on rain forest problems, as outlined in the Kew lecture on 6 February by the Prince of Wales.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government intend to pursue the proposal for an international convention on the world's forests, including tropical forests, in the context of negotiations on a climate convention and related protocols.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will identify the number of doctors and nurses employed in Northern Ireland (a) now and (b) in June 1979.

Mr. Needham: The information, which is available for September of each year, is as follows:

Year	Doctors (including GPs)	Nurses
September 1979	2,931	18,711
September 1989	3,459	20,780

Industrial Development Board

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what was the destination by parliamentary constituency of jobs created by the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland from inward investment into Northern Ireland in 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89;

(2) what was the destination, by parliamentary constituency, of the jobs created by the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland in 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Needham: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost. The table details jobs promoted in each parliamentary constituency during the years 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89:

	1986-87				1987-88				1988-89

Factory Space

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total amount of factory space available for letting from the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland and the Local Enterprise Development Unit at 30 September 1989 analysed by parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Needham: Information on the amount of factory space available from the Industrial Development Board is set out at table A.

While the Local Enterprise Development Unit does not normally provide factory space for letting, it assists local enterprise agencies to provide workspace accommodation for small firms. In addition, its private developers scheme encourages the private sector to provide industrial property for letting to small businesses. Figures are not available by parliamentary constituency for LEDU-related property and are therefore provided by district council area in table B.

Table A

Supplementary Note—Table A

1. The figures shown are an aggregate of factory space and include small units held primarily for LEDU clients (under 700 sq metres).
2. The analysis includes factories and small units which are ready for immediate occupation, together with those which require some refurbishment, and those which are surplus to requirements, pending disposal on the open market.

Notes:

1. LEDU's local enterprise programme assists local community based groups to play an active role in economic regeneration and local industrial development by providing assistance to these groups to establish local enterprise agencies. These agencies provide workspace accommodation for small businesses in addition to business advisory services and administrative support.
2. The private developers scheme is aimed at encouraging private sector developers to provide new industrial premises for letting to small businesses. A shortfall grant, representing the difference between the local cost of providing the premises and their commercial value on completion, is available to developers from LEDU.
3. In one particular case in County Fermanagh, LEDU has purchased an industrial estate which is let directly to small businesses. This unique situation arose in order to ensure that eleven LEDU client companies could continue operating at the Necarne estate which had been in danger of closure. LEDU is currently negotiating the sale of the property.

"Working for Patients"

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the future of the Association of District Committees for the health and personal social services in Northern Ireland in the light of "Working for Patients".

Mr. Needham: The Association of District Committees will cease to exist if district committees are stood down following the prepared replacement by four area councils under the forthcoming Order in Council. The need for a central association of the proposed area councils will be for those bodies to determine.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on arrangements for ensuring a voice for the consumer in the Health Service in Northern Ireland after implementation of the proposals contained in "Working for Patients"; what will be the arrangements for ensuring that the role of monitoring and visiting will be carried out; and how many places on area councils and boards will be set aside for representatives of patients.

Mr. Needham: The Department of Health and Social Services has consulted on the advisory and consultative arrangements for health and social services boards and is considering the representations received. An announcement will be made soon. Subject to the necessary legislation being made, boards will no longer have places set aside for representatives. All members will have an interest in securing the best possible services for their board's resident population and non-executive members will be appointed solely on the basis of the contribution they can make.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the current categories of membership of each health and social services board, together with a table showing the categories of membership of each proposed board giving their method of appointment under the present system, and that proposed in "Working for Patients".

Mr. Needham: The chairman and vice-chairman of each board are appointed by the Department of Health and Social Services. Board members are appointed by the Department in proportions as follows:

about 30 per cent. with a minimum of one member per council on the nomination of district councils; about 30 per cent. after consultation with professional bodies; the balance after consultation with the universities and other interested bodies including the trade unions, employers organisations and voluntary bodies.

Subject to the necessary legislation being made it is proposed that boards will consist of a chairman and non-executive members appointed by the Department, prescribed officers of the board including the general manager, and a number of officers of the board appointed by the chairman, non-executive members and the general manager. The number of officer members will not exceed the number of non-executive members.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the current categories of membership of each district committee in Northern Ireland together with a table showing the categories of membership of the proposed area councils along with the method of appointment under the present system and that under the proposals contained in "Working for Patients".

Mr. Needham: District committees in Northern Ireland comprise 16 to 24 members and are appointed by the relevant health and social services boards on the basis of nominations drawn from voluntary and community organisations (at least one third of the membership but not more than one half), district councils (at least one quarter with a minimum of one member per council) with the balance drawn from trade unions, employers organisations and Churches.

The Department of Health and Social Services has consulted on the membership and method of appointment of the proposed area councils and is considering the representations it has received.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agriculture Council

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Brussels Agriculture Council held on 12 and 13 February.

Mr. Gummer: I represented the United Kingdom at this meeting together with my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry), the Parliamentary Secretary in my Department.

The Council considered in detail some of the Commission's proposals for the 1990 price fixing. I explained the United Kingdom position which I also outlined to the House recently. In particular I made it clear that the devaluation proposed for the green pound was insufficient.

The Council will resume consideration of the price proposals at its next meeting on 5 and 6 March.

Biotechnology and Seed Companies

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has made an assessment of the implications for British farmers and British agriculture of the purchase of biotechnology companies and seed companies by agrochemical companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Because of the long-term nature of plant breeding and the heavy investment involved in biotechnological and seed research, larger companies already involved in the agricultural industry and which have the necessary financial resources and research facilities are particularly well placed. Provided there is adequate competition between them and between the United Kingdom companies and their international competitors in the United Kingdom market and that there is room for innovative small companies to identify market opportunities, I see no cause for concern.

Animal Feedingstuffs

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline the controls which exist to regulate the use of therapeutic medicants in animal feedingstuffs.

Mr. Maclean: Therapeutic medicines may be used in animal feedingstuffs only if they are licensed for incorporation under the Medicines Act 1968. Where appropriate, a veterinarian's written direction is required before incorporation of a medicine or sale of a medicated feedingstuff.

Veterinary Medicines (Withdrawal Periods)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what checks have been carried out to ensure animals treated against warble fly have not been sent for slaughter before the withdrawal period recommended by the manufacturers has expired; and if he will publish the results;

(2) which checks have been carried out to ensure sheep dipped in an organophosphorous solution have not been sent for slaughter before the withdrawal period recommended by the manufacturers; and if he will publish the results.

Mr. Maclean: Withdrawal periods for licensed veterinary medicines, where stipulated, are designed to ensure that any residues in products from the treated animal are at safe levels. Residue levels are checked by my Department through its extensive programme of monitoring at slaughterhouses and on farms. For maximum effectiveness monitoring is carried out on a carefully randomised basis, not on target groups, but the results to date have not given any evidence of problems which could be attributed to warble fly treatment or sheep dipping.

Antibiotics (Milk)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what checks he has carried out to establish the presence or otherwise of antibiotics in milk destined for human consumption; what the results show; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: All antibiotic products must be licensed under the Medicines Act. One of the licence conditions is that the product label must include details of the withholding period to be observed before milk can be taken for human consumption. The working party on veterinary residues in animal products keeps the position under review and, in addition, the Milk Marketing Board operates a strict testing regime for antibiotics in milk and applies severe penalties if consignments fail.

Food Labelling

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to extend food labelling requirements relating to contents to wine and beer.

Mr. Maclean: I expect the Commission of the European Communities to discharge its commitment in this area and to make proposals to the Council shortly for ingredient listing on the labels of all alcoholic drinks.

Safety Tests

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department conducts into the safety of commercially marketable products to check on industrially sponsored safety tests.

Mr. Maclean: The Department commissions and draws upon a wide range of research to fulfil its responsibilities for the safety and standard of food products, pesticides and veterinary medicines.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food over what period he expects to have results from his recently announced research programme on bovine spongiform encephalopathy; whether he intends to publish it; whether the research covers milk as well as meat; and whether animals other than cattle, pigs and chickens will be tested.

Mr. Curry: The results of the research programme on bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) initiated by the Department in 1987, will become available at intervals over the next 10 years. We shall follow our general policy of publishing the results of the research that we fund. Already since 1987, major papers have been published announcing the discovery, the transmission of the agent, the structure of the protein associated with infectivity and the results of epidemiological studies.

The Department will be funding research into the infectivity of a wide range of organs, tissues and secretions, including milk, from BSE-affected cattle.

Experiments are in progress or planned to determine the transmissibility of bovine spongiform encephalopathy to a range of host species including goats, hamsters, marmosets, mice, mink and sheep, in addition to cattle, chickens and pigs.

Sheepmeat Premium

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's procedures to ensure that the European Community sheepmeat premium is paid only in respect of eligible sheep.

Mr. Curry: The Department carefully checks every claim for sheep annual premium to verify that the scheme rules have been complied with, and that payments are made only in respect of eligible animals.

Turkeys (Feed Compounds)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what on-the-spot checks by his officials have been made in the last 12 months at turkey-rearing units owned by companies that mix their own feed compounds, to ascertain what kind of antibiotics have been added.

Mr. Maclean: Under the terms of the Medicines Act 1968 and regulations made under it, all businesses that manufacture medicated feedingstuffs are required to register with the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain and are subject to regular inspection by the society to ensure compliance with the requirements of medicines legislation.

Meat Processing

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what controls there are on the use of processing aids to allow meats to absorb water.

Mr. Maclean: Products containing water retention agents are subject to the provisions of the Food Act 1984, the Food Labelling Regulations 1984, the Meat Products and Spreadable Fish Products Regulations 1984 and the Miscellaneous Additives in Food Regulations 1980. There are also Community regulations controlling the water content of frozen chickens. Any ingredient used to increase the water content of meat would have to be declared in the list of ingredients. Where added water comprises more than 5 per cent. of the finished product it must also be declared in the list of ingredients. There are special labelling rules covering the declaration of added water in cured meats.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information may be found in (a) table A9 of the mid-year supplement of the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics" and (b) table 12 of the latest monthly press notice on the current account of the balance of payments, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Interest Rates

127. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the impact of the current level of interest rates upon United Kingdom export performance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In the fourth quarter of 1989, the volume of exports (less oil and erratics) was 4 per cent. higher than in the previous quarter and 15 per cent. higher than a year earlier. This is clear evidence that production is being switched to export markets as domestic demand has slowed in response to the tightening of policy.

Trade Deficit

128. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the trade deficit.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend receives a few letters each month from members of the public concerning the trade deficit.

Share Ownership

129. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the numbers of new shareholders since 1979; and whether he intends to promote measures to further encourage the growth of individual share ownership.

Mr. Lilley: The joint Treasury and stock exchange survey carried out in January and February 1989 estimated that approximately 9 million people own shares directly—20 per cent. of the adult population; a threefold increase since 1979.

Capital Investment

130. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest figures for capital investment by business.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest estimates of business investment are given in the table. In the two years to 1988 business investment grew by over 30 per cent. to reach £51·4 billion at constant 1985 prices. In the first three quarters of 1989 it was 12 per cent. higher than in the same period a year earlier, seasonally adjusted and at constant 1985 prices.

Personal Data

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many members of staff in Customs and Excise have been disciplined for breaching internal regulations on the disclosure of personal data within the last five years;

(2) if he will set out the procedure within Customs and Excise for authorising transfers of personal data to other Government Departments; and at what level such decisions are authorised;

(3) on what grounds decisions are taken to transfer personal data held by Customs and Excise to other Government Departments;

(4) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from Customs and Excise to the police; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(5) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from Customs and Excise to other Government Departments; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(6) what internal guidelines covering the transfer of personal data to other Government Departments are available to staff in Customs and Excise; and whether he will place a copy of any such guidelines in the Library;

(7) what kind of personal data held by the Customs and Excise, whether on computer or manually, are transferred to other Government Departments;

(8) what kinds of personal data held by Customs and Excise are transferred to the police; and whether records are kept of such transfers;

(9) what plans exist in Customs and Excise for the transfer of personal data via the Government data network; and what new procedures have been adopted to prevent unauthorised transfers of such data;

(10) what records are kept of transfers of personal data from Customs and Excise to other Government Departments; and whether the Data Protection Registrar has access to the relevant records;

(11) whether records will be kept of all personal data transferred from Customs and Excise, to other Government Departments via the Government data network;

(12) whether the rules governing the transfer of personal data from the Customs and Excise to other Government Departments are the same for data held manually as for data held on computer.

Mr. Ryder: Much of the information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. Customs and Excise maintain extensive records, many of which contain personal data. These records may be either manually recorded or computerised, and they cover a wide range of different subjects.

Where the information is computerised disclosure is made in accordance with the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984. This Act allows the Data Protection Registrar access to computerised personal records. Customs and Excise do not maintain a record of personal data disclosed.

Currently Customs and Excise do not exchange data with any other Government Departments via the Government data network other than for updating and returning personal data relating to staff employment (salary, overtime and so on) on the Chessington pay system, because the Chessington computer centre acts as an agent for payroll processing. Customs and Excise have no plans to maintain records, or to issue specific instructions dealing with the transfer of personal data over the Government data network.

Disclosure of personal information is made in accordance with statutory provisions or where it is in the public interest. The authority to disclose is given at no lower than grade 7. There are a number of legal provisions providing for disclosure:

Data Protection Act 1984: S.34 (6)(b)
Finance Act 1972: S.127
VAT Act 1983: S.44
Gaming Act 1968, Schedules 2, 3 and 4
Betting and Gaming Duties Act 1982, Schedule 2 paragraph 8
Finance Act 1969: S.59
Customs and Excise Management Act 1979: S.9 (b)

All these are held in the Library of the House.

Instructions to staff are contained in various standing instructions based on the provisions of the Official Secrets Act, the Data Protection Act, and the Finance Act 1972 in particular. Customs and Excise have no record of any member of their staff having been disciplined for breaching internal regulations on the disclosure of personal data within the last five years.

VAT

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement as to how far charities and non-profit-making organisations other than local authorities are covered by article 13A1 of the sixth European Community directive on harmonisation of value added tax.

Mr. Ryder: Services and goods supplied by charities are exempt from VAT under article 13A1 of the EC sixth VAT directive if they are linked to welfare and social security work, or the protection of children and young people. VAT exemption under article 13A1 also applies to services closely linked to sport or physical education and certain cultural services supplied by non-profit-making organisations (but some member states, including the United Kingdom, under a permitted derogation, continue to tax such supplies); to children's or young people's education, school or university education, vocational training or retraining provided by bodies established for this purpose; to certain supplies of staff by religious or philosophical institutions; to activities of public radio and television bodies other than those of a commercial nature; and, provided that exemption is not likely to cause distortion of competition, to services and closely related goods supplied by a wide range of non-profit-making organisations to their members, and to services and goods supplied by such organisations and by various charitable bodies in connection with their fund-raising events. Furthermore, charities and other non-profit-making organisations engaged in certain activities, such as hospital and medical care, specified by article 13A1 as being in the public interest, may exempt their services if carried out in recognised establishments or by staff with a statutory qualification.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost if the value added tax levied on energy efficient appliances and insulation material was reduced to (a) 10 per cent., (b) 5 per cent. and (c) zero.

Mr. Ryder: Information is not available on which to base estimates.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost of reducing the value added tax levied on recycled material to (a) 10 per cent., (b) 5 per cent. and (c) zero.

Mr. Ryder: Information is not available on which to base estimates.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost of reducing the value added tax rate levied on non-recyclable, non-biodegradable packaging to (a) 10 per cent., (b) 5 per cent. and (c) zero.

Mr. Ryder: There would be no measurable revenue loss because normal packaging is regarded as an integral part of the goods it contains and is therefore taxed at the same rate when the goods are supplied.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to the Exchequer and the expected take-up of fitting cars with catalytic converters if the value added tax of fitting catalytic converters was reduced to (a) zero (b) 5 per cent. and (c) 10 per cent.

Mr. Ryder: Information on which to base an estimate is not readily available.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue would be raised if the value added tax levied on energy efficient appliances and insulation material was increased to (a) 20 per cent., (b) 25 per cent. and (c) 30 per cent.

Mr. Ryder: Information is not available on which to base estimates.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue would be raised if the value added tax rate levied on non-recyclable, non-biodegradable packaging was (a) kept to 15 per cent. and (b) raised to (i) 20 per cent., (ii) 25 per cent. and (iii) 30 per cent.

Mr. Ryder: No measurable extra revenue would accrue because normal packaging is regarded as an integral part of the goods it contains and is therefore taxed at the same rate when the goods are supplied.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much value added tax was paid per annum by a family consisting of a married man on three quarters of average male earnings, his wife and two children in 1978-79; and what is the most recent estimate.

Mr. Ryder: Figures for 1978-79 have been placed in the Library of the House and estimates for 1989-90 were given in reply to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown) on 8 January 1990, at column 559.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much value added tax was paid per annum by a family consisting of a married man on (a) twice and (b) three times average male earnings, his wife and two children in 1978-79; and what is the most recent estimate;

(2) how much value added tax was paid per annum by a family consisting of a married man on half of average male earnings, his wife and two children in 1978-79; and what is the most recent estimate.

Mr. Ryder: The levels of earnings specified fall outside the range for which reliable estimates of household VAT payments can be made.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much would be raised if the value added tax levied on recycled material was increased to (a) 20 per cent., (b) 25 per cent. and (c) 30 per cent.

Mr. Ryder: Information is not available on which to base estimates.

Excise Duties

Mr. Parry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what conclusions he has reached from available information on the regressive nature of excise duties on tobacco and alcohol.

Mr. Ryder: The amount of duty paid by a household depends on the expenditure it makes on tobacco and alcohol. As households are free to choose that expenditure in accordance with their own preferences, there is no necessary link between duty payments and income.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the impact of indexation of excise duties by product on (a) inflation and (b) revenues in 1990-91 and a full year.

Mr. Ryder: The impact of indexation of excise duties by product on the retail prices index and revenues in 1990-91 and a full year is shown in the table:

Duty Item	Retail prices index Per cent.	Revenue/Yield 1990-91 £ million	Revenue/Yield Full year £ million
Tobacco	0.16	265	290
Petrol	0·14	480	495
Derv	0·01	110	115
Beer	0·07	160	175
Wine	0·06	55	55
Spirits	0·04	80	85
Vehicle excise duty	0·06	230	230
Cider	negligible	5	5
Rebated oils	negligible	15	15
Total	0.54	1,400	1,465

The indexation factor used is the 7·7 per cent. rise in the retail prices index between December 1988 and December 1989.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the proportion of excise duties, broken down by product, paid by those on different incomes.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to an article entitled "The effects of taxes and benefits on household income, 1986" in the December 1988 issue of Economic Trends.

European Monetary System

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about sterling's participation in the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ryder: I have received a number of representations.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a further statement on the prospects of the United Kingdom seeking to place sterling within the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ryder: The Government have made it clear that the United Kingdom will join the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS during stage 1 of the Delors plan. The conditions for entry were set out following the Madrid summit.

Premium Bonds

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the effect on sales has been of raising the minimum purchase of premium bonds to £100.

Mr. Ryder: In the six months since the change premium bond purchases averaged some 58,300 a month to a value of about £19·7 million. During the corresponding period in 1988, premium bond purchases averaged around 166,400 per month to a value of some £26·4 million.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints he has received to date about the increase in the minimum value of a purchase of premium bonds to £100.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 13 February 1990]: My right hon. Friend and I have received a number of representations about the increase in the minimum purchase of premium bonds from right hon. and hon. Members on behalf of constituents and from members of the public.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is (a) the number of people investing in premium bonds each month since the change to a minimum investment of £100, (b) the number of persons who purchased bonds in each of the six months before the change and (c) the value of the bonds purchased in each of those months.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The minimum purchase for those aged 16 and over was increased to £100 on 1 July 1989. The number and value of premium bonds purchased in each month since the change are:

1989	Number (000s)	Value (£ million)
July	57·4	21·4
August	63·2	24·7
September	60·2	22·0
October	60·4	20·1
November	58·8	17·0
December	49·6	13·1

The number and value of premium bonds purchased in each of the six months prior to the change are:

January	197·3	29·6
February	170·4	25·2
March	171·9	24·4
April	170·5	24·6
May	163·2	25·1
June	190·4	22·5

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average value of the holdings of premium bonds.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The average value of each holding since premium bonds were introduced in 1956 is around £95.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current rate of interest on premium bonds; and how much of the monthly and annual interest is paid out in prizes.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The rate of interest used to calculate the total prize fund is currently 6·5 per cent. per annum of the value of bonds eligible for each prize draw.

Import Duties

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the sum collected by the Customs and Excise in import duties at London Heathrow airport for the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Ryder: Customs and anti-dumping duties and agricultural levies collected at London Heathrow and Gatwick airports for the financial year ended 31 March 1989 totalled £300 million. Separate figures for Heathrow are not available.

Local Government Finance

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the implications for economic policy of a 15 per cent. increase in local authority spending in 1990-91.

Mr. Major: The Government's firm control of public expenditure, and the reduction in general Government expenditure as a share of gross domestic product, have played a major part in the successful conduct of economic policy. The Government are determined that this should continue. There is no doubt that an increase of that order in local authority spending would be unhelpful, and would impose a heavy burden on community charge payers, for which the responsible local council would be accountable.

Cigarettes

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show the tax paid on a pack of 20 cigarettes in each EEC country as a percentage of the total price and the average price of a pack of 20 cigarettes in each country; and what were the figures five years ago.

Mr. Ryder: The figures for current and 1985 taxation and price levels of a pack of 20 cigarettes in each EC country are as follows:

Excise duty and VAT on 20 cigarettes in the most popular price category: as at 12 February 1990[1]

SOCIAL SECURITY

Personal Data

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many members of staff in his Department have been disciplined for breaching internal regulations on the disclosure of personal data held by his Department within the last five years;

(2) if he will set out the procedure within his Department for authorising transfers of personal data to other Government Departments; and at what level such decisions are authorised;

(3) on what grounds decisions are taken to transfer personal data held by his Department to other Government Departments;

(4) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from his Department to the police; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(5) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from his Department to other Government Departments; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(6) what internal guidelines covering the transfer of personal data to other Government Departments are available to staff in his Department; and whether he will place a copy of any such guidelines in the Library;

(7) what kinds of personal data held by his Department are transferred to the police; and whether records are kept of such transfers;

(8) what kind of personal data held by his Department, whether on computer or manually, are transferred to other Government Departments;

(9) what records are kept of transfers of personal data from his Department to other Government Departments; and whether the Data Protection Registrar has access to the relevant records;

(10) whether the rules governing the transfer of personal data from his Department to other Government Departments are the same for data held manually as for data held on computer.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information requested concerning the number of transfers of personal data to other Government Departments is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

It is Government policy that information obtained about a member of the public should be used only for the purpose for which it was acquired. Information held in social security records, both in manual and computerised form, is considered to have been given to the Department for social security purposes only and it is not normally available to other Government Departments. There is, however, statutory provision for the transfer of certain limited information from the Department to the Inland Revenue in connection with the PAYE, national insurance and statutory sick pay schemes.

In other circumstances, where there is no statutory function, requests for information from social security records made by other Government Departments are considered only if the information would prevent the duplication of public funds, help the prosecution of a serious crime, meet the welfare needs of the individual concerned or would be in the public interest.

Information may be disclosed in confidence, in individual cases, to the police in circumstances which involve serious crime.

Where information is held on computer, disclosure to other Government Departments and the police is made only as permitted by purposes 41 to 70 of the Data Protection Act 1984. Under that Act, the Data Protection Registrar has no automatic right of access to individual personal records.

Instructions concerning the disclosure of information are issued to all staff dealing with social security business. These are in the process of revision and we will consider placing a copy in the Library in due course.

During the past five years, 13 members of staff have been reprimanded at a local level for minor breaches of the rules governing disclosure of information and 10 have been reprimanded at headquarters level for more serious breaches of the rules.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans exist in his Department for the transfer of personal data via the Government data network; and what new procedures have been adopted within the Department to prevent unauthorised transfers of such data.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department plans to use the Government data network for the provision of computer services to the offices of the Department, the employment service and the Department of Health and Social Services in Northern Ireland as part of the operational strategy. Additionally the Department plans to use the Government data network for other departmental systems as required. Organisational and technical safeguards which apply to all the Department's networks, including the Government data network, ensure that access to personal data is in accordance with authorisations.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether records will be kept of all personal data transferred to other Government Departments via the Government data network.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The types and purposes of transfer of personal computer data to other Government Departments, whether via the GDN or otherwise, are recorded in accordance with the Data Protection Act.

Outturn Expenditure

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide details of outturn expenditure for Department of Social Security offices in each local authority area on (a) single payments in 1987-88, (b) social fund 1988-89, (c) social fund 1989-90, up to the latest available date and (d) budget allocations for the social fund 1990-91.

Mr. Scott: Information on the basis of local authority areas is not available. Information by local office relating to single payments in 1987-88, and the social fund in 1988-89 and the period April 1989 to December 1989, is in the Library. Budget allocations for 1990-91 will be announced in due course.

Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the maximum delays occurring in cases where hospital medical reports are required for consideration by social security appeal tribunals, resulting in adjournments for appellants; and what is being done to reduce such delays.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Figures showing the delays caused to social security appeal tribunal cases while awaiting hospital medical reports are not collected centrally. We are, however, aware of the delays that these reports can create. Provision of the reports is not part of hospital doctors' terms of service and the Department is entirely dependent on the good will of consultants.

In 1988 my noble Friend Lord Skelmersdale wrote to the chairmen of all regional health authorities explaining the problem to them and asking them to encourage consultants to provide reports when requested and to do so with the least possible delay. We know from the replies that subsequently came to the Department that this request was widely disseminated to consultants. In addition, medical and lay staff in the Department's regional offices take every opportunity to remind consultants and their secretaries of the problems caused for claimants by these delays.

Pensioners

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many, and what percentage of, women pensioners receive a full national insurance retirement pension on the basis of their own national insurance contributions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that it is possible to provide figures in the form requested on a Great Britain basis only. Of the 2,173,730 women resident in Great Britain who receive a category A pension, based upon their own contributions, approximately 73 per cent. receive a full rate pension.

Social Fund

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has on the relationship between social fund claims and receipt of, and level of, other social security benefits.

Mr. Scott: Budgeting loans and community care grants are available to income support recipients, and crisis loans to anyone without resources in an emergency. The number of social fund applications in the periods 1988-89 and April 1989 to December 1989 and the national income support caseload are set out in the table:

	Community care (000's)	Budgeting loans (000's)	Crisis loans (000's)	Income Support caseload[1] (000's)
1988-89	315	933	501	May 4,350 August 4,420 November 4,260 February 4,350
1989-90 (April-December)	375	840	464	May 4,160 August 4,310 November 4,352

[1] As derived from the Quarterly Statistical Enquiry and rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in respect of a man who becomes entitled to invalidity benefit at the age of 60 years in each of the tax years 1990-91, 2000-01, 2010-11, and 2020-21, after having paid full class 1 contributions in each prior tax year from 1978-79, what he estimates will be (a) the maximum and average amounts of such a man's invalidity benefit, including invalidity allowance and additional pension at 1989-90 prices, (i) if clause 4 of the Social Security Bill is enacted, (ii) if the present position remains unchanged, (b) the corresponding amounts of retirement pension such a man will receive at normal retirement date if he remains on invalidity benefit until that date and then retires and (c) the corresponding amounts of widow's pension the widow of such a man will receive if he dies on the day after he becomes entitled to invalidity benefit and she is eligible for a widow's pension.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The right hon. Member's question calls for calculations relating to circumstances which would occur infrequently. Furthermore, projections of the average amounts of invalidity benefit for the circumstances stated are not available. The figures set out in the final column therefore relate to the entitlement of a man on average male earnings in each year from 1978-79, with assumptions about earnings growth in the future. In 1987-88, the latest year for which information is available, the average amount of additional pension payable to a 60-year-old man newly entitled to invalidity benefit was £13·64 per week. This compares with a figure of £20·16 which results from the application of average male earnings over the period since 1978-79. Invalidity allowance is not payable for men aged 60 or over when incapacity begins.

The information is as follows:

(a) (i) Invalidity benefit under clause 4 proposals[1-4]

Year becoming entitled to IVB	Maximum amount (£)	Amount based on average male earnings (£)
1990-91	90·97	77·45
2000-01	98·95	83·75
2010-11	86·80	75·00
2020-21	82·25	71·85

(a) (ii) Invalidity benefit under present arrangements[1-4]

Year becoming entitled to IVB	Maximum amount (£)	Amount based on average male earnings (£)
1990-91	90·97	77·45
2000-01	128·95	109·95
2010-11	125·60	110·90
2020-21	131·60	118·25

(b) Retirement pension[1-4]

Year reaching age 65	Maximum amount (£)	Average amount (£)
1995-96	96·15	81·30
2005-06	131·75	111·95
2015-16	132·60	116·75
2025-26	139·10	124·75

(c) Widows pension[1,2,4,5]

Year of entitlement	Maximum amount (£)	Average amount (£)
1990-91	90·97	77·45
2000-01	86·25	76·80
2010-11	84·60	77·25
2020-21	87·60	80·95

[1] All figures at 1989-90 prices.

[2] All amounts include the standard rate of invalidity pension, retirement pension or widows pension as the case may be (£43·60); to the extent that there is entitlement to increase for dependants these amounts will increase by £26·20 for an adult and £8·95 for each child.

[3] Maximum amount assumes earnings at the upper earnings limit in each year from 1978-79.

[4] Average amount assumes average male earnings in each year from 1978-79. The figures assume real earnings growth of 1½ per cent. per year.

[5] Amounts of widows pension, assume the widow is aged 55 or over and no guaranteed minimum pension in payment.

HEALTH

Practice Nurses

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many practice nurses are based at general practitioners' surgeries at the current time; and what were the corresponding numbers for the previous five years (a) in the Bolton health authority area, (b) in the North West regional health authority area and (c) in England and Wales.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information on the numbers of practice nurses employed by general practitioners under the ancillary staff scheme is given in the table. Figures are for England only; information in relation to family practitioner services in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

	Bolton		North Western Region		England
Year	Number of nurses	Whole-time equivalents	Number of nurses	Whole-time equivalents

Personal Data

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will set out the procedure within his Department for authorising transfers of personal data to other Government Departments; and at what level such decisions are authorised;

(2) on what grounds decisions are taken to transfer personal data held by his Department to other Government Departments;

(3) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from his Department to the police; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(4) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from his Department to other Government Departments; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(5) what internal guidelines covering the transfer of personal data to other Government Departments are available to staff in his Department; and whether he will place a copy of any such guidelines in the Library;

(6) what kind of personal data held by his Department, whether on computer or manually, are transferred to other Government Departments;

(7) what kinds of personal data held by his Department are transferred to the police; and whether records are kept of such transfers;

(8) what plans exist in his Department for the transfer of personal data via the Government data network; and what new procedures have been adopted within the Department to prevent unauthorised transfers of such data;

(9) what records are kept of transfers of personal data from his Department to other Government Departments; and whether the Data Protection Registrar has access to the relevant records;

(10) whether records will be kept of all personal data transferred to other Government Departments via the Government data network;

(11) whether the rules governing the transfer of personal data from his Department to other Government Departments are the same for data held manually as for data held on computer.

Mr. Freeman: The majority of personal data held by the Department relates to departmental staff records. This information is held in manual and computer systems and access is restricted on a need-to-know basis. This information is transferred to other Government Departments on a regular and routine basis by executive and clerical staff, normally in conjunction with actual or prospective career transfers of the staff between Departments.

Personal data about patients having legally induced abortion is supplied by doctors to the Department's Chief Medical Officer in accordance with the Abortion Regulations 1968, (SI 1968 No. 390 as amended by SI 1969 No. 636, SI 1976 No. 15 and SI 1980 No. 1724). The regulations restrict disclosure of that information except to the persons and in the circumstances specified in the regulations.

Some personal data is held by the Department in respect of young people detained in youth treatment centres and in connection with the activities of the regional medical service, the dental reference service and the social services inspectorate. Where personal medical data have been referred for a second opinion, this is not disclosed for any other purpose unless the individual's consent has been obtained.

The Department also holds some data about the remuneration of general medical practitioners and others in the health services. The regional medical service holds personal data about GPs, but these are not disclosed to other Government Departments.

Regional medical service doctors, in common with any other doctor, have a statutory duty to notify the Chief Medical Officer at the Home Office about individuals considered to be or suspected to be addicted to certain drugs.

All personal data held on computer systems are subject to the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984; this is so whether or not there is any connection to the Government data network.

The only circumstances in which the Department might transfer personal data to the police would be where the Department itself had an interest in an offence, or in other cases where serious crime was involved; no records are kept of such transfers.

Infertility Treatment

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve the range and availability of infertility treatment.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve the range and availability of infertility treatments.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Members for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan), for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo), for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) and for Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson) on 23 January at columns 660-61.

Consultants

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of consultant surgeons within the National Health Service work on a part-time basis in the private sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No information is collected on National Health Service consultants' work in the private sector. Consultants on National Health Service whole-time contracts are permitted private practice earnings up to 10 per cent. of gross whole-time salary. Sixty-nine per cent. of consultant surgeons have maximum part-time or part-time contracts which place no limits on private practice earnings. The Government's proposal to introduce full job plans for all consultants should improve their accountability to local management and make it easier for managers to monitor whether consultants are fulfilling their contractual commitments.

Family Planning Clinics

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the implications of the changes in the National Health Service on family planning clinics.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Under the National Health Service review proposals, districts will be responsible for ensuring that their resident populations have access to a comprehensive range of services and this will include family planning. The new funding arrangements will be particularly helpful to family planning clinics which provide services to residents of many districts. Clinics will be able to obtain resources from all authorities whose residents use their services.

Kidney Machines

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many kidney dialysis machines are currently in use in the Durham area health authority; and how many patients are receiving dialysis in the area.

Mr. Freeman: We do not hold information centrally about the number of kidney dialysis machines in use by health authorities. The hon. Member may care to contact the chairman of the Durham health authority for the information.

Hospital Inventories

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the 1967 report on hospital inventories remains the basis of good practice in the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: The National Association of Health Authorities published a security manual in 1984 which the Department commended to the NHS as a good practical guide on matters relating to security of equipment, stock and premises.

AIDS

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the level of section 64 grant funding since 1984 for each Lighthouse, Terrence Higgins Trust, Mildmay, National AIDS Trust and ACET.

Mr. Freeman: Under the rules of the general grant scheme established under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 the Department can offer four sorts of grant. Most grants are awarded to national voluntary organisations towards their headquarters administrative costs. The Department has made the following section 64 grants to the voluntary organisations identified:

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90
ACET	—	—	—	—	50·0
London Lighthouse
Core revenue grant	—	—	100·0	170·0	300·0
Capital grant	—	—	500·0	750·0	—
Project grant	—	—	—	37·9	—
Mildmay Mission
Core revenue grant	—	—	79·0	162·0	130·0
Capital grant	—	—	321·0	94·0	—
National AIDS Trust (includes pro rata contributions from other Health Departments)
Core revenue grant	—	—	47·6	127·0	228·5
Project grant	—	—	500·0	—	—
Terrence Higgins Trust	40·0	100·0	300·0	400·0	430·0

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to make a decision on AIDS Care Education and Training's application for section 64 funding.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 5 February at column 486.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any progress is being made as a result of the waiting list fund.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The £119 million made available through the waiting list fund over four years has enabled thousands of additional patients to be treated from the waiting lists. Particularly impressive reductions have been made in the Mersey region, which has reduced the number of patients waiting over a year by a quarter in the nine months to December 1989. The region plans to be the first to have no patient waiting longer than two years for treatment.

We are determined to tackle the problem of excessive waiting, and have sent a management team into the 22 districts with the longest waiting lists, backed by money from the waiting list fund. As a result waiting lists in those districts have reduced by 12 per cent. and the number of patients waiting over a year by 17 per cent., with further reductions planned. This work will continue in 1990-91, when the team will be investigating the 100 longest district specialty lists in the country. Nationally, provisional figures for September 1989 suggest that waiting lists have fallen since March, and in particular the numbers waiting over a year.

Mental Health Act Commission

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the Mental Health Act Commission with their qualifications and occupations.

Mr. Freeman: There are no specific qualifications required for appointment to the Mental Health Act Commission.

Dispensing Doctors

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the current average discount percentage deducted from dispensing doctors' remuneration;

(2) when the last inquiry was held into discounts received by dispensing doctors on their drug purchases; and what is the date of the next inquiry.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In 1988-89, the latest period for which figures are available, the discount scale for dispensing doctors withheld an average of 5·7 per cent. of the price of drugs obtained by dispensing doctors. The last discount inquiry established the average discount available to dispensing doctors in 1983. No date has yet been set for a further inquiry.

Deaths on Arrival

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many deaths on arrival were delivered by the police, armed services and voluntary organisations in December 1989 for each of the health authorities operating in West Yorkshire; and what was the cause of death;

(2) how many deaths on arrival were delivered to the health authorities operating in West Yorkshire in December 1987 and December 1988.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The available information on number of deaths on arrival at hospitals covered by West Yorkshire metropolitan ambulance service during December 1987, 1988 and 1989 is given in the following table. There have been no military ambulances deployed in West Yorkshire.

Number of deaths on arrival

Health authority	December 1987	December 1988	December 1989	Number carried December 1989
				Police	Voluntary
Leeds Eastern	17	14	20	n/a	n/a
Leeds Western	7	14	16	0	0
Bradford	34	30	29	29	0
Pontefract	n/a	16	20	0	0
Airedale	8	3	9	0	0
Calderdale	16	8	12	0	0

Health authority	December 1987	December 1988	December 1989	Number carried December 1989 Police	Voluntary
Dewsbury	10	11	19	0	0
Huddersfield	13	4	7	0	0
Wakefield	8	8	7	0	0
TOTAL		108	139

n/a—Not available.

Details of the cause of death could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Figures for the number of deaths on arrival can fluctuate significantly, depending on the range of cases in a particular month and if there has been any temporary increase in illness locally, for example, as a result of a flu epidemic.

Depo Provera

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the contraceptive drug Depo Provera is approved for use in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Depo Provera is licensed in the United Kingdom for use in short-term contraception where an oral contraceptive is contraindicated or considered inappropriate, for wives of men undergoing vasectomy and for women being immunised against rubella; it is also licensed for long-term use in women for whom other contraceptives are contraindicated or have caused unacceptable side-effects. In addition, the product is licensed for the treatment of endometriosis, and of certain malignant tumours.

NHS (Financial Management)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what decisions have been taken on the type of information needed for the central assessment of the financial management performance of buyers' activity under the proposals of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is one of the issues addressed in our consultative paper "Framework for Information Systems: Information"; see annex 11, section 3. Copies are in the Library. No firm decisions will be taken until completion of the consultation exercise which ends on 30 March.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated total saving that it is hoped will follow the introduction of the changes in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill; and what is the breakdown of these savings by category, including hospital closure, more rapid throughput of patients and reductions in drug expenditure.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The object of our reforms of the Health Service is to improve the choice and quality of services available to NHS patients rather than to produce savings. Some of the proposals will lead to the more considered and cost-effective use of resources and this will enable the Health Service to increase the level of patient care it provides.

NHS Reform

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total amount spent to date on the preparation of the changes proposed in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill on (a) additional staff costs, (b) staff diverted from other work, (c) materials and (d) contracts placed with non-National Health Service bodies.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Additional funds allocated to health authorities in this financial year are for the preparation of the NHS review proposals. None of these central allocations has been directed to specific clauses in the Bill.

Homes for the Elderly

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, further to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 231, (1) if he will give his reasons for deciding that local authorities will have to contribute more to the support of people in homes under their own management than to that of people in private homes;

(2) what are the reasons why Government contributions to support people living in homes for the elderly are not to be calculated on the same basis, irrespective of whether the home is publicly or privately run.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answers 9 February and 12 February 1990]: As the White Paper "Caring for People" makes clear, the Government recognise that local authorities will need adequate resources to enable them to discharge their new responsibilities from April 1991 including meeting the care costs of people in private and voluntary residential care and nursing homes. We shall therefore transfer to local authorities the resources which would otherwise have been used to finance care through social security payments to people in residential and nursing homes. The arrangements for paying social security benefits to people in local authority-managed homes will not change.

We want to ensure that local authorities encourage a mixed economy of care and make full use of the independent sector when placing people in residential settings. This will provide residents with a wider choice of accommodation and enable more rational use to be made of public resources.

DEFENCE

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many private security firms are currently hired by (a) his Department and (b) the services; how many firms have been hired for each of the last 10 years; and what is the value of the contracts at 1989 prices.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 7 February 1990]: Twenty-one private security contractors are currently employed by the Ministry of Defence, at both service and civilian establishments. The total number of security contractors employed by the Ministry of Defence in each year from 1983 to 1989 is shown in the table. Figures for the years 1980 to 1982 are not held centrally.

Year	Number of firms
1983	5
1984	9
1985	10
1986	9
1987	10
1988	17
1989	22

The total values at 1989 prices of the private security contracts in each financial year from 1983-84 are as follows:

Information for earlier years is not available.

Financial year	Total value ('000s at 1989 prices) £
1983-84	345
1984-85	461
1985-86	750
1986-87	1,329
1987-88	1,549
1988-89	2,033
1989-90	4,418

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria are used in deciding between competing private security firms for Ministry of Defence contracts.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 7 February 1990]: All contractors who wish to obtain MOD contracts must be listed on the defence contractors list. Companies that apply to join this list are scrutinised by MOD, for financial viability and technical competence. The references of the listed executives are also checked. Many of these companies are members of the British Security Industry Association and the International Professional Security Association, although they do not necessarily have to be members to join the defence contractors list.

When a decision is taken, by unit and command, after careful evaluation, that a guarding contract is to be placed, the contracts branch is asked to submit the details of the requirement to those companies listed on the defence contractors list. A company that wishes to be considered for tender or be awarded a contract must be on the defence contractors list.

The decision to award a contract for security guarding is based on the company's ability to meet the technical requirements of the tasks together with value for money. Technical compliancy is decided upon by a technical evaluation panel which includes security experts from the unit/command/department in question. This examines all technical aspects, that is, the firm's ability to perform the tasks effectively and efficiently. All the competing firms are then placed in an order of compliancy. A financial analysis of each tender is carried out by the contracts branch alone. The contracts branch then decides, using the technical panel's information on compliancy, with which contractor it will place the contract.

SCOTLAND

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the number of persons who (a) were on remand and (b) had not been convicted amongst the Scottish prison population on any one day; and how many were (i) males and (ii) females.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is set out in the table:

Average daily remand population[1] in Scottish penal establishments during January 1990

	Untried	Convicted awaiting sentence	Total on remand
Males	575	144	719
Females	31	4	35
Total	606	148	753

[1] Provisional.

Prisoners

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current prison population in Scotland in total; how many are (a) males and (b) females; and what were the corresponding figures for (i) 1985, (ii) 1986, (iii) 1987, (iv) 1988 and (v) 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is set out in the table:

Average daily population in Scottish penal establishments for the month of January 1985-90

	Males	Females	[2] Total
1985	4,718	144	4,863
1986	5,191	171	5,361
1987	5,220	176	5,396
1988	5,115	152	5,267
[1]1989	4,826	147	4,973
[1]1990	4,489	124	4,612

[1] Provisional.
[2] Some of the numbers do not total due to rounding.

Fishing Industry

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions in the past five years he has provided compensation or payments to the Scottish fishing industry as a result of losses caused by inclement weather; what was the basis of such schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: None.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many dart gun firearms certificates have been granted, how many persons now have such weapons in Scotland, broken down by police force areas; and how many are held by (a) deer farmers and (b) others.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Guns that are specially designed or adapted to discharge tranquillising darts are defined as prohibited weapons under the terms of section 5 of the Firearms Act 1968 and as such may not be purchased, acquired or possessed by anyone without the prior authority in writing of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, and the consequent issue of a firearm certificate by the chief constable of the area in which the applicant is based.

The available information is set out in the table:

Police force	Total number of current S.5 authorities relating to dart guns	Number of S.5 authorities relating to dart guns known to be issued to deer farmers
Central Scotland police	5	2
Dumfries and Galloway constabulary	6	Nil
Fife constabulary	4	1
Grampian police	17	2
Lothian and Borders police	11	1
Northern constabulary	17	2
Strathclyde police	8	1
Tayside police	7	2

In addition one registered firearms dealer in the Fife constabulary area has been given authority under section 5 to deal specifically in tranquillising dart guns.

EMPLOYMENT

Employment Rehabilitation Service

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when Egham residential employment rehabilitation centre was established; and for how long 24-hour medical cover has been available.

Mr. Eggar: Egham employment rehabilitation centre was officially opened in December 1943. Twenty four-hour medical cover has been available since that time.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to transfer the employment rehabilitation service from the Training Agency to the employment service.

Mr. Eggar: The organisation of the employment rehabilitation service is among the subjects being considered as part of my Department's internal review of services to people with disabilities. A consultative document covering the conclusions of the review will be published soon.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to withdraw 24-hour medical cover from Egham residential employment rehabilitation centre, and what assessment he has made of how this will affect the access to the centre for people with severe disabilities.

Mr. Eggar: There are no plans to withdraw 24-hour medical cover from Egham employment rehabilitation centre.

Exeter Asset Centre

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which organisation is financing the posts of two occupational psychologists at Exeter asset centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Grand Metropolitan Community Services employs two occupational psychologists based at Exeter asset centre, which is otherwise staffed by the Training Agency. This initiative for people with disabilities in the Exeter area is a welcome demonstration of the value of co-operation between the Government and the private sector.

Tobacco Products

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons are employed in (a) Northern Ireland, (b) England, (c) Scotland and (d) Wales in the manufacture of tobacco products; what percentage of the total working population that represents in each of these areas; what is the tax revenue for their products in each country; and what percentage of the total of tobacco producers is produced in each of the four constituent areas of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholls: Information about employment in the tobacco industry by country is available only from the census of employment. The most recent figures are for September 1987. Due to confidentiality restrictions only figures for Northern Ireland and Great Britain can be given. These are as follows:

Employees in employment[1] in the tobacco industry[2] at September 1987

	Number (thousands)	Percentage[3]
Northern Ireland	2·1	0·4
Great Britain	15·0	0·1

[1] Excludes the self-employed.
[2] Activity Heading 4290 of the Standard Industrial Classification 1980.
[3] Percentage of all employees in employment.

Information relating to taxation on tobacco products and tobacco products sales is not available on a regional basis. The United Kingdom figure for tax on tobacco products, including imports, is estimated at £5,800 million for the financial year 1987-88. United Kingdom home-produced tobacco product sales amounted to £6,423 million in 1987.

Homeworkers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many homeworkers are employed in England and Wales and in what industries, giving the most recent figures by year for each of the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 24 January 1990]: The detailed information requested is not available. However, in 1981 a survey estimated that, excluding childminders, 230,000 people were working at home in England and Wales. Consideration is being given to whether a more recent figure can be provided.

Restart

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many restart interviews are planned for the coming year, how many restart follow-up interviews are planned and how many claimant adviser interviews are planned.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 13 February 1990]: Because the interview programme responds to the numbers and circumstances of individual unemployed people, it is not possible to predict how many interviews will be necessary.

Written Answers to Questions

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

South Bank Polytechnic

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, in view of current industrial action by polytechnic lecturers, he will take steps to ensure that students at the polytechnic of the South Bank are able to sit their final examinations during the current academic year and that such examinations will be marked in order to enable successful candidates to obtain degree qualifications.

Mr. Jackson: This is a matter for the authorities of the polytechnic. Proposals for an interim settlement of the dispute are currently subject to a ballot.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how calculations are made of special educational support grant in budgeting for special educational needs; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what allowances are made to local education authorities for special educational needs; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what allowances have been made available to local education authorities for special educational needs in the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend determines each year the distribution of education support grants (ESGs) and local education authority training grants (LEATGs) in the light of current needs and priorities, including those relating to special educational needs (SEN). Over the past five years, allocations have been made under the ESGs and LEATGs programmes (and the latter's predecessor, the in-service teacher training grant scheme) for a variety of activities to promote SEN provision and training in both the schools and further education sectors. The allocations of supported expenditure totalled:

Year	Total expenditure supported under SEN-related ESG and LEATGs activities (£ million)
1985-86	4·3
1986-87	3·8
1987-88	6·3
1988-89	10·8
1989-90	8·6

These specific grants are additional to the general rate support grant (RSG) allocations which each local authority received in the years in question. The distribution of RSG between authorities takes account of additional education needs, including SEN. But it is for each authority to determine the deployment of its RSG allocation, and the pattern of spending between different aspects of its services, including SEN provision.

Teaching Vacancies

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the latest information he has on teaching post vacancies broken down by school type and subject area for (a) England and Wales, and (b) Lancashire.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The numbers of vacancies in January 1989 for full-time permanent teachers in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England and Wales and in Lancashire are shown in the table.

	England and Wales		Lancashire

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Western European Union

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will approach the Western European Union Council to urge it to take immediate steps to halt the arms race in the middle east and draw up a list of products and technologies which member countries would undertake not to supply to any country in the near or middle east.

Mr. Waldegrave: We remain concerned about the proliferation of armaments in the middle east but do not believe the Western European Union would be an appropriate forum to take the action proposed.

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support in the WEU Council the proposal that the French Prime Minister's 7 September 1989 proposal be taken up and a WEU programme prepared for purposeful verification and disarmament co-operation.

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Kingdom fully supports the WEU's work on European collaboration on verification. The subject is due to be discussed at the forthcoming WEU Ministeral.

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support the Western European Union Assembly recommendation that the Western European Union Council instructs a working group to conduct, in consultaton with the European Commission, a detailed study of the problems that will arise for the security of member states when the single European market is created and report to the Assembly on its conclusions.

Mr. Waldegrave: The main impact on the security of EC member states of the Single European Act will arise from the removal of frontier controls and will relate to problems of crime, drugs and terrorism. These are already being discussed within the EC and in other fora such as the Pompidou Group of the Council of Europe.

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action has been taken on the WEU Assembly recommendation urging the WEU Council to request the Chinese Government to accede to the international covenant on civil and political rights and the international covenant on economic, social and cultural rights.

Mr. Waldegrave: The WEU Council has yet to discuss the Assembly's recommendation in detail.

Prevention of Military Risks

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on the conditions and framework in which a European centre for preventing military risks might be set up, as proposed by the Belgian Government.

Mr. Waldegrave: Discussions are in train at the talks in Vienna on confidence and security building measures (CSBMs) about the possible establishment of dedicated communications links among all 35 participants to deal with security-related issues; and the conventional forces in Europe (CFE) talks are likely to result in the creation of some kind of joint consultative commission among the 23 members of NATO and the Warsaw Pact. It remains to be seen whether any further body would be useful.

Ivory

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Gordon of 2 February, Official Report, column 404, what steps he has taken to establish that any ivory obtained directly or through intermediaries did not originate from illegally poached elephants.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 2 February, Official Report, column 405

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what grounds the United Kingdom has given approval to Hong Kong to reopen its markets in the ivory trade.

Mr. Waldegrave: Hong Kong banned imports of ivory in June 1989 and this is unaffected by the reservation that we have entered on behalf of Hong Kong. Also, in disposing of its stocks of ivory, Hong Kong will export only to countries which are not parties to CITES or which are parties to CITES and have entered appropriate reservations.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the computerisation of the current ivory stocks in Hong Kong is now complete; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: So far, data covering two thirds of the commercial stocks of ivory have been entered into the computer system.

Romania

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any information on the privatisations planned by the Romanian Government.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Romanian authorities have not so far made any specific proposals.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans Her Majesty's Government have to assist the Romanian Government to achieve the privatisation of some of their industries.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Romanians have not so far asked for such help. We shall certainly consider carefully and sympathetically any such request that we receive.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries differing categories of employees in his Department are prohibited from visiting without obtaining prior permission; and for what reason.

Mr. Sainsbury: It has been long-standing practice to give advice to all staff on the problems they may face in travelling to certain countries, and to require them to give notice of such visits, particularly if they have access to classified information. On security grounds we do not publish the list of countries concerned, but it is kept regularly under review.

European Community

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the need for institutional progress within the European Community beyond the single market programme, as a result of (a) the impetus within the Community itself and (b) the developments occurring in the neighbouring countries of eastern Europe.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 7 February to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell), Official Report, column 693.

Nicaragua

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to resume normal trading links with Nicaragua after the elections in the current month.

Mr. Sainsbury: Our trading relations with Nicaragua are already normal.

Uganda

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Ugandan Government on the reported violations of human rights which continue to occur in the Teso region of Uganda.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have already raised these reports with the Ugandan Government, who are committed to upholding human rights standards.

German Unification

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on implications for the United Kingdom of German unification; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The unification of Germany will have important consequences for the United Kingdom, for our partners in the EC and NATO, and for others. There will be discussions on all these questions in the appropriate fora, including, as has just been agreed in Ottawa, a meeting between the four powers and the two Germanies.

South Africa

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement setting out the EEC agreed sanctions against South African trade; and if Her Majesty's Government have any entitlement to cancel any of these measures unilaterally.

Mr. Waldegrave: The following measures adoped by EC partners relate to trade with South Africa:

—A rigorously controlled embargo on exports of arms and para-military equipment to South Africa.
—A rigorously controlled embargo on imports of arms and para-military equipment from South Africa.
—The cessation of oil exports to South Africa.
—The cessation of exports of sensitive equipment destined for the police and armed forces of South Africa.
—The prohibition of all new collaboration in the nuclear sector.
—A ban on imports of certain South African gold coins.
—A ban on certain new investment in South Africa.
—A ban on the import of iron and steel.

Certain of these measures were enacted by the European Communities under the Community treaties, whereas others amongst them were adoped by the member states outside the Community treaties as such. As my hon. Friend will be aware, we are in consultation with our European partners on the question whether the various measures continue to make good sense in the light of the most recent developments in South Africa which, it will be clear, respond directly to the actions for which the Twelve have called since 1986.

If we fail to reach agreement, the Government must reserve the right to act on their own if necessary.

ENERGY

Nuclear Energy

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the future relationship between Nuclear Electric and Nirex.

Mr. Baldry: Upon vesting, the CEGB's 42·5 per cent. shareholding in UK Nirex Ltd. will be transferred to Nuclear Electric.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has concerning the proportion of the unit cost of nuclear electricity that is allocated to waste management and decommissioning in France and the United Kingdom, respectively.

Mr. Baldry: Direct comparisons between France and the United Kingdom cannot be made because nuclear power is generated in each country by different reactor types which have different waste management and decommissioning requirements.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to establish a special Government fund to cover the decommissioning costs of nuclear power stations, to be filled by annual payments from the operators of nuclear power stations.

Mr. Baldry: No. Financial provision for decommissioning costs is a management matter for the operators of nuclear power stations.

Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to require all electricity bills to specify that amount which is directly attributable to the non-fossil fuel obligation.

Mr. Baldry: No.

Nuclear Waste Disposal

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what financial arrangements are being made for the disposal costs of the low-level and intermediate-level wastes produced at Sellafield due to the reprocessing of nuclear fuel rods.

Mr. Baldry: Under the terms of contracts which BNFL has for reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel the costs of disposing of the vast majority of low and intermediate level wastes arising fall to BNFL's customers. BNFL makes provision in its accounts for those costs which do not fall to customers.

BNFL (Contracts)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to his reply of 2 February to the hon. Member for Newport, West, Official Report, column 385, he will set out details of (a) the disaggregated contracts making up the £80 million fuel services, (b) the disaggregated details of the contracts making up the 80 per cent. of additional capacity for overseas customer use of THORP and (c) the details of each export contract requiring the approval of the Secretary of State under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965.

Mr. Baldry: The export contracts awarded to British Nuclear Fuels plc within the past two years were for:

	£ million
Uranium processing services	12
Uranium enrichment services	46
Consultancy services, design and engineering work; technology	9
Spent fuel transport services	13
	80

Orders for additional reprocessing in THORP have been secured from the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, the Netherlands and Switzerland.

Approvals under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965 are given at the time of shipment rather than when contracts are awarded. The details are commercially confidential.

Nuclear Services Group

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson), (Official Report, 5 February, columns 454-56), he will set out the date on which the contract was issued to Nuclear Services Group to advise the Secretary of State on decommissioning costs in regard to electricity industry privatisation; when the report, or reports were received by him from Nuclear Services Group; what was the total costs of the consultancy contract; and if he will place a copy of the report in the Library.

Mr. Baldry: The contract was awarded on 10 April 1989 and the report was received on 16 May 1989. The report considers BNFL's estimates of its decommissioning costs. The cost and content of the report are commercially confidential.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will carry out consultations to establish the degree of disadvantage which higher electricity prices create for significant exporting industries.

Mr. Baldry: Privatisation will create a market in which large users can seek competing bids for supply. To give them time to do so, the Government have asked the electricity industry to offer customers taking more than 1 MW a real price freeze for one year. It would be premature to conclude that such users will face higher prices thereafter.

Wind Power

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what consideration he has given to the application submitted by AEA Technology to undertake a wind power feasibility study in the north of Scotland.

Mr. Peter Morrison: As part of its review of renewable energy technologies, my Department carries out regional resource studies. One of these will be a study to examine the potential wind energy resource in Caithness and Sutherland and this will form part of a wider review of the wind energy resource for the United Kingdom as a whole.

Cash Limits

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether any changes will be made to his Department's cash limits or running costs limits for 1989-90.

Mr. Wakeham [pursuant to his reply, 26 January 1990, Official Report, col. 904]: The cash limit for class VI, vote 6 relating to expenditure on the privatisation of the electricity supply industry in England and Wales has been reduced by £14,000,000 from £30,000,000 to £16,000,000. This change reflects reductions in expenditure on the expenses of privatising the electricity supply industry in 1989-90 resulting from the delay in the vesting which I announced in September last year, and the consequent delay in the flotation of the area boards and the generating companies.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Libel Law

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Attorney-General what plans he has to implement the 1977 Faulks committee report's recommendations that the defence of innocent dissemination in libel law, now available to booksellers, be extended to the printer.

The Attorney-General: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor intends to issue a consultation paper inviting views on proposals to deal with the problems of those who use advanced technology and innocently disseminate defamatory materials. This is one of a number of proposals relating to defamation which will be announced today.

Incitement to Murder

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the criteria used by the prosecution authorities in deciding whether action should be taken over incitement to murder; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The criteria set out in the code for crown prosecutors, issued under section 10 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985, are applied in all prosecutions considered by the crown prosecution service. The criteria require that there is sufficient evidence to afford a realistic prospect of a conviction, and the public interest requires a prosecution in the circumstances.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General what representations have been received by the prosecution authorities in the last year regarding incitement to murder calls against Mr. Rushdie.

The Attorney-General: In March 1989 the Director of Public Prosecutions instructed all chief crown prosecutors to refer to him all correspondence relating to any possible offence of incitement to murder Mr. Rushdie. Over the last year the crown prosecution service has received or had referred to it letters from a total of 39 correspondents in respect of alleged death threats against Mr. Salman Rushdie.

Additionally, three police reports have been received concerning instances of alleged threats.

Liverpool County Court

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Attorney-General what action is being taken in response to complaints lodged with the circuit administrator at Manchester against the conduct of the chief clerk at Liverpool county court; what action is under consideration; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Complaints against the conduct of employees of the Lord Chancellor's Department always receive careful consideration from senior officers. Each complaint has been considered and the conduct of the chief clerk of Liverpool county court has been reviewed; no further action is considered necessary.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Attorney-General what is the total number of complaints lodged with the circuit administrator at Manchester against the conduct of the current chief clerk at Liverpool county court; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Since 1 February 1989, some 82 complaints by the firm of E. Rex Makin & Co. have been lodged with the circuit administrator specifically referring to the conduct of the chief clerk of Liverpool county court.

Defamation

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Attorney-General whether the Government have completed their review of defamation.

The Attorney-General: The Government have examined current issues and complaints relating to the law of defamation and have found that there are justified criticisms principally concerning the way in which the law of defamation operates in practice. The Government now propose the following series of reforming measures.

The powers of the Court of Appeal to review the awards of civil juries, particularly in defamation cases, are not adequate. Even if the Court of Appeal considers that a jury award is excessive or inadequate it can only substitute its own award if both parties agree. Otherwise it is limited to ordering a new trial, which involves further delay and expense to the parties. It is therefore proposed to empower the Court of Appeal itself, in cases where it can now order a retrial, to substitute for the sum awarded by the jury such sum as appears to the Court of Appeal to be proper. This will be done by enlarging the existing statutory powers of the Rule Committee.

The present rules and practice for pleadings in defamation cases have been criticised as being unnecessarily complex, and adding to the difficulty and cost of preparing and conducting litigation. The Lord Chancellor is to invite the Supreme Court Procedure Committee to examine the rules and practice, and to propose reforms. The committee is a body of judges and practitioners which was established in 1982 to make recommendations in relation to Supreme Court practice and procedure.

A plaintiff who is considering whether or not to accept a payment into court needs to know whether the judge will give him an opportunity to make a statement in open court which will clear his name. As a result of a recent change in the rules, a plaintiff can now apply to the judge for approval of a proposed statement before accepting a payment in.

Once the problem of complexity has been tackled the Lord Chancellor will wish to consider providing for some categories of defamation cases to be heard in the county court, with a view to reducing delay and cost and ensuring the most appropriate use of judicial resources.

The Lord Chancellor intends to issue two consultation papers inviting views on proposals to modify specific aspects of the substantive law of defamation. These papers will deal with the problems of those who use advanced technology and innocently disseminate defamatory materials, and the problems which arise when a party to defamation proceedings has died.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Visible Trade

16. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the United Kingdom's visible trade balance in 1989.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest estimate is for a visible trade deficit of £23 billion in 1989.

Inflation

17. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the current inflation rates in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other Group of Seven countries.

Mr. Lilley: The inflation rate in other G7 countries, all but one of which exclude mortgage interest payments from the index, was 4·2 per cent. On a comparable basis the United Kingdom inflation rate was 6·1 per cent. in December 1989.

29. Mr. Bell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many other European Community countries have a higher inflation rate than the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ryder: Four EC countries have higher inflation rates than the United Kingdom when estimates of home owners' costs are excluded so as to bring the published figures on to a more comparable basis.

33. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current rate of inflation.

40. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of inflation.

Mr. Ryder: The all-items annual rate of inflation as measured by the RPI is 7·7 per cent. The underlying rate, excluding mortgage interest payments, is 6·1 per cent.

Family Expenditure

18. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the effect on a married man with a wife who is not working and two children who has a £37,500 mortgage and earns £15,000 a year if (a) mortgage rates are cut by 2 per cent. and (b) if 2p is cut off the standard rate of tax.

Mr. Ryder: The estimated effects of these changes would be (a) a reduction in annual mortgage interest payments, net of basic rate tax relief, of £600 and (b) a reduction in income tax of £212·50.

Child Poverty Action Group

19. Mr. Benn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met representatives of the Child Poverty Action Group to discuss taxation.

Mr. Major: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones).

32. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met representatives of the Child Poverty Action Group to discuss taxation.

Mr. Lilley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones).

Bank of England

20. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend meets the Governor of the Bank of England from time to time to discuss a variety of matters.

Take-home Pay

21. Mr. Moss: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the growth in real take-home pay of a married man with two children on male average earnings during the 1980s.

Mr. Lilley: A married man on average male earnings with two children enjoyed an increase in real take-home pay of over 26 per cent. between 1979-80 and 1989-90.

Interest Rates

22. Mr. Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of interest rates.

52. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Ryder: Bank base rates are 15 per cent.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the current short-term interest rates in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) West Germany.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the current short-term interest rates in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) West Germany.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 15 February.

26. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the current short-term interest rates in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) West Germany.

Mr. Ryder: On 14 February three-month interbank rates were 15·1 per cent in the United Kingdom and 8·5 per cent. in Germany.

37. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from Scottish industry and other business interests about interest rate policy.

38. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from Scottish industry and other business interests about interest rate policy.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such reperesentations.

49. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for reducing interest rates this year.

Mr. Ryder: There will be no early relaxation of policy. Interest rates will remain high for some time to come.

Tax Office

23. Mr. Trotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to transfer offices of the Inland Revenue and the Customs and Excise from London and the south-east to the northern region.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue plans to open new offices in Sunderland and Middlesbrough, taking in total 420 posts from London.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to merge the offices of collectors and inspectors of taxes.

Mr. Lilley: As reported in the Inland Revenue management plan for the next three years, published today, it has been decided that the time is now ripe to consider whether greater operational efficiency and improved service to taxpayers could be obtained by bringing together the work of local collectors and inspectors of taxes. With Ministers' approval, the board is studying all the implications, and planning experiments both to test the concepts involved and to establish the likely benefits to the Department and to taxpayers. Details of these experiments will be announced when this preliminary work is further advanced.

European Monetary System

24. Ms. Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from business in relation to British membership of the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend and I have received a number of representations.

31. Mr. Doran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what realignments there have been within the past 12 months of currency levels within the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ryder: In the last 12 months, there has been one realignment of the exchange rate mechanism on 8 January 1990, involving a narrowing of the lira's margin of fluctuation from ±6 per cent. to ±2¼ per cent.

54. Sir David Steel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average inflation rate of countries participating in the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Major: Using data which exclude estimates of owner-occupier housing costs to provide figures on a more comparable basis, the average inflation rate of countries in the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS was 4·2 per cent. in November 1989.

Crown Estates

25. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the First Crown Estates Commissioner; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Major: My predecessor met the First Crown Estates Commissioner on 12 July 1989. Their discussion covered chiefly the Crown Estate Office's performance in 1988-89 and the forward programme.

Public Expenditure

27. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any allocations have been made from the contingency reserve since the publication of the public expenditure White Paper.

30. Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any allocations have been made from the contingency reserve since the public expenditure White Paper.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Claims on the reserve have been, and will continue to be, announced after they are agreed.

Capital Flows

28. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the short-term capital flows into the United Kingdom in 1989.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is not meaningful to distinguish between short-term and long-term capital flows.

Gross National Product

34. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average growth of gross national product in the United Kingdom for the last four years for which figures are available; and what it was between 1977 and 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Over the four years ending 1988, the average annual rate of growth of United Kingdom gross national product, at constant factor cost, was 4·0 per cent. compared with 3·1 per cent. from 1977 to 1979.

Group of Seven

35. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last attended a meeting of the Group of Seven finance Ministers; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave him on 18 January, at column 345.

Confederation of British Industry

36. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Confederation of British Industry; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor last met the CBI at the meeting of the National Economic Development Council on 10 January. The Council discussed various papers on the outlook for the economy, the plastics processing industry, and the Government's higher education policies.

Football

39. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total income the Exchequer received from tax on football pools and value added tax on football gate receipts, transfers and other commercial activities of the Football League clubs.

Mr. Ryder: Pool betting duty receipts in 1988-89 were £279 million. Information is not available on the value added tax collected from football gate receipts, transfers and other commercial activities of the Football League clubs.

55. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue is received per year from football and football pools.

Mr. Lilley: Details of revenue received in direct taxes from football clubs, players and staff are not available separately from other income tax and corporation tax revenue. For details of indirect taxes, I refer to the answer given earlier today by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the hon. Member for Bassetlaw (Mr. Ashton).

Taxation

42. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will institute a review of the impact of the taxation system on the environment.

44. Mr. Gill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to shifting the burden of taxation from production to consumption.

Mr. Lilley: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

45. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the need to reform the taxation of savings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

47. Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has any plans to introduce a substantial increase in investment tax allowances for manufacturing industry.

Mr. Major: I cannot anticipate my Budget statement.

Northern Region

43. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the economy in the northern region.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Government's economic policies have created the conditions for greatly increased prosperity in the northern region. The fall in the unemployment rate over the last year has been one of the fastest in the United Kingdom.

Civil Service Catering

46. Mr. Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are employed by the Civil Service catering organisation.

Mr. Ryder: As at 1 February 1990, the Civil Service catering organisation employed 1,250 staff including 1,024 industrial civil servants of whom 823 were part-time employees.

Customs and Excise

48. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state any convenient figures he has for the numbers of Customs and Excise personnel qualified to discriminate between legal and illegal imports of listed flora and fauna, rain-forest birds and reptiles.

Mr. Ryder: All staff employed on Customs control are trained to be alert to the possibility of illegal imports of endangered species of flora and fauna. Where this is suspected and the identification of particular specimens is required, qualified experts in the appropriate field are called upon to advise Customs.

Economic Growth

50. Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his Department's latest estimates for economic growth for 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Franks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his latest estimates for economic growth in Britain in 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest forecast for GDP growth in 1990 is 1¼ per cent. as published in the Autumn Statement.

Savings

51. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the total interest paid on savings in each of the last three years.

Mr. Ryder: Payments to the personal sector of dividends and interest on financial assets of all kinds amounted to £35·1 billion in 1986, £38·1 billion in 1987 and £45·4 billion in 1988. These figures are gross of tax. They include income on savings in the form of equity in life assurance and pension funds, and may be found in table 3.7 of the United Kingdom National Accounts "Blue Book" or on the CSO databank which is accessible through the Library.

Child Care

53. Mrs. Currie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will outline the tax concessions which are available to working mothers receiving benefits in kind in the form of subsidies for child care from their employers.

Mr. Lilley: Employees earning less than £8,500 a year are not normally subject to tax on subsidised child care. Employers can qualify for tax relief on day-to-day expenditure on all forms of child care provision for their employees' children. Tax relief is also available for certain capital expenditure on child care facilities.

Third World Debt

57. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current policy of the Inland Revenue in relation to the tax treatment of United Kingdom banks which make provision against Third world debt.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue operates the test laid down by law. This provides tax relief to the extent that the principal is estimated to be irrecoverable.

Personal Equity Plans

58. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the impact of personal equity plans.

Mr. Lilley: Since its start in 1987, the personal equity plan scheme has proved very successful. By the end of 1989, nearly 700,000 plans had been started, with a total initial investment of more than £1·4 billion. More than 300 financial intermediaries now act as plan managers.

Labour Costs

59. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes there have been in labour costs in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) West Germany over the past five years.

Mr. Ryder: Data on unit labour costs in manufacturing in the United Kingdom and West Germany are published in the CSO's Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics.

Charities

60. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money was raised by the Exchequer, in each of the last three financial years, through value added tax on charities.

Mr. Ryder: There is no comprehensive information available on the subject but it is estimated that charities pay between £150 million and £200 million in value added tax each year.

Narcotics Seizures

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the trend of seizures of narcotics in ports and airports.

Mr. Ryder: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise provisional figures for 1989 show substantial increases in the numbers and quantities of seizures of the major drug types.

The overall number of seizures shows an increase of some 40 per cent. while increases by weight were of the order of 40 per cent. for heroin, 50 per cent. for cocaine, and 130 per cent. for cannabis resin in 1989 as compared with 1988.

There is a continuing underlying trend for seizures of drugs consigned from or routed through other EC countries to represent a substantial proportion of total seizures. In 1989 they amounted to approximately 40 per cent. of the total weight seized.

Civil Service Staff

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total size of the Civil Service (a) in 1979, (b) in 1984 and (c) in 1989.

Mr. Ryder: Civil Service staff numbers for the years in question were as follows:

	Number
1 April 1979	732,275
1 April 1984	623,972
1 April 1989	569,215

Sewing Thread (Imports)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the reasons for the delay in releasing Mr. Ashok Gosai's consignment of sewing thread from Felixstowe dock held in container No. GSTU3182901/20ft/1854556; and when he expects it to be released.

Mr. Ryder: Customs have withheld release of the goods as they were found to have been incorrectly declared and were prohibted to be imported without a Department of Trade and Industry import licence. Release of the goods will be considered by Customs as soon as these outstanding matters have been resolved.

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Ryder: The Treasury employs one private security firm, Trafalgar Security Ltd., at Jameson house only. The cost is £4,900 per annum and involves part-time employment of one person.

This function was previously undertaken by Group 4 at a cost of £2,600 per annum, also involving part-time use of one member of staff.

The Group 4 contract started in September 1987. Group 4 was replaced by Trafalgar in April 1989. Prior to September 1987 the security was provided by guards employed by Her Majesty's Treasury.

Public Sector Borrowing

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the levels of public sector borrowing or debt repayment in 1969 and 1978 and the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: There was a debt repayment of £0·6 billion in 1969-70, borrowing of £9·2 billion in 1978-79 and a debt repayment of £14·4 billion in 1988-89.

At 3 per cent.of GDP, last year's debt repayment was the largest ever recorded. A further substantial debt repayment is expected this year.

Banking Services

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to publish the Government's detailed response to the report of the review committee on banking services.

Mr. Ryder: The Government are considering the review committee's report and intend to give their detailed responses shortly.

Personal Debt

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average level of personal debt per adult in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ryder: In 1989 the average level of personal debt in the United Kingdom was approximately £7,870 per adult.

Information Technology

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the progress with the Government's plans for the future provision and management of their voice and data administrative telecommunications traffic.

Mr. Ryder: In March 1989 my right hon. Friend the then Paymaster General announced a collaborative study to identify possible options for aggregating Government voice telecommunications and integrating voice and data traffic. That study has been completed. It has concluded that it would be beneficial to the Government to proceed towards a private integrated digital network, to be known as the Government Telecommunications Service (GTS).

The study also concluded that such a network could be developed by building on the present Government Data Network (GDN). This is managed by Racal Data Networks Limited, and the contract for its operation envisages the possibility of such expansion and enhancement into an integrated network. Negotiations are therefore being opened with RDNL to see whether it can satisfactorily supply such an integrated service. If this approach is adoped, value for money would be secured by requiring that the provision of the supporting products and services for such a network, which form the major part of the value of the contract, would be let by RDNL on a sub-contract basis through competitive tender, in line with the Government's public purchasing policies.

Once these negotiations have been concluded, their outcome will be announced.

A summary of the statement of requirements for a Government Telecommunications Service, the Requirements Overview, has been placed in the Library.

EC Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council.

Mr. Ryder: The ECOFIN Council met in Brussels on 12 February. I represented the United Kingdom. The revised Financial Regulation which sets the rules for implementing the European Community Budget was agreed and will be adopted shortly. There was an initial discussion of the procedures for multilateral surveillance of member states' economies during stage one of EMU. Further discussion will be held at a future ECOFIN.

It was agreed that a medium term loan facility for up to five years should be made available to Hungary for the ECU equivalent of $1 billion. The Community has decided to invite other industrial countries to associate themselves with this facility. The first tranche of this loan will be the ECU equivalent of $400 million and will be available once a stand-by arrangement has been agreed with the International Monetary Fund. This first tranche will be guaranteed by the Community budget and a supplementary budget will soon be adopted to provide this guarantee.

Finally, the Council took note of a statement by the Commission urging early agreement to three tax measures which have been designed to encourage cross border co-operation in tax affairs.

Public Works Loan Board

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the arrangements for lending to local authorities by the public works loan board in the forthcoming financial year.

Mr. Major: Every year the PWLB Commissioners, after consultation with the Treasury, determine loan quotas for each authority. Borrowing within these quotas is at very fine rates set by the Treasury. Additional loans may be made in specific circumstances at higher ("non quota A" and "non quota B") rates.

In recent years the Commissioners have, however, as a matter of course, made advances additional to the normal quotas available at quota rates. This was done with the agreement of the Treasury in order to assist in the management of the money markets. At present, however, local authorities are, in total, investing very substantial sums of money with the banking sector, whilst at the same time borrowing large sums from the PWLB. The combined effect of this is to cause difficulties in the management of the money markets. The Government therefore believe that it is now desirable to curtail the availability of funds from the PWLB at quota rates.

The PWLB Commissioners have reviewed the quota arrangements for the financial year 1990-91 and have today issued a circular (number 89) indicating that the quota entitlement for each authority will be:

75 per cent. of its net reckonable capital payments made during 1990-91; plus

4 per cent. of its net reckonable debt incurred for capital purposes, being the total amount outstanding less the total sums held in financial investments on 31 March 1990.

There will be no minimum quota entitlement. The normal arrangements by which loans may be made under the non quota A and non quota B facilities will, however, continue to operate. Local authorities' ability to borrow in the market will not be affected.

With effect from today the Commissioners will no longer be prepared, as a matter of course, to make loans available in addition to the quota and at quota rates.

In order to limit the level of borrowing in the remainder of this financial year, the Commissioners have also decided to restrict advances within quota from the date of the circular to 31 March 1990, to not more than one tenth of each authority's quota for the current financial year.

The Commissioners will be prepared to consider requests from local authorities for advances additional to normal quotas at quota rates where the changes listed above will cause an authority exceptional difficulties, for example where it faces unusually high levels of maturing debt. The decision will be for the Commissioners, but I understand that, in deciding whether to make an advance, they will take into consideration, along with other factors, the level of the authority's investments and that the Commissioners are unlikely to be prepared to agree to an advance if, and to the extent that, it appears to them that these investments could be used instead.

An authority wishing to borrow from the board in addition to quota may also apply for non quota B loans. The Commissioners will continue to be prepared to consider applications for such advances where it can be demonstrated that additional capital finance is needed in the relatively near future. The rate of interest on non quota B loans is currently 1 per cent. above non quota A loans. From 1 April 1990 I have decided that the rate of interest on non quota B loans will be 2 per cent. above the rate of interest on quota loans.

At present the interest rate on quota loans is set at the lowest possible level consistent with the constraints of the 1968 National Loans Act. I have decided that for the future this fine rate will no longer be appropriate. Quota rates will therefore be gradually increased so that they are closer to, but still below, market rates. This will be done by maintaining PWLB rates when general interest rates fall.

Premium Bonds

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average value of the purchases of premium bonds in the six months before the change in the minimum purchase to £100 and the period since then in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the total for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 13 February 1990]: In the six months prior to the change in the minimum purchase, the average value of a premium bond purchase was £142. In the six months following the change, the average was £338. Separate figures are not available for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Company Visits

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many visits were made to Northern Ireland in 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89 by companies seeking to invest in Northern Ireland; and what were the locations visited and number of times visited, itemised by parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Needham: The number of visits made by companies considering investment in Northern Ireland during the financial years 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89 was 157, 176, and 159 respectively. The locations visited within Northern Ireland and the number of visits made to each location are detailed by district council area in the table. In many instances, particularly on repeat visits to Northern Ireland for detailed discussions with the Industrial Development Board, visits have been confined to IDB house.

Information in the form requested ie by parliamentary constituency is not readily available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Grants

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will instruct the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland, in future, to publish details of grant assistance made available to companies and in each case state the percentage of the total project cost of the grant assistance made available.

Mr. Needham: Since the termination of "British Business" which contained information on grant assistance offered to NI companies, the Industrial Development Board has been considering ways of publishing this information. However, information on particular project costs will remain commercially confidential.

"Making Belfast Work"

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the breakdown by company and amount of the £50·5 million selective financial assistance offered in 1988-89 by the Industrial Development Board to companies in and immediately adjacent to the "Making Belfast Work" areas.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

	£ million
Montupet (UK) Ltd.	32·0
Ford Motor Co. Ltd.	7·06
Stewarts Supermarkets Ltd.	3·8
BS Tooling Ltd.	5·6
Wm. Ross and Co. Ltd.	1·6
Bass Packaging Ltd.	0·054
Blackstaff Textiles Ltd.	0·09
Delta Enfield Cables Ltd.	0·257

Local Initiative Areas

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for designating the parliamentary constituencies of South Down and West Belfast as Industrial Development Board areas of local initiative on the same basis as Carrickfergus and Derry district council areas.

Mr. Needham: I have recently agreed that the IDB should lead a special development initiative for the areas of South Down and South Armagh. Work is already progressing on the "Making Belfast Work" initiative and the constituency area of West Belfast is included in that initiative.

London-Stranraer Rail Service

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the withdrawing of the overnight Stranraer-London and London-Stranraer train services from May 1990.

Mr Peter Bottomley: A number from several Members of Parliament and the chairman of Northern Ireland Railways Ltd.

Fire Authority

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Northern Ireland Fire Authority lodged a valid appeal to the county court in the case of Kerr v Northern Ireland Fire Authority.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is a matter for the fire authority. The chairman has informed us that the authority decided to withdraw the appeal.

Queen's University

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by the senate of the Queen's university of Belfast to ensure that the current imbalances in employment practices will be rectified.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Queen's university of Belfast is an autonomous institution with its own charter and statutes; recruitment and employment practices are entirely a matter for the university authorities.

I am aware, however, that various initiatives are to be undertaken as a result of the recent Fair Employment Agency report. These include the appointment of an administrative officer with special responsibilities for equal opportunities, and a review of the university's job advertising, recruitment and promotion procedures.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by the senate of the Queen's university of Belfast to ensure that the current imbalances in acceptances of undergraduates will be rectified.

Dr. Mawhinney: The admissions policy of Queen's university is entirely a matter for the university authorities. I am unaware of any particular imbalance in the acceptance of undergraduates.

Supplies (Purchase)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will take steps to make the purchase of supplies for the public service from suppliers in the Irish Republic in instances where the same goods are available less expensively in Northern Ireland a matter for which chief executives in the public service may be surcharged.

Mr. Cope: The Government have continually promoted the need for good purchasing practice, fair competition and value for money in the public sector in Northern Ireland. If the hon. Member wishes to give me details of the instances where such practices as he described have occurred, I will consider passing them to the appropriate audit authorities.

Community Relations Council

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current circumstances of the Community Relations Council for Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The establishment of the Northern Ireland Community Relations Council was formally announced on 4 January 1990. To date, a director, Dr. Mari Fitzduff, and three development officers have been appointed. Twenty-two places on the council have been filled out of a possible 24, and the remaining two places are expected to be filled by the council within the next few months. The council has met twice and is presently considering its organisational structure and its development strategy. It will probably publish a strategy paper after Easter. The council hopes to open new offices in Belfast by mid-February.

Limavady Bypass

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has yet completed his economic assessment for the Limavady bypass; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The economic assessment of the proposed Limavady bypass is expected to take a further three months to complete. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the results at that time.

Student Unions

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he takes to determine whether the accounts of student unions are properly audited; and what legislation governs the auditing and publication of such accounts.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 13 February 1990]: None. The auditing of student union accounts is the responsibility of university authorities who employ external auditors for this purpose.

There is no specific legislation in Northern Ireland which governs the audit of student union accounts.

Kincora Boys' Home

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the Royal Ulster Constabulary forensic report on Mr. Colin Wallace's memorandum of 8 November 1974 dealing with the Kincora boys' hostel.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 8 February 1990]: No. It is not the practice to publish police documents or reports of this kind where no prosecution is impending.

Missile Testing

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals have been made to establish a missile testing establishment at the Shorts site under construction at Lough Mann, situated on the Downpatrick/Ballynahinch road in South Down.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 9 February 1990]: No proposals have been made to the Department of the Environment (NI) for such an establishment.

RUC Inquiry

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North, of 6 February, why and in what circumstances it was decided it would not be productive to mount a separate inquiry in an attempt to identify the individual or individuals alleged by Sir John Hermon to be leaking information from the inquiry by the Greater Manchester police into the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The content and circumstances of discussions within Government leading up to the decison are confidential. I have nothing to add to my earlier reply.

SCOTLAND

Storm Damage

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the aid which will be available in Tayside following the damage caused by the recent storms and floods.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We are still receiving reports of recent storm and flood damage. Scottish Office finance circular No. 4/1990 issued on 8 February reminded local athorities of the Bellwin scheme under which the Government may give special financial assistance if they consider that an emergency situation has arisen in which an undue financial burden has fallen on a community. Circular No. 6/1989 which contained full details of the scheme was sent to all authorities on 28 April 1989.

Authorities have been advised that if they consider that Bellwin applies in relation to the relevant flooding they should give details to the Scottish Office as soon as possible.

My hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State is visiting some of the affected area on 14-15 February.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total sums paid out from Government funds under the Bellwin formula in Scotland for each of the last 10 years; and if he will show for each year the total sums received by each local authority.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The Bellwin formula came into existence in 1983-84, and since then the following amounts have been paid by way of special financial assistance in Scotland:

Year and authority	Amount £
1989-90
Highland Regional Council	[1]187,178
Inverness District Council	[1]26,325
Western Isles Islands Council	[1]12,652

[1] These payments represent 90 per cent. of grants amounting in total to £251,283 in respect of the floods and storms of February 1989.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will now review the Bellwin formula governing the sums paid out of public funds to defray costs of repairs following storm damage in Scotland to permit compensation to be paid by the Government where the works to be carried out include an element of betterment.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 February 1990]: I cannot support the suggested change. The Bellwin scheme is operated on a nationwide basis to ensure equal and fair treatment in emergency situations. The scheme is intended to alleviate any undue burden on authorities which have to meet exceptional expenditure in the immediate aftermath of an emergency.

Where improvements to property to combat severe weather are thought necessary, they should be tackled within existing procedures for planning and approving expenditure programmes, preferably when new facilities are developed.

Prisoners

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners in Scotland were allowed home leave at Christmas; and in which prisons they were serving their sentence.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The answer is 219, as follows:

Establishment	Number allowed home leave
Aberdeen	4
Castle Huntly	17
Cornton Vale	3
Edinburgh	14
Noranside	104
Penninghame	69
Perth	2
Polmont	6
	219

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what evidence he has as to the relationship between the likelihood of a person convicted in Scotland receiving a custodial sentence and their social background or income.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have no evidence of any such relationship.

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of those convicted in Scotland were disposed of by way of a prison sentence in each year from 1985 to 1989 inclusive; and how many were (a) males and (b) females.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is given in the table. The figures for 1989 are not yet available.

Persons with a charge proved (excluding companies) given a custodial sentence, 1984-88

Mr. Donald Cruickshank

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will suspend Mr. Donald Cruickshank from the inquiry into Lothian health board pending an investigation into his record as chairman of Wandsworth health authority.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No.

Child Abuse

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assistance his Department gives to organisations in Scotland involved in the care of adults who were victims of sexual abuse as children in terms of (a) trained staff and (b) funding.

Mr. Lang: Grants for training and other purposes are provided under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 to voluntary organisations which may be involved in helping adults who have been the victims of sexual abuse as children. Those organisations include Scottish Women's Aid, the Scottish Association of Victim Support, Childline and the National Children's Home which has established a new counselling service for the victims (including adults) of child sexual abuse and their families.

Local authorities may also make grants available to local groups under the 1968 Act.

Family Law Administration Working Party

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department is represented on the family law administration working party; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Home and Health Department is represented on the inter-departmental group of officials which is looking at the issue of lone parents and dependency, in view of my responsibility for, notably, the law on aliment.

Direct Labour Organsiations

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in the preparation of regulations relating to the competition requirements for direct labour organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: A consultation exercise on the terms of draft regulations has just been completed. I am grateful to all those who responded and have carefully considered all the comments received. In the light of representations made, I have decided to delay the introduction of these regulations for a further six months to 1 October 1990. This short deferment will be of particular assistance to the new town development corporations and to Scottish Homes which are actively pursuing the privatisation of their direct labour organisations.

Constituency Boundaries

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the boundary commission for Scotland intends to conduct any interim reviews of parliamentary constituencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The boundary commission for Scotland has informed me that it intends to conduct interim reviews of 13 parliamentary constituencies under section 3 of the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986. The constituencies are as follows:

Glasgow Cathcart, Glasgow Rutherglen and Glasgow Springburn;
Cunninghame North, Eastwood, East Kilbride, and Strathkelvin and Bearsden;
Midlothian and Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale;
Moray and Inverness, Nairn and Lochaber;
Perth and Kinross and North East Fife.

I understand that the reviews have arisen from alterations to local authority boundaries which those of the parliamentary constituencies concerned no longer follow exactly.

Pine Martens

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will introduce statutory protection for pine martens.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The pine marten (Martes martes) was added to schedule 5 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 under the Variation of Schedules Order 1988. It is an offence to intentionally kill, injure or take any wild animal included in the schedule.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Bangladesh

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance is given to Bangladesh to help prevent or mitigate flooding.

Mrs. Chalker: Following the serious flooding in Bangladesh in 1988, Her Majesty's Government provided some £26 million for emergency relief, including food aid, and longer-term rehabilitation. In order to help to identify means of flood control and alleviation in future, Her Majesty's Government hosted an international conference in London on 11-12 December 1989. The conference reviewed and broadly endorsed a rolling five-year flood action plan prepared for the Bangladesh Government by the World Bank. Delegates also pledged support for the 26 activities identified in the plan.

Of these activities, Her Majesty's Government have agreed to undertake a major regional study together with supporting studies on flood control and drainage/agriculture, operation and maintenance and fisheries. A British team joined others in Dhaka in late January to discuss terms of reference for the studies and to undertake preliminary field visits. We also participated in a further meeting in Dhaka to consider Bangladesh's disaster preparedness plans.

I have just had the opportunity to visit other flood protection work in the greater Dhaka area, which is partly supported by the international community. The flood protection planning is well thought through. These positive contributions will at least help to protect the Dhaka area for some years to come, until the water flow from the north can be better harnessed for agriculture and other support in the south.

Brazil

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British forestry experts are now on Overseas Development Administration-sponsored programmes in Brazil.

Mrs. Chalker: The first proposed forestry projects under our memorandum of understanding with Brazil are at present awaiting approval by the Brazilian Government. We hope to receive confirmation of their agreement to one (a climate research project involving the Institute of Hydrology) later this month. Mobilisation of the British experts involved would then follow as quickly as possible.

Somalia

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of the American, Italian, German, Russian and other Governments in order to persuade the Somali Government to create the conditions in which development aid from Britain to Somalia can be renewed and increased.

Mrs. Chalker: We have had contacts with a number of other interested Governments, including those to which the hon. Member refers, about the situation in Somalia. We have made clear to the Somali Government our views about the measures that need to be taken before the restoration of our aid programme can be considered.

Romania

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response to requests for aid to Romania has been made since the change of Government in that country.

Mrs. Chalker: We donated a consignment of medical supplies on 24 December and several items of medical equipment since then. We are treating a number of seriously injured victims of the December fighting for major surgery, at a cost yet to be determined. In addition, as my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs announced on 7 February, we have agreed to donate 1 million disposable syringes worth £40,000. We are contributing about £5·8 million to the food aid and medical supplies packages sent or agreed so far by the EC. The British Council is supporting new projects in the cultural field at a cost of £100,000.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs announced on 22 January that the existing know-how fund for Poland and Hungary would be widened to cover other countries of eastern Europe once they are firmly committed to reform. I hope that Romania will qualify for assistance in that context.

Cambodia

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to make further aid available to Cambodia.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 22 January about the recent visit of British officials to Cambodia.

We have agreed to co-finance eight projects with British NGOs under the joint funding scheme, for which a total of £257,000 has been committed from ODA resources. Of this sum £128,000 has been spent in the current financial year. We are also actively considering new proposals which have been submitted to us by the NGOs in response to our recent announcement that we wished to build up our humanitarian aid to Cambodia. In 1989-90 we are also providing a contribution of £250,000 to UNICEF for its programmes inside Cambodia.

India

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the report by the Comptroller and Auditor-General on bilateral aid to India.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government will reply to the report of the Public Accounts Committee on the report of the Comptroller and Auditor General in the usual way by means of a Treasury minute.

Southern Africa

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was discussed during the Minister for Overseas Development's recent visit to southern Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: I attended the Southern Africa Development Co-ordination Conference's annual consultation meeting with donors in Lusaka on 1 and 2 February. I announced a new pledge of £10 million for regional projects and took part in discussions on the past and future work of the organisation. I also briefly visited Zimbabwe, where I had talks with Zimbabwean Ministers, and South Africa, where I visited the British Council and the health centre in the Alexandra township of Johannesburg.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to visit South Africa to discuss aid projects.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. Friend has no plans to visit South Africa for this purpose. I made a brief visit to Johannesburg on my way to Lusaka last month to discuss our aid to black South Africans with our project partners.

Ethiopia

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has plans to upgrade the Government's response to the Ethiopian famine.

Mrs. Chalker: In my reply on 31 January, Official Report, column 189, to a question from the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd), I announced a substantial new commitment of food and emergency aid of £3·6 million in addition to commitments totalling £18·5 million in 1989. We shall continue to respond positively to the renewed threat of famine in Ethiopia.

Eastern Europe

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff at all levels of the Overseas Development Administration worked full-time on matters concerning eastern Europe during January; how many Overseas Development Administration staff worked part-time on matters concerning eastern Europe; and approximately what percentage of their time, on average, this involved.

Mrs. Chalker: Bilateral assistance to eastern Europe is administered by a unit staffed jointly by the diplomatic and aid wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. At the end of January 1990 the unit had six full-time posts of which three were filled by staff from the Overseas Development Administration. The future staffing of the unit is currently under consideration.

A number of other ODA staff spent part of their time on bilateral or multilateral matters concerning eastern Europe.

For each of these staff the percentage of time so involved varies greatly on a day to day basis and could be quantified only at disproportionate expense.

Nicaragua

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the United States Government concerning the resumption of aid to Nicaragua after the results of the election are announced.

Mrs. Chalker: None.

United Kingdom Aid

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a table showing annual aid, broken down into its constituent categories, given by the United Kingdom to the five poorest nations by 1990 standards in Latin America, Africa and Asia since 1975.

Mrs. Chalker: The most recent information on aid expenditure and the poorest countries relates to 1988. The information for the period 1975-88 is as follows:

United Kingdom bilateral aid to five poorest countries in Africa 1975-1988

Venezuela

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each of the past five years the sum of bilateral aid for Venezuela.

Mrs. Chalker: Following are the most recent available figures:

1984	—
1985	1,000
1986	10,000
1987	24,000
1988	10,000

Thailand

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid Her Majesty's Government are giving Thailand, directly or indirectly, related to helping protect the Tamboon Thakadan Sanam Chai Khet forest in Chachoengsao; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We have received no request for assistance for this forest.

PRIME MINISTER

Kincora Boys' Home

Q44. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, Official Report, 27 November 1989, column 92, if she will place in the Library any representations she has had during 1989-90 relating to events at the Kincora boys' home.

The Prime Minister: No.

President Mitterrand

Q67. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to meet the President of France; and what matters she will then discuss.

The Prime Minister: I expect to meet President Mitterrand before long. As is usual, there is likely to be a wide range of issues to discuss, including developments in eastern Europe, East-West relations and European Community matters.

German Democratic Republic

Q72. Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister if she has had any recent discussions with (a) Chancellor Kohl and (b) other European Community state leaders concerning the forthcoming general election in the German Democratic Republic; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I last met Chancellor Kohl at the European Council in Strasbourg in December. Other EC Heads of State or Government were also present. The present timing of the GDR elections had not been fixed at that point, but we had a useful discussion of the question of German unity. This was reflected in the Council's Declaration.

South Africa

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when she last spoke to President Bush about the Government's relations with South Africa.

The Prime Minister: We are in regular contact with the American Government.

Mail

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister how many items of mail she received today; and what subjects they concerned.

The Prime Minister: I receive approximately 650 letters a day from members of the public covering a wide range of issues.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if she has any plans to absorb the Department of Energy's responsibilities within those of any other Department;

(2) if she has any plans to review the responsibilities of the Department of the Environment; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if she will outline the division of responsibilities between Government Departments in respect of (a) air pollution, (b) sea pollution and (c) land pollution.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the Department of the Environment publication, "Protecting Your Environment—A Guide", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Pages 2 and 3 give a succinct but complete summary of the responsibilities in these areas.

Disaster Planning

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister which Departments will be represented at the conference on disaster planning organised by the Association of Metropolitan and London Authorities, to be held in London on 15 March.

The Prime Minister: The Home Office will be represented.

Crown Servants

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the reply to the Adjournment debate of 12 February, Official Report, column 118, if she will define the difference between formal and informal job descriptions for those working in Northern Ireland.

The Prime Minister: The Official Report quoted by the hon. Member refers only to formal and draft job descriptions, in a context which makes the meaning clear.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government on informal job descriptions for Crown servants.

The Prime Minister: Her Majesty's Government do not have a policy on informal job descriptions for Crown servants.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the reply to the Adjournment debate of 12 February, Official Report, column 118, if she will identify the misunderstandings that she may unwittingly have communicated to right hon. and hon. Members about Colin Wallace.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to my letter of 30 January to my right hon. Friend the Member for Worthing (Mr. Higgins), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Engagements

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 15 February.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 15 February.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 15 February.

Mr. Loftbouse: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 15 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

WALES

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received to date from (a) the business sector, (b) local authorities and (c) voluntary organisations concerning the document "A Strategy For The Future of the Welsh Language", published by the Welsh Language Board.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has received four representations from voluntary groups concerning the Welsh Language Board's strategy document. However, organisations with an interest were invited to respond to the board direct.

Housing (Flexi-ownership)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a further statement on the progress of his housing flexi-ownership scheme.

Mr. Grist: On 30 November 1989 the Development Board for Rural Wales announced that it was ready to accept applications for flexi-ownership. Since then there have been 87 firm inquiries of which 21 have become formal applications. This represents a very encouraging start.

Health Authorities (Bonus Payments)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many senior staff in each of the district health authorities in Wales have received during the past 12 months bonuses on top of their salaries linked to cost reduction performance; and what was the total payment made last year in Wales by way of such bonuses.

Mr. Grist: None. The majority of top managers (including district and unit general managers) in district health authorities are employed on short-term contracts at fixed salaries with entitlement to performance related pay. Performance related pay is not given for cost-reduction performance but is aimed at rewarding those managers who are identified as consistently achieving a meritorious performance measured against pre-set objectives expressed in terms of standards of service provision. The aim is accordingly to encourage improvements in the delivery of health care services to the public.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the overseas countries which he has visited in his official capacity; and what were the purposes and dates of each such visit.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information is as follows:

Dates	Country visited
1987
14 to 20 November	Japan
1988
28 to 29 June	West Germany
4 to 8 July	Soviet Union
1989
30 January to 3 February	United States of America
11 to 12 April	West Germany
24 to 30 September	Japan and South Korea
1990
5 to 8 February	Saudi Arabia

The prime purpose of these visits was to promote trade and investment activity between Wales and the country visited.

Bypasses

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those towns in Wales which have, during the past 15 years, had trunk road bypasses for which his Department is responsible opened to relieve traffic from their town centres.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Communities relieved of traffic as a result of trunk road schemes completed since 1975 include:

Bancyfelin	Kilgetty
Bangor	Llanddarog
Bodelwyddan	Llanfairfechan
Brecon	Llanfair
Bridgend	Pwllgwyngyl
Cardiff	Merthyr Vale
Castleton	New Inn
Caernarfon	Northop
Carmarthen	Penmaenmawr
Chepstow	Pontardulais
Colwyn Bay	Pontypool
Crosshands	Porthyrhyd Pyle
Dolgellau	Quakers Yard
Drefach	Rossett
Gresford	Ruabon
Haverfordwest	St. Clears
Hawarden	Stepaside
Holywell	Troedyrhiw

Litter

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what legislative provisions place responsibility on (a) county councils and (b) district councils in Wales to keep their local environments tidy from litter; whether his Department has at any time undertaken a performance audit to ascertain the effectiveness of local authority performance in this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The Litter Act 1983 defines the offence of littering, for which prosecutions may be initiated by county and district councils as litter authorities, and empowers such authorities to provide and maintain litter bins which they must empty regularly. In addition, the Control of Pollution Act 1974 and the Refuse Disposal (Amenity) Act 1978 place various responsibilities on district councils in Wales to collect up and dispose of refuse.

It is not the Department's practice to carry out performance audits of the provision of local authority services.

Part IV of the Environmental Protection Bill, which will place a new duty on local authorities to ensure that land in their control to which the public has access is kept free of litter and refuse, will enable any local resident or group to apply to a magistrates court for an order requiring the authority concerned to clear litter which is detrimental to the amenities of the locality.

Public Bodies

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what was the total expenditure for which he is responsible of (a) the Farm Animal Welfare Council, (b) the Forestry Commission Reference Committee Panel for Wales, (c) the Historic Buildings Council for Wales, (d) Housing for Wales, (e) the Land Authority for Wales, (f) the Library and Information Services Council (Wales), (g) the Local Government Boundary Commission and (h) the National Parks Committee, during the last year where figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (i) administration in general, (ii) hosting of meetings and conferences, (iii) allowances for attending meetings and (iv) general allowances given to nominees on the committee;

(2) what was the total expenditure for which he is responsible of (a) the Administration of Radioactive Substances Advisory Committee, (b) the Advisory Committee on Borderline Substances, (c) the Agricultural Advisory Panel for Wales, (d) the Agricultural Valuation Committee (Wales), (e) the Agricultural Wages Committee, (f) the Ancient Monuments Board for Wales, (g) the Audit Commission and (h) the British Wool Marketing Board, during the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion of expenditure was allocated to (i) administration in general, (ii) hosting of meetings and conferences, (iii) allowances for attending meetings and (iv) general allowances given to nominees on the committee;

[2] The expenditure is shown gross.
[3] Expenditure on the Curriculum Council for Wales only commenced in January 1989.
[4] In the period 1 April to 30 September actual salaries for part-time commitment paid to the Chairman and other members of the Board were £23,913 and £4,725 respectively. These rose to £24,234 and £4,790 in the period 1 October 1988 to 31 March 1989. In addition, Board members were entitled to claim within an authorised scale travelling expenses incurred on the business of the Board.

[5] Expenditure for which the Secretary of State is responsible is limited to the National Parks Supplementary Grant (NPSG), which is payable as a block grant. National Parks also receive funds from the relevant County Council(s) and other miscellaneous sources of income. Primary financial control is exercised by the County Council(s) since National Parks Committees are Committees of the Council(s).

[6] The Secretary of State has responsibility only in connection with setting the wool guarantee price and making loans to the British Wool Marketing Board.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his remarks in the Official Report, columns 990-94, on 24 January, what responses he has received from South Glamorgan, Powis, Gwynedd, Newport and Cardiff councils.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend has received and is considering one reply from South Glamorgan county council.

Welsh Office (25th Anniversary)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the overall financial cost of the anniversary celebration concert at St. David's halls marking the 25th anniversary of the Welsh Office.

Mr. Peter Walker: The concert will be held in March; the estimated cost to the Welsh Office is £9,000.

Conductive Education

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for developing in Wales an availability of conductive education methods for disabled children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The Welsh Office is associated with the commitment announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Disabled to contribute towards the establishment of a new International Peto Institute. This will secure the continuing availability of conductive education in Budapest for children from all parts of the United Kingdom while building up a nucleus of trained conductors to provide this service in the United Kingdom. My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to establish a centre for Wales. An application by Clwyd education authority, on behalf of other education and health authorities, is being considered in the Department.

Soviet Delegation

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to ensure that the Soviet delegation which he will shortly welcome to Wales will be made aware of the customs and national identity of the Welsh people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I am pleased to say that in a highly successful two-and-a-half-day visit to Wales the parliamentary delegation from the Supreme Soviet was made fully aware of the customs and national identity of the Welsh people.

Workplace Nurseries

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking to encourage the establishment of workplace nurseries by Welsh employers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The ministerial group on women's issues, on which the Department is represented, has been active in drawing employers' attention to the availability of tax relief on capital equipment and the running costs of workplace nurseries. Whether or not employers in Wales make such provision is a matter for their judgment.

Child Care, Welsh Office

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what child care provision is currently made for Welsh Office employees in (a) London and (b) Cardiff.

Mr. Grist: The Department ran a holiday play scheme for children of staff in Cardiff last summer and plans to do so again for the Easter and summer school holidays this year. Staff in the Welsh Office London can make use of the Westminster holiday play scheme which the Cabinet Office organises.

The Welsh Office is also looking at the possibility of providing nursery facilities for its staff in Cardiff in conjunction with other Government Departments.

Literacy and Numeracy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of standards of literacy and numeracy among participants in (a) YTS and (b) the employment training programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Current figures show that the number of ET trainees with a need for literacy and numeracy training is approximately 18 per cent. Equivalent figures for YTS in Wales are not available, but there is provision for young people with literacy and numeracy problems under the arrangements for those with special needs.

Basic Skills

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what funding is being made available in Wales for the basic skills accreditation initiative; what is the number of participants in the programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Funding for the basic skills accreditation initiative is being provided on a United Kingdom basis by the BBC, DES through ALBSU, and the Training Agency. The Department supports the activities of ALBSU and is also supporting with education support grants the introduction of open learning centres for adults with literacy and numeracy problems the BSAI will be delivered through these centres. Although we expect a substantial number of people in Wales to take advantage of opportunities under the initiative, no details are yet available of participation rates.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has anything to add to his answer on 12 February, concerning the respects in which the responsibilities he expects employers in Wales to fulfil for collecting cash from poll tax defaulters differ from the expectations and responsibilities placed on employers in Scotland.

Mr. Peter Walker: Under the Community Charges (Administration and Enforcement) Regulations 1989, a Welsh charging authority which has obtained a liability order from a magistrates court may make an attachment of earnings order. This is an order instructing the debtor's employer to make deductions from the debtor's earnings and pay the amounts deducted to the charging authority. The amounts to be deducted will be specified in the attachment of earnings order. The employer may deduct £1 from the debtor's earnings to cover his administrative costs in respect of each deduction. The employer is required to notify the charging authority if the debtor leaves his employment.

The following information in relation to the position in Scotland has been given to me by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

The enforcement methods to recover community charge debts are substantially the same as those for ordinary "private" debts. The local authority can choose either to proceed on the basis of a summary warrant or a court order obtained in a court action. Summary warrant procedure is an expedited procedure available since 1947 for the recovery of rates (and subsequently made available for the recovery of tax debts). Almost invariably, local authorities opt for summary warrant procedure. A single summary warrant application to the sheriff can cover a number of community charge debtors.

An important difference between Scottish and English procedures for enforcement is the absence of a court role in the enforcement of Scottish court orders to recover debts, either private or public e.g. taxes. In Scotland, creditors take the initiative in instructing sheriff officers (independent contractors under the supervision of, but not in the employment of, the court) to take enforcement action against debtors. The Debtors (Scotland) Act 1987 abolished civil imprisonment for non-payment of rates and civil imprisonment is also not available if community charge is unpaid.

Methods of enforcing community charge debts:

The summary warrant authorises the use of the following diligences:

1. An earnings arrestment (similar to the English attachment of earnings procedure).
2. A poinding and sale (roughly comparable to the English "distraint of goods" procedure). ("Poinding" is pronounced "pinding".)
3. An arrestment and action of forthcoming or sale. (Abolition of Domestic Rates, etc (Scotland) Act 1987 Schedule 2, Paragraph 7 as amended)

Earnings Arrestment

This is a new diligence introduced by the Debtors (Scotland) Act 1987 and is a system of continuous diligence requiring the debtor's employer to deduct a statutory fixed sum, which is related to net earnings, on each pay day until the debt is cleared. (Abolition of Domestic Rates, etc (Scotland) Act 1987, schedule 2 paragraph 7(3)(b) as amended Debtors (Scotland) Act 1987, section 49 and schedule 2).

An earnings arrestment is started by service on the employer of the prescribed form of schedule of arrestment and it remains in effect broadly until the debt is paid or the debtor leaves that employment. The form was designed to provide the employer with easy-to-follow instructions on how to operate the procedure. The employer receives from the sheriff officer a copy of the statutory deduction tables to enable him to calculate the amount to be deducted. He also receives details of the person or body to whom the payment should be made as soon as reasonably practicable". In addition, the employer is entitled to deduct from the employee debtor a nominal fee of 50p for each payment. (Act of Sederunt (Proceedings in the Sheriff Court under Debtors (Scotland) Act 1987) 1988, 1988 No. 2013, Paragraph 38 and Form 30)

Poinding and Warrant Sale

This is the method by which the debtor's moveable goods which are in his custody and control are attached, brought within the control of the court, and thereafter and, if necessary, sold with the proceeds being used to pay off the debt. (Abolition of Domestic Rates etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, schedule 2, paragraph 7(3)(a) as amended).

Arrestment followed by an action of forthcoming or sale

This is the method by which a creditor may attach money or goods belonging to the debtor which are in the hands of a third party.

Thereafter the creditor and debtor may agree to the money or goods being transferred to the creditor to settle the debt or failing such agreement a court action of forthcoming or sale is necessary to authorise the transfer of the money or goods to the creditor for sale. (Abolition of Domestic Rates etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, schedule 2, paragraph 7(3)(c) as amended).

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many councils have announced budgeted spending below their standard spending assessment.

Mr. Peter Walker: Welsh local authorities are currently in the process of setting their budgets for 1990-91. The information sought is therefore not yet available.

Project 2000

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money has been invested in Project 2000 in Wales; how many students there are on the courses; how the courses are funded; and in which colleges they are held.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The sum of £696,000 has been made available for implementation of Project 2000 in Wales in 1989-90. This includes £420,000 to prepare for implementation of which £365,000 has been allocated to DHAs to fund ad hoc schemes to launch Project 2000; and £276,000 allocated to the Welsh National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for extra teachers and certain development and planning costs.

Information is not held as to the resources invested by individual DHAs. It is the intention that the new courses will be introduced from autumn 1991.

Community Charge

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what regulations he intends to lay before the House governing the standard community charge in Wales.

Mr. Grist: We have no plans to make further regulations on the standard community charge.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Salman Rushdie

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers have been involved in the protection afforded to Mr. Salman Rushdie;

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of continuing the present special security measures for Mr. Salman Rushdie throughout the 1990-91 financial year;

(3) what is his latest estimate of the cost of the special security measures taken for Mr. Salman Rushdie.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It would not be proper to disclose information about police protection which would indicate its nature and scale in a particular case.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it remains the policy of his Department to ensure that Mr. Rushdie receives full police protection regardless of cost as long as there remains a threat to his life; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The need for protection is assessed by the police. It will continue for as long as is considered necessary, having regard to all of the circumstances.

Iranian Citizens (Deportation)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Iranian citizens were deported from the United Kingdom on grounds of public security in the last 12 months; and what further action is to be taken against Iranian nationals in the United Kingdom suspected of acting on instructions of the Iranian regime and whose presence may present a continuing danger to public security.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: During the past 12 months, a total of 31 Iranian citizens have been served with notice of the intention to make deportation orders against them on the grounds that this would be conducive to the public good for reasons of national security; 29 of the 31 left the United Kingdom without an actual deportation order being made against them, one was deported and action on the other deportation order served has been deferred to await the outcome of current criminal proceedings.

I am unable to give any details of any possible further action but my right hon. and learned Friend will not hesitate to use the powers vested in him under the Immigration Act to require the departure of any overseas national whom he is satisfied poses a threat to the security of this country.

Horserace Betting Levy Board

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will outline the investment plans for the distribution of the current levy of the Horserace Betting Levy Board monies; if such plans are inclusive of the £4 million surplus which has accrued; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans exist within the Horserace Betting Levy Board for the improvement of catering and accommodation facilities for stable staff; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what proposals are under consideration to allocate funds from the Horserace Betting Levy Board for the establishment of pensions schemes for stable staff; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what proposals there are for the Horserace Betting Levy Board to make an investment in the company Satellite Information Services; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what proposals there are for the setting aside of funds of the Horserace Betting Levy Board for the provision of low-cost loans for stable staff accommodation; and if he will make a statement;

(6) who determines the distribution of the funds of the Horserace Betting Levy Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is the statutory duty of the Horserace Betting Levy Board itself to determine the distribution of its funds, for purposes conducive to one or more of the following: (a) the improvement of breeds of horses; (b) the advancement or encouragement of veterinary science or veterinary education; (c) the improvement of horse racing.

The following information has been provided by the board. The board has no expenditure plans as to: Satellite Information Services; the establishment of pensions schemes for stable staff; or loans to stable staff to purchase or rent accommodation.

As to capital expenditure on the improvement of catering and accommodation facilities for stable staff, the board accords a high priority to assisting race courses to improve, where necessary, their staff hostels and associated canteen facilities, and is discussing with Racing Welfare the possibility of assisting with housing projects for married staff at a number of racehorse training centres.

The board's next policy statement, which it aims to publish by the end of this month, will set out its heads of expenditure for 1990-91, including the expenditure of higher-than-forecast income from the horserace betting levy, and the relative priorities for those heads.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for reports from chief constables on the cost (a) per constable hour, (b) at overtime rates per officer, (c) in numbers of police involved and (d) in number of police man-hours used, in order to cover the duties of ambulance staffs currently in dispute (i) nationally and (ii) in Nottinghamshire.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Police constables' pay is on a scale connected with number of years of service. It is therefore not possible to give a national hourly basic or overtime rate per officer. For examples of hourly rates charged by some police authorities for assisting ambulance services, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Stalybridge and Hyde (Mr. Pendry) on 8 February, Official Report, column 722.

I understand that the Nottinghamshire force is likely to charge approximately £18 per hour, a rate which includes national insurance and pension contributions and rent allowance.

I understand that the total number of man hours which forces have provided in assisting ambulance services in England and Wales up to and including 13 February has been about 1·1 million. In Nottinghamshire, where assistance has been provided by the police for only a few days recently, I understand that the number of man hours is about 1,100. Information on the number of police officers involved either in Nottinghamshire or nationally is not readily available.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the way in which the cost incurred by the Metropolitan police arising from the current ambulance workers' dispute is (a) calculated and (b) recouped; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The London ambulance service is charged for the hours worked by officers at full salary cost for normal duty hours and the appropriate rates for overtime. Other costs, including those for vehicles and catering, are charged on a full repayment basis; and there is a 5 per cent. charge to cover administrative overheads.

Costs are claimed weekly from the London ambulance service two weeks in arrears.

Fire Service

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will consider urgently the need to guarantee supplies of water for fire fighting; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will seek to amend the Fire Services Act in order to establish a legal obligation to provide water supplies for fire fighting purposes.

Mr. John Patten: It is clearly essential that water supplies for firefighting are guaranteed. We have received representations from the South Yorkshire county fire service expressing concern that the fire service may face additional costs arising from the provision by water undertakers of facilities to provide a flow of water for firefighting purposes above that required for domestic purposes. We have no plans for legislation in this area but will keep the situation under review.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the numbers of defendants appearing in (a) Nottingham magistrates court, (b) Tyneside magistrates court and (c) Tower Bridge magistrates court who have been electronically tagged; and the numbers of those in each area who subsequently breached their conditions.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to questions from the hon. Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Bermingham) on 9 February, Official Report, column 823.

Demonstrations (Police Videos)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on (a) the number of occasions that the police have used video cameras to record demonstrations during the year 1989, (b) the dates on which this occurred, (c) the identities of the organisers of each demonstration, (d) whether the organisers agreed to the demonstrations being video taped in each case and (e) the use to which the video produced on each occasion has since been put.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Metropolitan police use video cameras to record demonstrations if they have reason to believe that disorder may occur. These video tapes may be used for debriefing or training officers or for evidential purposes. No record is kept of the occasions on which the Metropolitan police videotaped demonstrations in 1989.

Probation Service

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to publish a green paper on the probation service.

Mr. John Patten: We have published today a Green Paper, "Supervision and Punishment in the Community", (Cm 966). This sets out options for the first major reorganisation of the probation service since its formation in 1907, and invites comments from interested organisations and individuals.

The Government have recently published the White Paper, "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public", which gives our legislative proposals for changes in the way courts in England and Wales deal with offenders. It is essential that the probation service should be organised so that it can meet the demands that the proposals would place on it, and the Green Paper sets out several options for the future.

These include: re-organising and strengthening the management of probation services; using the present Home Office powers to bring about changes in local organisation and procedure; extending the controls exercised by the Home Office; moving to a system whereby the Home Office provides 100 per cent. of probation finance removing all financial obligations from local authorities; and moving to a national service—either under the direct control of the Home Office or as a separate agency.

The Green Paper also discusses ways of involving voluntary organisations and the private sector more in work with offenders, and considers ways of improving probation training where much needs to be done. No final decisions have been made on any of these issues, and the Government are keen to hear the views of the probation service and other interested bodies about the various proposals in the Green Paper.

Prevention of Terrorism Legislation

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received a report from the Viscount Colville of Culross QC on the operation in 1989 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts 1984 and 1989.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend has received such a report from Viscount Colville and copies have been placed in the Library.

Constituency Boundaries

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the boundary commission for Wales intends to conduct any further interim reviews of parliamentary constituencies.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The commission has told my right hon. and learned Friend of its intention to review the constituencies of Brecon and Radnor, Carmarthen, Ceredigion and Pembroke, North, Llanelli, Montgomery and Pembroke.

Fishing Limits

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what stage has been reached in his discussions with the Isle of Man Government about the creation of a 12-mile fishing limit around the Isle of Man; how the traditional rights of Northern Ireland fishing boats in these waters will be guaranteed; what provision is being made for fishing boats from Belgium, France and the Republic of Ireland in the waters around the Isle of Man; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Territorial Sea Act 1987 made provision for the territorial sea adjacent to the Isle of Man to be extended to 12 miles. Discussions to implement this provision are nearing a conclusion. In respect of fishing, it is recognised that any arrangement to implement extension must safeguard the interests and traditional rights of all fishermen, including those from Northern Ireland, of all nationalities (British, French, Belgian, Irish) who currently have access to the area concerned.

Bankruptcies

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will legislate to extend the powers of trustees in personal bankruptcies fully to cover the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. This is a matter for domestic legislation within these Dependencies and has now been met by the Insolvency Act 1986 (Guernsey) Order 1989, the Bankruptcy (Desastre) (Jersey) Law 1989 and the Isle of Man Bankruptcy Act 1988.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update the figures given in his answer of 3 March 1989, Official Report, column 365-66, to the hon. Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook) on the level of total Government support for families with children, at 1989-90 constant prices in each year since 1970 to 1989-90.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The answer is set out in the table.

Government support for families with children 1974-75 to 1989-90[1]
£ million

	Cash	Real (1989-90 prices)
1974-75	1,855	7,838
1975-76	2,169	7,289
1976-77	2,604	7,721
1977-78	2,426	6,319
1978-79	3,092	7,276
1979-80	3,640	7,334
1980-81	3,965	6,750
1981-82	4,675	7,249
1982-83	5,400	7,809
1983-84	6,140	8,484
1984-85	6,650	8,753
1985-86	7,190	8,982
1986-87	7,620	9,209
1987-88	8,320	9,548
1988-89	8,790	9,405
[2]1989-90	9,390	9,390

[1] Includes (i) child benefit, (ii) one parent benefit, (iii) child tax allowances and additional personal tax allowances (lone parents), (iv) family credit/family income supplement, (v) maternity benefit, (vi) statutory maternity benefit, and (vii) social fund, income support/supplementary benefit, housing benefit and community charge benefit paid to lone parent families and to people looking after elderly parents.

[2] Estimated outturn.

Local Offices (Callers)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will institute an urgent review of the causes of the chronic jamming of switchboards and other difficulties of callers at local offices; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: All local Department of Social Security offices measure the quality of service provided over the telephone and to personal callers. Office managers are accountable for the standards achieved. Results of a national customer opinion survey conducted by local offices in October 1989 found that 80 per cent. of personal callers said the service was "very or fairly good" and more than 77 per cent. of telephone callers got through to the office in what they considered a reasonable time.

However, the Department accepts that service standards vary round the country and where there are problems special efforts are in hand to overcome them. If the hon. Member has a particular office in mind perhaps he will let me know so that I can provide further details.

Residential Care

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing, with regard to the payment of income support to people in independent residential care homes and nursing homes for 1988-89, and for the current financial year (a) the ceiling payments for care support for each residential care category, (b) the number of claimants in each category, (c) the expenditure in current and constant prices on each category, (d) the amount by which he estimates that the ceiling payments fall short of the average weekly costs of placements in these categories and (e) the amount by which he estimates that expenditure set out in (c) falls short of the total costs of placements in each category.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 1 February 1990]: Statistically reliable data held centrally is limited to that shown in the table. This gives the available information for 1988-89. No information is yet available for 1989-90.

	Limit on income support payments £	Number of claimants (000s)	Income support expenditure Cash £ million	September 1989 prices £ million

TOTALS	—	46	354	382

[1] Denotes figures under 500.

Notes:
1. Numbers rounded to nearest thousand, expenditure to nearest £ million.
2. Expenditure includes income support applicable amounts for both the appropriate limit and personal expenses.
3. These estimates are based on four quarterly, one per cent., samples of live cases. Although total income support expenditure figures are available the figures for individual groups of residents are based on too small a sample to be sufficiently reliable.
4. Centrally held data from claimant records about actual charges is not statistically reliable.

Earnings

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing the number of male and female employees in 1990-91, or the most recent available estimate, earning more than the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions showing the distribution of those earnings (a) over the upper earnings limit but less than £18,001 per year, (b) £18,001 to £20,000 per year, (c) £20,001 to £25,000 per year, (d) £25,001 to £30,000 per year, (e) £30,001 to £50,000 per year and (f) over £50,000 per year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Information on those expected to earn more than the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions in 1990-91[1] is shown in the table.

Total	2·60	0·40	3·00

[1]£18,200 a year.

Nursing Homes (Fees)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what provision is made for patients who refuse to be transferred to nursing homes because the Department of Social Security fails to meet the fees;

(2) why the chronically sick who are transferred to nursing homes on the recommendation of the appropriate medical authority to avoid bed-blocking are required to meet the homes' charges if they do not qualify for Department of Social Security assistance.

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

No patient should be discharged from an NHS bed to care in a private nursing home against his wish if he or the relative will be personally responsible for the home's charges. If a patient in an NHS bed does not agree to a transfer to a fee-charging home, if he or she is in need of continuous nursing care, the patient should remain under the care of the health authority. The Department included guidance on these points in a circular issued to health authorities last year (HC(89)5), a copy of which is available in the Library. This circular requires all health authorities to review and revise their discharge procedures and to report on the action they have taken to their regional health authority by 31 March 1990.

TRANSPORT

Vehicle Excise Duty

61. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what he anticipates will be the revenue from vehicle excise duty on cars in 1989-90.

Mr. Atkins: The Department's estimates of revenue in 1989-90 from vehicle excise duty on cars in the United Kingdom is £2,050 million.

Motorists (Eyesight)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many learner drivers fail their driving test as a result of poor eyesight.

Mr. Atkins: In 1988-89, the latest year for which information is available, 592 out of over 2 million candidates failed their test because they did not meet the statutory eyesight requirements.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he has any plans to introduce compulsory eye tests and regular tests for motorists over the age of 50 years;

(2) if he has received any representations from (a) motoring organisations and (b) chief constables regarding the eyesight standards of motorists; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what estimate he has of the number of motoring accidents caused by the defective eyesight of motorists.

Mr. Atkins: We have in the past received representations from the police and motoring organisations regarding the eyesight standards of motorists. Research studies have not identified poor eyesight as a significant cause of accidents. I therefore have no plans to change the current requirements, which fully meet the standards proposed by the European Commission in the draft second directive on driver licensing and which are supported by the College of Ophthalmologists.

City Routes

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he provides any guidelines to highway authorities responsible for major city routes such as Whitehall on hours of night working, penalties for overrun and ways of minimising disruption.

Mr. Atkins: The programming of highway works on local roads and form of contract employed are matters for the local highway authority concerned. Last autumn the local authority associations sent a report to their members, commending the use of lane rental contracts as a financial incentive to contractors to shorten the period of occupation of the road during works on busy traffic routes.

Vehicle Licences

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the rates of vehicle licences for each of the member states of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Atkins: The information requested is not readily available. I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Motorway Safety

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many injury accidents involving road vehicles have occurred in each of the last five years within motorway service areas; and what action he is taking to reduce such risks.

Mr. Atkins: The Department does not keep records of accidents within motorway service areas (MSAs). Police reporting of road accidents excludes accidents within MSAs, because the roads there are not roads within the Road Traffic Act 1988.

Three operators, responsible for 29 MSAs used by about 75 million vehicles a year, have confirmed that personal injury accidents within MSAs are rare; those consulted recalled two accidents in the last five years.

The Department seeks to reduce accidents on MSAs by careful design of roads and by separate parking for cars, coaches and HGVs, and good signing and lighting. It inspects MSAs annually. The Department also considers safety matters when examining requests for MSA operators to make structural alterations.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make an appraisal of the implications for safety, particularly for vehicles legally prohibited or practically unable to travel at speeds exceeding 50 mph., of the present arrangement for vehicles joining the M42 from the M40 in the offside fast lanes.

Mr. Atkins: The present layout where the M40 and M42 link roads join allows traffic at different speeds to adjust and merge. It is operating satisfactorily and safely with present traffic flows. No vehicle complying with the construction and use regulations and permitted to travel on a motorway is legally prohibited from travelling in excess of 50 mph there.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority annual report for the year 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989 was published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hyndburn (Mr. Hargreaves) on 15 January, Official Report, column 45.

Traffic Lights, Chiswick

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) at what time the traffic lights failed at the Hogarth roundabout on the A4 at Chiswick on 10 February; and at what date and time they were repaired and functioning normally again;

(2) what action was taken to limit danger to vehicles emerging from Church road and Chiswick lane while the traffic lights were not working at the Hogarth roundabout on and after 10 February;

(3) what emergency arrangements exist for dealing with traffic problems when the traffic lights are out of action at the Hogarth roundabout on the A4 at Chiswick; and when these were implemented in respect of the lights failure on 10 February;

(4) what emergency road signs were set up to warn drivers on the A4 of the need for extra care at the Hogarth roundabout at Chiswick while the traffic lights were not functioning on and after 10 February;

(5) what steps he is taking to improve the liaison and co-operation arrangements between the Metropolitan police and those responsible for the functioning of the traffic lights at the Hogarth roundabout on the A4 at Chiswick.

Mr. Atkins: The failure of these signals was reported to the traffic control systems unit by the local police at 0808 hours. The unit's maintenance contractor was on site within five hours but was unable to make a quick repair because the fault is in a main underground cable which must be replaced. The contractor placed signs warning of the failed signals before each signalled junction. As the Church street and Chiswick lane junctions are not signalled, no warning signs were provided there.

Work is in hand to replace the damaged cable, it is hoped without the need to excavate the carriageway, as quickly as possible.

The traffic control systems unit manages all London's traffic signals as agent for the Department. It relies on the reporting of faults by the police, the public and, increasingly, automatic reporting systems. It operates a system of priorities for dealing with faults and works in close liaison with the police, the highway authorities, and the maintenance contractor.

I regret the inconvenience to travellers, but I am satisified that there was no breakdown in liaison in this case.

Light Dues

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what decisions he has taken about light dues in 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Parkinson: Continuing progress in containing costs will permit me to make a further reduction in light dues this year. The present buoyancy of the general lighthouse fund liquid reserves will also permit me to return some of the benefit of this in 1990-91 in the form of a "bargain break" to payers in the cargo sector who have contributed to the strength of the liquid reserves in past years. This will take the form of a reduction, for 1990-91 only, in the maximum number of chargeable voyages (from seven to six voyages). I am also introducing a further round of reforms to the light dues system to remove some remaining anomalies and to bring into charge certain vessels which have hitherto gained exemption. In broad terms these changes are equivalent to a reduction of about 14 per cent. in light dues and will mean that light dues have been roughly halved in real terms since 1981. I am grateful for the efforts of the general lighthouse authorities which have made this possible.

In summary the main changes are:

1. A 2 per cent. reduction in the voyage tariff.
2. Waiving of dues in 1990-91 for ships making a seventh liable voyage.
3. Increasing the half rate tariff for sailing and towed ships to the full rate, together with introduction of a new exemption for sail-training ships.
4. Ending the exemptions for dredgers, hoppers, visiting foreign racing yachts and commercial sailing ships and towed craft between 20 and 100 net registered tons.
5. Making tugs liable on the basis of registered length in place of net tonnage (which hitherto had in practice exempted most tugs from charge).
6. Re-defining the ballast exemption to exclude from it ships which are engaged in commercial revenue earning activities other than the carriage of cargo or passengers.
7. Increased minimum charges per voyage.
8. Introduction of flat rate charges for pleasure craft in place of tonnage based charge. (This change affects only those pleasure craft over 20 net registered tons liable to light dues. The British Ports Federation is conducting a separate feasibility study into extending light dues to smaller pleasure craft; its report is expected shortly.)
9. Ending the former "uplift" charge for ships registered in countries which have no reciprocal tonnage agreement with the United Kingdom.
10. Removal of the remaining distinctions between ships in the former "home" and "foreign" trades and (as already announced last year) extending to all ships which pay per voyage the option to pay dues on no more than two voyages a month.

Following representations from the shipping and port industries, I have decided to retain the present exemptions for ships genuinely in ballast or calling into port for their own purposes. I have concluded that ending these exemptions, while offering a simplification of the rules, would have had disproportionate redistributive effects.

I have also considered further the remaining major reform recommended by the 1988 light dues working party, that light dues paid per voyage should be assessed on ship's gross rather than net tonnage. There appears to be general agreement that this reform would be a fairer basis of charge, and the remaining question is one of timing. I have concluded in principle that this change should be made in 1994 in conjunction with the full implementation of the new tonnage measurement system introduced by the international tonnage convention 1969. Subject to determination of the appropriate level of charge at the time, I envisage a single change to a gross tonnage basis with effect from 1 April 1994. Announcement of this now will allow time for those concerned to prepare for the change.

After the 1989-90 adjustment of the payment period for fishing vessels, to bring it into line with the standard financial year for light dues, the 1990-91 charge for fishing vessels is being held at its 1988-89 level, representing a reduction in real terms of over 10 per cent.

These changes represent a continuing reduction of the burden of light dues combined with a further round of constructive reforms to the light dues system. The necessary order will be laid shortly. This is the third successive year in which light dues have been reduced in cash as well as real terms, and forecast movements of costs suggest that an increase in dues at least in line with inflation may be necessary in 1991. Tight control costs will none the less be maintained.

Aircraft Terminals

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to seek powers to limit noise and other forms of pollution from aircraft at existing and future aircraft terminals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport already has such powers under the Civil Aviation Act 1982 and the Airport Act 1986.

Dial-a-Ride

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements have been made to fund the London dial-a-ride service for 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I am pleased to announce that the Government grant to London dial-a-ride services for 1990-91 will be £8·27 million, an increase of £1 million on 1989-90, or 6 per cent. in real terms. Next year's funding will be some 50 per cent. more in real terms than in 1985-86, the last year in which it was funded by the GLC. In the same period membership has grown by over 80 per cent. The number of journeys made in 1989-90 is expected to be about 625,000, more than double those made in 1985-86. The additional £1 million for 1990-91, with a forecast improvement in the level of efficiency, should result in a 10 per cent. increase in the number of journeys to about 690,000.

Roads, London

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what form and degree of study and analysis his Department is undertaking of the responses of the London road assessment studies.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 5 February 1990]: They are not road assessment studies. The consultants suggest improvements to both roads and public transport. All responses received by 28 February will be examined and comment on the various aspects will be considered carefully before decisions are taken.

EMPLOYMENT

London Borough of Newham

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment for what reason the employment service classifies the London borough of Newham as an inner London borough.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service classifies the London borough of Newham as an inner London borough in order that it may benefit from its range of inner city initiatives.

Employment Training

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently undertaking employment training in the north-east of England.

Mr. Nicholls: On 26 January 1990, the latest date for which information is available, there were 23,700 people on employment training in the Training Agency's Northern region.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the planned level of employment training places and the anticipated level of filled places for each quarter of 1990 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Plans for the number of employment training places are for internal management information purposes only.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total expenditure on training bonus paid as part of employment training broken down by £50 to £100 and £101 to £200 between December 1988 and December 1989 for each of the standard regions, Wales, Scotland and Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The information is not available in the form requested.

Labour Statistics

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing the latest figures of the risk of unemployment by social class.

Mr. Eggar: It is not possible to publish a table as the information is not available. The monthly unemployment count provides information on age, sex, and length of time unemployed only.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the dates when representatives of the Health and Safety Executive visited the Channel tunnel construction site to assess safety levels and the outcome of the visits.

Mr. Nicholls: Information on the total number of visits made by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) to assess health and safety levels at the Channel tunnel construction sites and the outcome is not readily available and can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Information which is available shows that between July and December 1989 inspectors based in HSE's South East area local office at Ashford, Kent made 86 visits to the Channel tunnel construction sites. Frequent visits have also been made by specialist inspectors from the technology division.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the industrial accidents notified to the Health and Safety Executive that have occurred during work on the Channel tunnel, giving dates, details of accidents and the outcome of any action taken by the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Nicholls: The information as requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, between March 1987 and December 1989, the latest date for which information is available, a provisional total of 327 accidents which occurred during work on the Channel tunnel were reported to the Health and Safety Executive. Action taken by the executive following accidents is appropriate to the particular circumstances of the incident.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the prosecutions by the Health and Safety Executive of the British consortium, contractors and sub-contractors building the Channel tunnel giving dates, details of the cause of accidents and where appropriate the nature of the serious injury or cause of death.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has prosecuted the five constituent companies of Translink JV on two occasions. The prosecutions followed investigations by HSE into two incidents which were notified under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations, neither of which resulted in injuries.

The first incident occurred on 2 December 1987 when four 8-ton railway wagons ran 300 metres down an adit into the tunnel workings. The second incident occurred underground on 5 April 1988 when a cylinder of LPG was hit and punctured by a train.

Health and Safety

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what criteria the Health and Safety Executive uses in deciding whether a project is under the supervision of Her Majesty's inspectors of mines and within the mines and quarries regulations or regulated by the provisions of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974.

Mr. Nicholls: Decisions about which inspectors supervise a particular project falling within the scope of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act are internal management matters for the Health and Safety Executive. If such a project is or concerns a mine as defined in the Mines and Quarries Act, it will be the exclusive concern of the mines inspectorate.

Radiation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the new code of practice introduced on 5 February covering radiation exposure limits on the workforce.

Mr. Nicholls: No new code of practice was introduced on 5 February 1990 to cover radiation exposure limits of the workforce. The Health and Safety Commission (HSC) published on that date a consultative document inviting comment on proposals for additional guidance on radiation protection. The proposals represent interim action recommended by the HSC to take account of revised estimates of risk from radiation. A copy of the consultative document has been placed in the Library of the House.

Community Programme and Employment Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the total number of community programme participants and employment training trainees in each of the months July 1986 to December 1989, for each of the standard regions, Scotland, Wales and Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The information is not available in the form requested.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Accountancy Firms (Inspectors' Reports)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if he will make it his policy that whenever he appoints an inspector from the accountancy firms criticised by an inspector's report he will make a statement to this effect to Parliament.

Mr. Redwood: No. My right hon. Friend does not propose to change the practice on announcement of appointment of inspectors as explained by my noble Friend Lord Young of Graffham, the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, in an answer to a written question from Lord Bruce-Gardyne in the other place on 11 May 1988, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 1209-12.

Disabled People (Employment)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the number of companies which have failed to comply with schedule 7, paragraph 9 of the Companies Act 1985 to provide information relating to the employment of disabled persons; and what steps he is taking to secure the future compliance with the Act.

Mr. Redwood: The statistical information requested is not available. Companies House staff carry out certain basic checks on reports and accounts, but the contents are not scrutinised in detail except in response to specific complaints. There have been no such complaints in recent years about non-compliance with the statutory requirement to which the hon. Member's question refers.

Accountants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the number of qualified accountants in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the United Kingdom's major counterparts in the European Community.

Mr. Redwood: There is no generally agreed definition of a qualified accountant. The information requested is therefore not available.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to hand over the power to investigate insider dealings to the Securities and Investments Board and the Stock Exchange; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: None, as I explained in my letter of 26 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Hastings and Rye (Mr. Warren), Chairman of the Trade and Industry Select Committee, a copy of which is in the Library.

EC Directives

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many Commission directives under the 1992 programme are now in force throughout the Community.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave to the hon. Member for Newham, North-East (Mr. Leighton), which appeared in the Official Report on Thursday 18 January 1990.

Companies Acts Investigations

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in how many cases of section 447 of the Companies Act or equivalent investigations further investigations were carried out under other sections of the Companies Acts since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: Between 1979 and 1989 three section 447 inquiries led to further investigations under other sections of the Companies Act. In addition one investigation under section 105 of the Financial Services Act 1986 led to further investigation under the Companies Act.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in how many cases of section 447 of the Companies Act, or equivalent, investigations external advice or assistance was sought by his Department since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: Investigations under section 447 of the Companies Act 1985, and under its predecessor, section 109 of the Companies Act 1967, can be carried out only by officers of my Department. Those carrying out such inquiries are advised by departmental lawyers as appropriate and it is rarely necessary to seek external advice or assistance. No separate record is kept of the number of cases in which such advice is sought.

From 21 February, when section 63 of the Companies Act 1989 comes into force, the Secretary of State will be able to authorise competent persons who are not officers of the Department under section 447.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in how many cases of section 447 of the Companies Act or equivalent investigations cases were referred to either legal, professional or regulatory bodies for further action since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: Since 1979 information obtained under section 447 of the Companies Act 1985 and its predecessor, section 109 of the Companies Act 1967, has been made available when appropriate to the police and prosecuting authorities. The power to disclose restricted information under section 447 of the 1985 Act to professional or regulatory bodies has been available only since November 1986.

Records before 1987 are not readily available. Between 1 April 1987 and 31 December 1989, information obtained under section 447 was referred to either prosecution, professional or regulatory bodies outside my Department in 68 cases.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total number of investigations carried out under section 447 of the Companies Act and the equivalent sections in preceding Acts since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: The total number of investigations under section 447 of the Companies Act 1985 started and completed between 1 January 1979 and 31 December 1989 was 1,158.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total number of investigations carried out under the Companies Acts since January 1979.

Mr. Redwood: The total number of investigations under the Companies Act started and completed since 1 January 1979 to 31 December 1989 was 1,194.

Financial Services

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in how many cases reports arising from section 177 of the Financial Services Act have been passed to professional bodies since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: Section 177 of the Financial Services Act 1986 (which confers power to appoint inspectors to investigate possible insider dealing offences) came into force in November of that year. All reports made by inspectors appointed under that section have been considered with a view to disclosing information in them as permitted by the Act. However, no such information has so far been disclosed to a professional body.

Prosecutions

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of the 113 successful prosecutions completed since 1 January 1979 were commenced by his Department as opposed to the Director of Public Prosecutions, Serious Fraud Squad or the police before that date.

Mr. Redwood: For the period preceding January 1986, the information requested cannot be produced without exceeding the limit imposed on costs. However from January 1986, 23 prosecutions were carried out by my Department.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has completed his consideration of the European Economic Community-university of Louvain study of the impact of 1992 on regions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: We have studied the report. Many of its conclusions are in line with our own priorities of encouraging business development and enterprise throughout the country and ensuring effective targeting of training, infrastructure and R and D facilities in the run-up to 1992.

Shipbuilding

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any proposals for changes in the European Commission's sixth directive on aid to the shipbuilding industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In line with the decision of the European Commission, which was notified to member states on 18 January, I have decided to reduce the maximum level of support for merchant ships from 26 per cent. to 20 per cent. with effect from 1 January 1990.

I have also decided that, from the same date, the sliding scale for ships costing less than £10 million will be reduced from a maximum of 20 per cent. to a maximum of 15 per cent. This will fall by half of one percentage point for every £1 million reduction in the cost of build below £10 million. This when combined with shipbuilder's relief, will bring support for ships costing less than 6 million ecu below the upper level of 14 per cent. set by the Commission.

C. J. How

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to set up a compensation fund to assist investors who have lost funds through C. J. How.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 13 February 1990]: None.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the responsibilities of FIMBRA in respect of the investment company C. J. How.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 13 February 1990]: From 1 January 1984 until the introduction of the Financial Services Act on 29 April 1988, FIMBRA was recognised under section 15 of the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act. C. J. How was a member of FIMBRA between July 1982 and January 1988 and FIMBRA was therefore responsible for the regulation of the firm's business of dealing in securities from January 1984 until January 1988 when its membership was terminated.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his Department was first aware that the investment company C. J. How had lost its membership of FIMBRA and what action was taken to alert existing and potential investors.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 13 February 1990]: My Department was notified on 21 January 1988 that FIMBRA had terminated the membership of C. J. How. My Department was not notified whether FIMBRA had publicised that fact.

Self-regulatory Organisations

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that private investors are made aware when investment companies cease to be authorised by a self-regulatory organisation under the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 13 February 1990]: This is a matter for the Securities and Investments Board.

Tied Agents

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will amend the Financial Services Act to make principals responsible for all products sold by their tied agents.

Mr. Redwood: Under the Financial Services Act, a principal is responsible for its appointed representatives' actions in carrying on investment business for which the principal has accepted responsibility in writing. It is for the Securities and Investments Board and the self-regulating bodies to consider what requirements should be imposed on principals in relation to the activities of their appointed representatives. I have no plans to amend the Financial Services Act in this regard.

Garston Amhurst

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will institute an inquiry into the affairs of Garston Amhurst companies during the period they should have been regulated by his Department prior to the commencement of the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: If my Department receives information about companies in the Garston Amhurst group which suggests there is good reason to mount an investigation, I will of course consider doing so.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will meet the president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales to discuss accountancy matters arising out of the role of Sieff Davidson as auditors to Garston Amhurst companies.

Mr. Redwood: I meet senior members of the professional accountancy bodies from time to time, but I cannot yet say whether it would be appropriate to raise the issues arising from the Garston Amhurst case when I next meet the president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to monitor progress being made by the Securities and Investments Board in protecting the interests of investors in funds managed by Garston Amhurst-controlled companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: It is the responsibility of the Securities and Investments Board to ensure that the regulatory framework established by its own rules and those of the self-regulating bodies provides the appropriate level of protection for investors. The Secretary of State has responsibilities for general oversight of the regulatory system under the Financial Services Act, but not for its day-to-day operation.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his inspectors currently investigating Barlow Clowes will examine and report on the extent, number and nature of transactions between Barlow Clowes companies-investment funds and Garston Amhurst companies-investment funds.

Mr. Redwood: The inspectors appointed to investigate the affairs of Barlow Clowes Gilt Managers Limited may inquire into any such matters to the extent that they consider necessary for the purpose of their investigation.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dover of 2 February, Official Report, columns 413-14, when Garston Amhurst companies started offering financial and investment advice to the public.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not available.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what authorisation the Garston Amhurst companies held to market and advise on investments prior to the Financial Services Act becoming operational.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information his Department has on connections between the auditors Sieff Davidson, the company Sieff Davidson Financial Services Limited and Garston Amhurst companies, their partners, directors and shareholders and as to whether any of those persons had authorisations to give financial and investment advice (a) prior to and (b) subsequent on the commencement of the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: Sieff Davidson, chartered accountants, is certified by the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales to carry on investment business. Sieff Davidson Financial Services Ltd., which was set up jointly by Sieff Davidson and the principal directors of Garston Amhurst Associates, is a member of the Financial Intermediaries, Managers and Brokers Regulatory Association. None of these persons held a principal's or a representative's licence under the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act 1958.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he is next due to meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board; and if he will raise the matter of Garston Amhurst with him and the nature of the protection given to investors by the Lautro rule book.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board to discuss issues of mutual interest as often as is necessary. No date has yet been set for the next such meeting.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to his answers to the hon. Member for Dover of 2 February, Official Report, column 413-14, what information he has on changes in the name of Garston Amhurst Associates (General) Ltd. and Garston Amhurst Associates Group Holdings Ltd.

Mr. Redwood: The company currently registered in the name Garston Amhurst Associates (General) Limited changed its name on 21 October 1986 from Garston Amhurst General Limited. There is no company currently registered by the name Garston Amhurst Associates Group Holdings Limited.

Securities Dealers

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department has at any time since 1 January 1980 had discussions with or corresponded with James D. Krekis, Gordon M. Davies, C. Diccon Wright or Andrew S. Woodhouse with a view to any of them becoming licensed dealers in securities or registered representatives of a licensed dealer in securities, or any company of which any of them are or were directors becoming a licensed dealer in securities.

Mr. Redwood: None of the four people mentioned in the hon. Gentleman's question ever applied for a licence to deal in securities under the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act 1958 either in their own name or through the companies in the Garston Amhurst Group. In late 1983 an official in my Department obtained documents suggesting that Garston Amhurst Associates might have been carrying on the business of dealing in securities without authorisation. My Department wrote to the company on 22 May 1984 advising that such activities might constitute an offence under the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act 1958. Following telephone calls from Mr. Wright and from his solicitors which attempted to clarify the scope of the Act, written assurances were received from the company's legal advisers that all such activities had ceased, and would not be resumed without the necessary authorisation being first obtained.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what authorisations exist at the present time for the purposes of dealing in securities or the giving of financial advice to the public in the names of James D. Krekis, Gordon M. Davies, C. Diccon Wright and Andrew S. Woodhouse.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Target Group and National Financial Management Corporation

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what authorisations the Target Group and National Financial Management Corporation plc held from his Department prior to the commencement of the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: The main provisions of the Financial Services Act 1986 came into effect on 29 April 1988. Immediately prior to this date, Target Investment Management Ltd. held a principal's licence under the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act 1958. Target Life Assurance Company Ltd. and National Financial Management Corporation plc (formerly known as Target Annuities Ltd.) were authorised to write insurance business in classes I-IV, VI and VII. Consumer credit licences covering categories A-F and Z were also held by Target Home Loans Ltd. and National Financial Management Corporation plc.

Seiff Davidson Financial Services Limited

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which self-regulatory body is responsible for the authorisation of Sieff Davidson Financial Services Limited and its directors and staff under the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: Seiff Davidson Financial Services Ltd. is a member of the Financial Intermediaries, Managers and Brokers Regulatory Association.

HEALTH

Committee on Safety of Medicines

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether adverse reaction data submitted to the Committee of Medicines on yellow cards is the property of the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: National Health Service personal health information, from which adverse drug reactions (ADR) data are usually derived, will be the subject of a forthcoming circular. Yellow cards are issued by the statutory committees on safety of medicines and on dental and surgical materials for use by doctors, dentists and coroners in a voluntary scheme for reporting suspected ADRs. The information received is treated in strict confidence by those committees and the licensing authority.

Health Service Inflation

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report the indices of health service inflation for each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

AIDS

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement on his Department's campaign on AIDS.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The objectives of the United Kingdom AIDS public education campaign and the Government's continuing commitment to them were reaffirmed at the symposium on HIV and AIDS jointly convened by the Health Departments and the Health Education Authority (HEA) on 24 November 1989.

The symposium provided an expert assessment of the potential for the spread of HIV in the United Kingdom. The consensus which emerged was that the three major routes of HIV transmission are now all-well established, and that we must continue to work to increase and maintain public awareness of this. On 14 February the HEA launched the latest phase of the AIDS campaign. This builds on the outcome of the symposium and consists of statements from experts in the HIV and AIDS field about the transmission routes for HIV infection and the action people should take to protect themselves and those they love.

The Government are also encouraging health and local authorities and the voluntary sector to develop co-ordinated local AIDS educational work.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average life expectancy for people diagnosed with AIDS, defined as the length of time from their diagnosis with AIDS to their deaths, in (a) London, (b) Cardiff, (c) Edinburgh, (d) Manchester and (e) Birmingham.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 14 February 1990]: The current average survival time from diagnosis of AIDS to death is approximately 18 months. Numbers of cases outside London are still too small to permit significant comparisons of life expectancy to be made.

Thurrock Health Authority

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many in-patients and out-patients were treated (a) in England and (b) by Basildon and Thurrock health authority in each of the last two years.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table.

Patients treated, NHS hospitals, England and Basildon and Thurrock district health authority, 1987-88 and 1988-89

	England		Basildon and Thurrock
	1987-88	1988-89	1987-88	1988-89

North-East (Expenditure)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent so far in the north-east by his Department by district health authorities and family practitioner committees to prepare for the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have no central information about any such local expenditure.

Social Workers

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from Northumberland social service regarding the implications of shortages of local authority social workers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received no such representations from Northumberland social services department.

Schizophrenia

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are currently admitted to mental illness hospitals and units under compulsory powers with a diagnosis of schizophrenia; how many of those admitted informally were subsequently detained as formal patients; and what percentage they constituted of all patients admitted or subsequently detained under compulsory power.

Mr. Freeman: Figures relating diagnosis to legal status, either on admission or before discharge, are not available.

However in 1986, the latest year for which reliable diagnostic figures are available, there were 24,741 admissions, with a diagnosis of schizophrenia, to National Health Service mental illness hospitals and units in England. This represents 12·5 per cent. of all admissions into these hospitals and units. The figures may exceed the number of patients since the same individual may be admitted and discharged more than once during the year.

Overtime

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the amount of overtime worked in the ambulance service in each of the last four years for which figures are available; if he will publish such information, in summary form, in the Official Report; and if he will make a statement on his proposals to reduce the amounts of overtime worked.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The figures of overtime worked in the ambulance service are not readily available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Severn-Trent Water

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has given the Severn-Trent water authority a full indemnity against any civil liability, including negligence, arising from the fluoridation of drinking water supplies by the company.

Mr. Freeman: A full indemnity was provided to Severn-Trent Water by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State, with the consent of the Treasury, on 21 November 1989.

North Western RHA

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial resources the North Western regional health authority has received over the last three years to run breast cancer screening programmes; and how many mobile screening units are currently in operation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: North Western regional health authority has received a total of £4,129,000 over the years 1987-88 to 1989-90 to introduce and run breast cancer screening by mammography.

There are two mobile breast cancer screening units currently in operation in the North Western region. The centres are based in the following areas:

(a) South Manchester—serving Manchester and
(b) West Lancashire and Chorley and South Ribble—serving both those districts.

Further mobile units are planned for introduction in March 1990 and July 1990.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had regarding the ambulance workers' pay claim; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, East (Mr. Dykes) on 17 January at column 278.

National Health Service Reorganisation

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department has any plans to reduce the number of district health authorities.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Any proposal to reduce the number of district health authorities within a region has to be considered by the regional health authority concerned and submitted to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State. Each case is subject to full public consultation and my right hon. and learned Friend needs to be convinced that there is a compelling case for change before approving it. The Health Service reforms are about concentrating management where it matters, not about widespread restructuring.

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy towards promotion by the South West regional health authority regional general manager of the amalgamation of North Devon district health authority, Exeter district health authority or Torbay district health authority with each other, or with any other district health authority or district health authorities in the context of the National Health Service structure after reorganisation; and what information he has as to the policy of the South West regional health authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Any proposals to merge health authorities would need to be subject to full consultation by the regional health authority. We would expect there to be broad agreement that any proposed merger would be in the interests of the population served. Any recommendations arising out of the consultation would be considered by my right hon. and learned Friend, who would need to be convinced that there were compelling reasons for the change before approving it. The South Western regional health authority has not formulated a policy on this matter.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the minimum notice that a district health authority will be required to give to terminate a block contract for health care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The duration of any contract will be a matter for negotiation and agreement between the contracting parties. However, the Department has advised that for block contracts the norm should be for three year initial contracts with a further 12 months extension negotiated annually. This would ensure that both parties received at least two years notice of any proposal for significant change.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures the Government intend to take to monitor the effects of the proposed changes in the National Health Service on (a) the quality of care provided, (b) the quantity of care provided, (c) the degree to which provision meets needs for care and (d) the travelling time of patients to obtain care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The proposed system of contract placement will allow district health authorities to specify the nature and quality of services and ensure that patient services are of a satisfactory standard. It will be for the National Health Service management executive to satisfy itself, and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State, that high and improved standards of care are provided as our proposals are implemented. We have asked it to devise suitable methods of monitoring Health Service provision to achieve this.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 12 February sent to the hon. Member for Walsall, North, Official Report, columns 22-25, what form of consultation has so far occurred over hospitals opting out of the existing National Health Service management structures; and if he will give the result of such consultation area by area.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Formal consultation on proposals to establish NHS trusts cannot take place until after the necessary legislation has received Royal Assent. Information is not available centrally on any informal consultation by units which have expressed an interest in trust status.

Registration of Marriages

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to bring forward legislation to reform the law affecting the registration of marriages.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter) on 1 February 1990 at columns 354-55 announcing publication of a White Paper "Registration Proposals for Change" (Cm 939.) The White Paper contains proposals for reform of the registration system in England and Wales, including changes to the conduct and registration of civil marriages.

The Government hope to introduce the legislation necessary to effect those returns at an early opportunity during the present Parliament.

General Practitioners

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ask the chairman of North Yorkshire family practitioners committee to investigate and report on the circumstances in which 120 patients have been removed from the list of patients and the practice in Filey, Yorkshire, of Dr. P. Garnett and partners; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave her on 12 February at column 28. The address of the North Yorkshire family practitioners committee is Ryedale house, 60 Piccadilly, York YO1 1PE.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much extra funding will be available to each of the three general practitioner practices in Calderdale who have applied to become budget holders.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To date, practices have been invited only to register their interest in fund holding, since the legislative provision for the operation of the scheme is not yet in place. It is not possible, therefore, to give any estimate of the level of funds which might be available to individual practices.

Practices which volunteer to join the scheme will be able to claim an annual management allowance of up to £32,000 to meet expenses legitimately incurred in running a fund. In 1990-91 an allowance of half that level will be available in recognition of the preparatory work which practices will have to undertake before entering the scheme.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much time he considers that each doctor should spend on medical audit in addition to that currently spent; and what steps he is planning to take to provide additional resources to ensure that that time is not at the expense of patient care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Medical audit is essentially a professional matter. Doctors will be advised by their professional bodies, including the royal colleges, on how much time should be spent on it. The Government are making available additional resources—£31 million in 1990-91—to ensure that medical audit is adequately supported and that doctors are able to participate in it without detriment to their other duties.

Leukaemia and Lymphoma (West Cumbria)

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has received the results of the case control study of leukaemia and lymphoma in young people resident in West Cumbria recommended in the report of the independent advisory group chaired by Sir Douglas Black in 1984.

Mr. Freeman: Yes. The results of the case control study, which was commissioned and funded by the Department of Health, have been published today. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library.

The study was undertaken by the Medical Research Council epidemiology unit at Southampton, in response to the first recommendation of the Black advisory group's report on cancer incidence in West Cumbria.[1]

The study documents an association between the excess of leukaemia and non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma in children living in the vicinity of Sellafield, and employment of the fathers of the affected children at Sellafield over the period 1950 to 1985.

In particular, the study documents an association between the raised incidence in children of leukaemia and non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma and the recorded level of external radiation dose received by the father before conception of the affected child.

The Government note with concern the results of the study, and recognise the anxieties that it must cause to those who might be at risk. In view of its importance, the results have been referred to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE) for its urgent consideration and preliminary advice, following its next meeting in March.

COMARE will also be considering the study in conjunction with the results of other studies, completed, under way or planned, recommended in the Black report or by COMARE in its second[2] and third[3] reports, and accepted by Government.

The following studies, which have been funded by Government, have already been completed:

'Birth and School Cohort Studies in the area around Sellafield'.

'A reanalysis of the data from the Northern Children's Cancer Registry'.

Other relevant studies already under way include:

'A case control study of young people registered as cases of leukaemia or lymphoma in the Dounreay area'.

'Birth and School Cohort Studies in Thurso and around Dounreay'.

'A case-control study of childhood leukaemia and other cancers in West Berkshire and North Hampshire, in which the Ministry of Defence establishements at Aldermaston and Burghfield are situated'.

Finally, planned work includes detailed epidemiological studies to obtain more information on the possible health effects in the offspring of parents occupationally exposed to radiation. These studies should start in the near future.

In addition, subject to the agreement of the individuals concerned, the Health and Safety Executive will set up an investigation which will be conducted by the Nuclear Inspectorate in co-operation with British Nuclear Fuels plc and the workforce.

This investigation will examine in detail both the internal and external radiation doses, and chemical occupational exposure histories, of the parents of the affected children. This may help in identifying any common factors which may be relevant.

In the meantime, the nuclear industry will wish to consider this report and the possible implications for its workforce, including the need for counselling.

I am advised that the average annual external radiation doses for workers at Sellafield during the late 1960s and the early 1970s were in the range about 12-13 millisieverts (mSv).

Improvements in plant design and radiation protection standards in the 1970s and 1980s have led to a substantial reduction in average external radiation doses, with four-fold reduction between 1974 and 1989. For 1989 the average annual external dose was about three mSv.

The current statutory annual dose limit for people occupationally exposed to radiation is 50 mSv. The National Radiological Protection Board advised, following new data on cancer induction in exposed individuals, that doses should be kept below 15 mSv per year on average, over a number of years.

The Health and Safety Commission has recently issued a consultative document containing proposals to carry this recommendation forward, by the institution of an investigation into the individual circumstances whenever the average is exceeded. The consultative document also stresses for the same reason the increased need to keep doses as low as reasonably practicable.

Interpretation of this study is not straightforward. Until the results have been confirmed or not, and possible mechanisms elucidated, no definitive statement can be made on the possible risk to individuals.

If the effects are demonstrated to be related to external radiation, then on the basis of the evidence from annual doses, only workers receiving relatively high doses might be at risk. There would be a limited number of such workers in the nuclear industry and industries using industrial radiography. COMARE has been asked to advise on this and will report in due course.

Food Safety

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the report of the Richmond committee on the microbiological safety of food.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Sir Mark Richmond submitted to Ministers on 18 January part 1 of his committee's report. It is being published today.

In this part, the committee has examined the incidence of food poisoning and its main causes (salmonella, campylobacter and listeria), outbreak management, surveillance arrangements, food manufacture, the poultry meat industry and the general legislative framework. My colleagues and I welcome it as a constructive and thorough document. We shall follow up positively its many useful recommendations. We trust that others to whom recommendations are addressed, in particular the food industry and environmental health authorities, will examine it to see how the level of food safety in this country can be further raised. We shall certainly draw it to their attention.

The committee's proposals for licensing in due course go further than the Government feel to be necessary. We do, however, see the value of the committee's views on prior notification and we intend to introduce a simple system of prior registration which would not impose unnecessary administrative burdens, but would help business and enforcement authorities alike.

The report indicates support for the Government's Food Safety Bill which the committee felt accommodates many of its views. Because we believe that many of the recommendations in the report call for early action and some are relevant to the Food Safety Bill now before Parliament, the Government have decided to publish their immediate response to the recommendations. This is set out in a paper which is being put into the Library.

My right hon. Friends and I are most grateful to the committee for its hard work so far. It has stated that in part 2 of its report it will examine the arrangements for Scotland and Northern Ireland; catering, retailing and the home; and other important foods. We are therefore extending the committee's life and asking it to finish its work by 31 July 1990.

Halifax General Hospital

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the new Halifax general hospital will be built within the current timetable.

Mr. Freeman: Subject to the determination of its capital programme by the regional health authority, the project for the new Halifax general hospital, now known as Calderdale district general hospital, is programmed to start on site in December 1992 and is due for completion in December 1995.

Nursing Students

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to uprate the bursaries paid to nursing students pursuing Project 2000 courses of nursing education in the light of the report of the review body on nurses' pay.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I cannot add to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member on 4 December 1989 at column 69.

Wakefield Health Authority

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will call for a report from the chairman of Wakefield health authority on how many functions have been held by the authority to give time out to senior managers in order to consider management structure within a possible self-governing trust; where these functions were held; and what was the full public cost;

(2) if he will call for a report from the chairman of Wakefield health authority as to when the district finance officer of the authority was informed in writing of his suspension from duty;

(3) if he will call for a report from the chairman of Wakefield health authority on why the locks on the door of the office of the district finance officer of the authority were changed shortly after his recent suspension from duty;

(4) if he will call for a report from the chairman of Wakefield health authority on the reasons for the suspension from duty of the district finance officer of the authority; and if he will make a statement;

(5) if he will call for a report from the chairman of Wakefield health authority as to why senior managers of the authority spent the night of 12 February at the Crown hotel, Boroughbridge, North Yorkshire; what was the purpose of their stay and the full cost to be met from public funds; and whether he will make a statement;

(6) if he will set up an independent inquiry into the circumstances leading up to the suspension from duty of the district finance officer of Wakefield health authority.

Mrs Virginia Bottomley: These are matters for local management who are currently dealing with them.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to instruct his Department's director of audit to carry out a full audit of Wakefield health authority's hospitality account and to make the report public.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State does not intend to instruct the Department's director of audit to carry out an audit of the Wakefield health authority's hospitality account.

Wandsworth Health Authority

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the increase or decrease in the numbers of (a) bed spaces, (b) wards and (c) hospitals in the Wandsworth health authority area since 1986.

Mr. Freeman: Between 1986 and 1989 the average daily number of beds available fell from 2,234 to 2,095 and the number of hospitals in the district fell from 5 to 4. Similar information on wards is not held centrally and the hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Wandsworth health authority.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the underspend or overspend figures for Wandsworth health authority's budget on a monthly basis between January 1985 and October 1989;

(2) if he will place in the Library the accounts of Wandsworth health authority covering (a) 1986, (b) 1987 and (c) 1988.

Mr. Freeman: The detailed financial budget information requested is not collected centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the chairman of the Wandsworth health authority, who may be able to assist with the information sought and supply copies of the authority's annual accounts.

NHS Funding

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of all correspondence from his Department to the National Health Service units on the issues of the National Health Service trust and general practitioner fund holding.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the relevant figures in table 13.3 of Cm 1013 adjusted by the hospital and community health service current, hospital and community health service capital and the FPS current pay and price deflators to the year 1988-89.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is contained in the reply which I gave the hon. Member on 13 February at columns 157-59.

ENVIRONMENT

Devon County Council

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he is willing to give to Devon county councillors before they decide on their projected budget for 1990-91; and what is his assessment of the opportunity for them to make a change in their budget.

Mr. Chris Patten: In setting their budget the councillors should take a hard look at the services the county council provides, and make sure that they are satisfied that charge payers will be getting full value for money. They should consider whether they can justify the proposed expenditure on each of these services to their charge payers, and look into the scope for contracting services out where this would be more efficient. The key point that they should bear in mind is that £1 saved is £1 off the community charge.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr dated 23 November 1989, which asked for a response to the statement by the leader of Birmingham city council on the revenue support grant settlement and its implications for poll tax in Birmingham.

Mr. Chope: My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities, wrote to the hon. Member on 12 February.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his November estimate of the amount of poll tax payable in 1990-91 per adult compared to rates took account of any transitional reliefs.

Mr. Chope: The provisional assumed charges published on 6 November, and the assumed charges published on 11 January, include safety net contributions or receipts and any transitional special grant but take no account of community charge benefit or transitional relief, which are paid to individuals, not to areas. The effect of community charge benefit and transitional relief is that charge payers in receipt of either or both will pay less than the personal community charge for the area.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he will adopt when giving consideration to the capping of the poll tax.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Wall) on 24 January at column 739.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number and weighting of all indices of need in the grant-related expenditure and standard spending assessment and the effect of the changes made in both on the financial allocations.

Mr. Chope: The formula used to calculate grant-related expenditure assessments for 1989-90 was set out in the Rate Support Grant Report (England) 1989-90, approved by the House on 19 December 1988. The formulae for assessing standard spending assessments are set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), debated in the House on 18 January 1990. The new standard spending assessments are the result of extensive research and discussion with local authority representatives. They are composed of fewer elements than grant-related expenditure assessments and each element is based on understandable factors of direct relevance to the services provided by local authorities.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the grant-related expenditure allocations 1989-90 and the standard spending assessments allocations for 1990-91 for each district in Humberside and the percentage increase or decrease; and if he will explain the reasons for the divergence.

Mr. Chope: The table provides the information requested. Standard spending assessments follow from extensive research and discussion with local authority representatives. They are composed of fewer individual service elements than grant-related expenditure assessments, with each element based on simple understandable factors of direct relevance to the services provided by local authorities.

1990-91 SSAs—Cash changes from adjusted 1989-90 GREs

	1989-90 GRE	Adjusted 1989-90 GRE	1990-91 SSA	Cash change (column 3 minus column 2)
	£ million (1)	£ million (2)	£ million (3)	Per cent. (4)
Beverley	5,161	5,063	5,624	11·1
Boothferry	3,533	3,487	4,743	36·0

Glanford	4,117	4,036	4,932	22·2
Great Grimsby	7,622	7,347	7,019	−4·5
Holderness	2,483	2,425	2,994	23·5
Kingston upon Hull	27,416	26,223	25,149	−4·1
East Yorkshire	4,448	4,307	5,071	17·7
Scunthorpe	4,750	4,468	4,365	−2·3

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the scaling factors used to calculate stages 2 and 3 of the standard spending assessment, specifying how they were arrived at; and if he will show how they were used in arriving at the standard spending assessment for Grimsby borough council.

Mr. Chope: The method used to calculate the scaling factors for standard spending assessments is set out in paragraph 3.3 of section 3 of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), approved by the House on 18 January. The factors used in deriving the SSA for Great Grimsby are:

Other Services
- Other Services—District level: 0·9999
- Other Services—County level: 1·1047
- Flood Defence: 1·0124
- Coast Protection: 1·0193
- Interest Receipts: −0·0287

Capital Financing
- Debt Charges: 0·9569
- Capital Expenditure Charged to Revenue Account: 0·3014
- Interest on Capital Receipts to shire districts: −0·3926

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the factors and indicators taken into account in assessing (a) grant-related expenditure allocations and (b) standard spending assessments and his reasons for differences between the two.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him today.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the grant-related expenditure allocations for Grimsby for 1986-87 to 1989-90, together with his proposed standard spending assessment figures of November 1989 and his final standard spending assessment figures in January; and if he will outline the reasons for the differences between the last two.

Mr. Chope: The figures requested for Great Grimsby are as follows:

Grant Related Expenditure Assessment

	£000's
1986-87	7,288
1987-88	6,855
1988-89	6,969
1989-90	7,622

The figures for 1986-87 to 1988-89 are those determined in the latest supplementary report for the relevant year. The 1989-90 GRE is a settlement figure.

The standard spending assessment (SSA) for Great Grimsby issued as part of the November consultation was £7·053 million. The final SSA is £7·019 million. The main reason for the difference is the replacement of an estimated credit approval used in calculating the capital financing element with a figure based on actual credit approvals.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government's spending assumption for the area safety net and the community charge transitional relief scheme and the figures for assumed spending by local authorities in England in 1990-91, issued by his Department on 11 January, represent the amount he considers it appropriate for each authority to spend in 1991.

Mr. David Hunt: No. It is an authority's standard spending assessment (SSA) for the year which is intended to represent the amount of revenue expenditure which it would be appropriate for the authority to incur in that year to provide a standard level of service consistent with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's view of the amount of revenue expenditure which it would be appropriate for all authorities to incur. This latter amount is net total standard spending, as defined in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), which the House approved on 18 January 1990.

The Government's spending assumption and the assured charge based on it does not represent the Government's view of what an authority could or should spend or charge. Nor does it represent a Government target or guideline for, or a prediction of, spending and charges by individual local authorities next year. The spending assumption, based on 1989-90 rate income and grant, adjusted for changes in function and increased to be consistent with total standard spending of £32·8 billion for 1990-91, is a reference point for the calculation of the area safety net and of the assumed charge for the purposes of the transitional relief scheme. Both of these measures are designed to give an appropriate degree of protection from changes arising from the move from the old system to the new. They are not designed to protect people from changes arising from individual authorities' spending decisions for which they are accountable to their electorate.

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the distribution of changes in the percentage of net income paid in (a) domestic rates in 1989-90 and (b) community charge in 1990-91, if community charges are set at the level assumed for the calculation of 1990-91 revenue support grant entitlements.

Mr. David Hunt: I have today placed in the Library a note updating figures on the impact on household finances of the community charge system. The figures are based on the assumed community charges published in January. They show that three out of five households would pay less with the community charge than they would have paid had rates continued. The actual gains for households will depend on spending decisions by their local authorities. Higher spending than we have assumed will result in higher community charges, just as it would also have resulted in higher rate bills.

The analysis compares 1989-90 rate levels with 1990-91 community charges. Since these are at different price levels, the results are presented in terms of changes in percentage of net income paid in rates and community charge. The figures show that 60 per cent. of households (11·4 million) gain from the new system—88 per cent. of single pensioner households and 82 per cent. of other single adult households gain from the new system; community charge is particularly good news for households in the lowest income band. On average, they will see a 26 per cent. reduction in the percentage of their income paid to local governments as a result of the new system. This is because community charge benefits will be more generous than rate rebates and because many of the single adult households benefiting from the change are on low incomes.

The message is clear. The community charge with its benefit system is fair. Contrary to claims made by opponents of the community charge, many of the lowest income households should gain from the changes being made. But for the full benefits of the community charge to be felt, local authorities must control their expenditure. High spending will lead to high community charges just as it would lead to high rate bills. Those high bills would be the responsibility of local authorities, not the Government.

Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make a report under the Personal Community Charge (Relief) (England) Regulations 1990 (S.I., 1990, No. 2).

Mr. Chris Patten: Over the next three years the community charge transitional relief scheme will reduce personal community charges for about 6 million people by £710 million during the changeover from domestic rates to the new system. Most charge payers would pay no more than £3 per week more than they did in rates, where councils spend in line with the Government's assumptions.

I have today laid the Community Charge Transitional Relief Report (England), as required by these regulations, which sets out the assumed community charges for the purposes of the scheme: these are as announced on 11 January in connection with the revenue support grant settlement for 1990-91. Copies of the report are being sent to local authorities and to the local authority associations.

Local authorities will be reimbursed in full for the income forgone as a result of the abatement of community charges. In addition they will receive grant in respect of administrative costs.

When the community charge transitional relief scheme was announced I met the local authority associations and made it clear that authorities' reasonable costs incurred in preparing for and administering the scheme would be reimbursed in full. KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock, management consultants, were commissioned to undertake an independent study of these costs. They have had discussions with 31 local authorities, software suppliers, and have met the local authority associations to discuss their views on the operation of the scheme and on methods for cost reimbursement. They have now submitted their report and copies of the recommendations and cost summary have been placed in the Libraries of the Houses of Commons and Lords: copies of the complete report will be available shortly.

In the light of the report, I am today announcing detailed proposals for consultation with the local authority associations for the reimbursement of these costs. I propose that authorities' preparation costs for the scheme, largely for computer software and related expenditure, should be reimbursed in full on the basis of the actual expenditure incurred, as confirmed by the authority's auditor. The consultants' report estimates preparation costs to be about £7 million in total.

I propose that the general administrative costs which authorities will incur as a consequence of the scheme, in particular dealing with inquiries, should be reimbursed at a flat rate of 27p per charge payer, with an allowance for higher costs in London. On this basis, the administrative costs grant would be about £9·5 million in total.

The report recommends that the cost of dealing with applications from elderly and disabled persons and the cost of issuing any second bills to charge payers should be reimbursed on the basis of an amount per application and an amount per bill. I propose that applications should be reimbursed at a rate of £3 per charge payer for each application made, including the cost of dealing with unsuccessful applications.

I continue to expect that wherever possible authorities should send out bills in good time reflecting entitlement to community charge benefit and transitional relief where appropriate. However, where bills are sent out without taking into account transitional relief, and second bills have to be issued, I propose that the cost of printing and postage for such bills should be reimbursed at a rate of 50p each. This would not apply where the second bill relates to a substitute charge.

The total cost of this package of grant aid to meet authorities' costs would be about £21 million. These proposals and a copy of the recommendations and cost summary have been sent to the local authority associations for their comments before final decisions are made.

Electric-Powered Vehicles

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research or other assistance his Department is funding for the development of electrically powered road vehicles.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him on 13 February 1990 by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport at column 168.

Recycling

Mr. Bevan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the Government's target for recycling.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government's target is that 50 per cent. of recyclable household waste should be recycled by the end of the century, and that all forms of recycling should be maximised. This is part of our policy of conserving resources through preventing and reducing waste and promoting the effective and efficient re-use and recovery of materials. To this end we are bringing forward measures in the Environmental Protection Bill to empower and encourage local authorities to undertake recycling. In addition we are working with manufacturers and retailers, voluntary groups and local authorities to identify and remove the barriers to further recycling.

Homelessness

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any proposals to address the problems of homelessness following mortgage repossession.

Mr. Chope: The statement last November by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment (copies of which are in the Library) contained the wide range of proposals from the Government to relieve or prevent homelessness, from whatever cause.

Disabled People (Public Toilets)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce a scheme to allow free access to specially adapted public toilets for those who are disabled and over retirement age.

Mr. Chope: The national key scheme administered by the Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation enables disabled people who have a key to obtain free access to specially adapted public toilets.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make additional resources available to local authorities to enable them to construct and convert public toilet provision adapted to the needs of the disabled.

Mr. Chope: The Government make resources available to local authorities through the revenue support grant settlement in support of their expenditure on revenue services generally. These services include the provision of public conveniences, including those adapted to the needs of the disabled. Details of the settlement for 1990-91 were announced on 11 January and full information about the grant entitlement of each area was sent to authorities on 25 January.

The settlement is based on total standard spending by authorities of £32·8 billion; this is the amount which it is appropriate for authorities in aggregate to incur to provide a standard level of service. I have no plans to make additional resources available.

Revenue support grant is unhypothecated. Now that authorities have details of their entitlements, it is for them to decide how much to spend on the construction or conversion of public toilet provision adapted to the needs of the disabled.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he collected on the location of specially adapted public conveniences for the disabled.

Mr. Chope: This information is not collected by my Department. Information of the kind to which the hon. Member refers is collected by the Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation, and is made available to disabled people by the association.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will consider making a key available free of charge to those disabled people in receipt of mobility or attendance allowance who request it to enable them to gain 24-hour access to the existing public toilets specially adapted for the disabled by local authorities; and what is his estimate of the cost of providing such a key.

Mr. Chope: No. Keys giving access to public toilets specially adapted for the disabled included in the national key scheme are available from the Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation at a cost of £2·90 each.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures in the north-east for the number of people living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation.

Mr. Chope: At the end of September 1989 there were an estimated 80 households temporarily living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation who had been accepted as homeless by local authorities in Tyne and Wear, Cleveland, Durham and Northumberland.

Sewage Discharges (Severn)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to end the discharge of untreated sewage into the Severn estuary; and within what timescale.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: On 20 October 1989 my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) announced details of a £1·1 billion programme (November 1987 prices) designed to bring United Kingdom bathing waters identified under the EEC bathing water directive up to the directive's standards within the next 10 years. Major schemes at Barry (£26·3 million) and Weston-Super-Mare (£13 million) will help to improve the bathing waters in the Severn estuary.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to widen the powers of waste disposal authorities to allow them (a) to ensure that environmental and amenity constraints are fully considered in the implementation of their policies and (b) to minimise the movement of domestic, industrial and special wastes.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The existing waste disposal authorities will be reformed under the powers of the Environmental Protection Bill. Their functions will be divided between waste regulation authorities, whose function will be to license waste management facilities and to enforce standards, and the waste disposal authorities, whose functions will be to seek tenders for the disposal of waste.

The waste regulation authorities will have wider powers under the provisions of the Bill to prevent the pollution of the environment or harm to human health. The Secretary of State will issue guidance on the way in which the authorities should carry out their duties and the authorities will be under statutory duty to have regard to this guidance.

The waste disposal authorities will arrange, through competitive tendering, for the disposal of household waste collected by the collection authorities. They will take into account the costs of transporting the waste to the facility in deciding on the tenders they have received. While the authorities are not generally involved in the disposal of industrial waste or special waste, the producers of such waste can also be expected to take into account the costs of transport to the disposal facility. However, some wastes require specialised treatment and it may sometimes be necessary for such waste to move ouside its area of origin to a suitable facility.

Wild Birds

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers are available to him to meet Her Majesty's Government's obligations under article 4 of the European Community directive on the conservation of wild birds, 79/409 EC, in relation to tidal areas outside the jurisdiction of local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I will write to the hon. Member.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidelines are issued to local authorities to take account in the contracting-out service of the training and apprenticeship policies of the tendering companies.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Under the terms of section 17 of the Local Government Act 1988, the training of a contractor's workforce is a non-commercial matter which local authorities must not take into account when awarding contracts for the supply of goods or materials, the supply of services or the execution of works. The Department's circular 8/88 advises local authorities that consideration of the number or proportion of apprentices to be employed by a contractor is not allowed during the contractual process.

Overtime

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the amount of overtime worked in local government manual services in each of the last four years for which figures are available; if he will publish such information, in summary form, in the Official Report; and if he will make a statement on his proposals to reduce the amounts of overtime worked.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This information is not available centrally. The amount of overtime worked by manual workers in local government is a matter for each local authority.

Lambeth

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he calculates grants due to Lambeth council in the absence of audited accounts.

Mr. Chope: Following the enactment of the Rate Support Grant Act 1988, which closed down the rate support grant system, information from audited accounts is not relevant to the calculation of an authority's rate support grant entitlement. Nor will such information be relevant to the calculation of revenue support grant entitlements under the new system of local government finance.

Where entitlements to other grants depend on information from audited accounts, and where that information is not available, final entitlements cannot be determined, although on-account payments may be made.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much Lambeth council will now receive in 1990-91 from (a) its share of the uniform business rate, (b) revenue support grant and (c) housing subsidies.

Mr. Chope: In 1990-91 Lambeth borough council will receive £50·5 million in redistributed business rates from the central pool, and £174·3 million of revenue support grant (after allowing for the safety net).

Lambeth's claim for housing subsidy and grants for slum clearance, home insulation and improvement grant for 1990-91 will not be known until April. In 1989-90 it claimed a total of £63·3 million.

Waste Management 90 Conference

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to the information received in response to the reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West, Official Report, 5 February, column 436, he now expects his Department to be represented at the Waste Management 90 conference in Tucson.

Mr. Trippier: I will write to the hon. Member.

Globe '90 Conference

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department will participate in the Globe '90 conference on economic developments and environmental protection in Vancouver in March; and whether any request has been received from the organisers to his Department.

Mr. Trippier: Mr. David Pounder, my Department's environmental protection technology adviser, has accepted an invitation from the organisers of Globe '90 to participate in the conference, and will be speaking on the subject of cleaner production.

Fire Brigade

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take immediate action to persuade the private water companies of the need to ensure that the fire-fighting services have an adequate water supply.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Private water companies have statutory duties under the Water Act 1989 both for the provision of water supplies for fire-fighting and in respect of constancy of supply and water pressure. These duties are enforceable by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment under section 20 of the Act.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had about the current anxieties of the South Yorkshire fire service in regard to the provision of water supplies.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None, but representations have been made to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department, and are currently being considered.

Sulphur Emissions

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment over what timescale his pollution inspectorate will require existing large combustion plant from (a) the general industrial sector, (b) the refinery sector and (c) the electricity supply industry to meet BATNEEC —best available techniques not entailing excessive cost —requirements for new plant.

Mr. Trippier: Subject to the enactment of the Environmental Protection Bill, integrated pollution control of existing plants will be introduced progressively. There will be a rational timetable, which will be subject to consultation, for bringing categories of process within the IPC system.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how the United Kingdom will meet its obligations to cut sulphur emissions under the large combustion plants directive; and how he expects this to be achieved in (a) the general industrial sector, (b) the refinery sector and (c) the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Trippier: The Government set out their general plans for implementing the directive in a consultation paper published in August 1989. A copy is held in the Library of the House. Further consultation will take place before a statutory plan is issued for emissions reductions from existing plants.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the extent to which the use of low-sulphur coal in power stations represents the best available techniques not entailing excessive costs of reducing emissions of sulphur dioxide.

Mr. Trippier: The use of low-sulphur coal is one of a number of means of reducing emissions of sulphur dioxide and is expected to contribute to meeting the United Kingdom's obligations under the large combustion plants directive. Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution is preparing detailed notes on the operation of large combustion plants which will specify the SO2 emission standards to be achieved in plants of different sizes and according to the sulphur content of fuel. The notes are expected to be published in the summer.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of plans to burn high-sulphur Orimulsion Venezuelan bitumen emulsion in power stations; and what the overall impact will be on the sulphur and nitrogen budget for the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Trippier: No assessment has been made of plans to burn Orimulsion, but Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution is aware of the results of a related test. The sulphur and nitrogen budgets would be subject to the arrangements the Government put in place for implementing the large combustion plants directive.

Large Combustion Plants

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether it remains the Government's intention to move increasingly to stated timetables for upgrading existing registered large combustion plants.

Mr. Trippier: Yes, in accordance with the proposals contained in our consultation paper.

Local Government Employees (Pensions)

Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make the regulations allowing part-time local government employees to buy additional service for pension purposes.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is the intention to make these regulations as soon as possible.

Nuclear Waste Disposal

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the limit set on the radioactivity of wastes disposed of at Drigg in (a) 1985 to 1990 and (b) 1990 to 1995.

Mr. Trippier: Disposal limits are specified in the certificate of authorisation issued to BNFL by the authorising Departments. I will send the hon. Member copies of the certificates covering the relevant period. It is Government policy to keep all such certificates under regular review.

Radiochemical Inspectors

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the sites at (a) Aldermaston, (b) Burghfield, (c) Springfield, (d) Capenhurst, (e) Sellafield, (f) Calder Hall, and (g) Chapel Cross, were last inspected by the radiochemical inspectors.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The latest date on which each of the following sites was inspected by HMIP is as follows:
(a) Aldermaston—30 January 1990, (b) Burghfield—30 July 1986, (c) Springfield—18 December 1989, (d) Capenhurst—30 January 1990, (e) Sellafield—2 February 1990, (f) Calder Hall—9 January 1990.
Inspection of the BNFL site at Chapel Cross is a matter for the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many Property Services Agency staff responded to the Property Services Agency trawl for posts in the Ministry of Defence;
(2) if he will detail the programme, by date, function, and staff numbers, for transferring work out of the Property Services Agency, Hastings.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: A total of 418 Property Services Agency staff responded to the trawl published by PSA on 5 October 1989 for approximately 120 posts in the Ministry of Defence.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact of the secondment agreement with the National Union of Civil and Public Servants and Civil and Public Servants Association on the morale of staff concerned and on the retention of staff by the Crown Suppliers.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: None, but secondment has been welcomed by those staff to whom we have been able to offer it.

DEFENCE

Fuel Pipelines

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the costs to the Exchequer of capital investment in the Government pipeline project from Calne, Wiltshire, to RAF Fairford in each of the past five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There has been no United Kingdom capital investment on the Calne to Fairford line over the past five years, and therefore no cost to the Exchequer.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the names of all contractors constructing and operating fuel pipeline systems on behalf of the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The major contractors responsible for operating existing MOD pipelines are British Pipeline Agency (BPA), Esso UK Limited and Texaco.
Construction work is subcontracted by these contractors, or via the Property Services Agency, to a great many different companies, depending on the nature of the work to be done, and the outcome of competition. No contract has yet been awarded for the construction of the new Calne to Fairford pipeline.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the cost of the proposed extension of the Government pipeline project from Calne, Wiltshire, to RAF Fairford will be paid in full by the United Kingdom Government.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. The cost of the extension will be met in full from NATO funds.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list payments to contractors for the operation of any part of the Government pipeline project from Calne, Wiltshire, to RAF Fairford in each of the past five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. The information requested is commercial-in-confidence.

Expenditure

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the expenditure on defence for each of the years from 1979 at constant prices.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to Cm. 1021, "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93", where the information requested is shown in table 21.2.11.

HILEX 1990

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the date of exercise HILEX 1990; if he will list the United Kingdom participants in the exercise; and what was the purpose of the exercise.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The NATO crisis management exercise HILEX 14 was to have taken place from 4 to 9 March 1990. The Alliance recently decided that in view of international developments it would be inappropriate to hold the exercise at the present time.

"Codename Badger"

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his agreement was sought prior to the publication in America of "Codename Badger" by John Cottell; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have been unable to find any record that the Ministry of Defence was consulted prior to publication of the book.

Lines of Communication Arrangement

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the exercises in which procedures for the provision of host nation labour under the terms of the United States—United Kingdom lines of communication arrangement have been tested.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The procedures for the provision of civil labour in support of the United States—United Kingdom lines of communication arrangement are tested from time to time, in conjunction with the Department of Employment. It would not be appropriate to list the occasions upon which these procedures have been exercised.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the publication dates and titles of the various joint logistic plans drawn up to meet the objectives of the United States—United Kingdom lines of communication arrangement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The titles of the joint plans refer to classified information and therefore cannot be released.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the United Kingdom representatives on the United States-United Kingdom telecommunications working group, established under the terms of the United States-United Kingdom lines of communication arrangement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Kingdom representation on the telecommunications working group consists of staff at major level with responsibility for communication matters from the central staffs and single-service departments of the MOD.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British private firms have contracted to provide supplies or services to the United States armed forces in crisis, tension and war, under the terms of the United States-United Kingdom lines of communication arrangement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are some hundreds of contractors with which the United States forces contract for supplies and services in peace time. The majority of these contracts would continue in time of crisis and war.

Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he made, pursuant to the answer to the Adjournment debate of 12 February, Official Report, column 115, of the implications for his policy of his reading of "Who Framed Colin Wallace" by Paul Foot.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will name the five Army officers whose names appear on the memorandum written by Colin Wallace in August 1973.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the undated and unsigned briefing notes which were reproduced in Paul Foot's book "Who Framed Colin Wallace", page 292. No Army officers' names appear on that document.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what disciplinary action is to be taken against those officials who failed in their duty to provide accurate information to Ministers in relation to parliamentary questions about Operation Clockwork Orange and related matters on 10 January 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This is the subject of the current internal inquiry. It would be premature to speculate whether any form of disciplinary action will be appropriate.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the reply to the Adjournment debate of 12 February, Official Report, column 118, by whom, and on whose authority, an additional job description was drafted to cover additional duties for Mr. Colin Wallace; and why they were not recorded in any subsequent approved and issued job description.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the statement which I made on 30 January in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel (Mr. Marshall), Official Report, 30 January 1990 c. 110-13. Such matters are within the purview of Mr. Calcutt's inquiry.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the reply to the Adjournment debate of 12 February, Official Report, column 118, (1) by what process documents have recently come to light making reference to a project called Clockwork Orange; and if he will specify the day on which they first came to light;

(2) what factors led to the re-examination of files on the Colin Wallace affair, indicating that Mr. Wallace had undertaken unattributable covert briefings.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the information given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in his statement to the House on 1 February and the subsequent exchanges, Official Report, 1 February 1990, columns 446-68, and in his letter of 2 February to the hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone). A copy of that letter is in the Library of the House.

Electric Vehicles

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department is funding or assisting projects designed to develop electrically powered road vehicles.

Mr. Alan Clark: No.

Kincora Boys' Home

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) of 12 February, Official Report, column 117, what inquiries were conducted into the rumours referred to about MI5 and MI6 blocking of an inquiry into Kincora, to establish that they were unsubstantiated.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to what I said to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) in the debate on 12 February, (Official Report, 12 February 1990, c. 117).

Temperatures

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what information has been received by the Meteorological Office in respect of the number of days between 1 November 1989 and 31 January 1990 when the average daily temperature allowing for wind chill factor fell below 0 deg. C. at each recording station in Scotland;

(2) what information the Meteorological Office has received from recording stations in the United Kingdom regarding any period of seven consecutive days between 1 November 1989 and 31 January 1990, when the average daily temperature, allowing for a wind chill factor, fell below 0 deg. C.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement, on 15 December 1989, Vol. 163, c. 882.

The Meteorological Office does not record wind chill factors, and does not provide such calculations without a specific request stating the criteria to be applied. The work involved would have to be undertaken on repayment terms.

The incidence of temperatures sought by the hon. Member, even without any chill factor applied, could be provided here only at disproportionate cost. However, temperatures covering the same period, recorded for the purposes of regulation 2 of the Social Fund Cold Weather Payments (General) Regulations 1988, are placed weekly in the Library of the House on the instructions of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

THE ARTS

English National Ballet and Opera

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts (1) what representations he has received from (a) the chairman of the Arts Council, (b) the chairman of the English National Ballet and the English National Opera and (c) Westminster city council about the future funding of the English National Ballet and English National Opera;

(2) whether he will list the dates in the last six months on which he has met (a) the chairman of the Arts Council, (b) the chairman of the English National Ballet and the English National Opera and (c) the leader of Westminster city council to discuss the impact of the community charge and the uniform business rate on the future funding of English National Ballet and English National Opera.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 12 February 1990]: I received a number of representations on behalf of English National Opera and English National Ballet. The Government took these and other factors into account in increasing the Arts Council's grant by 12·5 per cent. in the coming year. As a result, the Arts Council has been able to announce a further increase in its grants to these two companies of £1·1 million each in recognition of their special local circumstances created by the termination of the London rate equalisation scheme.

Arts Council

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will dismiss Mr. Peter Palumbo as chairman of the Arts Council as a result of the failure of the Arts Council to provide additional funding for the Royal Shakespeare Company.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 13 February 1990]: No, Sir.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Minister for the Arts (1) if he will increase the Government's grant to the Arts Council, earmarking the increase as extra funding for the English National Opera;

(2) if he will increase the Government's grant to the Arts Council, earmarking the increase as extra funding for the English National Ballet.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 13 February 1990]: I have already announced that the Arts Council's grant will increase by 22 per cent. over the next three years, including a 12·5 per cent. increase in 1990-91. It is for the Arts Council to determine the allocation of this additional money to individual companies. The council's grants to English National Opera and English National Ballet for 1990-91 represent increases of 11 per cent. and 12 per cent. respectively. The council announced yesterday an additional £1·161 million to English National Opera and £1·120 million to English National Ballet from its reserves, in recognition of their special local circumstances.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will increase the Government's grant to the Arts Council, earmarking the increase as extra funding for the Royal Shakespeare Company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 13 February 1990]: I have already announced that the Arts Council's grant will increase by 22 per cent. over the next three years, including a 12·5 per cent. increase in 1990-91. This is an extremely generous settlement and underlines the Government's commitment to the arts. It is for the Arts Council to determine the allocation of this additional money to individual companies. I am advised that the council's grant to the Royal Shakespeare Company will increase next year by 11 per cent., bringing it to over £6 million.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

European Community Free Food

Mr. Barron: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when is the deadline for applications from organisations wishing to operate the European Community free food scheme in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I and my colleagues are currently considering the arrangements for a scheme in 1990 and will make an announcement as soon as a decision has been reached.

Scrapie

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has as to whether the infective agent in scrapie can be passed to mink.

Mr. Maclean: Reports of outbreaks of natural transmissible mink encephalopathy in north America indicate that some may have resulted from the feeding to mink of scrapie-infected sheep material. In addition, research conducted in the United States has in certain circumstances transmitted scrapie-infected material from sheep and goats into mink experimentally.

Rodents

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of whether the requirements of the European Commission's common rules regarding the producing of rodents on the European Community market will require changes in the practices of British producers;

(2) what changes in the rules governing rodent producers in Britain will be imposed as a result of the European Commission's proposed regulation to remove disparities between member states' rodent health restrictions;

(3) what arrangements he is making to assist European Commission veterinary experts who will be making on-the-spot inspections to ensure British rodents are bred and kept within the requirements of European animal health restrictions.

Mr. Maclean: The proposed animal health conditions governing the placing of rodents on the market in the Community should not require changes in the practices of British producers. Tularaemia, myxomatosis and viral haemorrhagic disease would become notifiable, in addition to rabies, and exports to other member states would not be subject to official veterinary certification. We will provide whatever assistance is required by the Commission's veterinary experts in carrying out their inspections, if the proposal is adopted.

Veterinary Surgeons

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has concerning the number of veterinary surgeons employed by county councils in England and Wales.

Mr. Maclean: I have no information on the number of veterinary surgeons employed by county councils.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provision he is making for the training of veterinary surgeons in enforcement of welfare and public health standards prior to 1992.

Mr. Maclean: My Department provides training for veterinary surgeons who are to undertake meat work. Arrangements have already been made to enable increased numbers to receive this training.

Members of the state veterinary service (SVS) receive regular training on welfare matters; a course is held annually to cater for veterinary surgeons joining the service. Individual training is also given to local veterinary inspectors (LVIs) employed to carry out welfare functions. The impact of 1992 on welfare is not yet clear but once any new needs have been assessed appropriate training will, if necessary, be given.

Animal Movement Records

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new procedures he has introduced during the last three years concerning the maintenance by producers and auctioneers of animal movement records in respect of bovines.

Mr. Maclean: None.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he gives concerning the level of compensation to be paid in respect of bovine spongiform encephalopathy confirmed cattle identified at abattoirs; what certification is involved; which officials are authorised to certify payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The levels of compensation payable for cattle compulsorily slaughtered between 8 August 1988 and 13 February 1990 (inclusive) because of BSE were laid down in the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Compensation Order 1988. The levels payable for cattle slaughtered on or after 14 February 1990 are laid down in the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Order 1990.

A suspected animal's market value is determined by agreement between the owner of the animal and an officer of the state veterinary service, or by one valuer appointed jointly by the owner and the officer or, failing such agreement or appointment, by a valuer nominated by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the outbreak of disease among mink in Wisconsin in 1947, where the animals displayed symptoms similar to those of cows affected by bovine spongiform encephalopathy, will be considered as part of his Department's research into the causes and properties of bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Curry: The disease referred to in the question is called transmissible mink encephalopathy and outbreaks have occurred in continental Europe and north America. Part of the Department's research programme on BSE is to determine whether BSE is transmissible to mink.

EC Fraud

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of fraud upon the European Community agricultural funds were referred to the Commission by each of the 12 member states in the first nine months of 1989.

Mr. Curry: Regulation 283/72 requires member states to notify the Commission each quarter of all instances of irregularity affecting the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund. Irregularity is defined as contravention of a legal provision, whether deliberate or not, exceeding 1000 units of account (about £800) in value. The number of irregularities notified is not, therefore, a measure of detected fraud, nor does it necessarily relate to the volume of actual fraud committed. The numbers notified in the first three quarters of 1989 are as follows:

	Guarantee Section	Guidance Section
Belgium	2	0
Denmark	11	0
Germany	24	0
Spain	10	0
France	85	1
Ireland	8	5
Netherlands	58	27
United Kingdom	129	34

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many outbreaks of salmonella enteritidis have been identified or reported in free range flocks of poultry and in intensively reared flocks for the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available.

Mr. Maclean: Between 1 January and 29 December 1989 there were 24 reports of salmonella enteritidis in free-range laying flocks and 77 in intensively reared laying flocks.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Treasury has taken and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Ryder: The Treasury regularly reviews the security of its computer systems. The Department follows the guidance of the appropriate authorities on security matters. In the case of unclassified but sensitive information, the Treasury uses the CCTA recommended structural risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM). CCTA guidance is itself kept under continuous review.

Interest Rates

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what correspondence he has received from the Forum for Private Business on the implications of high interest rates on the small business sector.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer and I have received a number of such representations.

Taxation

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of central Government revenue was raised by indirect taxation in the latest year for which figures are available; if he will give a breakdown from each tax; and what information he has on the corresponding figures for the other member states of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Central Government taxes are classified in Government accounts as income and expenditure taxes and not as direct and indirect taxes. Expenditure taxes are broadly similar to indirect taxes. The latest information on central Government revenue from expenditure taxes is published in table 7.2 of the 1989 edition of "United Kingdom National Accounts" (the CSO Blue Book). Latest comparable information as is available for member states of the European Community can be obtained from the 1989 OECD annual publication, "Revenue Statistics of OECD Member countries". Figures are given for individual countries with taxes defined in table G.

Figures of total indirect taxes for OECD countries were also published in table F of the article, "International Comparisons of Taxes and Social Security Contributions in 20 OECD Countries 1976-86", in the January 1989 issue of "Economic Trends" (No. 423).

London Weighting

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the London weighting in Civil Service pay is calculated; and what weighting is given to the cost of housing.

Mr. Ryder: Since 1982, Civil Service London weighting has been set at levels which are deemed adequate to recruit, retain and motivate staff in sufficient numbers to carry out the work of the Civil Service efficiently. As London weighting is not a cost compensation allowance it is not calculated on the basis of specific costs such as housing.

Alcohol (Duty)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate by how much duty is underpaid each year by its being paid on potential brewery production rather than the amount of alcohol actually leaving the brewery; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 14 February 1990]: The beer duty is currently charged by reference to the original gravity of the beer prior to fermentation and not to the alcoholic content of the finished product. Underpayment of duty on the lines suggested in the hon. Gentleman's question does not therefore occur.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax discount has been given to brewers to offset wastage incurred under traditional brewing methods for each year since 1979.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 14 February 1990]: Since 1880 United Kingdom brewers have been legally entitled to deduct 6 per cent. from the quantity brewed when calculating the duty charge. This deduction is intended to cover normal spoilage and losses incurred in processing and packaging beer subsequent to the duty point; for the financial years since 1979 it reduced the duty liability by the following amounts:

	£ million
1979-80	56·1
1980-81	64·2
1981-82	83·0
1982-83	93·5
1983-84	101·7
1984-85	110·3
1985-86	117·9
1986-87	118·2
1987-88	119·8
1988-89	125·2

European Community Budget

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide whatever information is available pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Northampton, North on 5 February, Official Report, column 476.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 15 February 1990]: Annual payments to member states under the principal sectors of the Community budget are given in table 18 of the recent Court of Auditors' report (Official Journal of the European Communities, C 312, 12 December 1989). The information in this table, which is for the period 1984-88, covers 87·8 per cent. of total budgetary expenditure. It does not cover all payments to member states and it excludes expenditure on aid to third countries and administration. Information about total expenditure under each of the headings of the Community budget, including the administrative costs of the central Community institutions, is given in table 16 of the Court of Auditors' report and in table 1 of the statement on the 1989 Community budget (Cm. 680). The latter also includes estimates for 1989 which will be updated in the statement on the 1990 Community budget to be published later this year.

Actual amounts of own resources collected by each member state between 1984 and 1988 are shown in table 19 of the Court of Auditors' report. Table 2 of Cm. 680 gives similar information for the period 1986 to 1989.

Table 0201 of the January 1990 edition of "Eurostat" gives information about member states' population sizes in 1988.

VAT

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many companies were forced into receivership because of Customs and Excise action to recover outstanding value added tax payments in each of the last three years, and in the current financial year;

(2) how much money was owed to Customs and Excise by those companies forced into receivership because of Customs and Excise action to recover outstanding value added tax payments in each of the last three years, and in the current financial year; and what percentage of the outstanding debt was collected;

(3) how much value added tax revenue in each of the last three years, and in the current financial year, has been lost to the Exchequer because of the failure of businesses owed money by companies forced into receivership by Customs and Excise action to recover outstanding payment.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 15 February 1990]: None.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many concerns registered to pay value added tax on (i) a monthly basis, (ii) a quarterly basis have not paid (a) their most recent value added tax demand, (b) their last two value added tax demands, (c) their last three value added tax demands and (d) their last four or more value added tax demands; and in each case what is the total amount of money involved.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 15 February 1990]: The information is not available in the form requested and the cost of producing it would be disproportionate.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish any guidelines issued for those Customs and Excise officials with the responsibility of recovering the debts of those concerns registered for value added tax purposes.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 15 February 1990]: The guidelines are as follows:

"AIM OF ENFORCEMENT ACTION. All enforcement action is aimed at recovering tax which a trader has failed to pay voluntarily and encouraging non-compliant traders to become compliant. There are a number of steps leading up to this and, of course, the trader may at any time exercise his option to pay. Whatever action is contemplated, however, there is a simple guiding principle which is always to be borne to mind—DELAY COSTS MONEY.

If a trader delays payment until contacted and tax demanded—whether by assessment or distress visit or by civil recovery action—the sooner that demand is made the sooner some or all of the outstanding tax is likely to be paid. Therefore it is vital that contact at each stage of the enforcement process is made as soon as possible and that a priority system is operated to pursue the largest debts first. Remember, all quarterly traders have an average of 75 days to collect the tax before the due date of payment."

SOCIAL SECURITY

Nursing Homes and Hospitals (Residents' Allowance)

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will take steps to ensure that the term "pocket money" is not used by statutory bodies to describe the personal allowance paid to people in residential and nursing homes and hospitals.

Mr. Newton: The term "pocket money" is not used in any of the relevant regulations governing amounts for personal expenses or the downrating of benefit for those in hospital for a long time. I share my hon. Friend's dislike of the phrase and have asked for it to be eliminated from DSS publications when next revised. So far as references by other Departments or bodies is concerned, he may wish to make similar representations to those responsible.

Pensioners (Income)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the Government's record in maintaining the income of pensioners.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him on 2 February 1990 at columns 382-83.

Widows (Personal Allowance)

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what basis the personal allowance of £34·90 for an elderly widow in receipt of housing benefit is calculated.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The housing benefit personal allowances follow those set for income support, and approved by Parliament. From April the personal allowance for a single person aged not less than 25 will increase to £36·70.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Companies (Prevention of Fraud)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what trading relationships between the Target Group, the National Financial Management Corporation plc and Garston Amhurst companies existed under the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act 1958 prior to the commencement of the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: There was no obligation under the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act 1958 for information of this nature to be notified to my Department.

Barclays Bank

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will meet the chairman of Barclays bank to discuss banks' responsibilities in monitoring client accounts under the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: No. Responsibility for rules on clients' accounts under the Financial Services Act has been transferred to the Securities and Investments Board.

Accountancy Standards

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, further to his reply of 8 January, Official Report, column 518, he will provide details of the appointee to the accounting standards task force who has come from the accountancy firm criticised by his Department.

Mr. Redwood: Biographical notes on the individuals appointed by Sir Ronald Dearing as members of the accounting standards task group were given in the press notice issued by the task group on 6 November.

Packaging

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department will be represented at the conference on packaging and the environment to be held in Manchester on 28 to 29 March.

Mr. Forth: The DTI, in conjunction with the Institute of Metals, is holding a design for the environment conference in Birmingham on 28 March. The conference will cover environmental design problems relating to a variety of sectors including packaging. Therefore, this Department will not be participating in the packaging and the environment conference which is taking place at the same time.

WALES

Councils (Contingency Fund)

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will give the average contingency fund for (a) county councils and (b) district councils in Wales for 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91;

(2) if he will give the percentage increase of the contingency funds for (a) county councils and (b) district councils in Wales in 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91;

(3) if he will give the percentage increase of the contingency fund provisions of (a) Cardiff council and (b) South Glamorgan council for 1987-88, 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91;

(4) if he will list the contingency fund provision of (a) Cardiff council and (b) South Glamorgan council for 1987-88, 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91;

(5) what action he intends to take in respect of the use of contingency funds as financial devices by councils in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Valleys Initiative

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the overall cost of the valleys initiative to date.

Mr. Peter Walker: I will be giving details shortly of progress in the first 18 months or so on my programme for the valleys. This will include details of estimated expenditure to date, as well as future targets and activity following my decision to extend the programme for a further two years.

Infant Mortality

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many perinatal and neo-natal deaths were recorded for each health authority in Wales during 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Grist: The numbers of perinatal and neonatal deaths in 1987 and 1988 of babies whose mothers usually resided in Wales are given in the table. Deaths are not necessarily registered in the area of usual residence.

District Health Authority of Residence

	Perinatal Deaths[1]		Neonatal Deaths[2]

Water Industry

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent by his Department on publicity materials and advertising relating to the flotation of the water industry.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will supply the costs of water privatisation to Parliament in the normal way.

PRIME MINISTER

Arms Control

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations she has received in relation to arms control negotiation.

The Prime Minister: The subject of arms control negotiations is often raised during discussions with other Heads of Government. I make it clear that NATO's and the United Kingdom's arms control priorities are:

a 50 per cent. cut in strategic offensive weapons of the US and USSR

the verifiable global elimination of chemical weapons

the establishment of stable and secure conventional balance in Europe through elimination of disparities.

EC Immigration Policy

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the implications of the right of residence proposals agreed at the Internal Market Council for Immigration Policy.

The Prime Minister: No. The implications of the right of residence proposals were discussed in this House on 8 February at columns 1100-24 and they are likely to be adopted shortly.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister what contribution her office will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

The Prime Minister: There are no NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March. A Norwegian national exercise, designated "Cold Winter", is planned to take place in March, and forces from several members of the Alliance, including the United Kingdom, will participate.

Public Records

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will review the records held in the public record office but which are not open to inspection because they are either retained under section 3(4), or closed under section 5(1) of the Public Records Act; and if she will consider whether there is any further need for records which are over 40 years old to be restricted in this manner.

The Prime Minister: No. The retention of records under section 3(4) of the Public Records Act 1958 or closure under section 5(1) is subject to the approval of the Lord Chancellor. There are several categories of records which retain their sensitivity under established criteria for more than 40 years.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Alanbrooke Road, Belfast

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many terrorist attacks there have been on the Shorts Bros complex at Alanbrooke road, Belfast since 1969; and what was their nature.

Mr. Cope: The Shorts factory complex on the Alanbrooke industrial estate has not been subject to physical attack by terrorists since 1969. However, the hon. Member will be aware of all the circumstances surrounding the recent bomb attacks against Shorts' property elsewhere in Belfast, and of the armed theft of equipment from its Alanbrooke road factory in 1988.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will bring the area for assembly of the Star Streak missile into the security area at Alanbrooke road, Belfast.

Mr. Cope: Decisions on the location of work within the Shorts factory complex on the Alanbrooke road are the responsibility of Shorts' management and not Government.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland under what legislative powers Alanbrooke road in Belfast has been closed; what categories of persons are allowed access under those powers; and what consultation took place with local residents in advance of closure.

Mr. Cope: Shorts plc was authorised to close Alanbrooke road, under powers granted to the Secretary of State by section 19(2)(d) of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. In authorising the closure, the Secretary of State stipulated that pedestrian access from Montgomery road to the college of further education annex should continue to be provided during opening hours for those persons with legitimate business on the college premises. This has been done by the construction of a closed walkway which gives controlled access to the college annex. Because of the sensitive nature of the security measures then being considered and the urgent need to safeguard the Shorts factory complex from terrorist attack, it was not possible in this instance to consult local residents about the intended closure before it was implemented.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what security precautions have been introduced to protect local inhabitants living adjacent to the Shorts Bros complex in Alanbrooke road, Belfast; and what processes require the protection of high security.

Mr. Cope: There are no local residents living immediately adjoining the Shorts factory complex on Alanbrooke road. The nearest house is about 70 yards away from the outer fence. The hon. Member will already be generally aware of the equipment which is produced at this factory and, in line with longstanding Government policy on such matters, I know he would not expect me to elaborate further on this sensitive issue.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what security vetting has taken place on students of Castlereagh college who have access to Alanbrooke road, Belfast.

Mr. Cope: It is not Government policy to comment on the detailed application of security measures.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he proposes to extend the security precautions installed in Alanbrooke road, Belfast to Montgomery road; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The security of Short Bros plc property on the Alanbrooke road is kept under review. There is no plan to close off Montgomery road for security reasons.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which branch of the security forces mans the gate in Alanbrooke road, Belfast.

Mr. Cope: The hon. Member will know that it is the longstanding policy of Ministers not to discuss in any detail the make-up or efficacy of any physical security measures which may have been implemented at a particular location.

University Students

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many undergraduates are receiving grants from education boards in Northern Ireland to attend universities in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales and (c) England.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is not available in the form requested, but the overall number is estimated at 4,200 for the current academic year.

Community Charge

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements have been made for paying the community charge of students from Northern Ireland who are studying in Great Britain; and whether he has any plans to change the parental contribution or student grants to take into account the payment of rates on a student's home in Northern Ireland and liability for the community charge in England, Wales or Scotland.

Dr. Mawhinney: Arrangements made by local authorities to collect the community charge are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. Northern Ireland students studying in Great Britain will, if they are full-time, as defined by the relevant legislation, be liable for only 20 per cent. of the community charge in their area, and the net impact of this discounted liability is among the factors considered when mandatory student grant rates are decided.

Archaeological Site, Ballycarry

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will make available additional funds to the historic buildings and ancient monuments branch of DOE, NI, for the purpose of encouraging early exploration of the archaeological site identified at Bridgend road, Ballycarry, Co. Antrim.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Although archaeological excavation could improve understanding of the site it could also result in destruction of evidence in the area excavated. Such work is therefore carried out only as a last resort, for example, where approved development proposals might damage buried archaeological deposits. There are at present no approved development proposals for the Ballycarry site.

The archaeological site at Bridgend road, Ballycarry, Co. Antrim, has been identified as an ecclesiastical enclosure of early Christian period and medieval date. This identification is based on historical records and the evidence of aerial photography.

Fishing Industry

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effect the weather in 1990 has had on (a) the state of the fishing industry in Portavogie, (b) employment in the Portavogie fishing industry and (c) the tonnage of fish landed at Portavogie harbour; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 14 February 1990]: The weather so far experienced in 1990 has restricted the fishing effort and earnings of vessels based at Portavogie. For the period 1 January to 7 February landings of fish at Portavogie are estimated at 257 tonnes compared with 448 tonnes in the equivalent period last year. The impact on employment has been felt mainly within the catching sector but local self-employed small-scale processors and salesmen have also been affected.

TRANSPORT

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Southport of 2 February, Official Report, column 368, he will give an estimate of the reduction in carbon dioxide emissions he anticipates as a result of his Department's road building programme.

Mr. Atkins: The emphasis of the expanded road programme is on schemes to relieve congestion. In congested conditions, with slow-moving or stop-start traffic, vehicle engines are significantly less fuel efficient than in free-flowing conditions. The trunk road programme will therefore lead to lower emissions than would be the case if additional road capacity was not provided. However, the actual level of future emissions will depend on a number of factors such as the growth and distribution of traffic, the progress of individual road schemes and the progress of the many other initiatives being undertaken to reduce vehicle emissions. The net effect of these factors cannot be predicted at this stage.

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Atkins: The private security firms listed in the table currently have contracts with the Department of Transport and the total annual value of such contracts since 1984-85 is:

1984-85	190,521
1985-86	244,394
1986-87	296,191
1987-88	334,180
1988-89	456,242
1989-90	565,668

Motorways

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the consultants appointed to advise his Department on a preferred route for the proposed link between the M1 and M62 motorways in West Yorkshire will include within their remit any consideration of a possible upgrading of the route to motorway standard.

Mr. Atkins: Early indications are that an all-purpose dual two-lane road would be the appropriate standard for this proposed new link. The consultants will, however, be carrying out a further assessment of scheme standards, including the possibility of a motorway, as route options are developed.

Road Accidents

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list monthly figures for deaths from road accidents for each month from January 1987 till the latest available date.

Mr. Atkins: The requested information is as follows:

Deaths from road accidents; by month from January 1987

	1987	1988	1989
January	333	386	[1]n/a
February	352	358	[1]n/a

October	499	527	—
November	441	461	—
December	483	487	—
4th quarter total	1,423	1,475	—
ANNUAL TOTAL	5,125	5,052	[1]n/a

[1] n/a denotes figures not available.
[2] Provisional results.

These figures show the progress made towards our target of reducing road casualties by one third by the year 2000. Fatalities in 1988 were 10 per cent. down on the 1981 to 1985 average of 5,598, which has been adopted as a base figure for the target reduction. There is, however, no room for complacency. The recent move against the trend is, we hope, a temporary setback and we shall redouble our efforts to build on the earlier good progress.

Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment

Mr. Mudd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the members of the standing advisory committee on trunk road assessment, their occupations and the period for which they have been appointed to serve.

Mr. Atkins: The composition of the Committee at present is:

Mr. Derek Wood QC, Barrister, Chairman, reappointed for two years from January 1989.
Mr. R. H. Stewart, Managing Director of the Planning and Environment Division in the Travers Morgan Group, Vice Chairman, reappointed for two years from January 1989.
Mr. J. Wooton, Chairman of Wooton Jeffreys Consultants Ltd., reappointed for two years from January 1989.
Dr. P. B. Goodwin, Director of the Transport Studies Unit, Oxford University, reappointed for two years from January 1989.
Professor P. J. Hills, Professor of Civil Engineering, Newcastle University, appointed for two years from July 1989.
Mr. P. Mackie, Senior Lecturer in Economics, Leeds University, appointed for two years from September 1989.
Miss A. M. Lees, retired, formerly Controller of Transport and Development for the old Greater London Council, appointed for two years from July 1989.

Correspondence

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many items of mail he received from the general public on 14 February; and how many of them opposed road building in London.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend, and officials on his behalf, receive a vast amount of correspondence every day; 14 February was no exception and included some opposing road building in London.

Foreign Airports

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which foreign airports he has visited on a fact-finding basis since his appointment as Secretary of State.

Mr. McLoughlin: None on a specifically fact-finding basis. However, my right hon. Friend has passed through, and observed, a number of foreign airports when travelling on Government business.

Liverpool Street Line (Signalling)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns), Official Report, 12 February, column 9, how much of the proposed £19 million expenditure on resignalling on the Liverpool street line is being paid by Her Majesty's Government and how much by the resources of British Rail; and if all phases of existing schemes are to completed.

Mr. Portillo: The resignalling schemes at Liverpool street and on the lines to Southend and Colchester will cost some £60 to £70 million and are planned for completion at the end of 1994. Costs of Network SouthEast's investment are taken into account in the calculation of PSO grant, which funds the difference between costs and revenues. Grant cannot be attributed to individual schemes.

Greenhouse Effect

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representation his Department will have at the conference on road transport and the greenhouse effect organised by the Worldwide Fund for Nature to be held in London on 30 April and 1 May; and whether any paper from his Department will be (i) presented or (ii) circulated at the conference.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be giving the opening address to the conference.

ENVIRONMENT

Green Field Sites

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many acres currently designated as green field sites or used for agriculture are estimated as needed for housing and industrial development in the south, south-east and south-west of England by the year 2000.

Mr. Moynihan: Structure and local plans include provision for future housing, industrial and other development needs, but not in a form that allows estimates to be made of the types or areas of land likely to be needed for each purpose. My Department has estimated that in the south-east of England (excluding London) the proportion of land in urban use will increase from approximately 12·6 per cent. in 1981 to 13·7 per cent. by 2001 (compared with 42 per cent. that is designated green belt or AONB). Comparable estimates of the rates of urbanisation in other areas are not available.

In recent years over half all new housing development in the south-east (including London) has taken place on vacant or previously developed land in urban areas.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement setting out the criteria which he applies in capping the levels of community charge levied by local councils.

Mr. Chope: We have made it clear that if local authorities insist on budgeting excessively we shall not hesitate to cap them, but I cannot speculate on the detailed operation of any capping scheme that might be needed.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether community charge payers have the right of appeal to the valuation and community charge tribunal over the level of the poll tax; what other matters may be appealed about to the tribunal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: There is no right of appeal to a valuation and community charge tribunal about the level of an authority's community charge. Local authorities decide the level of their charges and are accountable directly to their residents for their decisions at the ballot box. The community charge matters on which an appeal may be made to a tribunal are set out in section 23 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. We shall shortly be laying regulations prescribing the circumstances under which appeals on matters relating to non-domestic rating may be made to a tribunal.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities have indicated to him that they will not be able to accept his estimate of the poll tax figures in their area.

Mr. Chope: No estimates of community charges have been published by the Department. We have, however, published exemplifications showing what the charge would be in each area if authorities continue with the current pattern of raising revenue and spend in aggregate £32·8 billion. A number of authorities have indicated that they will raise more income than is consistent with that figure, and that charges will therefore be higher than our exemplifications.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites of special scientific interest have been designated since the passing of the Wildlife and Countryside Act in 1981.

Mr. Trippier: I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that, by 31 December 1989, it had notified under the 1981 Act 1,853 new SSSIs and 3,251 SSSIs previously notified to local authorities under the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949.

Private Landlords

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to prevent landlords making windfall profits when the rates are replaced by the poll tax.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 8 February, Official Report, Vol. 166, column 756.

Street Numbers

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek powers to require homes, business premises and shops to display their street or road number upon the front fascia of their premises.

Mr. Moynihan: No; I do not believe this warrants statutory control.

Planning Applications

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he is issuing to local councils to encourage more planning applications to be decided locally with fewer appeals to him.

Mr. Moynihan: We advised in planning policy guidance note 12 on local plans (issued in November 1988) that where decisions are supported by clear, up-to-date local plans, consistent with national and regional policies and with the relevant provisions of the structure plan, together with specific and relevant reasons for particular decisions, local planning authorities should find those decisions far less susceptible to successful appeal. The guidance note urges them to extend their coverage of local plans and confirms that the Secretary of State and his inspectors will be guided by relevant local plan policies when making their decisions on appeals. This advice has been welcomed as building greater confidence in the planning system and helping to reduce the volume of appeals.

This message was repeated in the draft planning policy guidance note on structure plans and regional guidance which was issued for consultation in November. We are currently considering responses and will be issuing final guidance shortly.

Warrington

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to pay an official visit to Warrington to discuss the community charge.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has no plans to visit Warrington.

Nature Conservancy

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received from hon. Members concerning his proposals to reorganise the Nature Conservancy Council and the Countryside Commission.

Mr. Tripper: I have received a range of representations from hon. Members, reflecting many shades of opinion about these proposals. These representations include more than 450 letters from hon. Members enclosing correspondence which they have received from their constituents.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the likely budgetary requirements of the Nature Conservancy Council's proposed joint committee in its first year of operation.

Mr. Trippier: The cost of undertaking these functions of the new conservation bodies which are to be discharged through the proposed joint committee will be taken into account when the Government allocate grants for the new bodies in the forthcoming public expenditure round. Discussions about the structure of the joint committee are currently taking place with the NCC and other interested parties and it is too early to estimate the precise costs which will be incurred in the committee's full first year of operation (1991-92).

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has taken to introduce custodial sentences for summary offences under part I of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: None. When the Act was originally debated all parties agreed that custodial sentences would be inappropriate for offences under its provisions.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what action his Department has taken in response to each of the legislative changes to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 recommended to him by the Nature Conservancy Council since 1986; and if he will make a statement.

(2) what assessment he has made of the Nature Conservancy Council report concerning changes and improvements to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, submitted to him on 30 July 1987.

Mr. Trippier: My officials have had several discussions with officials of the Nature Conservancy Council and it has been agreed that a number of suggested improvements in the operation of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 could be achieved by administrative means, which are being introduced as and when necessary. A Nature Conservancy Council statement reflecting these discussions was published in its "Topical Issues—March 1988".

The Nature Conservancy Council has agreed with the Government's view that the Act has been a significant advance and does not require fundamental change. It would like to see some reinforcement. The Government are not convinced that further legislation is necessary to achieve the Nature Conservancy Council's stated aims.

The question of the conservation of the marine environment raises complex legal and scientific issues which are being examined.

Homelessness

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what requirements are placed on local authorities to provide bed-and-breakfast accommodation for the homeless unemployed; if he has any plans to introduce specific grants for the provision of night shelter hostels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Local authorities' duties to secure accommodation for homeless people (whether employed, or unemployed) are set out in part III of the Housing Act 1985 and described in my right hon. Friend's statement last November (copies of which are in the Library) of the conclusions of our review of the legislation. We have no powers to give councils specific grants for the provision of night shelters.

Dean Street Hostel

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to respond to the applications of Centrepoint (Soho) for revenue funding for the Dean Street hostel, Soho.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We have received a large number of applications from voluntary bodies for grant aid under section 73 of the Housing Act 1985 and will make decisions as quickly as possible.

Construction Industry

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what materials used in the construction industry the United Kingdom currently exports more than are imported.

Mr. Chope: Exports of the following materials used in construction currently exceed imports in value terms:

iron and steel tubes, pipes, angles and sections;
ceramic sanitaryware;
bitumen and bituminous products;
paint, varnish, etc; and wallpaper, etc.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current value of materials used in the construction industry which are now imported into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Chope: The current value of materials used in construction which were imported into the United Kingdom was approximately £4·6 billion in the 12-month period ending 30 September 1989.

Berryhill (Opencast Site)

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will visit the Berryhill area of Stoke-on-Trent to see the area of land which British Coal wishes to turn into an opencast site.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No. I cannot give such an undertaking. To do so could prejudice the Secretary of State's position were a planning application to come before him on appeal.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

River Pollution

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the definitions used in classifying river pollution and the name and classification of each river in the area covered by the North West river authority.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The definitions used in the current general river classification system in England and Wales are set out in detail in the report of the 1985 river quality survey, a copy of which is in the Library. The most recent information centrally available concerning the quality of individual rivers in the area until recently covered by the North West water authority (for which the north-west region of the NRA is now responsible) is also contained in that report.

Climate

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will institute a departmental study as to the causes of recent weather changes and, in particular, if they are related to damage to the ozone layer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: It is not possible to say whether the particular weather conditions the United Kingdom has recently experienced are due to permanent changes in the world's climate. Current research into climatic change in the United Kingdom and elsewhere will be drawn together in the report of the intergovernmental panel on climate change later this year. This will provide an improved understanding of the science of climate change. We have announced the establishment of a new centre for the prediction of climate change at a cost of £5·5 million, which will continue research to improve our understanding of the climate.

Development Control

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the establishment of the development control policy division; and what is its annual budget.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The authorised staff complement of the development control policy division in my Department is nine posts. The division's budget for the financial year 1989-90, excluding accommodation costs, is some £315,000 of which about £205,000 is allocated to pay costs. A small number of staff in other headquarters divisions are also engaged in work related to development control policy.

Caravan Sites

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications have been submitted by local authorities to designate caravan sites under the Caravan Sites Act 1968 in each of the past 10 years; how many have (a) been approved, (b) been refused and (c) are pending decision; and what is the Government's policy in respect of responsibilities upon local authorities to provide sites under the Act.

Mr. Chope: Government policy is for local authorities to make adequate site provision for gipsies residing in, or resorting to, their areas. Once the Secretary of State is satisfied that an authority has made adequate provision or that, in all the circumstances, it is not necessary or expedient to make such provision, the Secretary of State may designate that area. The following authorities have been designated in each of the past 10 years:

Camden
Islington
Aylesbury Vale
Chiltern
South Bucks
Wandsworth

1982
West Sussex CC
High Peak[1]
Kennet
North Wiltshire
Thamesdown
West Wiltshire
Milton Keynes
Dartford
South Bedfordshire

1983
Oswestry
Nuneaton and Bedworth
Oldham
Hyndburn
Luton
Trafford
Ashford
Salisbury

1984
Gravesham
Kingston upon Thames
Rochdale
South Derbyshire
Hillingdon
Boston
West Lindsey
Selby

1985
Huntingdonshire
Wealden
Rother
Eastbourne
Hastings
Chester
Middlesbrough[1]
Northampton
Wellingborough
South Northamptonshire
Epsom and Ewell
Tonbridge and Malling[1]
Babergh
Ipswich
Mid-Suffolk
Suffolk Coastal
Peterborough[1]
Windsor and Maidenhead

1986
Hartlepool
Stockton-on-Tees[1]
Chesterfield
Bolsover
North East Derbyshire
Broxbourne
Canterbury
Ryedale
Darlington
Chester-le-Street
Derwentside
Easington
Sedgefield
Teesdale
Wear Valley
East Northamptonshire

1987
Watford[1]
Maidstone
Lancaster
Cherwell
Kettering
Northumberland
Great Yarmouth

1988
Mid Bedfordshire
North Bedfordshire
Shepway
Gateshead
Lewes
Durham City

1989
Dacorum[1]
Welwyn Hatfield
Blaby
Oadby and Wigston[1]
Runnymede[1]
Doncaster[1]

[1] Designated on the grounds that it is not necessary or expedient to make adequate provision.

The following designation applications are pending decision:

Dover
Vale of White Horse
Sefton
East Cambridgeshire
Thanet
Harrow
Worcester City
Epping Forest
Hertsmere
Bradford

My Department does not maintain records of unsuccessful designation applications.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many directions he has issued under section 9 of the Caravan Sites Act 1968 in each of the last three years; and if he will indicate the area concerned in each case by local authority and the number of sites stated in each case.

Mr. Chope: The Secretary of State has issued two directions under section 9 of the Caravan Sites Act 1968. In November 1988 he directed Hertfordshire county council to make provision for sites for 110 caravans; and in June 1989 he directed Surrey county council to make provision for sites for 190 caravans.

Toxic Materials

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to introduce legislation along the lines of the United States Superfund Amendments and Re-authorisation 'Act and the Comprehensive Environmental Response and Liability Act in regard to the requirements for the annual corporate public disclosure of toxic materials and wastes used or produced each year in the companies' activities.

Mr. Trippier: Applications for authorisations to operate industrial processes under part I of the Environmental Protection Bill will contain a wide range of detailed information. This information and monitoring data on releases of substances will be made available to the public by the authorities which enforce that legislation.

Environment Action

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received from his counterpart in the Republic of Ireland a copy of the brochure, "An Environment Action Programme", published by the Irish Department of the Environment this year.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend has received a copy of the environment action programme, which we have read with interest.

Conferences

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department was represented at the conference Recycle Pack 90 held in London on 13 to 15 February.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside spoke at the conference dinner on 14 February.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will be represented at the consultative conference on technological responses to the greenhouse effect, to be held at the Royal Geographical Society in London on 24-25 April.

Mr. Trippier: Officials from the Department would accept an invitation to attend this conference.

Recycled Paper

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in extending the use of recycled stationery throughout his Department.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 13 February 1990]: All letterheaded paper now ordered for used within my Department is recycled. The buff envelopes we use contain at least 50 per cent. recycled paper. We are also conducting trials of the use of recycled photocopying paper in medium-speed photocopying machines, and considering a trial of recycled computer listing paper.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Aid (Education Projects)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of British aid is directed to projects designed to assist primary education and adult literacy.

Mrs. Chalker: In 1988, expenditure on technical co-operation in education, including £47 million provided to the British Council, amounted to some £95 million (23 per cent. of total technical co-operation). A total of £2·6 million (0·6 per cent. of total technical co-operation) was specifically for primary education or adult literacy. A total of £1·1 million or 0·6 per cent. of financial project aid was specifically for primary education. Other projects are of general benefit to education including primary education and adult literacy.

In addition to the money spent under the bilateral aid programme, an unquantifiable proportion of the aid funds provided for multilateral donor organisations such as the World bank is committed to primary education and literacy work. In determining how much the ODA spends on the various levels of education in each recipient country, it takes into account existing or proposed projects by those organisations.

Sri Lanka

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will make it their policy to tie the aid which they currently give to Sri Lanka to improvements in the human rights situation in that country.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 29 January.

Morocco

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each of the past five years the sum of bilateral aid to the kingdom of Morocco.

Mrs. Chalker: Gross British bilateral aid to Morocco over the past five years 1984 to 1988 has been:

	£000
1984	208
1985	91
1986	157
1987	180
1988	657

EMPLOYMENT

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement of two days' paid paternity leave.

Enterprise Allowance

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people had taken advantage of the enterprise allowance scheme up to 31 December 1989.

Mr. Eggar: Up to 31 December 1989 over 485,000 people had started up in business through the enterprise allowance scheme.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many state sector teachers, still teaching in the classroom, in the United Kingdom earn (a) over £12,000 a year, (b) over £15,000 a year and (c) over £20,000 a year, expressed as a percentage of the total.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend announced on 1 February that he proposed to implement in full by 1 January 1991 the recommendations contained in the third report of the interim advisory committee on school teachers' pay and conditions. At that point an estimated 87 per cent. of classroom teachers will be on or above point 7 of the new standard national scale and so receiving more than £12,000; some 68 per cent. will be on or above point 10 of the scale and so receiving £15,000 or more. In addition, some 189,000 incentive allowances with values ranging from £925 to £5,500 will be available for classroom teachers in ordinary schools. Some 60 per cent. of heads and deputies, most of whom undertake some teaching duties, will be receiving salaries of more than £20,000.

Language Teaching

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate (a) the percentage and (b) the number of primary schools in England where children are taught one or more foreign languages.

Mrs. Rumbold: Precise figures are not available, but it is estimated that in 1987 about 15 to 20 per cent. of primary schools in England (excluding nursery and infant schools) provide tuition in French for at least some of their pupils. This represents a number of schools in the range 2,500 to 3,300.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement of two days' paternity leave.

GCSE

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many courses in (a) environmental studies, (b) media/communication studies and (c) road safety were available (i) when the General Certificate of Secondary Education was first introduced and (ii) at the current moment.

Mrs. Rumbold: I understand from the School Examinations and Assessment Council (SEAC), the body with responsibility under section 5 of the Education Reform Act 1988 for the approval of syllabuses, that the number of syllabuses now offered by the five GCSE examining groups in England and Wales in these subjects is:

(a) environmental studies: 23
(b) media studies/communication studies: 29
(c) road safety: 1

SEAC does not have information on the number of syllabuses that were available in addition to these when GCSE was first introduced.

Student Loans

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many copies of the leaflet "Top-Up Loans For Students" have been printed; at what cost; and what will be the avenues for its distribution.

Mr. Jackson: One hundred thousand copies of the leaflet "Top-Up Loans For Students" were printed, at a cost of £3,800. Sample copies have been sent to the heads of relevant establishments—higher education institutions and schools and colleges providing for students of sixth-form age—and to chief education officers, principal careers officers, and other interested bodies. As the proposals are subject to parliamentary approval, it has been made clear that copies should be made available to students only in response to demand. A copy of the leaflet has been sent to each hon. Member.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the purpose of producing the leaflet "Top-Up Loans For Students" prior to the report stage of the Education (Student Loans) Bill.

Mr. Jackson: The leaflet is intended to indicate to students, potential students and others how the top-up loans scheme should operate and the terms on which the loan will be offered. The leaflet states that the introduction of the top-up loan scheme depends upon Parliament's approval of the Education (Student Loans) Bill.

NATO Exchange Programme

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he possesses in regard to the NATO international scientific exchange programme for 1990; and what benefits have accrued to scientific and technological education in the United Kingdom from participation in this exchange programme in earlier years.

Mr. Jackson: The NATO international scientific exchange programme comprises science fellowships, collaborative research grants, advanced study institutes, advanced research workshops and special programmes in selected areas of science. The science fellowships programme is administered in the United Kingdom by the science and engineering research council. About 70 NATO fellows are supported at any one time from the United Kingdom allocation of the NATO fellowships budget. The advanced study institutes and advanced research workshops programmes also have strong educational elements. The United Kingdom has obtained clear benefits to advanced science education from its participation in the programme.

Local Education Authority Award Holders

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total number of local education authority award holders for each of the years (a) 1988-89, (b) 1989-90 and (c) 1990-91.

Mr. Jackson: The actual or projected numbers of mandatory award holders in England and Wales underlying the Government's most recent public expenditure plans in each of these years are given in table 11.15 of Cm. 1011, a copy of which is in the Library.

Student Grants

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what students on local education authority awards on a full grant (a) at an institution in the London area and (b) elsewhere need to borrow in 1990-91 to bring their grants in real terms up to the level of the 1962-63 full grants assuming an annual inflation rate in this year of (a) 5 per cent., (b) 7 per cent. and (c) 7·5 per cent.

Mr. Jackson: On those assumptions about inflation, the real value of the 1962-63 grant[1] at 1990-91 prices would be:

	(a) 5 per cent. inflation £	(b) 7 per cent. inflation £	(c) 7·5 per cent. inflation £
(a) London	3,160	3,220	3,235
(b) Elsewhere	3,023	3,080	3,095

[1] Grant rate applicable to students living in college or university-owned accommodation.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, if he will make it his policy to make the payment of 100 per cent. compensation in respect of bovine spongiform encephalopathy cattle retrospective to 8 August 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: No.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 13 February, what factors led him to change his policy in respect of the level of compensation payable in respect of bovine spongiform encephalopathy cattle.

Mr. Maclean: The effect of the disease on the farming industy is becoming greater. It was clearly appropriate to ask whether the compensation arrangements continued to be right when the number of cases will continue to rise and cannot be expected to decline until after 1993.

Meat Products (Blood Enzymes)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department takes to ensure that mechanically recovered meat contains no spinal tissue; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Department brought into force the Bovine Offal (Prohibition) Regulations 1989 which prohibit, as an ultra-precautionary measure, the use of specified bovine offal in food for sale for human consumption.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he has discussed, or will discuss, the development of meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes with his Dutch counterpart; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has made an assessment of the benefits to the consumers from the introduction of meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he has made an assessment of the effects on profit levels within the meat trade, both wholesale and retail, from the introduction of meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he has received any representations from the meat trade in respect of the description to be used on any labelling of meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes; and if he will make a statement;

(5) if meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes require specific clearance before being allowed to go on sale; and if he will make a statement;

(6) what form of words he deems acceptable to describe meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes; and if he will make a statement;

(7) what information he has as to whether meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes have been tested by British meat companies; and if he will make a statement;

(8) what representations he has had from (a) the meat trade, (b) consumers' organisations and (c) other sources in connection with meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes; and if he will make a statement;

(9) what research he is conducting into the safety of meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes; and if he will make a statement;

(10) when his Department first learnt of the development of meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes;

(11) whether any meat products incorporating a gel containing blood enzymes are on sale in this country; and if he will make a statement;

(12) whether any research funded by his Department is taking place in respect of meat products incorporating a gel containining blood enzymes; and if he will make a statement;

(13) whether meat products incorporating a gel containg blood enzymes have been imported into Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Should a company decide to use this technique for the preparation of meat products it would need to ensure that the product was safe and labelled in accordance with the Food Labelling Regulations 1984. This would apply equally to home-produced and imported products. In particular, those regulations require that food labels carry details of any process which the product has undergone where the omission of such detail would mislead the consumer, details of any ingredients used in the product which would include blood enzymes, and a name for the food which would distinguish it from any other foodstuff with which it might be confused.

Misleading labelling of food is an offence under the Food Act 1984. It is not for me to suggest particular forms of words for labels. A company would need to decide what description of this or any similar process would adequately explain to its intended customers the exact nature of the foodstuff. Trading standards officers are responsible for enforcing the law: I expect that they are already aware of the development of this process but I am drawing the matter to their attention.

The labelling rules apply equally to catering supplies as they do to retail sales. As part of its current labelling review I have already asked the Food Advisory Committee to look at the difficult matter of information provided to customers in restaurants, cafes or other catering outlets.

I was made aware only recently of the process that has been developed in the Netherlands but I have no indications that it produces a foodstuff which is unsafe. The process has been developed by a very reputable Dutch institute and the data available so far to my Department do not indicate any need for us to engage in our own research. There is no reason, therefore, for me to seek discussions with my Dutch counterpart. Furthermore, I have received no inquiries on the matter apart from those of the hon. Gentleman and his hon. and noble Friends.

It would be a commercial decision for a British company to choose to use this technique in the production of its meat products. I am not aware of any company that has so decided, nor is it my understanding that any such products are currently being marketed in the United Kingdom, or in the Netherlands.

However, my Department is monitoring developments closely and I will take any further action that seems appropriate in the interests of either food safety or consumer protection.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Immigration Appeals (Reports)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Attorney-General what action is being taken to increase the numbers of immigration appeal reports published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office; how many such reports were sold in each of the last three years; and what representations he has received about the supply of such reports not meeting the demand.

The Attorney-General: Immigration appeal reports are published quarterly by HMSO. This year HMSO will increase the number of reports printed each quarter from 500 to 550. The number of reports sold in each quarter of each of the last three years is shown in the table:

	1987	1988	1989
First Quarter	525	522	494
Second Quarter	504	508	518
Third Quarter	498	521	476
Fourth Quarter	513	508	452
Total	2,040	2,059	1,940

HMSO printed 600 reports each quarter in 1987 and 1988 and 500 each quarter in 1989 (except the second quarter when an additional 100 were reprinted after stocks had sold out).

The Lord Chancellor received representations about the supply of these reports from the hon. Member on 15 February.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Violent Crime

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what, in each of the past three years, has been the clear-up rate for reported offences involving violent crime.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is published in table 2.17 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1988", Cm 847, a copy of which is available in the Library.

New Prisons

Mr. Heffer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received (a) supporting and (b) opposing the building of the new prison at Fazakerly, Liverpool; and if he will list them.

Mr. Mellor: In addition to those from the hon. Member representations opposing the proposal have been received from Liverpool city council, South Sefton (Merseyside) health authority, Aintree parish council, a delegation of local residents and six individual local residents. No representations of support have been received.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make it his policy that all victims of violence, rape and child abuse should be made aware of the financial assistance provided by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: It is already our policy that all victims of violence, rape and child abuse (and of other offences which might result in an award) should be aware of the possibility of compensation from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board. We have made available through the police service a leaflet entitled "Victims of Crime", which describes how compensation may be available from the offender by order of a criminal or civil court, or from the criminal injuries compensation scheme. Victim support schemes (which with Government encouragement and public money, have expanded to cover 94 per cent. of the population of England and Wales) also play a part in informing victims of their rights. The board itself has given detailed guidance to all social services departments and local victim support schemes about the availability of awards in child abuse cases, and this guidance has been made available to all citizens advice bureaux.

Homosexual Acts

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the years 1988 and 1989 how many men aged between 16 and 21 years were prosecuted for consenting homosexual acts with other males in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: Information is not available centrally on the number of males of 16 or over but under 21 who are prosecuted for the offences of buggery and attempted buggery with another male with his consent. In England and Wales in 1988, 71 males of 16 or over but under 21 were prosecuted for an act of gross indecency with another male.

Information for 1989 will not be available until autumn 1990.

Similar information is not readily available for Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Jan Begum

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, West of 6 February, Official Report, column 543, concerning the application of Mrs. Jan Begum, ref. H 197247/4, for British citizenship, when and where Mrs. Jan Begum was invited to take the oath of allegiance; and when he expects to issue her certificate.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: An invitation to Mrs. Jan Begum, ref. H 197247, to take an oath of allegiance was sent on 12 September 1989 to her son Mr. Khalil Hussain of 13 Tile street, Bradford 8, who has acted as her agent in connection with her application. As no reply had by then been received, a second invitation to take the oath was sent on 6 February 1990 to Hussain at the same address. As soon as Mrs. Jan Begum has taken the oath, a certificate of registration as a British citizen will be issued to her.

Police Precept (Newham)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the amounts of the precepts made by the Metropolitan police on the London borough of Newham for each of the financial years 1987-88, 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91, together with the related percentage in cash and real terms, respectively.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I will write to the hon. Member.

Under-age Drinking

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to enable the police to take stronger measures to stop under-age drinking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Minister of State gave to his question on 25 January at column 882.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the question of under-age drinking; what further action he intends to take to stop the sale of alcohol to children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In 1989 we received some 40 letters specifically on the subject of under-age drinking. The Licensing Act 1988 strengthened the offence of selling alcohol to young people under 18 by placing a greater responsibility on licensees and their staff. The Act also increased the maximum penalty for this offence and made wholesalers' premises subject to this provision of licensing law. We have no present plans for any further changes to the law but we take a serious view of the problem of under-age drinking and it is kept under constant review.

Prison Population

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for reducing the prison population; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Our proposals were set out in the White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" (Cm. 965), published on 6 February. They have been widely welcomed.

Information Storage

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate an interdepartmental review of all present legislation regarding information storage and retrieval to identify any amendment required to enable financial institutions, including building societies, legally to take actions required under other legislation to check on and to stop criminal money laundering and other criminal financial activities.

Mr. Ryder: I have been asked to reply.

No. Section 24 of the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986 is drafted so as to allow financial institutions to disclose to the authorities transactions which they suspect of being linked to drugs trafficking without breaching legislation regarding data storage and retrieval. I am not aware that financial institutions have experienced difficulties in this respect, but the Government have made it clear that the 1986 Act is subject to review, and if particular problems arise the necessary action will be taken.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office currently employs:

(a) Group 4 Total Security Ltd. (on a call-out basis only), and

(b) Security Express Guards Ltd. (cash in transit service only).

The value of the contracts is commercially confidential.

Until 1987 we also employed Reliance Security. Detailed information on this, and earlier records for (a) and (b), are not kept in a centralised form and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

A number of Her Majesty's overseas missions also employ private security firms. Again, detailed records are not kept centrally.

NATO

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Kingdom has made any special allocation of funds to the NATO advanced study institutes and advanced research workshops for 1990; and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards support of these NATO initiatives in coming years.

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Kingdom has contributed to the funding of the NATO advanced study institutes and advanced research workshops through its share of the 1990 NATO science budget. We fully support the continuation of these programmes which are of benefit to scientists from both the United Kingdom and other NATO countries.

Madrid Talks

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent talks in Madrid.

Mr. Sainsbury: At the conclusion of talks between the British and Argentine delegations in Madrid, it was agreed that diplomatic relations between our two countries, which were broken off at the time of the Falklands conflict in 1982, should be restored. The exchange of ambassadors will follow in due course. A copy of the joint statement issued on 15 February with its annexes will be placed in the Library of the House.

We look forward to a new chapter in Anglo-Argentine relations: to the re-establishment of cultural relations, co-operation in fighting drugs and on environmental issues and an agreement to promote and protect investment. We have also undertaken to facilitate a visit by Argentine next-of-kin to their military cemetery on the Falklands under the supervision of the International Committee of the Red Cross.

We agreed to abolish the present visa regime in the near future and shall discuss the practical details involved. It will still be necessary for Argentine citizens to obtain visas before entering the Falkland Islands.

Both Governments have agreed on a series of measures to increase confidence in the region. These include: the establishment of a direct military communications link between the British forces in the Falkland Islands and Argentina; the introduction of rules of reciprocal behaviour for naval and air units operating in proximity; measures to facilitate air and maritime safety and navigation; notification of military manoeuvres and exercises in a large area of the south Atlantic; and mutual notification for military aircraft and naval vessels approaching the coasts of the Falklands or Argentina. Each Government retain the right, if they believe it necessary, to withhold agreement to movements which have been notified and which would come within 70 nautical miles (for aircraft) or 50 nautical miles (for ships) of their coasts.

As of 31 March these new arrangements will come into force and the Falkland Islands protection zone will be lifted.

The Governor has briefed Falkland Islands councillors on the results of these talks. We believe that the reduction in tension, the removal of obstacles to air and sea links between the islands and South America and the opportunity for talks on fish conservation will be welcome in the islands.

The normalisation of relations with Argentina has been achieved without discussion of sovereignty over the Falklands. The Government's determination to defend the islanders' right to determine their own future remains firm.

DEFENCE

Air-Sea Rescue (Republic of Ireland)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the extent of involvement of Ministry of Defence personnel and equipment in air-sea rescue missions around the coast of the Republic of Ireland during the weekend 2 to 5 February; what was the estimated cost of these operations; what contribution to the cost is being made by the Republic of Ireland; and what is the net cost to United Kingdom taxpayers to provide this air-sea rescue service in and around the Republic of Ireland that weekend.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Two RAF Nimrods from RAF St. Mawgan and three RAF Sea Kings from RAF Brawdy and associated aircrews were involved in operations on 5 February to assist the bulk carrier Tribulus when she got into difficulties some 270 miles south-west of Bantry bay in the Republic of Ireland, within the United Kingdom search and rescue region. The estimated cost of these military deployments was £275,000. The Government of the Republic of Ireland were not requested to make a contribution to the cost of these operations since they were carried out in an area for which the United Kingdom is responsible. In general, the question of charging foreign Governments for civil search and rescue incidents is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

Polish Refugees

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance is to be made available to Polish refugees who settled in the United Kingdom under the Polish Resettlement Act 1947 and who now wish to return to Poland to assist the democratic process.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to my hon. Friend.

Job Losses

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what projections of job losses in the defence industries have been made over each of the next five years; and what measures he is proposing to compensate for potential job losses in the defence industries.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 6 February, Official Report, c. 594-95.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many defence industry jobs have been lost in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989, volume 2, table 6.8.

Trident Submarines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what would be the expected savings on the cancellation at this stage of the fourth Trident submarine.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is difficult to quantify accurately the savings that would result because a contract has yet to be placed. It is estimated that savings in the order of £500 million would result if it were decided at this stage not to proceed with the planned order for the fourth Vanguard class submarine.

Forces (Homosexuality)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in each of the years 1987, 1988 and 1989, how many service men and women were dismissed from the Army, Navy and Air Force as a result of their homosexuality or homosexual behaviour; prior to their dismissal, how many of these served custodial sentences as a result of their involvement in homosexual acts; and what were the longest and average sentences served by them.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information on those dismissed following conviction by court martial or summary trial is as follows:

	Number dismissed	Number who served custodial sentences	Longest sentence	Average sentence
Royal Navy
1987	5	5	75 days	51 days
1988	2	2	90 days	75 days
1989	2	0	—	—
Army
1987	4	4	9 months	5 months
1988	7	7	2 years	1 year
1989	4	4	9 months	5 months
Royal Air Force
1987	6	3	98 days	70 days
1988	1	0	—	—
1989	1	1	18 months	18 months

It should be noted that figures for custodial sentences do not always relate purely to homosexual behaviour. Cases relating to homosexuality can also involve other offences against service discipline or criminal law and therefore the accused could be answering more than one charge. If found guilty, the sentence passed will take all relevant factors into account, hence the diversity of custodial sentences shown in the table.

Captain Fred Holroyd

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 1 February, Official Report, column 340, on the book "War Without Honour", what steps he has taken to ascertain on what authority Captain Fred Holroyd was assigned to (a) the military wing of Musgrave Park hospital and (b) Netley hospital; and if he will cause an investigation to be undertaken as to whether the proper procedures under the Mental Health Act 1959 were followed.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The procedures followed in the case of Captain Holroyd were consistent with the Army Act 1955, as amended by the Mental Health Act 1959, and the regulations for the Army medical services.

No other investigations are considered necessary.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he made, pursuant to his answer to the Adjournment debate of 12 February, Official Report, column 115, of the implications for his policy of his reading of "War Without Honour" about the exploits of Captain Holroyd.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

MOD Establishments

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Ministry of Defence establishments there are in Wales; how many service men are stationed in them; and how many civilians are employed;

(2) if he will list the Army establishments in Wales with their functions and the number of (a) service men and (b) civilians employed in each of them;

(3) if he will list the munitions bases and factories in Wales and their functions and the number of (a) service men and (b) civilians employed in each of them;

(4) if he will list the royal aircraft establishments in Wales with their functions and the number of (a) service men and (b) civilians employed in each of them;

(5) if he will list the Royal Air Force establishments in Wales with their functions and the number of (a) service men and (b) civilians employed in each of them;

(6) if he will list the Royal Navy establishments in Wales with their functions and the number of (a) service men and (b) civilians employed in each of them;

(7) if he will list the United States bases in Wales with their functions and the number of (a) service men and (b) civilians employed in each of them.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 8 February 1990]: It would not be in the public interest to make available information on the numbers of personnel in United Kingdom military bases and facilities at the level of detail requested. However, I can give the following information.

There are 14 major Ministry of Defence establishments in Wales. These are shown with their functions in the table. As at 31 December 1989 the total number of service personnel and civilians employed in these establishments and at other locations in the Principality was 5,809 and 5,470 respectively. Of the former, 44 were Royal Navy, 417 Army, 4,942 Royal Air Force and 406 United States forces.

Establishment	Main function
Brecon	HQ Wales and NCO Tactical Wing
Castlemartin	Armoured Corps Training Area
Sennybridge	Principal Army Training Area
Bridgend	Army Vehicle Workshop
RNAD Milford Haven	Royal Naval Armament Depot
RNAD Trecwn	Royal Naval Armament Depot
AWE Llanishen	Atomic Weapons Establishment
RAF Brawdy	RAF Tactical Weapons Training and United States Oceanographic Research Unit
RAF St. Athan	Maintenance and repair of aircraft and technical training
RAF Sealand	Specialist repair service for avionic equipment
RAF Valley	Advanced Flying Training
RAF Caerwent	United States Army Ammunition Storage Facility
RAE Aberporth	Royal Aerospace Establishment
MSD Pembroke Dock	Marine and Salvage Depot

HEALTH

Health Authority Deficits

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the deficit of each health authority for (a) 1988-89 and (b) the latest available month.

Mr. Freeman: I have placed the information derived from the 1988-89 annual accounts of each regional and district health authority in England together with those of the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals in the Library.

Health authorities' spending is monitored and controlled on a regional basis by means of a cash limit applied to their receipts and payments. Within the limits of financial prudence they may incur either a deficit or a surplus on the accrued income and expenditure recorded in their accounts. For 1988-89 health authorities collectively remained within cash limits and as shown in the table their accounts in aggregate record a small overall surplus.

Information about the in-year financial position of individual health authorities is not collected centrally.

Consultants

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) by district and (b) by region all medical consultants employed, whole and part time, together with their specialty.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information is not held centrally in the form required. Contracts for consultants in non-teaching district health authorities are held by the regional health authorities. Information at district level is therefore available only for consultants employed by teaching districts. This is given in the table which has been placed in the Library. The regional totals in the table include staff in all districts, teaching and non-teaching.

Additives (Medicines)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what controls exist over the use of additives in medicines; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All ingredients of medicines are controlled under the Medicines Act 1968 and appropriate directives of the European Community (EC). In particular, colouring matters which may be added to medicinal products are listed in Council directive 78/25/EEC, amended by directive 81/464/EEC. Copies of the directives are in the Library. Current proposals by the EC Commission for an amending directive on medicines labels and leaflets provide for fuller information about excipients (ingredients included for formulation reasons and not intended to be active).

Store Losses

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many items of store losses occurred in Norwich health authority in 1981-82 and in each subsequent year for which figures are available; and what was (a) the overall value in each year, (b) the number of cases reported to the police and (c) the number of prosecutions that followed.

Mr. Freeman: Norwich health authority was established on 1 April 1982 following the abolition of area health authorities, therefore 1982-83 is the first year for which information is available.

The information given in the table has been extracted from the authority's statement of losses which is incorporated in its annual accounts. The table records losses of equipment and property in stores and in use from all causes including incidents of the service (as a result of fire, flood etc.) theft, fraud or arson and discrepancies and unexplained issues.

Information on the number of cases reported to the police or on the number of prosecutions is not collected centrally.

	Incidents of the service		Other stores losses
	Number of cases	Total value £	Number of cases	Total value £
1982-83	183	31,226	89	32,322
1983-84	165	26,101	112	51,215
1984-85	256	58,235	70	6,504
1985-86	329	55,473	95	22,392
1986-87	423	36,550	55	9,982
1987-88	159	35,716	36	8,092
1988-89	134	40,688	38	130,351

Note: Authorities are advised to aggregate and treat as one case the total net losses revealed at any one store or institution within each year. A loss relating to an incident of the service is treated as a separate case.

Ambulance Workers

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members of the ambulance service have been killed and injured in emergency situations in each of the past five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available centrally.

Arthritis Treatment, Yorkshire

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what alternative centres for the treatment of arthritis will be available in Yorkshire if the Royal Bath hospital, Harrogate, is closed.

Mr. Freeman: The Royal Bath hospital provides rheumatology services for a number of district health authorities, including some for Huddersfield. Arrangements for future provision of rheumatology services for Huddersfield's population is a matter for the local health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Huddersfield health authority for further information.

Dentures

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will next meet the Association for Denture Prosthesis to discuss changes in the Dentists Act 1984.

Mr. Freeman: There are no current plans to meet the Association for Denture Prosthesis.

Milk Token Scheme

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received in support of the changes in the milk token scheme laid before Parliament on 5 January.

Mr. Freeman: As yet no representations in favour of the revised pricing structure, which will save the taxpayer some £8 million per annum, have been received.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contribution his Department will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. Freeman: None.

Registered Voters

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table showing for each parliamentary constituency the number of registered voters on the register for (a) 1988 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Freeman: Table 1.4 of the OPCS reference volume "Electoral Statistics 1989" (Series EL No.16) contains the information requested. A copy of this publication is available in the Library.

Operations (Costs)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to variations in the cost of identical operations in different health districts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not held centrally.

Bronchitis and Emphysema

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 February, Official Report, column 805, if he will arrange for the Medical Research

Council to undertake research concerning the relationship between the development of chronic bronchitis or emphysema and exposure to substances associated with the processing , smelting, working or production of steel.

Mr. Freeman: The Department of Health has no plans to ask the Medical Research Council to undertake such research at present.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total of sums paid or liabilities entered into by the London ambulance service in respect of support and services supplied by the Metropolitan police, the Army and other organisations, respectively, from the start of the ambulance dispute until 31 December 1989 and 31 January 1990.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The sums paid or liabilities entered into by the London ambulance service in respect of support and services supplied by the organisations listed is as follows:

	Period up to
	December 1989	January 1990
Private ambulances/car hire	125,084	260,338
Metropolitan Police	4,206,356	6,514,872
St. John Ambulance	115,669	176,551
Red Cross	125,155	191,950
Emergency supplies	932	39,462
TOTAL	4,573,196	7,183,173

The share of the cost of military support which falls to the London ambulance service is not yet known.

Figures for the St. John Ambulance (December 1989/January 1990) and the Red Cross (January 1990) are estimates but are not considered to vary considerably.

General Practitioners

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial assistance will be available from his Department for general practitioner budget holders; and what is the estimated total cost.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary legislation, practices which volunteer to join the practice funding scheme will be able to claim an annual management allowance of up to £32,000 to meet expenses legitimately incurred in running a fund. In 1990-91 an allowance of half that level will be available in recognition of the preparatory work which practices will need to undertake before entering the scheme. The total cost will depend on the number of fund holders.

Broadgreen Hospital, Liverpool

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken by his Department to encourage the recruitment of staff to the Alexandra wing of Broadgreen hospital, Liverpool, in speech therapy discipline; how many applications have been submitted for this post; how many patients, listed by age and medical condition, are awaiting treatment in this unit; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Management of speech therapy services at Broadgreen hospital and the recruitment of staff are matters for Liverpool health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the authority for details.

NHS Spending

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table showing the expenditure allocation per head in each NHS region in each year since 1983, including those allocations for 1990-91, and express this expenditure in both current and standard prices.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 30 January 1990]: Figures of total revenue expenditure per head of population by region for the years 1983-84 to 1988-89 (the latest available) are shown in the table.

I should point out that in meeting their expenditure health authorities have the use of some resources (local income and working balances) in addition to their allocations and consequently figures based on expenditure or solely on allocations are not directly comparable.

(b) Mid-year estimates of resident populations—1983 to 1988 (Office of Population Censuses and Surveys).

Notes:

1. The figures for the earlier years have been expressed at 1988-89 prices by the use of the gross domestic product deflator.
2. HCHS includes hospital, community health, patient transport (i.e. ambulance), blood transfusion and other services.
3. Capital expenditure and expenditure on family practitioner services (FPS) is excluded. The latter expenditure is accounted for by family practitioner committees (FPCs) and cannot strictly be attributed to particular regions. However, prior to 1 April 1985 some 90 district health authorities in England each had an associated FPC and their expenditure figures for 1983-84 and 1984-85 included small elements relating to FPCs' administrative expenses which are not separately identifiable.
4. Expenditure incurred by the special health authorities (SHAs) for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals and other SHAs providing central services to the National Health Service and expenditure met centrally by the Department is excluded.
5. The population figures used make no allowance for people resident in one region who receive treatment in another for the difference in morbidity and age/sex structure of particular populations.
6. The figures for the Thames regions are influenced by additional costs such as London weighting allowances and also by the fact that from 1987-88 the South West Thames regional health authority (RHA) accounted for the total cost of the London ambulance service which in earlier years was shared by all four London RHAs.

Births

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his replies of 15 January, Official Report, column 84, to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley), whether he expects to be able to give information about induction, instrumental delivery and caesarean section rates among women delivering in England in 1989, 1990 and 1991.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 7 February 1990]: Yes. The special additional information collected about deliveries and births as part of the new hospital episode statistics system includes this information. It is hoped that collated information for the whole of England for 1989-90 will be available around the end of 1990.

SCOTLAND

Illegal Poisoning

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Caerphilly, Official Report, 29 January, column 50, on what dates illegally poisoned birds or baits were found in the Tayside region.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The additional information is as set out in the table. The precise dates of finding are not always reported to the Scottish Office. Baits are sometimes found but cannot be positively linked in all cases to the death of a particular bird.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of employment trainees on project placements for each month since September 1988 in the (a) Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll, (b) Lothian and Borders, (c) Lanarkshire, (d) Highlands and Islands, (e) Grampian and Tayside, (f) Glasgow city, (g) Central and Fife and (h) Ayrshire, Dumfries and Galloway Training Agency areas.

Mr. Lang: Information about the numbers of trainees on project placements is collected quarterly but returns are incomplete so accurate numerical estimates and assessments at an area office level are not possible. For Scotland as a whole it has been estimated that the proportion of project placements in each quarter was as follows:

Project placements as a proportion of total placements

Quarter to	Per cent.
December 1988	69·1
March 1989	62·3
June 1989	60·5
September 1989	65·0

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the training agents in employment training who have achieved stage 1 approved training manager status within the (a) Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll, (b) Lothian and Borders, (c) Lanarkshire, (d) Highlands and Islands, (e) Grampian and Tayside, (f) Glasgow city, (g) Central and Fife and (h) Ayrshire, Dumfries and Galloway Training Agency areas.

Mr. Lang: There are 23 training agents for employment training in Scotland. Of these, the 18 listed below by area have already achieved stage 1 of approved training organisation status.

Area and training agent

(a) Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll—Strathkelvin Enterprise Trust

(b) Lothian and Borders—Greater Edinburgh Training Association; Borders Regional Council

(c) Lanarkshire—Lanarkshire Training Agent Ltd.

(d) Highlands and Islands—Caithness District Council; Support Training, Highland Training and Development; Community Industry, Orkney Islands Council

(e) Grampian and Tayside—Grampian Regional Council; Workstart Ltd.

(f) Glasgow City—Employment Training Scotland Ltd.; Queen's College Glasgow Enterprise Ltd.

(g) Central and Fife—Central Training, Fife Regional Council

(h) Ayrshire, Dumfries and Galloway—Workstart Ltd.; Wigtown District Council; Dumfries and Galloway Regional Council Education Department

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the training agents in employment training who have achieved approved training manager status within the (a) Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll, (b) Lothian and Borders, (c) Lanarkshire, (d) Highlands and Islands, (e) Grampian and Tayside, (f) Glasgow city, (g) Central and Fife and (h) Ayrshire, Dumfries and Galloway Training Agency areas.

(2) if he will list the training agents in employment training who have achieved approved training agent status within the (a) Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll, (b) Lothian and Borders, (c) Lanarkshire, (d) Highlands and Islands, (e) Grampian and Tayside, (f) Glasgow city, (g) Central and Fife and (h) Ayrshire, Dumfries and Galloway Training Agency areas.

Mr. Lang: To date, none.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost of empioyment training advertising in the Scottish press in the period 21 February to 28 February.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 15 February 1990]: It is estimated that the cost of employment training advertising in the Scottish press during the period 21 to 28 February 1990 will be £18,760. This sum does not include the cost of employment training advertising in national newspapers which have a Scottish circulation or that placed by the Training Agency on behalf of training agents or training managers.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the voluntary sector training managers for Scotland; and the number of training, places currently contracted with the Training Agency within the (a) Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll, (b) Lothian and Borders, (c) Lanarkshire, (d) Highlands and Islands, (e) Grampian and Tayside, (f) Glasgow city, (g) Central and Fife and (h) Ayrshire, Dumfries and Galloway Training Agency areas.

Mr. Lang: Following is a list of voluntary sector training managers for employment training in each local area:

Area and voluntary section training manager

(a) Renfrew, Dumbarton and Argyll—Strathclyde Training Agency

(b) Lothian and Borders—Wester Hailes Management Agency; Scottish Wildlife Trust; Community and Business Training Limited; Scottish Association for Mental Health; Craigmillar Festival Society; Scottish Council for Spastics; APEX Scotland

(c) Lanarkshire—Voluntary Association for Mental Welfare Training Limited; Scottish National Council for YMCAs

(d) Highlands and Islands—Nil

(e) Grampian and Tayside—Dundee Cyrenians Wishart Centre Heat Development (Dundee) Limited; Voluntary Service Aberdeen Adult Community Training (Dundee) Limited; Dundee Survival Group George Inn Lane Centre

(f) Glasgow City—Epilepsy Association of Scotland; Glasgow Zoo; Poldrait Community Development; Centre for Training and Employment; Workwise; Scottish Society for Mentally Handicapped

(g) Central and Fife—Training Craft Limited

(h) Ayrshire, Dumfries and Galloway—Nil

Information about the number of employment training places contracted in each local area on 29 September 1989 is set out in the table:

Area	Total number of training places contracted
(a) Renfrew Dumbarton and Argyll	4,695
(b) Lothian and Borders	3,619
(c) Lanarkshire	3,585
(d) Highlands and Islands	1,249
(e) Grampian and Tayside	3,754
(f) Glasgow City	7,010
(g) Central and Fife	3,124
(h) Ayrshire, Dumfries and Galloway	4,200

Deaths on Arrival

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the number of deaths on arrival in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen and Dundee hospitals, by month, for the years 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: These figures are not held centrally.

Children (Employment)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what survey he has recently conducted of the extent to which children are missing their education, either through working in paid employment during school hours or through tiredness due to hours worked outwith school hours.

Mr. Lang: No such survey has been undertaken.

Registration

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he intends to introduce legislation to reform the system for registering births, marriages and deaths in Scotland, along the lines proposed for England and Wales in the White Paper "Registration: Proposals for Change".

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Scotland's registration law is mainly contained in the Registration of Births, Deaths and Marriages (Scotland) Act 1965 and the Marriage (Scotland) Act 1977, and is thus rather more recent than the comparable legislation in force in England and Wales. A number of the improvements now proposed south of the border have similarities with what is already Scottish practice. While we have therefore no immediate plans for fresh Scottish legislation in this field, my right hon. and learned Friend will be keeping the position under review in the light of experience.

Farm Woodland Scheme

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will introduce legislation to allow crofter access to the farm woodland scheme through planting on common grazings.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 15 February 1990]: My right hon. and learned Friend has indicated that he shares the views of all the crofting interests that it is desirable for necessary enabling powers to be available to allow crofters to participate in the planting of commercial woodlands on common grazings. It is not, however, possible to say when there might be an opportunity to make the necessary legislative change.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, by region, the take-up to date in the less favoured areas of the £30 grant available under the farm woodland scheme to those planting on permanent pasture and rough grazings.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 15 February 1990]: The uptake to date of approved planting under the farm woodland scheme, on permanent pasture and rough grazing in the LFAs, which qualifies for payments of £30 per hectare per annum, is as follows:

DAFS area office

Areas	Hectares
Highland	113·4
Borders	12·6
Grampian and North East	51·1
Perth and Kinross	21·7
Lothians and Fife	8·7
Clyde and South Western	42·9

ENERGY

Crude Oil (Discharge Certificates)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about the possibility of insisting on discharge certificates for crude oil exports as recommended by the United Nations General Assembly and the Commonwealth experts study group.

Mr. Wakeham: I have nothing to add to my previous answers to the hon. Member of 11 January 1990 (cols. 693-94).

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy by what process he chose the 12 estate agents who are advising him on the sale of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Wakeham: The Department's adviser was chosen as a result of a competitive tender. Firms of surveyors for the 12 area boards, the National Grid Company, PowerGen and National Power were jointly appointed by the Department and the company concerned.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what considerations underlie his decision to seek the advice of 12 estate agents on the sale of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Wakeham: Firms of surveyors are providing valuations of the property assets of the electricity supply industry to both the Department and the industry to ensure that value is obtained for these assets as a result of the privatisation.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the name of the unsuccessful company which tendered for appointment as marketing and public relations adviser to the Government and the electricity supply industry on electricity privatisation.

Mr. Wakeham: Lowe Bell Communications was the firm that tendered for the position as joint marketing and public relations adviser to the Government and the electricity industry and was not appointed.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the name of the unsuccessful company which tendered for appointment as special marketing and public relations adviser on electricity privatisation to his Department.

Mr. Wakeham: Dewe Rogerson was the firm that tendered for the position as special marketing and public relations adviser to the Department of Energy and was not appointed.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the contracts with the 12 estate agents who are advising him on the sale of the electricity supply industry preclude them from offering advice or professional services to any purchaser or potential purchaser of shares in the electricity supply industry or any part of its property before and after privatisation.

Mr. Wakeham: Contracts with firms of surveyors include both strict confidentiality clauses and requirements to consult me regarding any potential conflict of interest.

Coal, Oil and Gas (Exports and Imports)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when the information on coal, oil and gas exports and imports in December 1989 sought in the two questions from the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras for answer on 12 February became available to his Department.

Mr. Wakeham: Data on exports and imports in December 1989 were made available to the Library of the House in the December volume of "Overseas Trade Statistics" (OTS) on 6 February 1990. However the "Overseas Trade Statistics" does not include an adjustment for the under-recording of direct exports of crude oil. This is included in the balance of payments figures published by the Central Statistical Office, but is available only some days later.

The comparable figures for 1989, following the answer given on Thursday 9 November 1989, Official Report, columns 767-68, are as follows:

Table 1

Nuclear Decommissioning

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to seek from his counterpart in France details of the French nuclear power plant decommissioning programme, in so far as it may assist the United Kingdom programme.

Mr. Baldry: My Department and Nuclear Electric have regular discussions with the French authorities on many aspects of nuclear power. As I have already explained to the hon. Member, direct comparisons between France and the UK cannot be made because of the different reactor types currently operational in each country.

Plutonium

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the year ended 31 March 1989 (a) the amounts of plutonium (i) in reactor discharges and dispatches and (ii) in irradiated fuel stored at power stations, respectively, for Magnox and advanced gas-cooled reactors and (b) the allocation of the total plutonium at Sellafield, net of sales and leases, in each case for Central Electricity Generating Board reactors; and if the quoted figures are reproduced to the greatest precision possible from records available to his Department;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the year ended 31 March 1989 (a) the amounts of plutonium (i) in reactor discharges and dispatches and (ii) in irradiated fuel stored at power stations, respectively, for Magnox and advanced gas-cooled reactors and (b) the allocation of the total plutonium at Sellafield, net of sales and leases, in each case for the South of Scotland Electricity Board; and if the quoted figures are reproduced to the greatest precision possible from records available to his Department.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to my Department's press release No. 180 of 5 December 1989, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House. My Department compiled the information from a number of sources and therefore requested it in a form conforming with the format of the press release.

Landfill Gas Symposium

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department or any scientists from the energy technology support unit will be represented, or present papers, at the international landfill gas symposium to be held in Chicago on 27 to 29 March.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Yes. My Department, through its energy technology support unit, will be represented at the Chicago international landfill gas symposium.

Gas Prices

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received about the effect on energy conservation of the pricing structure of British Gas to large consumers of gas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I received a number of representations about the adverse energy efficiency implications of British Gas's initial price schedule. I am pleased to note that the new schedule, which came into effect on 1 December 1989, appears to have resolved the problem.

ENVIRONMENT

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what savings have been made across local government as a whole as a result of subjecting local authority contracts to competitive tendering.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No precise figures are available at present. However, the Audit Commission's occasional paper "Preparing for Compulsory Competition" published in January last year indicated that local authorities can obtain savings of 20 per cent. or more in contract price, irrespective of whether work has been won by the private sector or by an authority's own work force.

PSA and Crown Suppliers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of financial decisions relating to the privatisation of the Property Services Agency and the Crown Suppliers.

Mr. Chope: Financial decisions in relation to the Crown Suppliers privatisation are expected to be taken in the first half of this year. It is too early to say when those in relation to PSA privatisation will be taken.

Global Warming

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what the Government are doing through their various agencies to combat global warming; and what is the total sum spent on this in the current year.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action his Department is taking, through its various agencies, to combat global warming; and what is the total to be spent on this in the current year.

Mr. Trippier: Among many initiatives, the Government actively support the work of the inter-governmental panel on climate change and are leading efforts to gain support for an international framework convention on climate change. We have also taken the lead in international initiatives to phase out the production and consumption of CFCs which are important greenhouse gases. We have amended the Building Regulations to improve the energy efficiency of new houses and announced the establishment of a new centre for the prediction of climate change. In 1990-91 my Department expects to spend over £6 million on climate change-related research and we are contributing £750,000 to the work of the inter-governmental panel on climate change. Other Departments also have important programmes on global warming, for example, the Overseas Development Administration's support for projects to conserve the tropical forests and the research funded by the Department of Education and Science through the research councils.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in order of percentage loss or gain the grant-related expenditure for the standard spending assessments allocations for all English districts in 1989-90 and 1990-91; and if he will list for each the proportion of the population of each authority living in urban areas.

Mr. Chope: I have today placed in the Library a table showing the information requested on grant-related expenditure assessments and standard spending assessments for all non-metropolitan districts in England. I cannot provide information on the proportion of the population living in urban areas as there is no standard way of classifying such areas.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the rate proposed for 1990-91 and the average rate per head payable in the current year for Castle Point district council.

Mr. Chope: I estimate that the average domestic rate bill per adult for Castle Point is about £318 in 1989-90. I have no firm information on the proposed community charge for 1990-91.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the rate proposed for 1990-91 and the average rate per head payable in the current year in Southend-on-Sea.

Mr. Chope: I estimate that the average domestic rate bill per adult for Southend-on-Sea is about £363 in 1989-90. I have no firm information on the proposed community charge for 1990-91.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the rate proposed for 1990-91 and the average rate per head payable in the current year for Wealden district council.

Mr. Chope: I estimate that the average domestic rate bill per adult for Wealden is about £292 in 1989-90. I have no firm information on the proposed community charge for 1990-91.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what considerations informed the decision to treat business and domestic property in a different manner in respect of rates.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to our Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd. 9714) published in January 1986, and our explanations during parliamentary consideration of what is now the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will provide figures for inner London and outer London of the amount of poll tax payable in 1990-91 per adult as against rates, together with the contribution made by the safety net.

Mr. Chope: I have no information on 1990-91 community charges payable in inner or outer London. Tables showing the information requested but based on assumed community charges were placed in the Library on 11 January.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how, with reference to paragraph 3.36 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £59·11 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby.

Mr. Chope: The figure referred to in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) was determined by my right hon. Friend after full consultation with local authority representatives. It accounts for £82 per adult of Great Grimsby's SSA.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how, with reference to paragraph 3.40 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £5·56 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials may check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the SSA arrived at for Grimsby;

(2) how, with reference to paragraph 3.40 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £9·56 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials may check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the SSA arrived at for Grimsby;

(3) how, with reference to paragraph 3.40 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £4·35 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials may check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the SSA arrived at for Grimsby.

Mr. Chope: The figures referred to in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) were determined by my right hon. Friend after full consultation with local authority representatives. They are used to calculate the other services SSA element for county councils. Following this calculation, there is a transfer of £1 per adult to all districts in the county of Humberside, including Great Grimsby.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the total poll tax figure appropriate to Grimsby; and what account he has taken of (a) the kind of service, (b) the social and economic problems of the area, (c) the state of housing stock and (d) levels of unemployment, poverty, single-parent families and homelessness in arriving at it.

Mr. Chope: All charging authorities, including Grimsby, could set a community charge of £278 (before the safety net and special grants) in 1990-91 if they and the authorities precepting on the collection fund in their area spent at the level of their standard spending assessments. The assessment for each notifiable authority takes account of the services provided by that authority as set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England). That report also sets out the indicators used to calculate SSAs, such as social conditions (including housing conditions), low incomes and single-parent families, and the weight given to each.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much Lambeth council will receive from the uniform business rate, revenue grant and other non-poll tax sources of revenue for 1990-91.

Mr. Chope: Lambeth charge payers will benefit from revenue support grant, business rates and inner London education grant paid to help meet the cost of services provided by Lambeth, the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority and the Metropolitan police. In 1990-91 these will amount to £174,276,383, £50,465,924 and £9,475,207, respectively.

Lambeth council will also receive specific grants from the Government to help meet specific expenditure. Lambeth can raise revenue through its own fees and charges for services provided.

Some charge payers in Lambeth will pay a reduced community charge as a result of community charge benefit and transitional relief, which will be paid for by the Government.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in the past 12 months from officials or members of Suffolk county council relating to the size of Government grant for 1990-91; and what inquiries his Department has made to date into the spending plans of Suffolk for 1990-91.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State received two written representations from members of Suffolk county council; one in July 1989 concerning total standard spending, grant distribution and the safety net; the other in November 1989 concerning Suffolk's standard spending assessment, new duties of local authorities and the safety net. In addition, I met my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter) to discuss Suffolk's representations.

No inquiries have been made specifically to Suffolk county council about its spending plans for 1990-91, but all authorities have been requested to supply to the Department details of their budgets within seven days of their budget decision.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a breakdown of his figure of £176·40 per head for Tonbridge and Malling, given in his reply to the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling on 30 January, Official Report, column 178, into its main components.

Mr. David Hunt: It is not possible to provide the breakdown requested. There are no components of revenue support grant. Grant is unhypothecated and is paid to receiving authorities in support of the revenue expenditure of authorities in their area.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Durham, North-West on 5 February, Official Report, columns 431-32, what is the corresponding amount and proportion of the education component of grant-related expenditure assessments 1989-90 for each authority which derives from the operation of factors relating to the payment of London weighting and other cost differences between London and surrounding areas and the rest of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is shown in the table:

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1979 the direct total grants made to Waveney district council in (a) cash terms, (b) constant price terms and (c) cash terms per head of population;

(2) if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1981 the direct total grants made to Suffolk county council in (a) cash terms, (b) constant price terms and (c) cash terms per head of population.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Direct Revenue Grants—[1] Waveney

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1979 the expenditure of Waveney district council in (a) cash terms, (b) constant price terms and (c) cash terms per head of population;

(2) if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1981 the expenditure of Suffolk county council in (a) cash terms, (b) constant price terms and (c) cash terms per head of population.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the standard spending assessment totals for 1990-91 for each service within (a) the district other services block and (b) the county other services block for the London borough of Westminster; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Neither the SSA element for the district other services block nor the SSA element for the county other services block is broken down between sub-services within the element. The services covered by each element are listed in annex D to the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England). The figures for the two elements for Westminster are:

	£ million
District level services	51·583
County level services	14·819

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his plans for regulations concerning the disclosure of anonymous poll tax data will give community charges registration offices the option of whether to disclose data; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The limited amount of personal information that may be disclosed and the circumstances in which such information may not be disclosed are prescribed in part II of the Community Charges (Administration and Enforcement) Regulations 1989.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 12 February, Official Report, column 56, if he will make an estimate of the monetary value of the shift in the burden of business rates from the north to (a) the London boroughs and (b) the London borough of Hillingdon.

Mr. Chope: I estimate that as a result of the revaluation and move to a uniform poundage, the non-domestic rate burden in the north will reduce substantially. The table below shows the aggregate reduction at 1989-90 prices in rate bills in the northern regions and the corresponding increases in London. The figures make no allowance for the effect of the transitional arrangements and are based on the rating lists deposited on 20 December 1989.

Change in non-domestic rate burden

	£ million
North West region	290
Northern region	140
Yorkshire and Humberside region	150
Inner London authorities	610
Outer London boroughs	20

On the same basis, I estimate that non-domestic ratepayers in Hillingdon will face increases of about £13 million.

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a revised version of table 5 in the analysis of the effect of the new business rating system published by his Department on 20 December 1989, showing changes in rate bills by English region for the property of private business and nationalised industries.

Mr. Chope: The analysis to which my hon. Friend refers, a copy of which is in the Library (Deposited Paper NS 5522), relates to properties occupied by private businesses and nationalised industries. Table 5 of the paper, unlike the other tables, inadvertently included property occupied by local authorities. I am therefore, as my hon. Friend asks, placing in the Library a revised table covering the property of private businesses and nationalised industries only.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reply is being sent to the letter to the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities of 29 January on Manchester and the poll tax from the leader of Manchester city council.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 13 February 1990]: I have replied to the letter of 29 January from the leader of Manchester city council making clear that high community charges in Manchester would not be the result of our settlement but due solely to the council's own budget decisions. I have pointed out to Mr. Stringer that a community charge of £700 plus which he has argued would be needed to keep services in Manchester running at this year's level implies expenditure in 1990-91 more than 40 per cent. higher than the comparable amount for this year. Even charges of £450 or a little below would imply increases in spending approaching some 20 per cent. Under the settlement Manchester receives an increase in SSA over GRE of 13·3 per cent.—the highest increase for all metropolitan districts.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue guidance to those responsible for administering the community charge in Bradford and elsewhere that application forms for rebates should be made available in bulk to local advice agencies, including citizens advice bureaux and law centres.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

Local authorities have statutory responsibility for the administration of the community charge benefit. It is for each authority to decide where claim forms should be made available.

Local Government Staffing

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1979 the (a) full-time, (b) part-time and (c) total staffing levels of Waveney district council.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Waveney district council: staffing levels at June

	Full-Time	Part-Time	Total
1979	819	79	898
1980	746	74	820

1986	773	108	881
1987	778	115	893
1988	789	113	902
1989	781	129	910

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1981 (a) full-time, (b) part-time and (c) total staffing levels of Suffolk county council.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Suffolk County Council: Staffing Levels at June

	Full-time	Part-time	Total
1981	11,625	9,868	21,493
1982	11,479	9,504	20,983

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the payment of grants to owners of sites of special scientific interest for the purposes of (a) preventing damage to, and (b) enhancing, the nature conservation interest of the land.

Mr. Trippier: The Government encourage the Nature Conservancy Council to use the powers set out in section 15 of the Countryside Act 1968 to protect and enhance the nature conservation interest of sites of special scientific interest and its powers to assist financially any person to carry out any project which is conducive to nature conservation interests.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current statutory seaward limit of sites of special scientific interest in tidal waters.

Mr. Trippier: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to increase the sentences and penalties available to magistrates courts under part 1 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in line with the proposals contained in the recent White Paper on criminal justice.

Mr. Trippier: There are at present no plans to do so. The level of fine on summary conviction for offences under part 1 of the Act against the most vulnerable species is set out at the current statutory maximum.

Large Combustion Plants

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the targets set by the European Community directive on large combustion plants.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have agreed to the European Community directive on large combustion plants. It commits us to reducing sulphur dioxide emissions from existing plants by 20 per cent. by 1993, 40 per cent. by 1998 and 60 per cent. by 2003 from their 1980 base line, and emissions of nitrogen oxides by 15 per cent. by 1993 and 30 per cent. by 1998, as well as setting stringent emissions standards for new plants. My Department issued a consultation paper on 31 August 1989 explaining in detail our proposals for implementing the directive. A copy of the paper is in the Library of the House.

Gipsies

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what reasons he issued a direction in November 1989 under section 9 of the Caravan Sites Act 1968 to Hertfordshire county council requiring it to provide sites for a further 110 caravans for gipsies residing in or resorting to the county; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment directed Hertfordshire, in November 1988, because of the county council's lack of progress in making adequate site provision for those gipsies residing in, or resorting to, its area.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has written to local authorities drawing their attention to the direction issued to Hertfordshire county council under section 9 of the Caravan Sites Act 1968.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has written to other poor-performing local authorities drawing their attention to the direction issued to Hertfordshire, and has since directed Surrey county council in similar terms.

Wild Birds

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish such records as are kept of the numbers of protected wild birds destroyed annually by those so authorised by him;

(2) to what extent he authorises the destruction of wild birds from time to time that are otherwise protected by the Wildlife and Countryside Act; to whom such authorisations are granted; and why the exemptions are made.

Mr. Trippier: Details of the numbers of birds killed under licences granted under the Wildlife and Countryside Act, where known, are included in the Government's annual reports to the European Commission of derogations made under the EEC directive on the conservation of wild birds. Copies of the reports are available in the Library and are circulated to interested bodies.

Licences to kill wild birds are granted to relevant individuals and authorities principally to preserve public health or public or air safety, to prevent the spread of disease, or to prevent serious damage to livestock, foodstuffs for livestock, crops, vegetables, fruit, growing timber or fisheries.

Beaches

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the Government's current plans to deal with the pollution of Britain's beaches.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are investment programmes totalling £1·4 billion at November 1989 prices to improve bathing water quality. It is expected that 95 per cent. of bathing waters will comply with EEC standards by the mid-1990s, and the full compliance programmes should be completed within 10 years.

House of Commons (Repairs)

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether there is a cash limit on the amount of money to be spent on minor repairs at the House of Commons in 1989-90.

Mr. Chope: Minor repairs to the parliamentary estate are funded from class XX, vote 18 which is cash limited.

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest figure for the number of people living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation in Manchester.

Mr. Chope: Such statistics are not maintained by my Department. Manchester city council operates policies which avoid putting homeless families into bed-and-breakfast accommodation.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a percentage and absolute number breakdown by grade of the final responses of the administrative and executive grades, stores and support grades to the Crown Suppliers secondment exercise.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: Following is the information:

	AEG grades	Support grades	Stores grades	Totals
Total number of eligible staff as at 3 February 1990	446	45	13	504
Total number non-respondents	10	1	1	12
Number who have opted to second	304	30	12	346
Percentage who have opted to second	68	66	92	69
Number who have opted to leave TCS before privatisation	122	11	0	133
Percentage who have opted to leave TCS before privatisation	27	24	—	26
Number who have opted to transfer outright to purchaser	10	3	0	13
Percentage who have opted to transfer outright to purchaser	2	7	—	3

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received seeking a guaranteed minimum level of Crown business to the privatised Crown Suppliers.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: None.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the buying agency business line of the Crown Suppliers needs to be adopted by a Crown Department if it is to be able to continue serving public sector needs after privatisation.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: Individual Government Departments, including the Crown Suppliers are already responsible for ensuring that public sector procurement procedures are complied with. Following privatisation any Government Department will be able to employ the Crown Suppliers to act as its agent to carry out these procedures on its behalf.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the percentages and absolute numbers of Liverpool staff who opted for secondment to the privatised Crown Suppliers before the provision of a guaranteed job back in the Civil Service; and how many opted for secondment after that guarantee was given.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: Of the 95 Liverpool staff who were eligible, 12 (13 per cent.) opted originally for secondment to the purchaser of the Crown Suppliers. Of the 96 Liverpool staff who are eligible today, 57 (59 per cent.) have now opted for secondment.

Conferences

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will be represented at the conference on liability under environment legislation, organised by the Institute for International Research, to be held in London on 27 to 28 February.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 16 February 1990]: No.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the impact of the uniform business rate and the non-domestic revaluation on properties in the areas of urban programme authorities, overall and by type of property.

Mr. Chope: Businesses in the areas of the 57 urban programme local authorities in England will on average face substantially lower rate bills as a result of the new system of business rating. At the uniform business rate of 34·8p for 1990-91, the aggregate rate bills of such businesses would be £508 million or 16·3 per cent. lower than in 1989-90 before transition. Most classes of property benefit on average from lower bills. All businesses will have the guarantee that the uniform business rate will in future rise by no more than the rate of inflation. These reforms will therefore give a major fillip to businesses in inner-city areas.

The full figures requested by my hon. Friend are as follows:

	Aggregate of old rate bills £ million	Aggregate of new rate bills (before transition) £ million	Change £ million	Change Percentage
Shops	659·8	639·7	−20·1	−3·1
Offices	553·9	499·5	−54·3	−9·8
Factories	765·7	447·4	−318·3	−41·6
Warehouses	393·4	263·5	−129·9	−33·0
Other properties	744·6	759·5	14·9	2·0
All properties	3,117·4	2,609·6	−507·8	−16·3

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Ethiopia

46. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest information he has on the famine situation in Ethiopia.

Mrs. Chalker: As the House knows, up to 4 million people are at increasing risk and some 1·1 million tonnes of food aid will be required up to the end of October of which about half has already been pledged. Our critical objectives remain to get the earliest distribution of food particularly within Tigré, as agreed on 18 January, and to find a speedy route towards the end of fighting and a negotiated solution.

71. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance is being offered to the inhabitants of Tigré and Wollo in northern Ethiopia; and what steps are being taken to ensure that such assistance is getting through.

Mrs. Chalker: Since the middle of 1989, we have made commitments of food and other emergency assistance to the value of some £5·8 million for the benefit of those threatened by famine in Tigré. This assistance is being channelled through British non-governmental organisations which have long experience of work of this kind in Ethiopia. The world food programme is also advising on the situation and how best to ensure that the food aid reaches those for whom it is intended. Because of the military situation in Wollo, it has not so far been possible to provide aid to that region.

Cambodia

47. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what United Kingdom assistance has been given to the non-Communist resistance in Cambodia in the past 12 months.

Mrs. Chalker: Since 1 March 1989 a total of £702,000 has been provided, mainly through UNBRO and British NGOs, for non-Communist Cambodians living in camps on the Thai border.

54. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a further statement about Government policy on (a) bilateral and (b) multilateral aid to Cambodia; and whether he will give details of Britain's contribution to date in each case for the current financial year.

68. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his officials' recent visit to Cambodia.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Motherwell, North (Dr. Reid) on 15 February at column 351.

59. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to ensure that food is not being sent from United Nations Border Relief Organisation camps on the Thai-Cambodia border to Khmer Rouge soldiers.

60. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further investigations have been made on reports of the diversion of food and other aid to Khmer Rouge soldiers fighting in Cambodia, from the camps on the Thai-Cambodia border.

Mrs. Chalker: We have repeatedly sought and been given assurances by UNBRO that food and other aid supplies intended for families and ordinary people in Thai-Cambodia border camps are not diverted, either directly or indirectly to the Khmer Rouge.

I saw the camps for myself last week and reiterated our concern. UNBRO officials assured me that they were taking all possible steps to ensure that supplies went to the people for whom they were intended and that they were looking again at their monitoring procedures. British embassy officials based in Bangkok also visit the camps regularly to monitor the situation.

Vietnam

50. Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's consideration of the issues raised in the report by the International Monetary Fund staff report for the 1989 article IV consultation, 11 August 1989, on Vietnam's economy.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government welcome the positive initial steps taken by the Vietnamese authorities towards more market-oriented policies.

61. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what programme of aid Her Majesty's Government have developed for Vietnam.

73. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to re-establish a bilateral aid programme with Vietnam.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government have provided some assistance to Vietnam to help the people who are returning to resettle there. As I said in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 16 January, consideration is also being given to whether the time is right to provide support for community development programmes administered by British non-governmental organisations in Vietnam.

Debt

51. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much debt owed by developing countries Her Majesty's Government propose to write off in this coming year.

Mrs. Chalker: We have already cancelled the old aid debt of 23 countries, and rescheduled on concessional terms other official debt of 12 countries. The 1988 Toronto summit agreed to provide such debt relief to the poorest countries pursuing economic reforms, and we expect more to benefit in 1990.

South Africa

52. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors determine Britain's aid programme to South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: Our aid programme is a practical demonstration of our commitment to promote fundamental change leading to the creation of a just, democratic and non-racial society in South Africa. It is helping to prepare for the day when South Africa's black citizens will be playing the major role in government and in economic development. Our programmes are planned and implemented directly with community groups, non-governmental organisations and some universities.

53. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent visit to South Africa by the Minister for Overseas Development.

63. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the recent visit to Johannesburg by the Minister for Overseas Development.

Mrs. Chalker: While in Johannesburg on 30 January I visited the Alexandra health centre, which is one of over 200 community projects that we support in South Africa. I met many of the teachers involved in the Molteno literacy project which we have helped for nearly 10 years and which has developed teaching materials now in use in well over 5,000 primary schools. I also visited the new British Council offices.

64. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Minister for Overseas Development's visit to southern Africa and the Southern Africa Development Co-ordination Committee.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 15 February at column 352 to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway).

Eastern Europe

55. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of United Kingdom aid given to ex-Communist countries to liberalise their economies is given on a multilateral basis.

Mrs. Chalker: We have only just started giving aid to the reforming countries of eastern Europe, and precise statistics are accordingly not yet available. But a substantial proportion of the United Kingdom's aid to eastern Europe will be given multilaterally.

56. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funds are being made available for students from central and eastern Europe to study development economics in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Chalker: No funds are currently set aside specifically for this purpose. However some £750,000 will be available in 1990-91 for students from eastern Europe and the Soviet Union to study in Great Britain through the FCO scholarships and awards scheme. Applications from students wishing to study development economics will be considered along with other applications.

In addition, we hope to establish a general scholarships programme through the know-how funds. This will be administered by the British Council. Detailed proposals are awaited and no financial limits have yet been set. Development economics will certainly be a discipline in which training will be eligible for support.

65. Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy that in all future years aid to eastern Europe will be additional to aid for developing countries.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government's substantial economic support for eastern Europe is entirely separate from and additional to our regular aid programme. We shall maintain our substantial aid programme to developing countries.

Brazil

57. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest discussions with Brazil on rain forest matters.

Mrs. Chalker: We have continued our discussions with Brazilian institutions on the details of individual project proposals and several project proposals are now being considered by the Brazilian Government. We expect the Brazilian Government to approve the first project under the memorandum of understanding, a research project to investigate the relationship between deforestation and climate, involving the Institute of Hydrology, within the next few days. We hope to reach agreement shortly on some of the other projects which could then begin in the second quarter of the year.

Black Rhino

58. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid is directed toward programmes aimed at protecting the black rhino.

Mrs. Chalker: In my answer to the hon. Member of 29 November 1989, Official Report, column 257, I referred to the list, placed in the Library of the House, of wildlife conservation activities in general in Africa in which we are involved. This includes the funding of a gamewarden to co-ordinate the Kenya rhino rescue project. We are now actively considering ways in which we may be of further help in conserving rhino in Tanzania.

Tibet

62. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether in the forthcoming year Her Majesty's Government will fund a cultural or medical aid package to Tibet.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government have no plans to fund a cultural or medical aid package to Tibet.

Bangladesh

66. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was discussed with the Government of Bangladesh during the Minister for Overseas Development's recent visit.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 15 February, column 350.

Food Production

67. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the overseas aid programme contains any provision for developing new technologies to increase food production in developing countries.

69. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Overseas Development Administration is taking to increase food production in developing countries through research on sustainable systems of agriculture.

72. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution is made through research and development funded from the aid programme to efforts in developing countries to improve food production.

Mrs. Chalker: I regard research on sustainable agricultural systems for developing countries and its dissemination as an important part of the British aid programme. The Overseas Development Administration has recently published a new "Strategy for Research on Renewable Natural Resources", a copy of which I have placed in the Library of the House. This strategy lays stress on the need for all natural resources research programmes to take account of factors which make for sustainable and environmentally sound development. Total expenditure on renewable natural resources research under the Overseas Development Administration research strategy in FY 1989-90, including contributions to the programmes of international agricultural research centres, will be some £19 million, of which nearly 90 per cent. will be related to food production and the technologies needed to increase it. Specific research programmes which bear directly on agricultural sustainability will include among others farming systems, agroforestry and soil science, and will be carried out at centres of excellence such as the Overseas Development Natural Resources Institute and the Oxford Forestry Institute. The transfer and adaptation of newly developed technologies is assisted through our bilateral country programmes.

India

70. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the quality of Her Majesty's Government's aid programme to India, in view of the recently published investigation carried out by the Comptroller and Auditor General.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Pollok (Mr. Dunnachie) on 15 February at column 351.

Children's Education

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the United Kingdom aid budget is spent on education; how much of this is spent on primary education; and whether he has any plans to increase spending in this area.

Mrs. Chalker: In 1988, expenditure on technical co-operation in education, including sums provided to the British Council amounting to £42 million, came to about £95 million or 23 per cent. of total technical co-operation. Some £1·7 million or 0·4 per cent. of total technical co-operation was specifically for primary education, but there are other projects which benefit both primary and other areas of education. Some £6·5 million or 3·2 per cent. of the ODA total financial project aid was spent on education; £1·1 million or 0·6 per cent. was on primary education. In determining how much the ODA spends on the various levels of education in each recipient country it takes into account existing or proposed projects by those organisations.

We shall wish to discuss with Education Ministers of Commonwealth countries at the Commonwealth conference of Education Ministers in Barbados later this year what proportion of our assistance they wish us to commit to primary education. We shall undertake discussions with other Governments in the light of the forthcoming world conference on education for all.

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the proportion of children worldwide who fail to undertake or complete primary education.

Mrs. Chalker: The following information on the percentage of children enrolled in primary education is taken from the World Bank world development report 1989. In an explanatory note the report states that the figures are estimates of children of all ages enrolled in primary schools. Figures are expressed as the percentage of pupils to the population of school age children. Figures in italics are for years other than those specified. While many countries consider primary school age to be six to 11 years, others do not. The differences in country practices in the ages and duration of schooling are reflected in the figures given. For some countries with universal primary education the gross enrolment figures may exceed 100 per cent. because some pupils are younger or older than the country's standard primary school age.

I have no information on the number of children who fail to complete the period of primary education.

Oban-Korup Rain Forest

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid Her Majesty's Government are giving to Nigeria and Cameroon, directly or indirectly related to helping protect the Oban-Korup rain forest; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The Overseas Development Administration is contributing to the sustainable development of the Korup national park in Cameroon and the Oban hills area of Nigeria, both by supporting the World Wide Fund for Nature through the joint funding scheme and from bilateral country programme funds.

Our present total commitment for Korup is £700,000 over the period 1987 to 1992. It includes a soils survey, preparation of a master plan, and a contribution to the World Wide Fund for Nature's work in setting up new agroforestry areas and buffer zone protection.

For the Oban hills area, we have spent £210,000 on the design of a conservation master plan, and an Overseas Development Administration team has just visited Nigeria to draw up proposals for future assistance.

Development Assistance

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a table showing British official development assistance, as defined by the OECD, in constant 1989 prices, for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Chalker: The answer is as follows:

Net official development assistance 1979 to 1988 at constant 1989 prices

	Constant 1989 prices £ million
1979	2,098
1980	1,377
1981	1,676
1982	1,481
1983	1,453

EMPLOYMENT

Jobcentres

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans regarding the privatisation or contractorisation of jobcentres and their services.

Mr. Eggar: No. As my right hon. Friend the former Secretary of State announced on 1 December 1989, Official Report, column 461, the employment service will be launched as a Next Steps agency in April. Agency status will involve the setting of clear objectives and targets for the employment service and will clarify accountability for policy, management and performance. This will enable the employment service to provide greater value for money and improved customer service. My right hon. Friend also announced that the employment service will progressively integrate its jobcentre and benefit services. This will represent a significant improvement on the present system where most people have to visit both a benefit office and a jobcentre as part of claiming benefit and looking for work.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the cost to the Exchequer for each job created as a result of the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Eggar: For the financial year to March 1989, the net cost to the Exchequer for each entrant to the enterprise allowance scheme is estimated at £1,900.

Small Firms Loan Guarantees

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the cost per job to the Exchequer of jobs created as a result of the Government's small firms loan guarantee scheme.

Mr. Eggar: The net Exchequer cost of the loan guarantee scheme per person leaving the unemployment count is estimated to be of the order of £450. This figure is derived from the costs of a typical loan adjusted by the benefit, tax and national insurance savings relating to those leaving the count in the first year of a loan as a direct result of the scheme.

Reactive Dyes

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment to whom a leaflet published by the Health and Safety Commission, warning of the health hazards of reactive dyes, is being circulated; what are the main precautions the leaflet advises workers and employers to adopt; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The leaflet "Your Health and Reactive Dyes" published by the Health and Safety Commission on 1 February 1990, is being distributed widely in the finishing sector of the textile industry and is also being sent to the Society of Dyers and Colourists and to further education establishments specialising in textile technology. The leaflet is specifically intended to inform workers. The main precautions which the leaflet advises are: to open, dispense and weigh out dye powders at a dust control booth; to clean up any spillages by vacuum or wet method; to wear a suitable respirator and protective clothing when instructed to do so; to pay attention to personal hygiene and to seek medical advice if specified symptoms occur.

Small Firms

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many small firms used his Department's small firms advisory service in 1989.

Mr. Eggar: In 1989 the small firms service in England handled 314,625 inquiries and provided 50,013 counselling sessions to 35,572 clients.

Health and Safety Commission

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has yet received advice from the Health and Safety Commission on whether regulations should be made under section 235 of the Companies Act 1985.

Mr. Nicholls: The chairman of the HSC has written to me with the Commission's advice on this matter. There are no present plans to introduce regulations.

Action for Jobs

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total expenditure attributed to the action for jobs campaign in 1988-89.

Mr. Eggar: Total expenditure on the action for jobs campaign in 1988-89 was £600,000.

New Businesses

131. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many new businesses were started over the past year.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 February 1990]: In 1988, the latest year for which figures have been published by my Department, the net increase in the number of VAT-registered businesses was 64,000, an average of just over 1,200 per week. This was the net result of 230,000 new registrations and 166,000 deregistrations. Early indications from data collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise are that there was a net increase of some 80,000 in 1989, or 1,500 per week on average.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: No security firms are employed by my Department.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of the recently agreed entitlement to two days paid paternity leave.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Gymnasium

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council on how many occasions in the past 12 months clothing belonging to right hon. and hon. Members has been reported as going missing while they have been using the House of Commons gymnasium; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: None.

Refreshment Department

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, under which vote the £370,179 shown as the total for staff costs, including wages and salaries, social security costs and staff meals, in the account for the House of Commons refreshment accounts in the year 1988-89, is shown in the appropriation accounts.

Mr. Beith: The sum referred to represents the cost of meals provided by the Refreshment Department for its staff, the wages of casual staff, and overtime payments and associated social security contributions wholly attributable to the banqueting services of the Department. Since 1 April 1980, when the Refreshment Department became a Department of the House, those costs have been met from the Department's trading fund, the accounts of which are approved each year by the House of Commons Commission and presented to the House by Mr. Speaker, together with the report of the Comptroller and Auditor General thereon.

The wages of all the permanent full-time staff of the Refreshment Department are met from the House of Commons: administrative vote (class XXA, vote 1); and appear in the appropriation accounts for that vote. In 1988-89 expenditure on wages, allowances and national insurance contributions for the permanent full-time staff of the Refreshment Department was £2,632,853.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Female Teachers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to assist female teachers to take a break in their career and then return to teaching.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Government are keen to encourage former teachers to return to teaching. On 18 January 1990, my right hon. Friend announced a £4 million education support grant programme over two years to help LEAs attract qualified teachers back into teaching and recruit new mature entrants. This funding will help LEAs to provide career break and keeping-in-touch schemes, job-share and part-time working and creche facilities. In addition, LEA training grant scheme funding is available for updating the skills and knowledge of qualified teacher returners. It is for LEAs and schools as employers to take advantage of these funds to respond to the specific needs of women returners.

Student Loans

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average debt expected for a student starting his or her degree course in autumn 1990 under the student loans system and studying (a) a three-year arts or humanities degree, (b) a four-year engineering degree and (c) a five-year medical degree at an English university or polytechnic.

Mr. Jackson: The loan facility is available to support students' maintenance. The size of the debt in any individual case will depend on the amount of loan facility drawn down. The size of the facility does not relate to the nature of the course.

If inflation runs at 3 per cent., a student at a higher education institution outside London and living away from home, starting a course in 1990-91 taking up the maximum loan facility in each year, would have a total debt in real terms of £1,317 for a three-year course, £1,922 for a four-year course, and £2,592 for a five-year course.

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will consider weighting student loans to take account of regional variations in the cost of accommodation.

Mr. Jackson: The loan facility, like the maintenance grant, will be available at three levels, according to whether the student is living during term time in the parental home, away from home in London, or away from home outside London. Differences in regional accommodation costs were also taken into account in distributing the higher education access fund between the various sectors. We wish the UFC and PCFC to have regard to relevant accommodation costs in making allocations to their institutions.

National Vocational Qualifications

Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to improve co-operation in bringing about the comprehensive framework of national vocational qualifications.

Mr. Jackson: The work of the National Council for Vocational Qualifications (NCVQ) lies at the heart of Government policy for the reform and rationalisation of vocational qualifications. When NCVQ was established in 1986, the Government accepted the advice that a voluntary process of reform, through the procedures of NCVQ, represented the best way of securing the commitment of all concerned with the formulation and delivery of quality national vocational qualifications.

My right hon. Friend attended NCVQ's council meeting on 29 January 1990 when he acknowledged the progress that had already been made and invited the council to identify ways in which he might assist in its future work. He plans to hold a further meeting with the chairman and chief executive of NCVQ as part of that process, and continues to keep in close touch with the major examining and validating bodies offering vocational qualifications.

Further Education

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the number, and the relevant percentages, of young people aged 16 and 17 years who are currently in full-time education.

Mr. Jackson: Estimates of numbers and percentages of the population of 16 and 17-year-olds in full-time education in England in 1988-89 are as follows:

	Aged 16		Aged 17
	Numbers ('000s)	per cent.	Numbers ('000s)	per cent.
School	223	33·1	148	20·5
Full-time further education (excluding YTS)	114	16·9	101	13·9
Full-time further education (YTS)	13	2·0	5	0·7

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many local education authorities in their submissions to him of funding schemes for further education have named 1 April 1991 as the date for delegation of budgets; how many of these authorities have had this date changed by him to 1 April 1990; if he will list the local education authorities in both categories; and under what powers he imposed these changes.

Mr. Jackson: The following local education authorities named 1 April 1991 as the date for delegation of budgets:

Bolton
Durham
Rotherham
Havering
Sunderland
Ealing
Hillingdon
Merton
Bexley
Cleveland
Doncaster
Kingston
Barnsley
Rochdale
St. Helens
Sutton
Barnet
Waltham Forest
Hertfordshire

Using powers under section 140 of the Education

Reform Act 1988 my right hon. Friend has to date modified the schemes of the following local education authorities to introduce delegation from 1 April 1990:

Cleveland
Doncaster
Havering
Kingston

Solvent Abuse

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps are being taken to educate children about the dangers of solvent abuse.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The National Curriculum Science Order requires that pupils should study the risks of solvent abuse and how it affects body processes. The Department will be supporting LEA expenditure of up to £7 million in 1990-91 on preventive health education, including education about solvent abuse. The Department has also contributed funding towards the production by Re-Solv of a video on solvent abuse for use in schools.

Mummified Relics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, Central of 9 February, Official Report, column 795, whether he will take steps to establish how many aboriginal and Maori skulls and skeletal remains are in United Kingdom universities.

Mr. Jackson: No. Responsibility for university collections rests solely with the institutions concerned.

University Intakes

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish (a) the target intake figures for each university education department or faculty for 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990 and (b) the actual intake in each case for 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Initial teacher training target and intake figures for individual universities are as follows:

Qualified Teachers

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the numbers of successful and unsuccessful applicants for qualified teacher status, holding degrees from institutions in India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, west Africa and the West Indies; what is the average length of wait for qualified teacher status for successful applicants from these countries; and if he will give the preceding information for each of the last five years for which information is available.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The arrangements for according qualified teacher status changed with effect from 1 September 1989. Prior to that date, teachers trained overseas could be granted qualified teacher status under paragraph 2(b) of schedule 5 to the Education (Teachers) Regulations 1982 provided their course of initial teacher training was comparable to a course of training available in this country. Details of the applications considered are contained in the table. Detailed information on the average time taken to process cases is not available.

Institute of Food Research

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the number of scientists employed at the Institute of Food Research at (a) Reading, (b) Norwich and (c) Bristol at the beginning of each of (i) 1988, (ii) 1989, (iii) 1990 and (iv) 1991.

Mr. Jackson: The figures in the following table refer to scientists employed, or expected to be employed, as at 1 April in each year. Those for 1990 and 1991 are estimates. The table excludes vacancies but includes period appointments.

Universities Funding Council

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he next plans to meet the chairman of the Universities Funding Council; and what matters he expects to discuss.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend meets the chairman of the Universities Funding Council from time to time in the course of normal business.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Sentencing

37. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Attorney-General how many recent appeals there have been against over-lenient sentencing; and how many were successful.

The Attorney-General: Since February 1989, when the power became effective, I have applied for leave to refer the sentencing in nine cases to the Court of Appeal. Leave has been granted in seven such cases, and sentences have been increased in six of the cases. I have withdrawn two cases in the light of later information. I have referred one case to the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland; the sentence in that case was also increased.

Crown Prosecution Service

38. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Attorney-General how many defendants were prosecuted in 1988-89 by the Crown prosecution service in (a) magistrates courts and (b) the Crown court.

The Attorney-General: The Crown prosecution service prosecuted 1,234,344 defendants in magistrates courts and 121,912 in the Crown court during 1988-89.

40. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General if he will meet the Director of Public Prosecutions to discuss relations between the police and the Crown prosecution service.

The Attorney-General: I refer to the answer that I gave today to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen).

Director of Public Prosecutions

39. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the Director of Public Prosecutions; and what subjects were discussed.

41. Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the Director of Public Prosecutions; and what matters were discussed.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the answer that I gave today to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen).

Serious Fraud Office

42. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the head of the Serious Fraud Office; and what matters were discussed.

The Attorney-General: I frequently discuss matters of departmental interest with the director of the Serious Fraud Office and last met him for this purpose on 13 February.

Management Consultants

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Oxford, East on 31 January, Official Report, column 189, if he will list the research reports commissioned by the Lord Chancellor's Department as part of the civil justice review and give the cost of each contract; and if he will list any similar reports commissioned from outside management consultants since 1985 and give their date of completion and cost.

The Attorney-General: The following reports were commissioned by the Lord Chancellor's Department as part of the civil justice review:

"Personal Injuries Litigation Study": Inbucon Management Consultants Limited: 10 June 1985 to 31 January 1986: £140,498.

"Small Claims Study": Touche Ross Management Consultants: 9 December 1985 to 30 September 1986: £92,000.

"Commercial Court Study": Coopers and Lybrand Associates Limited: 17 March 1986 to 28 November 1986: £72,340.

"Enforcement of Debt Study": Touche Ross Management Consultants: 17 March 1986 to 9 January 1987: £138,000.

"Housing Cases Study": School for Advanced Urban Studies at the University of Bristol: 1 March 1986 to 9 January 1987: £144,702.

The Lord Chancellor's Department has commissioned work from a number of management consultants since 1985 but only the following has been commissioned to report on an area similar to those listed above:

Touche Ross: "A survey of Solicitors' firms conducting criminal legal aid work": October 1988: £24,000.

THE ARTS

Three Graces

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts what meetings he has had with (a) the Victoria and Albert museum, (b) the National Heritage Memorial Fund and (c) other interested parties on the future of Canova's Three Graces.

Mr. Luce: I have had a meeting with the director and other representatives of the Victoria and Albert museum and the director of the National Heritage Memorial Fund. I have also discussed the matter with the chairmen of the reviewing committee on the export of works of art and the National Art Collections Fund.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received about the future of Canova's Three Graces.

Mr. Luce: I have received a number of representations about the future of Canova's Three Graces.

CIVIL SERVICE

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what contribution his Department will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. Luce: None.

WALES

Community Hospitals

15. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current number of community hospitals in Wales; and what he expects the figure to be in five and 10 years' time.

Mr. Grist: There are currently 30 community hospitals in Wales. On the basis of health authorities' present plans a further five such hospitals may be completed by 1995 and perhaps as many as 11 within 10 years.

Welsh Counties Committee

18. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what subjects were discussed when he last met the Welsh Counties Committee.

29. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met leaders of district councils in Wales; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Peter Walker: I met representatives of the Welsh Counties Committee and the Council of Welsh Districts on 30 January to discuss local authority budgets for 1990-91.

Health Authorities

19. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received from health authorities within Wales.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend receives many representations from health authorities in Wales on a wide variety of issues.

Pollution Inspectorate

20. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met Her Majesty's inspector of pollution; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Grist: I met Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution on 28 November 1989 to discuss waste disposal in Wales.

Transport

21. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from bodies concerned with the development of transportation systems within Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I and my officials have frequent dealings with local authorities and others about the development of transport systems within Wales.

Public Appointments

22. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total number of appointments to public bodies which have been made (a) solely by himself and (b) jointly with other Ministers from June 1987 to the present day.

Mr. Peter Walker: The totals are 660, and somewhat over 500, respectively.

Toxic Waste

23. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to reduce the dumping of toxic and other wastes within Wales.

Mr. Grist: Waste minimisation is central to the Government's integrated pollution control proposals. However, there will always be some wastes that will have to be disposed of, preferably as near as practicable to their points of origin.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has concerning the possible release of toxic effluent from the Trehir tip at Bedwas and the Coed-y-Brain tip at Llanbradach; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend does not collect such information. The responsibility for the regular inspection, including such matters as leachate control and monitoring, of all licensed sites or those operated under a council resolution, rests with the district council, which has appropriate powers under the Control of Pollution Act 1974.

The National Rivers Authority and Dwr Cymru are responsible for the monitoring of discharges into water courses and sewers respectively.

Welsh Language

24. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the recommendations made to him by the Welsh Language Board.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend is considering the practical implications of the board's recommendations for legislation and other related matters. The board has also been concerned with a range of other matters where it has been instrumental in finding practical solutions to problems experienced by Welsh speakers.

Agriculture

25. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from farming organisations about the downgrading of his Department's agricultural department at Ruthin.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have received a number of representations from the National Farmers Union, the Farmers Union of Wales, the Country Landowners Association and the Welsh Mountain Sheep Society. I have assured these organisations that the present high level of service will continue both from the area office which will be maintained at Ruthin and from the enlarged divisional office at Caernarfon.

Local Government Finance

26. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the community charge in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: The House debated Welsh local government finance matters on 24 January. I have no plans to make a further statement.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the available proposed final community charge figure for Welsh local authorities.

Mr. Grist: Welsh local authorities are in the process of setting their budgets for 1990-91. Until that process has been completed, charging authorities cannot set their community charge. The figures requested are therefore not available.

Labour Statistics

27. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the most recent figures for male and female unemployment in the Ogmore constituency, Ogwr borough and Mid Glamorgan county council areas and the total in Wales; and what were the equivalent figures in June 1979.

Mr. Peter Walker: On 11 January 1990 there were 1,888, 3,053, 14,831 and 67,736 unemployed males in the Ogmore constituency, Ogwr borough, the county of Mid Glamorgan and Wales respectively. Comparable figures for unemployed females were 595, 1,086, 4,373 and 22,613 respectively. Figures for June 1979 are not available on a basis that enables a valid comparison to be made.

M4

28. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will announce the successful tenderer for the building of the missing part of the M4 near Port Talbot.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Construction of the M4 between Baglan and Lonlas will be undertaken under three separate contracts. We announced the tenderer for the first contract, Earlswood to Lonlas, on 16 February.

Higher Education

30. Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to improve local authority higher education in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Wales Advisory Body for Local Authority Higher Education, which advises my right hon. Friend on higher education matters, has considered a report setting out proposals for strengthening the provision of local authority higher education in Wales. The proposals will now be the subject of a consultation seminar arranged for 5 March. WAB will consider the report again on 6 April taking account of the comments made at the seminar, and will then decide what advice to offer my right hon. Friend.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 18 December, Official Report, columns 57-58, concerning the accountancy firms employed by his Department, if he will indicate (a) the names of the six firms, (b) a list of payments made to each in 1988 and 1989 and (c) details of the consultancy contracts given to each firm.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information is as follows:

Firm and Project

Coopers and Lybrand
Developing and implementing All Wales Strategy, including Resource Management, for NHS in Wales.

Price Waterhouse
Project 2000—option appraisal of nurse training.
Advice on longform reports and fraud and system audit.*

Peat Marwick
Review of financial accounting systems for NHS in Wales.

Ernst and Young
Advice on computer audit.

Touche Ross
Provision of financial advice on longform reports, reporting accountant consistency and project management.*

Deloittes
"K" setting.*

Those marked with an asterisk were jointly appointed with DOE as part of the water privatisation proposals. The full cost of the "K" setting project is being borne by DOE.

It would be inappropriate on grounds of commercial confidentiality to list individual payments. However, total payments amounted to £292,373 in 1988 and £117,238 in 1989.

Rateable Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will provide for the districts of Cardiff, Monmouth and Pembroke the number and rateable value of houses and so on with a rateable value not exceeding £100 and by (a) £50 steps to £400, (b) £100 steps to £800, (c) £800 to £1,000, (d) £1,000 to £1,500 and (e) over £1,500.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is not available centrally.

A55

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much the development of the A55 has cost over the last 10 years.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Expenditure on major improvement schemes on the A55 for the financial years 1980-81 to 1988-89 totalled £374·3 million; forecast outturn for 1989-90 is £69·5 million giving total expenditure of £443·8 million over the 10-year period.

Unemployed People

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make available statistics showing the number of people registered as unemployed who are not in receipt of benefit.

Mr. Peter Walker: Information is not available in the form requested.

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department currently has contracts with two private security firms, the Royal British Legion Attendants Company Limited and Delta Security. Detailed information in relation to individual contracts is treated on a commercial in confidence basis, but the aggregated number of employees engaged by the two firms on our contracts with them presently varies between 11 and 13. The total value excluding VAT, of all contracts with private security firms from 1984-85 is as follows:

1984-85	64,229
1985-86	68,550
1986-87	72,989
1987-88	72,989
1988-89	75,835
1989-90	81,196

Disabled and Elderly People

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the organisations representing or concerned with the needs of (a) elderly people, (b) people with physical, sensory or mental disability and (c) carers which receive financial support from his Department, together with the figure for each such organisation for the financial years 1987-88, 1988-89 and the current financial year.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is as follows:

Opportunities for Volunteering Scheme in Wales

Grants (up to a maximum of £15,000) are given to all the above client groups but in the time available cannot be disaggregated.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 12 February, Official Report, column 10, if he will list the draft circulars issued by his Department between 1 January 1987 and 31 January 1990 which have not been followed up with a full circular and which deal with the needs of, and provision for, disabled people in the fields of (a) health, (b) social services, (c) housing, (d) education and (e) transport.

Mr. Peter Walker: Three draft circulars have yet to be followed up by a full circular. They are:

(i). Services for People with Physical and/or Sensory Disabilities (issued 29 December 1989).
(ii). House Adaptations for Disabled People (issued 28 December 1989).
(iii). House Renovation Grants (issued 28 December 1989).

It is intended to issue the final version of (i) next month.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will give details of the expenditure of Dyfed county council in each year since 1974-75 in (a) cash terms and (b) constant price terms; and if he will indicate the percentage increase in each year in real terms;

(2) if he will give details of the expenditure of Preseli-Pembrokeshire district council in each year since 1974-75 in (a) cash terms and (b) constant price terms; and if he will indicate the percentage increase in each year in real terms;

(3) if he will give details of the expenditure of South Pembrokeshire district council in each year since 1974-75 in (a) cash terms and (b) constant price terms; and if he will indicate the percentage increase in each year in real terms.

Mr. Grist: The information requested for each year since 1979-80 is given in the table. Comparable figures for 1974-75 to 1978-79 are not available centrally.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the figures for the total number of staff employed by each of Dyfed county council, South Pembrokeshire district council and Preseli-Pembrokeshire district council in each year since 1974-75.

Mr. Grist: The information held by the Department regarding the number of full-time and part-time employees for March of each year is set out in the following tables. No information on employees by individual authorities is held by the Department prior to December 1978.

Number of full-time employees

Hospitals

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on proposals by the European Community to charge value added tax on new building and fuel for National Health Service hospitals and the action he is taking to increase capital and revenue allocations to ensure that health authorities are reimbursed for such expenditure.

Mr. Grist: The Government are reviewing the most appropriate way of compensating health authorities for the application of VAT to new construction. An announcement will be made in due course.

The capital and revenue allocations announced recently to health authorities take into account the effect of the charge in relation to VAT on fuel and power.

Highways

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total budget of the Welsh Office highways department in (a) 1988-89 and (b) 1989-90; and what proportion of this money was spent in Gwynedd, Clwyd and Powys.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Gross provision was £136 million in 1988-89 and £157 million in 1989-90; outturn expenditure was £153 million in 1988-89. The proportion of these moneys spent in Gwynedd, Clwyd and Powys is not yet available.

PRIME MINISTER

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister what paternity leave is allowed to staff in her Department; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements following agreement in principle with the Civil Service unions for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

Criminal Justice System

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations she has received concerning the operation of the criminal justice system.

The Prime Minister: I receive a wide range of representations about the criminal justice system, many concerning sentencing.

A White Paper "Criminal Justice and Protecting the Public" (Cm 965) published on 6 February sets out our proposals for a coherent statutory framework for sentencing.

EC (New Member States)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the responsibility for the cost to the European Economic Community of admitting new member states, including East Germany.

The Prime Minister: There is a consensus within the EC that no decisions on applications for membership of the EC will be possible until at least 1993. The implications of German unity for the EC will of course be discussed fully within the Community.

Engagements

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 15 February.

The Prime Minister: On 15 February I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I had further meetings later that day.

Local Authority Taxation

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what consideration she has given to the constitutional implications of different forms of local authority taxation being imposed on Scotland and England;

(2) what consideration she has given to the economic consequences of different forms of local authority taxation being imposed on Scotland and England.

The Prime Minister: The Government have no intention of introducing different forms of local authority taxation in Scotland and England. To do so would cause immense trouble in both places.

Inflation

Mr. Michael: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment she has made of the level of price rises which might be deemed likely to feed inflation.

The Prime Minister: The Autumn Statement forecast is for RPI annual inflation to fall to 5·75 per cent. by the fourth quarter of 1990. It is not the practice to provide more detail than published in table 2·7 of the Autumn Statement.

Mr. Leo Marks

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what approaches have been made to the authorities by Mr. Leo Marks for information and permissions relating to his book and history relating to alleged betrayal involving the Dutch Resistance and the Special Operations Executive during the period 1939 to 1945; what response has been sent; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Mr. Leo Marks has used, over several years, the publicly available facility of seeking and obtaining information for his book from the SOE adviser at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what steps she has taken to trace the 200-page file sent by Mr. Colin Wallace to 10 Downing street in 1984; and whether she will outline the circumstances in which it went missing.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the information contained in the letter of 30 January from my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces to my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel (Mr. Marshall), a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Post Office Letters

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received about the privatisation of Post Office Letters.

The Prime Minister: The Government have received a number of such representations from members of the public and organisations, the majority urging privatisation or the introduction of some form of competition.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will identify where in the Official Report she or other Ministers answered the question put to her on 15 February by the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke).

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on 15 February 1990 at column 391.

Northern Ireland

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations she has had from Lord Callaghan on issues related to security in Northern Ireland in the 1970s.

The Prime Minister: None.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Expenditure (Uprating)

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what items of public expenditure are subject to uprating by reference to the retail prices index (a) by statute and (b) by current policy commitment.

Mr. Norman Lamont: A large number of public service pension schemes are increased in line with the retail prices index under the Pensions Increase Act 1971 and are specified in schedule 2 of that Act. The main schemes are as follows:

Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme;
Local Government Superannuation Scheme;
Police Pension Scheme;
Firemen's Pension Scheme;
Judicial Pension Scheme; and Overseas Pensions administered by the Overseas Development Administration.

The Government are also committed to increase armed forces pensions in line with the RPI, although this is not required by statute: the increases each year are paid under regulations (Order in Council for the Navy, royal warrant for the Army and Queen's regulations for the RAF: the powers to make regulations are provided under three separate Acts of Parliament).

The following Department of Social Security and Northern Ireland Department of Health and Social Services benefits are uprated by statute by the movement in prices, for which this Government have used the retail prices index:

Retirement Pension (Basic RP, and SERPS, Pension Increments, and Graduated RP); Widow's Benefits (excluding Widow's Payment);
Industrial Death Benefit;
Industrial Disablement Benefit;
Invalid Care Allowance;
Attendance Allowance;
Invalidity Pension;
Severe Disablement Allowance;
Guardian's Allowance; and Child's Special Allowance.

There is no statutory requirement with respect to war pensions but these are uprated by the RPI by current policy commitment.

There are also a number of contracts between Government and other bodies which are subject to uprating by reference to the RPI.

Industrial Investment

Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the level of manufacturing investment in the last two quarters.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Shettleston (Mr. Marshall) on 15 February, Official Report, columns 378-79.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the levels of industrial investment in the light of the Confederation of British Industry's latest survey.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Manufacturing investment reached a record level in 1989 after six years of growth averaging 8 per cent. per year.

Balance of Payments

Dr. Reid: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast for the current account of the balance of payments for 1989.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The CSO's latest estimate is for a current account deficit of £20·3 billion in 1989, in line with the Autumn Statement forecast of around £20 billion.

Personal Allowances

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much personal allowances would need to be increased, in cash and percentage terms, so that in conjunction with a one penny cut in the basic rate of tax, revenues remained the same, taking the impact of tax paid for someone on income levels from £5,000 up to £50,000 in steps of £5,000 and indicating the number of people brought into tax as a result of these changes.

Mr. Lilley: A one penny cut in the basic rate combined with a 1½ per cent. increase in allowances and the basic rate limit over their 1989-90 levels would cost about the same in a full year at 1990-91 income levels as indexing allowances and the basic rate limit by 7·7 per cent., the amount required for statutory indexation. The 1½ per cent. increase in allowances would result in about 650,000 more individuals being liable to tax compared with indexation.

Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional. Further information is given in the tables:

Table 1: A 1½ per cent. increase in the 1989-90 levels of personal allowances and basic rate limit, compared with indexation, 1990-91

Allowance	£ per annum
Personal allowance (aged under 65)	−170

[1]Assumes single person receives no other tax allowances and reliefs except the personal allowance (aged under 65).

[2]Assumes married man with wife not working and no children, who receives no other tax allowances and reliefs except the personal allowance (aged under 65) and the married couple's allowance (aged under 65).

Personal Equity Plans

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for each year that personal equity plans have been in operation what is (a) the number and proportion of people with personal equity plans who are on the higher rate of tax and (b) the cost to the Exchequer in total of personal equity plans and per person with a personal equity plan.

Mr. Lilley: Information on personal equity plans is available only in respect of the number of plans and the amounts invested.

Estimates of the costs to the Exchequer are as follows:

	Total (£ million)	Per Personal Equity Plan (£)
1986-87	Negligible	Negligible
1987-88	5	10
1988-89	15	35
1989-90	20	30

Costs are expected to increase in future.

Income Tax

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households where the woman is the single earner will lose their present entitlement to the additional tax allowance in 1990-91 as a result of Government proposals for independent taxation.

Mr. Lilley: Under existing law a husband who does not have sufficient income to make full use of the married man's allowance can transfer any surplus to his wife. Under independent taxation he will be able to transfer any surplus married couple's allowance but his personal allowance is not transferable. However, where the married man's allowance was transferred to a wife in 1989-90 the transitional arrangements announced in the 1988 Budget will mean that, in addition to her own personal allowance and the transferred married couple's allowance, the wife will receive a further allowance. This will ensure that the couple's total allowances in 1990-91 are not less than their total allowances in 1989-90 as a result of the change to independent taxation. It is estimated that in 1990-91 just under 200,000 married couples will benefit from this transitional relief.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many single people and married couples do not pay tax in 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: Provisional estimates of the numbers of adult non-taxpayers in 1989-90 are 7·7 million single people and 3·2 million married couples.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the reduction in the standard rate of income tax would need to be to secure a £216 per annum benefit to the average taxpayer.

Mr. Lilley: Estimates for a single person and a married man on average male earnings in 1990-91 are given in the table:

Reduction in income tax from a cut in basic rate in 1990-91

	Reduction Per cent.	Gain to individual £ per annum
Single person[1]	1·5	[2]191·89
Married man[1]	2·0	[2]221·45

[1] Assuming average earnings for full time adult males in all occupations. In 1990-91, they are assumed to be £303·8 per week; in line with the assumptions of the growth in average earnings in 1989-90 and 1990-91 (from £256·3 per week in 1988-89) as published in paragraph 3.02 of the 1989 Autumn Statement.

[2] Calculations assume that 1989-90 personal allowances and the basic rate limit have been indexed by 7·7 per cent. to 1990-91. The gain to an individual quoted in the table is that figure closest to £216 per annum obtainable from a basic rate reduction to the nearest ½ per cent.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax units would become liable for income tax in 1990-91 if personal allowances were frozen at their 1989-90 level; and how many of these would face marginal tax and benefit withdrawal rates of (a) 40 per cent. or over, (b) 60 per cent. or over, (c) 80 per cent. or over and (d) 90 per cent. or over.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: In 1990-91 it is estimated that just over half a million single people and married couples would be brought into tax if personal allowances were frozen at their 1989-90 levels in 1990-91. The estimate is based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and is provisional.

Estimates by marginal rate of tax and benefit withdrawal are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Profit-related Pay

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are currently in profit-related pay schemes; how many were in each of the years since it was introduced; how many registered schemes have existed in each year; and what is the distribution of schemes by number of people in them.

Mr. Lilley: The information is as follows:

Live Registered Schemes

	December 1987	December 1988	December 1989
Number of participants
1-50	244	517	650
51-100	64	114	149
101-500	88	156	245
501-1,000	23	28	37
Above 1,000	11	15	31
Total schemes	430	830	1,112
Participating employees	72,000	122,000	226,000

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average income and the distribution of income of those in profit-related pay schemes.

Mr. Lilley: Average annual earnings of participants in registered profit-related pay schemes were about £12,000 in March 1989. I regret that information on the distribution of earnings is not available.

Workplace Nurseries

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the revenue raised from taxing workplace nurseries as a benefit in kind.

Mr. Lilley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 12 February, Official Report, column 15.

Business Expansion Schemes

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total cost so far of business expansion tax relief for 1989-90; and what was the cost in previous years of the scheme.

Mr. Lilley: The estimated cost of relief for 1983-84 to 1989-90 is as follows:

	£ million
1983-84	50
1984-85	75
1985-86	85
1986-87	95
1987-88	110
1988-89[1]	130

[1] Provisional.

A forecast of £60 million for the cost of relief for the business expansion scheme in 1989-90 was published in "The Government's Expenditure Plans, 1990-91 to 1992-93" (chapter 21, ref CM 1021, appendix F), but no information is yet available centrally from official sources to provide a reliable estimate of the outturn.

Imports

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest trends in imports.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In the fourth quarter of 1989, import volumes (less oil and erratics) fell by 4 per cent. This is clear evidence that import growth is slowing sharply in response to the slowdown in domestic demand.

Mortgages

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average level of mortgage entered into in each region of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lilley: Estimates of the average new building society mortgage for each region on all dwellings for the third quarter of 1989 are given in the table:

Region	Average New Mortgage £
Northern	28,400
Yorkshire and Humberside	29,600
East Midlands	34,700
East Anglia	44,600
Greater London	60,900
South East	53,200
South West	43,700
West Midlands	33,800
North West	31,300
Wales	30,200
Scotland	26,500
Northern Ireland	24,200
United Kingdom	38,300

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many mortgagors claiming mortgage tax relief have an outstanding mortgage greater than (a) £30,000, (b) £35,000, (c) £40,000 and (d) £45,000; and what is their average annual income.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Provisional estimates for 1989-90 are given in the table:

Mortgage greater than £	Mortgagors (thousands) £	Average total income £
30,000	2,100	23,500
35,000	1,600	23,500
40,000	1,200	24,500
45,000	900	26,000

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the average outstanding mortgage for mortgagors claiming mortgage interest tax relief for annual income ranges (a) under £5,000, (b) £5,001 to £7,500, (c) £7,501 to £10,000, (d) £10,001 to £15,000, (e) £15,001 to £20,000, (f) £20,001 to £30,000, (g) £30,001 to £50,000 and (h) over £50,000.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Provisional estimates for 1989-90 are given in the table:

Range of total income £ per annum	Average mortgage £
under 5,000	12,300
5,001 to 7,500	14,900
7,501 to 10,000	17,700
10,001 to 15,000	19,600
15,001 to 20,000	23,700
20,001 to 30,000	28,200
30,001 to 50,000	42,200
over 50,000	78,700

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the table published in his reply to the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay), Official Report, 15 May 1989, column 16, on mortgage tax relief, giving projections for 1990-91.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Latest estimates for 1989-90, based on the assumption that interest rates remain at current levels for the rest of 1989-90, are given in the table. These are based on projections to 1989-90 of information in the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and the 1986 family expenditure survey and are provisional. Projections for 1990-91 will depend on the levels of borrowing and interest rates.

Tax units receiving mortgage interest relief by range of total income 1989-90

Investment Growth

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the United Kingdom investment growth figures for each of the last 10 years; and if he will list comparable figures for each of the other European Community countries.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information on gross fixed capital formation in the United Kingdom is published by the CSO in "Economic Trends Annual Supplement" 1989 and for 1988 in "Economic Trends" December 1989. Figures for each of the other EC countries are published by the OECD in "Economic Outlook" December 1989.

Trade Deficit

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast for the trade deficit for the current year.

Mr. Norman Lamont: A new forecast will be published at the time of the Budget in March.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: At present, paternity leave is not available to civil servants. However, Her Majesty's Treasury is finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

Premium Bonds

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for the last 10 years for which statistics are available (a) the size of the nation's investment in premium bonds, (b) the proportion of these funds available for prizes, (c) the value of the prizes and (d) the notional odds against winning a prize for a person with a £100 investment in premium bonds.

Mr. Ryder: The net investment in premium bonds, the value of prizes paid and the odds against winning a prize in any month with a holding of £100, for each of the last 10 financial years are as follows:

	Net investment at 31 March (£ million)	Value of prizes paid in year (£ million)	Odds at 31 March with holding of £100 (to nearest whole number)
1979-80	1,405	79	185 to 1
1980-81	1,462	93	141 to 1
1981-82	1,506	101	145 to 1
1982-83	1,586	104	150 to 1
1983-84	1,674	110	157 to 1
1984-85	1,768	122	110 to 1
1985-86	1,833	135	110 to 1
1986-87	1,926	141	110 to 1
1987-88	2,093	138	110 to 1
1988-89	2,273	139	110 to 1

None of the money invested in premium bonds is paid in prize money. Premium bond prizes are paid from a prize fund calculated on the total value of bonds eligible to participate in the prize draw. The variable rate of interest used to calculate the value of the prize fund has been at the following levels in the last 10 years:

	Percentage per annum
From:
1 July 1980	7·0
1 November 1984	7·75
1 August 1987	7·0
1 July 1988	6·5

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show for each of the last five years and for the six months before, and the six months following the increase in the minimum purchase of premium bonds to £100, the number of bonds and the number of purchases of bonds at each denominational value at which they could be sold.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The number of premium bonds issued for each denominational value is shown in the table:

Bond denomination	Number in thousands
£	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989	January to June 1989	July to December 1989
5	802	52	55	57	32	30	2
10	831	1,010	1,002	995	567	505	63
20	66	149	163	177	121	102	18
25	52	71	72	76	43	40	3
30	42	69	74	80	56	46	10
40	28	41	44	49	33	28	5
50	204	273	290	318	198	171	27
100	123	159	167	176	247	95	152
200	39	49	52	56	53	28	25
300	17	21	22	24	23	12	11
400	10	12	13	16	14	8	7
500	36	46	52	58	49	27	22
1,000	28	39	51	62	52	29	24
2,000	21	35	58	75	60	33	27

Note: Because premium bonds are issued only in certain denominations, for some purchases it is necessary to issue two or more bonds to make up the total value of the purchase. At present the average number of bonds issued for each purchase is 1·13.

National Insurance Earnings Limit

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many male and female employees with earnings above the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions pay income tax at the standard rate only.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: In 1990-91 about 2·1 million employees will pay income tax at the basic rate and have earnings above the upper earnings limit for class 1 national insurance contributions. Of these, about 1·8 million are male and about 300,000 female.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue would be raised from freezing the inheritance tax threshold at its 1989-90 level; and how many estates would be brought into tax as a result.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: The direct revenue yield, in a full year at 1990-91 levels, from freezing the inheritance tax threshold at £118,000 rather than increasing it in line with indexation is estimated to be about £85 million. About 3,000 estates would be brought into tax by this measure.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table on the same basis as that given in his reply to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East (Mr. Brown) in the Official Report, 18 July 1988, column 433, on reductions in inheritance tax liability relative to the 1987-88 rate scale, giving figures for 1990-91.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Assuming statutory indexation of the 1989-90 rate scale, the inheritance tax liability on transfers in 1990-91 is estimated to be about £320 million lower than on an indexed 1987-88 rate scale. The distribution of the reduction in inheritance tax liability, by percentiles of the 22,000 estates which are expected to pay tax on 1990-91 transfers, assuming an indexed 1989-90 rate scale, is as follows:

Percentiles of estates	£ million
(a) top 1 per cent.	75
(b) top 5 per cent.	150
(c) top 10 per cent.	190
(d) bottom 70 per cent.	[1]65
(e) bottom 60 per cent.	[1]60
(f) bottom 50 per cent.	[1]50
(g) bottom 25 per cent.	[1]40

[1] includes about £20 million from about 8,000 estates which would be liable under the indexed 1987-88 rate scale but not liable under the indexed 1989-90 rate scale.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost in 1990-91 and in a full year of reducing the small companies rate of corporation tax to 20 per cent.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Table 4.5 of the 1989 Autumn Statement shows the direct effect of a 1 percentage point change in the small companies rate is £35 million in 1990-91. The corresponding full year effect is £50 million.

Subject to the qualifications in that table, the costs associated with a 5 percentage point reduction to 20 per cent. may be expected to be broadly pro rata to the effects of a 1 percentage point change.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated cost in 1990-91 and in a full year of introducing stock relief based on the retail prices index into the corporation tax system.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Information is not available on which to base a reliable estimate of this cost.

Private Medical Insurance

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the cost in (a) 1989-90 and (b) a full year of tax relief on private medical insurance; how many people benefit; and what proportion of these already have private medical insurance;

(2) how many people he expects to benefit in 1990-91 from the introduction of tax relief on private medical insurance; how many of these are pensioners; and what is the income distribution of those who gain.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Tax relief on private medical insurance for the over-60s will not be available until April. The cost in 1989-90 will be nil, and in 1990-91 about £40 million. This estimate is based on the assumption that about 600,000 individuals, with 330,000 policies, are to benefit in the first year of the relief and that about 90 per cent. of these already have private medical insurance. In subsequent years, as take-up increases, this proportion is expected to fall and the amount of tax relief will rise. The further details requested are not available.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what would be the effect of indexing personal allowances (a) fully, (b) three quarters of full indexation, (c) half of full indexation, (d) quarter of what would be necessary for full indexation and (e) not indexing at all, on (i) tax revenue in both 1990-91 and in a full year, (ii) the average gain per person on incomes of £5,000, £10,000, £15,000, £20,000, £30,000, £40,000 and £50,000 plus and (iii) the number of people paying tax;

(2) what would be the effect of indexing personal allowances (a) fully, (b) three quarters of full indexation, (c) half of full indexation, (d) quarter of what would be necessary for full indexation and (e) not indexing at all, on a one-earner family of four on an income of £5,000, £10,000, £15,000, £20,000, £30,000, £40,000 and £50,000.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Available information is given in the tables. All estimates assume independent taxation and that the basic rate limit is increased in line with personal allowances. Estimates in tables 1 to 3 are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional.

Inland Revenue (Scotland)

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue jobs are located in Scotland.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 12 February 1990]: About 6,500.

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many jobs are currently located at the Inland Revenue office in Cumbernauld; and what projection is made of staffing levels over the next five years.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 12 February 1990]: There are currently about 1,050 permanent posts at the Inland Revenue offices in Cumbernauld. Staffing levels over the next few years will depend on a number of factors, including levels of work and progress with computerisation projects.

Consumer Spending

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the figures for consumers' expenditure on rent, rates and water charges in table 1·6 of the "Monthly Digest of Statistics" include mortgage interest; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1979 in nominal and real terms the amount spent on local authority rents, other rents, rates, water and sewage charges, and mortgage interest.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Mortgage interest payments are not included in consumers' expenditure.

A split of local authority and other rents is not readily available. Estimates since 1979 of total rents paid, imputed rent (in respect of owner-occupation), and rates, water and sewage charges are given in the table in nominal and real terms. Figures for mortgage interest (gross of tax relief) are available only in nominal terms and to the nearest £ hundred million.

Rateable Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide for Grimsby the numbers and rateable values of houses with a rateable value not exceeding £100 and by (a) £50 steps to £400, (b) £100 steps to £800, (c) £800 to £1,000, (d) £1,000 to £1,500 and (e) over £1,500.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 15 February 1990]: This information could not be produced without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources.

German Reunification

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the likely cost to the United Kingdom of German reunification; and if he will give the amount and the years in which it is likely to arise.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 15 February 1990]: My right hon. Friend is monitoring the steps being taken on reunification closely. However, it is too early to assess whether there are any costs to the United Kingdom, and if so what they may be.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the effect of German monetary union on the nature and timing of European monetary union.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 15 February 1990]: It is far too soon to assess the implications on European monetary union of any possible monetary union between the Federal Republic of Germany and the German Democratic Republic.

ENERGY

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Wakeham: The Department of Energy has only one contract, with Securicor, for one post at one of its out-stations. The actual cost of this service is a matter of commercial confidentiality.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what initiatives the Energy Efficiency Office is taking to promote the use of combined heat and power.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department is actively promoting combined heat and power through the best practice programme. In particular my Energy Efficiency Office has planned a series of regional CHP marketing events to be held in 1990.

Sizewell B

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he next expects to meet the chairman-designate of Nuclear Electric to discuss the generation costs of Sizewell B; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman-designate of Nuclear Electric regularly to discuss a wide range of nuclear issues.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what contribution his Department will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. Wakeham: None.

Global Warming

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what action his Department is taking, through its various agencies, to combat global warming; and what is the total to be spent on this in the current year.

Mr. Wakeham: Much of the current research into global warming centres on ascertaining its detailed scientific basis which does not fall within the responsibility of my Department. But we have various programmes concerned with particular aspects of energy production and supply which are highly relevant to future reduction of emissions of carbon dioxide, which is the main greenhouse gas emitted by the non-transport energy sector. They are:

renewable forms of energy (1989-90 forecast expenditure £18 million)
nuclear R&D (£137 million) energy efficiency R&D (£8·9 million) clean coal combustion (£2·5 million).

The privatisation of the electricity supply industry will promote further efficiency (and hence lower emissions) in the supply of power; and the non-fossil fuel obligation will ensure that both nuclear and renewable technologies make appropriate contribution to reductions in emissions.

Officials from my Department have made, and are continuing to make, a strong input to the deliberations of the response strategies working group of the intergovernmental panel on climate change. The United Kingdom report for the energy and industry subgroup of the working group was recently published as Energy Paper 58 —"An Evaluation of Energy Related Greenhouse Gas Emissions and Measures to Ameliorate Them". A copy of that paper is in the Library of the House.

Departmental Energy Policy

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy to what extent environmental criteria determine energy policy within his Department.

Mr. Wakeham: My Department's general aims centre around ensuring that the nation's energy needs are met, both now and in the future, in a manner which makes best use of resources, within the framework of Government policy and of our international obligations. These considerations include the preservation of the environment, both at the national level and more widely. On a detailed level, my Department's research and development objectives (published in the "Annual Review of Government Funded R&D") include environmental acceptability as a specific criterion.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest assesssment of the potential energy savings from a programme of energy efficiency measures.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Across the economy, consumers could improve their energy efficiency by at least 20 per cent. through cost-effective measures.

Nuclear Fusion

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what research his Department is funding into nuclear fusion technology.

Mr. Baldry: The Department contributes to fusion research through the current Community fusion programme by supporting JET and the programme of work undertaken by the AEA.

Energy Paper Projections

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when the projections in Energy Paper 55 will be next updated.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The projections for the long-term contributions to energy supply from different renewables contained in Energy Paper 55 are kept under review. As the results from our renewable energy research programme become available they are fed into the regular reviews of the individual technologies that are undertaken. Since the publication of Energy Paper 55 our research has indicated that these published projections are still broadly appropriate given the uncertainty attached to such projections.

Electricity Code of Practice

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether persons who are (a) suspected of illegal extraction of electricity or (b) have been convicted of that offence are to be excluded from the code of practice on disconnections.

Mr. Baldry: The requirement for public electricity suppliers to prepare a code of practice on the payment of bills is designed to give guidance to all domestic consumers. The codes are to be drawn up by the public electricity suppliers in consultation with the consumers committees and approved by the Director General of Electricity Supply.

Combustion Plants Directive

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if it remains the policy of his Department to meet the targets set by the large combustion plants directive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The Government are determined to implement in full the EC large combustion plants directive.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the present programme for retrofitting power stations to ensure compliance with emission levels, as determined by the European Community directive on large combustion plants.

Mr. Baldry: The Government will be assessing the electricity generators' plans for complying with the EC large combustion plants directive. The retrofitting of the 4 GW Drax power station is already under way and further retrofits are in prospect.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what contribution he estimates low-sulphur coal can make to meeting the emission levels set by the European Community directive on large combustion plants; what steps are being taken to protect United Kingdom sources of low-sulphur coal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The burning of low-sulphur coal is an option open to the electricity generators as they prepare their plans to comply with the EC LCPD. The source of such coal will be a matter for the generators. The best protection of the United Kingdom coal industry is for it to produce reliable supplies which are competitive on the world market.

Amoco Application

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy on what date Amoco submitted its final annex B to the Department for the development of the Everest and Lomond gas fields and for the CATS transmission system; and in what time scale the application is likely to be decided.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No such development plan has yet been received by my Department.

Generation Prices

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are his Department's latest estimates, expressed in pence per kilowatt hour, of the price of advanced gas-cooled reactor generation and gas turbine electricity generation in stations of similar size.

Mr. Baldry: The prices paid for electricity from different generating stations are currently the subject of commercial negotiation between the area boards and the generators.

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the capacity expressed in megawatts of the current electricity interconnector between Scotland and England; on what time scale it is to be upgraded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on 6 February 1990 at column 585. I shall ask the chairman designate of the National Grid Company to write to the hon. Member.

Scottish Electricity

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the latest estimate from the Department of the likely requirement for each of the next 10 years of Scottish-generated electricity in the English grid.

Mr. Baldry: This is a commercial matter for the companies concerned and will depend on market prices in England and Wales and the prices at which the Scottish electricity companies are prepared to offer electricity.

Neptune Consortium

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the Neptune Consortium has sought approval from his Department for the development of North sea fields or transmission systems.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No, nor would I necessarily expect to receive such an application from a group which I understand is a prospective purchaser of gas from the North sea.

Mining Skills

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has met with, or received representations from, the company Mining Skills; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: No.

Coal

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will call for a report from British Coal on pricing policy on selling coal to the new power-generating companies.

Mr. Baldry: No. As I indicated to the House on 4 December at column 29, under the new contracts with National Power and PowerGen British Coal's prices will continue to fall each year in real terms. The details of these contracts are still being negotiated between the parties. In Scotland, British Coal is continuing to negotiate commercial terms for coal supply to the SSEB, in the light of the recent court judgments. British Coal's pricing policy is a commercial matter for the corporation.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will give details of the sulphur content in deep-mined coal in (1) Yorkshire, (2) Nottinghamshire, (3) Wales, (4) Scotland, (5) north-east England and (6) Derbyshire;

(2) if he will give details of the sulphur content in opencast-mined coal in (1) Yorkshire, (2) Nottinghamshire, (3) Wales, (4) Scotland, (5) north-east England and (6) Derbyshire;

(3) if he will list the private mining companies operating licensed mines in (1) Scotland, (2) Wales, (3) Yorkshire, (4) Derbyshire, (5) Nottinghamshire and (6) north-east England.

Mr. Baldry: These are matters for the British Coal Corporation.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the sulphur content in imported coal from (1) Colombia, (2) South Africa, (3) China, (4) Australia, (5) America, (6) Poland, (7) Belgium.

Mr. Baldry: Detailed information is not available centrally for all of these countries, but the bulk of coal imports, particularly from the United States and Australia, is of relatively low sulphur specification, primarily for use in the metallurgical industry. Steam coal imports from Colombia are also relatively low in sulphur.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last had discussions with private mining companies involved in opencast mining; and what he discussed.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend met representatives of the National Association of Licensed Opencast Operators on 7 December 1989. A range of issues affecting the prospects of the licensed mine sector were discussed.

Union of Democratic Mineworkers

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the total and source of financial contributions from public funds to the Union of Democratic Mineworkers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: My Department makes no payments to the Union of Democratic Mineworkers.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met representatives of the Union of Democratic Mineworkers; and what he discussed.

Mr. Baldry: I met the president of the Union of Democratic Mineworkers on 23 January to discuss a range of issues affecting the coal industry.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Single Market

76. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what studies Her Majesty's Government have undertaken with regard to the effect of the single European market in 1992 on trade with Asian and African developing nations.

Mr. Redwood: I understand that my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development has authorised payment towards the conduct of a study by the Overseas Development Institute on the effect of the completion of the internal market on developing countries. The study is scheduled for completion in July 1990. An interim briefing paper is already available.

My Department has also given careful consideration to the external implications of the single market programme. The removal of remaining trade barriers will make it easier for non-EC companies to do business across the Community. After 1992, Asian and African developing countries will continue to enjoy preferential access to the Community market under arrangements established by the Lomé convention and the generalised scheme of preferences.

Catalytic Converters

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set out the research and findings that have been given by Warren Springs laboratories on carbon dioxide emissions from vehicles with and without catalytic converters.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: WSL has made no direct comparisons between catalyst and non-catalyst versions of popular makes and models of cars. Catalyst-equipped versions of these vehicles have not been available.

Our experience of catalyst cars is confined to specialist imports and manufacturers' prototypes, with relatively new catalysts.

We will measure emissions from production catalyst cars as they become available in the vehicle parc.

Our experience with relatively new catalysts shows a conversion efficiency of 80-90 per cent. for CO, hydrocarbons and NO_x. WSL has done no work as yet on degradation of catalyst performance with age, in use.

In non-catalyst cars, the CO and HC emissions would ultimately be oxidized to CO_2 in the atmosphere over periods of several months. Catalysts effect this oxidation at the tailpipe immediately.

The difference in CO_2 emissions between models with or without catalysts therefore depends almost entirely on the respective fuel consumptions. At present, catalyst vehicles have to operate at relatively rich air-fuel ratios, leading to a fuel consumption penalty of the order of 10 per cent.

Financial Services Act

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received, and from whom, about section 62 of the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: My Department receives a considerable number of representations on various aspects of the Financial Services Act. In recent months some of these have referred to section 62A, which will be inserted by section 193 of the Companies Act 1989 and which will limit the rights of action conferred by section 62. The Department will shortly be consulting over its proposals for the implementation of section 62A.

Capital Flows

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a table showing the annual capital flows, including loans granted and loan interest repaid, between the United Kingdom and the five poorest countries by 1990 standards in Latin America, Africa and Asia since 1975.

Mr. Redwood: It is not possible to provide the information requested without disproportionate expenditure.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the individuals prosecuted by the Department of Trade and Industry for insider dealings since January 1979 and indicate how many prosecutions succeeded and how many failed.

Mr. Redwood: Insider dealing became a criminal offence in July 1980. Since then there have been prosecutions by the DTI (or by the Department of Trade) for insider dealing offences of 21 individuals where the case has been determined. Eleven were convicted, but the conviction of one of them was overturned on appeal. Information about these prosecutions is as follows:

Number of defendants	Security(ies) Involved	Date(s) of Offences or alleged Offences	Outcome
2	Joseph Stocks and Sons (Holdings) Ltd.	11 December 1980 and a day between 15 April 1980 and 11 December 1980	Both convicted
1	Harris and Sheldon Group plc	Day between 4 June 1981 and 18 June 1981	Convicted
2	Blockley plc	9 August 1982	Acquitted
1	Martin the Newsagent plc	6 March 1984 and 9 March 1984	Convicted
1	Thomson T-Line plc	5 December 1985	Acquitted
1	Reardon-Smith Line plc	28 May 1985	Convicted
1	AE plc and Cadbury Schweppes plc	3 November 1986 and 14 October 1986	Convicted
1	The British and Commonwealth Shipping Co. plc and Steel Brothers Holdings plc	14 October 1986 and 14 November 1986	Convicted
1	Wordplex plc	30 April 1987	Acquitted on Appeal

Number of defendants	Security(ies) Involved	Date(s) of Offences or alleged Offences	Outcome
2	Mercantile House Holdings plc	5 January 1987	One convicted, case against the other withdrawn
3	Press Tools plc	5 August 1987	All Acquitted
1	Piccadilly Radio plc	19 December 1988	Convicted
1	Wheway plc	10 November 1987	Acquitted
1	Centreway Industries plc	3 July 1987, 9 July 1987, 29 July 1987, 30 July 1987	Acquitted
1	Ealing Electro-Optics plc	between 20 June 1988 and 20 July 1988	Acquitted
1	Minet Holdings plc	25 November 1987	Convicted

Prosecutions have also been concluded in the case of five other individuals. One of those prosecutions was by the procurator fiscal, two were by the Director of Public Prosecutions and two by the Crown prosecution service.

Insolvency

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 21 December 1989, Official Report, column 393, the insolvency service or any other Government agency collects information about the going concern qualifications received by failed companies.

Mr. Redwood: No such information is collected either by the insolvency service or any other Government agency.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will bring forward legislation to clarify and increase the effectiveness of the company rescue procedures in the Insolvency Act 1986, in particular to reduce the need to go to court for guidance on interpretation.

Mr. Redwood: I have no plans at present to do so, though the insolvency service monitors the effectiveness of current insolvency legislation.

As is the case with new legislation, particularly where new concepts, such as the administration procedure, are introduced, precedents are established by early court decisions. As time goes on the need for court involvement is reduced.

Companies Acts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has taken steps to encourage companies to disclose non-financial and qualitative information.

Mr. Redwood: The Companies Act 1985 requires companies to disclose a range of such information in the directors' report. The Government favour any disclosure of such information by companies which goes beyond the requirements of the Companies Acts when companies consider that this would be helpful.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will consider legislation to amend the Companies Acts to require the directors' reports of large companies to explain the safety of their products;

(2) if he will consider legislation to amend the Companies Acts to require the directors' reports of large companies to explain the steps taken to conserve energy;

(3) if he will introduce legislation to amend the Companies Acts to require the directors' reports of large companies to detail the steps taken by the company to control pollution;

(4) whether he will consider legislation to amend the Companies Acts to require the directors' reports of large companies to state the amount spent on employee training;

(5) whether he will introduce legislation to amend the Companies Acts to require the directors' reports of large companies to list steps taken to conserve energy;

(6) whether he will seek to amend the Companies Acts to require the directors' reports of large companies to explain the steps taken to enhance employment opportunities for women;

(7) if he will consider legislation to amend the Companies Acts to require the directors' reports of large companies to explain action which the company has taken to conserve Britain's natural resources.

Mr. Redwood: No. It would be unreasonably burdensome to require all large companies to provide such information. Companies are best placed to decide, in the light of their individual circumstances, whether this information is likely to be of interest to their members and other users of their reports and accounts.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to amend the Companies Acts to give all employees of large companies a statutory right to receive a copy of the company's annual report and accounts.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to amend the Companies Acts so as to require the directors of large companies to file details of any information which they pass to their brokers.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will take steps to amend the Companies Acts to require directors' reports of large companies to explain the steps taken to safeguard and promote health and safety of their work force.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to exercise his power to make regulations under paragraph 10 of schedule 7 to the Companies Act 1985.

Invisible and Visible Trade

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a table showing (a) the net invisible trade and (b) the net visible trade between the United Kingdom and the five poorest nations, by 1990 standards, in Latin America, in Africa and in Asia since 1975.

Mr. Redwood: Information on invisible trade with individual countries is not available. The information requested on the balance of visible trade between the United Kingdom and the poorest nations in South America, Africa and Asia is given in the table:

Enterprise Initiative

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will supply figures for the number of firms that have applied for and obtained subsidised consultancies under the enterprise initiative (a) for the period up to July 1989 and (b) for the period from July 1989 to date.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is as follows:

	13 January 1988 to 30 June 1989	1 July 1989 to 2 February 1990
Applications received	29,863	12,786
Completed projects	6,572	6,803

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will supply figures for the number of firms, by standard planning region, that have applied for and obtained subsidised consultancies under the enterprise initiative.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is as follows, as at 2 February 1990:

DTI Region[1]	Applications received	Completed projects
North East	2,168	626
North West	6,075	2,264
Yorkshire and Humberside	3,929	1,389

South East	10,597	2,840
Scotland	2,834	1,240
Wales	2,304	773
Total	42,649	13,375

[1] Data is collected for DTI Regions and for Scotland and Wales.

Bookmaking Industry

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if any scrutiny is under consideration of the role of the bookmaking industry in respect of the control of shareholding in the company Satellite Information Services through the introduction of approved shareholdings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 15 February 1990]: No such scrutiny is under consideration.

Footwear Industry

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if the British Government have put any proposals to the European Community in discussions on the current general agreement on tariffs and trade round concerning the footwear industry;

(2) what restrictions on footwear imports he is pressing for in the current general agreement on tariffs and trade round; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 15 February 1990]: The Government's objectives in the current round of GATT negotiations are to expand trade, not restrict it. We are not, therefore, pressing for restrictions on imports of footwear. We have been in regular contact with the footwear industry over the past year about the issues raised in the current negotiations and have passed to the European Commission the details the industry has given us of tariff and non-tariff barriers in Third-world countries. We will make every effort to ensure that these are properly addressed as the detailed phase of the negotiations begins this year.

Personal Data

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to amend the Data Protection Act to ensure that companies holding personal data for the purpose of crime prevention are not prosecuted for contravening the Act because theirs is a purpose for which such companies were not so registered.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans to do so.

HEALTH

Bonuses

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is the practice for health authority managers to be paid performance-related bonus, following revenue-saving unit closures.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The assessment for performance-related pay will take account of all the objectives set for the manager concerned, improving the use of an authority's resources or developing new patterns of service.

Blood Transfusion

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what volume of blood was donated via the blood transfusion service in (a) 1989, (b) 1984 and (c) 1979;

(2) what volume of blood was imported for use in the National Health Service in (a) 1989, (b) 1984 and (c) 1979; and if he will indicate which countries supplied the imports, giving percentages;

(3) what was the volume of blood used by the National Health Service in (a) 1989, (b) 1984 and (c) 1979.

Mr. Freeman: The available information is given in the tables. No whole blood was imported for use in the National Health Service during the years 1979, 1984 and 1989.

Urban Development

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide estimates showing for each financial year from 1987-88 to 1990-91 the amount of actual or planned expenditure designed to support the urban programme.

Mr. Freeman: Capital funds allocated to health authorities in support of the urban programme are:

	£ million
1987-88	11·5
1988-89	11·3
1989-90	11·2
1990-91	11·0

Figures are at cash for each year.

Shropshire Health Authority

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of (a) out-patients, (b) day-patients and (c) in-patients in Shropshire health authority's area in 1978-79 and 1988-89.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested for 1978-79 and 1988-89 is given in the table:

Patients treated, NHS hospitals, Shropshire district health authority, 1978 and 1988-89

	1978	1988-89

General Practitioners

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been removed from general practitioner lists in the last six months.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State gave the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms. Harman) on 8 January at column 508.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to make Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease a notifiable disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We have no plans to do so. The study to be conducted by Dr. R. G. Will—I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 10 January at column 665—is considered to be a more reliable method of monitoring the incidence of this disease.

Abortion

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the numbers and percentages of abortions performed on pregnancies under statutory grounds 2 (alone) and 3 (with any other) for each week of gestation from 18 weeks to 28 weeks.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table:

Number, and percentage of all abortions, performed under the Abortion Act 1967, by gestation weeks, and statutory grounds[1] 2 (alone) and 3 (with or without 2) on residents and non-residents of England and Wales, 1988

26	9	—	—	—	—
27	7	—	—	—	—
28	—	—	—	—	—

[1]Statutory grounds.

Notes:

1. The continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk to the life of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated.
2. The continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk of injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated.
3. The continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk or injury to the physical or mental health of any existing child(ren) in the family of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated.
4. There is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped.
5. To save the life of the pregnant mother.
6. To prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the child.

Ambulance Stations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many official visits he has paid to ambulance stations in the last 100 days.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: None. However, I visited Northumbria ambulance service headquarters on 24 January 1990.

British Medical Association

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the British Medical Association to discuss the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have had no meetings with the British Medical Association specifically about the National Health Service and Community Care Bill since it was laid before the House. Discussions about our proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients" last took place on 18 October 1989. I have had recent meetings with the BMA on the pay, terms and conditions of its members.

Health Provision, North-West

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to respond to the letter of 17 November 1989 of the hon. Member for Stretford requesting a meeting to discuss health provision in the north-west.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State replied to the hon. Member on 29 January 1990.

Operations (Cancellations)

Dame Elaine Kellett-Bowman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many theatre sessions were cancelled in the Lancaster health authority in each of the last five years for which figures are available in (a) urology and (b) orthopaedics; and how many of these cancellations were due to (i) non-attendance of the consultant and (ii) non-attendance of the patient.

Mr. Freeman: Information requested about theatre sessions is given in the table:

Cancelled operating theatre sessions in the Lancaster health authority

	Urology	Trauma/ Orthopaedics
1985-86	5	27
1986-87	7	52
1987-88	10	58
1988-89	11	66
1989-90[1]	7	69

[1] Part year.

The reasons for the cancellation of theatre sessions are extremely varied and no information is held centrally to distinguish, for example, cancellation resulting from the upgrading of theatre facilities from the non-availability of consultants or non-attendance of patients.

Head Lice

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what evidence he has received about the increase of head lice among schoolchildren; and what advice his Department has issued to district health authorities on this matter;

(2) what evidence he has received about the increase of head lice among schoolchildren; and what advice his Department has issued to local education authorities on this matter.

Mr. Freeman: Information about the incidence of head lice infestation is not available in the form requested. We have the following information on infestations identified by school nurses:

Health Surveillance by Nurses: Maintained Nursery, Primary, Secondary and Special Schools.

	1984	1985	1986	1987-88
Number of Infestations[1] (England)
Number of pupils examined (thousands)	9,401·9	7,288·2	6,089·6	4,546·3
Number of pupils found to be infested (thousands)	132·1	105·5	94·6	91·4
Infested pupils as a percentage of the maintained school population	1·74	1·42	1·29	1·27

[1] Infestations include head lice, vermin, scabies, ringworm, impetigo and verrucae

Responsibility for the control of head lice infestation amongst school children lies with the individual health authorities through co-operation between the school health services and local education authorities.

It is for them to determine the policy for dealing with this problem in the light of local circumstances. Many have stopped routine head inspections and are now pursuing approaches which, for example, combine selective inspections with far more emphasis on health education programmes and advice to parents and children on managing the problem. The Department issued advice on the control of communicable diseases including Pediculosis (head lice) in 1977. This guidance document is currently being revised. The Health Education Authority has also issued guidance.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the number of unfilled vacancies for speech therapists in Greater London; and what steps are being taken to fill these vacancies.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available centrally in the form requested.

AIDS

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy that any consideration he gives to applications for grant funding from other organisations providing support, care, counselling and education to people with HIV or AIDS will not prejudice his Department's continuing support for the work of the Terrence Higgins Trust.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department awarded the Terrence Higgins Trust a grant of £450,000 for the financial year 1989-90 towards the administrative costs of its health education, drugs education, counselling support and buddy and helper cell programmes. We have agreed in principle to continue grant aid up to a maximum of £450,000 for 1990-91. In determining the final level of grant for the coming financial year, our primary consideration will be the trust's record of achievement in the current year.

General Medical Council

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the fees incurred by an individual bringing a case to the General Medical Council.

Mr. Freeman: Individual complainants are required to provide the GMC with a sworn statement of evidence in support of their complaint and have to pay the legal fees involved. For any subsequent disciplinary action the GMC offers complainants the services of its solicitor free of charge. Complainants who choose to use their own solicitors will normally be reimbursed part of their legal costs by the GMC.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the procedures operated by the General Medical Council if a general practitioner is referred to the council by both an individual and his Department.

Mr. Freeman: In such circumstances, I understand that the GMC will normally take action on the referral from the Department which contains the evidence which has already been established against a doctor.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the procedure for ordering a second hearing of a case before the General Medical Council.

Mr. Freeman: Statutory Instrument 1988 No. 2255 governs the procedures to be adopted by the GMC in respect of disciplinary hearings. As the council is responsible for implementing these procedures I suggest the information requested is sought from it.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department has a policy of giving way to an individual when both wish to proceed with a case to the General Medical Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: There is a long-standing arrangement under which the Department sends the General Medical Council information on cases which have a bearing on a practitioner's professional conduct. The Department does not act as a complainant or make a formal reference to the General Medical Council—it merely passes on the information in its possession. Any action taken on this information is a matter entirely for the General Medical Council. The Department is not a party to that action.

Regional Allocations

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to make a substantive reply to the question from the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central tabled for priority written answer on 30 January, to which he gave a holding answer.

Mr. Freeman: I replied to the hon. Member on 15 February.

NHS Reform

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications he has received for the establishment of fund-holding practices from general practitioner practices in Manchester.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Formal applications cannot be made until there is legislative provision for fund-holding. Practices have been invited to return forms to their RHAs registering their interest in fund-holding. We do not have details of the numbers of interested practices in individual FPCs.

North Western RHA

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultants now work in the North Western regional health authority and the South Manchester health authority; and how many did so in 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of hospital medical and dental consultants, in the North Western regional health authority, at 30 September 1979 and 1988, were 1,078 and 1,284 respectively.

Details of consultants working in district health authorities are not available centrally.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent so far (a) in Manchester and (b) nationally by (i) his Department, (ii) district health authorities and (iii) family practitioner committees to prepare for the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook) on 14 February at columns 308-9.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the number of junior hospital doctors working a one-in-three rota.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Recent reports from health authorities indicate that at September 1989 some 5,103 junior doctors (around 22 per cent. of the total) were on rotas of one in three with prospective cover or worse. That number is planned to fall to 4,230 by September 1990, of which some 2,942 (around one in eight) are on rotas which are also considered locally to be onerous. "Prospective cover" means contractual cover for the annual and sick leave of colleagues.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been paid by the London ambulance service to the Metropolitan police for costs arising from the present dispute in each week, from the commencement to the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The sums paid by the London ambulance service to the Metropolitan police in respect of the costs arising from the ambulance dispute are as follows:

Period covered	Cost (£)
23-24 October 1989	131,566
Week ending
12 November 1989	537,235
19 November 1989	601,063
26 November 1989	525,724
3 December 1989	471,856
10 December 1989	504,854

Later information on a weekly basis is not currently available, but expenditure is continuing at roughly the same level.

Myeloid Leukaemia

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will update the list of the 20 areas with the highest incidence of myeloid leukaemia contained in his answer to the hon. Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) of 15 April 1986, Official Report, columns 371-72.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not immediately available in the form requested but will be extracted for local authority district areas for 1988. I will let the hon. Member have the results as soon as they are available.

NHS Funding

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the regional health authorities in rank order according to the percentage of National Health Service money (a) allocated to the regions in 1989-90 and (b) that will be allocated in 1990-91 using the new formula.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 15 February 1990]: The table gives the ranking of each regional health authority according to the percentage of National Health Service money allocated in 1989-90 and 1990-91:

Region	Ranking 1989-90	Ranking 1990-91
Northern	10	10
Yorkshire	6	6
Trent	2	2
East Anglian	14	14
North West Thames	7	7

South West Thames	8	8
Wessex	11	11
Oxford	13	13
South Western	9	9
West Midlands	1	1
Mersey	12	12
North Western	3	3

Notes:

1. 1989-90 is based on allocations for services provided in the region using the resource allocation working party formula (RAWP).
2. 1990-91 is based on the allocations for resident population, calculated using the new allocation formula, adjusted for the effect of cross boundary flows, so that they are on a comparable basis to 1989-90.
3. Both 1989-90 and 1990-91 are before the additions for SIFT supra-regional services and other special additions specific to individual regions.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the regional health authorities in rank order according to the growth money (a) they received in 1989-90 and (b) will receive on current assumptions in 1990-91.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 15 February 1990]: The table gives the ranking for each regional health authority according to the amount of cash increase over the previous baseline for the region, allocated for 1989-90 and 1990-91:

Region	Ranking 1989-90	Ranking 1990-91

Notes

1. 1989-90 is based on the allocations for services provided in the Region using the resource allocation working party formula (RAWP).

2. 1990-91 is based on the allocations for resident population using the new allocation formula, adjusted for the effect of cross boundary flows, so that they are on a comparable basis to 1989-90.

3. Both 1989-90 and 1990-91 exclude the additions for SIFT supra-regional services and other special additions specific to individual regions.

SCOTLAND

Rateable Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will provide for the districts of Stirling, Perth and Kinross and Ross, Cromarty and Skye the number and rateable value of houses and so on, immediately prior to the introduction of the poll tax with a rateable value not exceeding £100 and by (a) £50 steps to £400, (b) £100 steps to £800, (c) £800 to £1,000, (d) £1,000 to £1,500 and (e) over £1,500.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information is not available in the form requested. The available information is given in the table:

Green Pound

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes have been made over the past 12 months in the green pound arrangements for Scottish farmers; and what estimate he has made of the effect this has had on their standard of living.

Mr. Rifkind: In April 1989, as part of the price-fixing settlement, we obtained a substantial devaluation of the green pound, reducing United Kingdom monetary gaps generally by half, and in the case of beef removing the gap completely. The devaluations were estimated to boost Scottish farm incomes by between £15 and £20 million in a full year.

In January this year an EMS realignment created new negative monetary gaps for some currencies, including sterling. Under agreed rules, such gaps are removed automatically and the United Kingdom will benefit from a devaluation of about 1·5 percentage points, which will add about £6·5 million to Scottish farm incomes in a full year.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he proposes to take to reduce the disadvantage to Scottish farmers as a result of the current levels of the green pound and interest rates.

Mr. Rifkind: The disadvantage to Scottish and other United Kingdom farmers will be overcome by reducing monetary gaps through devaluation of the green pound in the current price-fixing negotiations. We are seeking a substantial devaluation as part of our commitment to remove all monetary gaps by 1992. The high level of interest rates is necessary to control inflation which, if unchecked, would harm the farming industry as much as other sectors of the economy.

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Rifkind: Information relating to the value of current contracts with private security companies and the number of staff employed on these contracts are matters of contractual and commercial confidentiality which it would not be proper to disclose.

The total value of all contracts awarded during the period 1984-85 to 1988-89 is show at column 1, and details of the private security companies with which contracts are currently in operation are set out at column 2:

1. Year	Total value of all contracts (inclusive of VAT) £
1984-85	68,384
1985-86	70,468
1986-87	261,306

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

House Prices

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will estimate the number of houses owned by Glasgow district council which have a market value of less than £10,000;

(2) if he will estimate the number of houses owned by Scottish local authorities which have a negative market value.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no basis on which to make such an estimate.

Slumberdown Limited

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what regional development grants or other industrial assistance have been paid in the past six years to Slumberdown Limited, or its parent company the Walter Alexander Group, in respect of its premises at Broxburn; and what was the value of each such payment.

Mr. Rifkind: One payment of £128,945 of regional development grant has been made.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial allocations he has made to health boards for 1990-91.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has allocated £2,061·498 million to health boards in Scotland to meet their gross recurrent expenditure commitments on hospitals and community health services in 1990-91. This figure includes £89·891 million allocated for specific commitments including NHS review, national cardiac surgery services, AIDS, nurse training and pay review body awards. After expected income is taken into account, the net cash allocations to individual health boards are as follows:

Health Board	Recurrent Expenditure (net) £ million
Argyll and Clyde	142·956
Ayr and Arran	111·671
Borders	32·801
Dumfries and Galloway	54·062
Fife	103·308
Forth Valley	96·487
Grampian	184·696
Greater Glasgow	503·944
Highland	77·960
Lanarkshire	164·513
Lothian	319·217
Orkney	6·076
Shetland	7·214
Tayside	184·386
Western Isles	10·646
	1,999·937

A further £36·511 million will be distributed during the year for specific initiatives to tackle waiting lists, for the breast cancer screening service and other specific initiatives.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Old-Age Programmes

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a list showing expenditure on programmes for old age as a proportion of gross domestic product at market prices for European Community member states for each year since 1983.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest statistics available were published in June 1989 in issue 1989/2 of Eurostat's "Rapid Reports on Population and Social Conditions", a copy of which is in the Library.

Income Support

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when income support was increased to fund the balance of community charge after rebate, and by how much.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 5 February 1990 at column 524.

Students (Benefits)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to announce his proposals for the withdrawal of social security benefits from students.

Mr. Scott: It is Government policy that full-time students should be funded from one source—the educational maintenance system. To this end we propose to withdraw entitlement to unemployment benefit, income support and housing benefit from the majority of students from the start of the next academic year in September. The regulations to give effect to these proposals have today been referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee for consultation. The draft regulations describe those students in vulnerable groups who will retain eligibility to income support and housing benefit. They also set out the proposed treatment in the income-related benefits of top-up loans and payments from the access funds.

Bereavement

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will consider amending social security regulations to exempt recently bereaved claimants from the actively seeking work provision for a specified period.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We do not consider that a change to the legislation is required. In determining whether a person has taken reasonable steps in any week to actively seek employment, the regulations require an adjudication officer to have regard to all the circumstances of the case. This provision allows an adjudication officer to take into account exceptional circumstances, like bereavement, in determining whether the actively seeking work condition has been satisfied.

Transitional Protection

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support claimants are in receipt of a transitional addition at present; and how many were in receipt before the April 1989 uprating.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is estimated that next month about 485,000 income support claimants will be in receipt of normal statutory transitional protection. The corresponding number immediately before the April 1989 uprating was estimated at 1·2 million.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has on the change in benefit income to claimants following the introduction of the transitional protection arrangements currently in practice.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: As a result of the transitional protection arrangements noone who has been continuously on benefit since April 1989 in unchanged circumstances will have suffered a reduction in benefit income in cash terms. We estimate that 95 per cent. of claimants on income support either saw an increase in that benefit income in October, as a result of the restructuring of premiums for older and disabled pensioners, or will see such an increase in April 1990 as a result of the general uprating.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to amend current transitional protection regulations.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We amended the regulations as recently as December 1989. We have no plans for further amendment.

Industrial Injuries and Adjudication

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a breakdown of the figure given in the Official Report, 7 February, column 978, concerning claims made under regulation 13 of the Social Security (Industrial Injuries and Adjudication) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1986, by geographical region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The geographical distribution of new claims and review applications made under regulation 13(2) of the Social Security (Industrial Injuries and Adjudication) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1986 is estimated to be as follows:

Region[1]	New claims and review applications
North Eastern	15,000
London North	300
Wales and South West	800
Midlands	800
North Western	5,500
Scotland	2,300
London South	1,300
Great Britain	26,000

[1] Standard social security regions.

Note:
Based on special returns received from local offices up to 30 November 1989 extrapolated to the end of December 1989.

Personal Allowances

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give a table for the income support personal allowances for (a) a single person aged 18-24 years, (b) a single person aged 25 years plus and (c) a couple without children, showing (i) the illustrative figures in the technical annex to the 1985 White Paper, (ii) the illustrative figures uprated by the ROSSI index since then, (iii) the amount provided to compensate for the exclusion of 20 per cent. at rates from housing benefit and (iv) the personal allowances for April 1990.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is in the table:

	Aged 18-24 single £	Aged 25+ single £	Couple, no children £
Technical annex to 1985 White Paper	24·00	30·60	48·00
Uprated by ROSSI[1]	28·28	36·06	56·56
Help towards 20 per cent. domestic rates from April 1988	1·00	1·30	1·30
Help towards 20 per cent. community charge from April 1989[2]	1·15	1·30	2·30
April 1990 rates	28·80	36·70	57·60

[1] Based on movement in the index of retail prices (less housing) between November 1985 and December 1989 (the latest date for which the index is available).

[2] These amounts were introduced to coincide with the introduction of the community charge in Scotland in April 1989. They replaced the amounts previously included to help towards 20 per cent. of domestic rates but continue to provide help towards domestic rates for people in England and Wales.

Disability

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people are currently in receipt of (a) attendance allowance and (b) severe disablement allowance;

(2) how many people are in receipt of attendance allowance at (a) the higher rate and (b) the lower rate; and what is the average period for which attendance allowance is paid.

Mr. Scott: The estimated number receiving these benefits in 1989-90 is set out in the following table:

	Higher rate	Lower rate	Total	Average length of award
Attendance allowance	320,000	475,000	795,000	3 years
Severe disablement allowance	—	—	265,000	—

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently in receipt of (a) invalidity pension and (b) invalidity allowance; and how many were disqualified from each in the past year.

Mr. Scott: At 2 April 1988, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 1,047,500 people in receipt of invalidity pension. Of these 509,100 were also getting invalidity allowance (IVA) and in addition there are 360,300 people who do not receive invalidity allowance because the rate of additional pension or guaranteed minimum pension they receive exceeds the rate of invalidity allowance which would have been payable. I regret that information on the number of people disqualified from invalidity benefit is not available.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently in receipt of invalid care allowance.

Mr. Scott: The estimated average number receiving invalid care allowance in 1989-90 is 110,000.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are in receipt of (a) the disability premium, (b) the severe disability premium and (c) the disabled child premium.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In May 1988, the latest date for which this information is available, the number of claimants receiving each of these premiums was as follows:

	Numbers
(a) Disability premium	248,000
(b) Severe disability premium	35,000
(c) Disabled child premium	14,000

Source: Annual Statistical Inquiry.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have been disqualified from receiving severe disablement allowance in the last year; and for what reasons.

Mr. Scott: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people receive disability benefit; how many receive this benefit at the main disability percentage levels; and how many have been disqualified from receipt of this benefit in the past year.

Mr. Scott: In April 1988, the latest available date, 189,000 people received disablement benefit. The distribution of assessed levels of disability is as follows:

Percentage assessment	Number of claimants
1 to 19	25,000
20 to 24	66,000
25 to 34	47,000
35 to 44	22,000
45 to 54	11,000
55 to 64	7,000
65 to 74	4,000
75 to 84	2,000
85 to 94	1,000
95 to 100	4,000
TOTAL	189,000

Figures on numbers of disqualifications are not available.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are in receipt of reduced earnings allowance.

Mr. Scott: Including previous recipients of special hardship allowance, some 150,000 people are estimated to be recipients of reduced earnings allowance.

Social Fund

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of applicants for a social fund loan have received money advice (a) nationally, (b) regionally and (c) in each local Department of Social Security office area.

Mr. Scott: Information at national and regional levels in the period 1 April 1989 to 31 January 1990 is given in the table. Information relating to each local office could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Number of money advice interviews as percentage of loan applications processed per cent.

National	2·3
London North	1·2
London South	1·5
Midlands	2·4
North East	1·8
North West	3·9
Scotland	2·1
Wales and South West	2·6

Self-Employed People

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what numbers paid national insurance contributions as self-employed people in each of the years 1979 to 1989.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Fife, Central (Mr. McLeish) on 16 November 1989 at column 442. Agreed figures for 1988-89 are still not available.

Private Rents

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what guidance has been issued to local authorities on the matter of poll tax and inclusive private rents;

(2) what subsidy arrangements have been made for local authorities where housing benefit payments are to be made on the basis of inclusive rents becoming the new net rent after the abolition of rates.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Guidance on the subsidy arrangements for community charge benefit and other matters connected with inclusive private rents was contained in circular HB/CCB (90)2, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance has been given to rent officers in reaching determinations of eligible rents under the housing benefit regulations.

Mr. Chope: I have been asked to reply.

The Rent Officers (Additional Functions) Order 1989 lays down the basis on which rent officers assess the rents paid by, and accommodation occupied by, private tenants claiming housing benefit. Advice on how rent officers might approach this task—particularly in circumstances where no direct market evidence is available—was included in a study of the private rented housing market commissioned by the Department from the consultants Price Waterhouse. Copies of that report were circulated to rent officers and placed in the Library in February 1989.

Young People

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of young people affected by each change listed in the reply to the hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett), Official Report, 27 July, columns 878-84, and the cost or saving incurred by his Department as a result.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 15 December 1989]: The cessation of entitlement to income support for most 16 and 17-year-olds in September 1988 was estimated to have affected approximately 100,000 young people and reduced expenditure by around £100 million. The vast majority of young people who chose to participate in YTS received a training allowance at a rate exceeding income support. The additional costs of these allowances, and the cost of training provision, were borne by the Department of Employment's Training Agency. At the same time, the extension of eligibility to child benefit during the child benefit extension period affected around 43,000 young people at a cost of £4·85 million a year including the consequential effects on dependency additions. The overall cost of increasing personal allowances for income-related benefits by 50p above inflation from April 1989, including increases for children aged under 16, was estimated at around £70 million in a full year. In July 1989 extra help was provided for 16 and 17-year-olds receiving income support who have to live independently, and all those receiving housing benefit only, affecting around 17,000 young people at a cost of £3·7 million a year.

Further information could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are his best estimates of the number of applications for deductions from income support for poll tax arrears in 1990-91, the number which will be enforced; the costs of servicing each deduction, and the staffing implications of the increased workload.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 5 February 1990]: The Department expects that in any year in England, Wales and Scotland some 850,000 applications for deductions from income support may be made in respect of the community charge, though the number will depend on the extent to which authorities choose to recover unpaid charges using this particular method. We expect about 700,000 of the applications to be enforced. The average annual cost to the Department of servicing each application is estimated to be £26. The total staffing requirement in Great Britain is now estimated to be approximately 470 posts. People in receipt of income support are entitled to maximum community charge benefit which reduces their community charge bill by 80 per cent.

Income support levels were adjusted in April last year to include help towards the average minimum contribution to the community charge that recipients would be expected to pay.

The amounts included were £1·15 a week for single people aged 18 to 24, £1·30 a week for single people aged 25 or over and £2·30 a week for couples. These amounts form part of the overall benefit levels which will be uprated from April this year.

Spending Power

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish tables using the assumptions in his answer to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 22 June 1988, Official Report, columns 575-80, but using expenditure and benefit figures appropriate for families in Coventry, together with a column showing the extent of the differences resulting from the April 1988 social security changes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 6 February 1990]: The information requested is set out in the tables.

The tables use the methods and assumptions contained in the technical annex to the 1985 White Paper "Reform of Social Security" and in "Impact of the Reformed Structure of Income-Related Benefits" published in 1987. They illustrate the impact of the changes on claimants in April 1988, by comparing the results of applying the old and new benefits rules (with an assumed uprating for the former) to the personal circumstances of a sample of cases.

As indicated in the reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 22 June 1988, the result is a hypothetical comparison with what people might have got under the old system. The passage of time, and subsequent changes to the benefit scheme render such comparisons increasingly hypothetical and unrealistic.

It should be noted that, although the comparisons are based on average local authority housing charges in Coventry, they do not necessarily reflect either the wide variety of rents and domestic rates that people in the borough actually pay or real families' circumstances and their housing arrangements.

Finally, the comparisons take no account of the housing benefit transitional cash protection announced on 27 April 1988.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sanctions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all those countries against which the United Kingdom is operating sanctions, the sanctions in each case and the countries or organisations requesting such sanctions.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have implemented a variety of restrictive measures on our trade and other relations with a number of countries. These include:

(a) controls through COCOM on the export of high technology equipment which could be used for military as well as civil purposes to a number of proscribed destinations, including to the Soviet Union, eastern Europe and China. COCOM comprises the NATO countries, less Iceland, as well as Japan and Australia.

(b) restrictive measures against South Africa. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) on 15 February 1990 for a list of the measures adopted by the UK in conjunction with the European Community. We have also agreed with the Commonwealth a number of measures. These are:

(i) The strict enforcement of the mandatory arms embargo against South Africa;

(ii) A re-affirmation of the Gleneagles declaration of 1977, which called upon Commonwealth members to take every practical step to discourage sporting contacts with South Africa;

(iii) Agreement upon and commendation to other Governments of the adoption of the following further economic measures against South Africa:

(a) A ban on all new Government loans to the Government of South Africa and their agencies;

(b) A readiness to take unilaterally what action may be possible to preclude the import of Krugerrands;

(c) No Government funding for trade missions to South Africa or for participation in exhibitions and trade fairs in South Africa;

(d) A ban on the sale and export of computer equipment capable of use by South African military forces, police or security forces;

(e) A ban on new contracts for the sale and export of nuclear goods, materials and technology to South Africa;

(f) A ban on the sale and export of oil to South Africa;

(g) A strict and rigorously controlled embargo on imports of arms, ammunition, military vehicles and paramilitary equipment from South Africa;

(h) An embargo on all military co-operation with South Africa;

(i) The discouragement of all cultural and scientific events except where these contribute towards the ending of apartheid or have no possible role in promoting it;

(j) A voluntary ban on the promotion of tourism to South Africa;

(k) The implementation of any European Community decision to ban the import of coal, iron and steel and of gold coins from South Africa.

(c) Restrictions not aimed at particular countries, such as those of the missile technology control regime, resulting from our commitment to nuclear non-proliferation, and controls on the export of material used in production of chemical weapons.

(d) Special restrictions are applied to arms exports to certain countries, for example, in the middle east, reflecting our wish not to fuel or prolong conflicts in the region, and our determination to take a firm line on state-sponsored terrorism.

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the result of discussions held between his Department and representatives of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, over the number of officials allowed residence in each country.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have agreed to work towards a state of relations where limitations on numbers will no longer be necessary. For the moment each side will keep its own numbers within agreed overall limits. A review of progress will be held in due course. We do not foresee difficulties for either side in ensuring adequate representation, both official, and as regards journalists or business men.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave. Authority does, however, already exist to allow staff special leave to cope with unforeseen domestic difficulties, for example, at the time of the birth of a second or subsequent child. This discretion has occasionally been exercised.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution his Department will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are no NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March. A Norwegian national exercise, designated "Cold Winter", is planned to take place in which forces from several members of the Alliance, including the United Kingdom, have been invited to participate. The FCO, in accordance with the provisions of the 1986 Stockholm agreement, notified all CSCE states on 30 January of the United Kingdom's participation in the amphibious landing part of this exercise.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the continued production of chemical weapons by any signatory nation to a chemical weapons convention.

Mr. Waldegrave: As my replies to the questions from the hon. Member for Western Isles on 31 January and 11 December last year noted, the draft chemical weapons convention under negotiation in Geneva would prohibit the production of chemical weapons immediately upon the convention's entry into force. This provision has been agreed by all states participating in the negotiations, including the United Kingdom.

Hong Kong

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what system of control the authorities in Hong Kong have in place to ensure up-to-date information on ivory stocks is duly recorded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: All holdings of ivory over 5 kg must be licensed and are being entered on the Hong Kong authorities' computer. Ivory may be traded between licensed holders and their total stocks are adjusted accordingly on the computer. Any increases in ivory holdings require further licences. Stocks are subject to surprise checks to ensure that these procedures are complied with.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps his Department has taken, and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Cope: For unclassified but sensitive systems, the Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office follow the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA) guidance covering all aspects of IT security. CCTA advice is based on analysis of security risks, requirements and the identification of countermeasures using the CCTA risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM). The application of CRAMM computer security is kept under continuous review by CCTA and the Northern Ireland Departments.

Following a recent review of all unclassified but sensitive systems a number of additional security countermeasures have been introduced and action plans have been drawn up to apply further improvements where appropriate.

In addition the central information systems division, department of finance and personnel provides central support, advice and training on CRAMM to information technology staff in the Northern Ireland Departments. More stringent conditions apply to classified systems.

Alanbrooke Road, Belfast

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost of the measures taken to close Alanbrooke road in Belfast.

Mr. Cope: The cost of providing the physical security measures at Alanbrooke road is a matter for Short Bros. plc.

University Students

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many undergraduates there are from (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the Republic of Ireland at each of the two universities in Northern Ireland.

Supplies (Purchase)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance has been given to Northern Ireland bodies funded by his Department to source materials and equipment from Northern Ireland suppliers prior to making purchases from companies in the Irish Republic.

Mr. Cope: Northern Ireland Departments are required to comply with the EC directives on fair competition between member states. However, a major effort has been and continues to be made to promote the sourcing of goods and services within Northern Ireland by the public sector with exhibitions throughout the Province and the publication of a comprehensive directory of public purchasers.

Terrorist Suspects (Montage)

Mr. Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in identifying those members of the Stevens inquiry team responsible for leaving in a Bangor restaurant a montage of terrorist suspects; and what disciplinary action has been taken.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I am aware of no such incident involving the Stevens inquiry team. I understand that a delegation of visiting overseas police officers left an information pack of unclassified material in a Bangor hotel which was returned promptly to the police by a member of staff. It may be this incident, which did not constitute any security breach, to which the right hon. Gentleman refers.

EC Funds

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money Northern Ireland has received from the European regional development fund in each financial year up to 31 December 1989; how much of those receipts each year represented a cash addition to the Northern Ireland economy; and how much each year was used to offset Government expenditure on Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The following amounts were received from the European regional development fund:

Financial year	Total £ million
1975-76	2·9
1976-77	7·2
1977-78	6·4
1978-79	4·0

1989-90[3]	[1]23·0
Total	[2]279·5

[1] Provisional outturn

[2] The figures show total ERDF receipts brought to account in Northern Ireland. It should be noted that awards totalling £10·5 million were decommitted by the European Commission on failed industrial projects.

[3] To December 1989.

ERDF assistance is earned by industrial and infrastructure projects, and by programmes combining elements of both. Receipts for infrastructure projects undertaken by non-central Government bodies are passed on to them and represent a direct benefit to those bodies by enabling them to reduce their capital indebtedness.

Receipts for infrastructure projects undertaken by central Government and for industrial projects are paid into the Northern Ireland Consolidated Fund. All the receipts are subject to normal EC audit arrangements.

The overall level of receipts is taken into account in the Government's decisions on public expenditure allocations, and their availability enables public expenditure to be maintained at a higher level than would otherwise be feasible.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money Northern Ireland has received from the European social fund in each financial year up to 31 December 1989; how much each year represented a cash addition to the Northern Ireland economy; and how much was used to offset Government expenditure on Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The following amounts were received from the European social fund:

[1] Provisional outturn.
[2] To December 1989.

Receipts earned by the private sector and by non-central Government public sector bodies are paid to the claimant. The receipts represent cash additions to the recipients: Receipts earned by central Government are paid into the Northern Ireland Consolidated Fund. All ESF receipts are subject to EC audit arrangements.

The overall level of receipts is taken into account in the Government's decisions on public expenditure allocations, and their availability enables public expenditure to be maintained at a higher level than would otherwise be feasible.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money Northern Ireland has received in each financial year since 31 March 1987 from EEC sources apart from payments under the three structural funds.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The following amounts have been identified as being received in Northern Ireland from European Community sources other than the three structural funds in the last two financial years:

Financial year	Total £ million
1988-89	27·8

Most of the receipts in this category are from the guarantee section of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund. However, it should be noted that the bulk of guarantee section receipts are disbursed centrally by the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce and details of payments are not generally maintained at regional level.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money Northern Ireland received in each financial year up to 31 December 1989 from the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund, guidance section; how much of those receipts were paid to the private sector and how much to the public sector; how much of those receipts represented a cash addition to the Northern Ireland economy; and how much was used each year to offset Government expenditure on Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The following amounts were received from the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund guidance section:

[1] Includes the Milk Marketing Board, which is not financed from public funds although it is a statutory body.
[2] Includes reference to the approximate share of total expenditure in Northern Ireland on various structural schemes which were applied throughout the United Kingdom.
[3] Provisional outturn.
[4] To December 1989.

All these receipts represent cash additions to the recipients and are subject to normal European Community audit arrangements.

In addition, £443,000 has been received by the public sector for socio-economic training.

The overall level of receipts is taken into account in the Government's decisions on public expenditure allocations and their availability enables public expenditure to be maintained at a higher level than would otherwise be feasible.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the money received by Northern Ireland in each financial year up to 31 December 1989 from EEC sources has been paid into the Northern Ireland Consolidated Fund.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: EC receipts received by the Northern Ireland Consolidated Fund in respect of grants paid to Government have been distinguished in the public income and expenditure account only since 1983-84. The figures from that date are as follows:

Financial year	Total £ million
1983-84	27·8
1984-85	27·8
1985-86	18·5
1986-87	50·6

TOTAL	278·6

[1] To December 1989.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the receipts which Northern Ireland has received from the European regional development fund since 1973 has been earned by (a) infrastructure projects undertaken by non-central Government bodies, (b) infrastructure projects undertaken by central Government and (c) industrial projects.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The following amounts have been received from the European regional development fund to 31 December 1989:

	£ million
Infrastructure:
Non-central Government	106·0
Central Government	71·3
Industry	77·7
Programmes[1]	24·5
TOTAL[2]	279·5

[1] These programmes combine elements of both industry and infrastructure.
[2] Includes estimated receipts for the first nine months of the 1989-90 financial year.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the receipts which Northern Ireland has received from the European regional development fund since 1973 has been earned by (a) the private sector, (b) non-central Government public sector bodies and (c) central Government.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The following amounts have been received from the European regional development fund to 31 December 1989:

	£ million
Private sector	15·8
Non-central Government public sector bodies	114·7
Central Government	149·0

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the £57·9 million of receipts received under the special urban renewal regulation for the Belfast area represented a cash addition to the Northern Ireland economy; and how much was used to offset Government expenditure on Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: All £61·8 million of the money due under the urban renewal regulation has now been received. The availability of receipts under the regulation was taken into account when determining public expenditure in Northern Ireland, thereby enabling public expenditure to be set at a higher level than would otherwise have been feasible.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was Northern Ireland's share of the United Kingdom's payments into the European Economic Community from 1 January 1973 to 31 December 1989; how much was Northern Ireland's share of the receipts for the same period; and how much of those receipts was used to offset Government expenditure on Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 8 February 1990]: It is not possible to determine Northern Ireland's actual share of the United Kingdom's contribution to the European Community because payments are made on a national and not a regional basis. Similarly it is not possible to identify the full extent of receipts from the Community. However, a Northern Ireland attributed share of the contribution to the EC is calculated as an accounting mechanism necessary because of the operation of a separate Northern Ireland Consolidated Fund. This national attributed share does not count as an item of expenditure within the Northern Ireland public expenditure programme and has therefore no bearing on the level of public expenditure in the Province.

Figures for the notional attribution of part of Northern Ireland's share of the United Kingdom's payments and for those areas where the receipts can be separately identified are as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Attributed[1] share (part)	Identified receipts
1973-74	1·0	—
1974-75	5·6	3·6
1975-76	7·9	3·6
1976-77	12·7	16·0
1977-78	16·0	16·8
1978-79	23·9	23·0
1979-80	28·1	36·5
1980-81	28·2	51·0
1981-82	50·3	47·8
1982-83	65·6	61·4
1983-84	65·6	92·4
1984-85	67·9	93·1

1988-89	[1]97·2	123·5
Total	698·3	[3]881·7

[1] Attributed share figures for the last two years are provisional estimates which will be revised when final details of tax revenues are determined.
[2] From 1987-88, outturn figures include certain EAGGF guarantee section receipts for which the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland assumed accounting responsibility on 1 April 1987.
[3] This comprises total identified EC receipts in Northern Ireland, including those from outside the main EC funds.

All receipts represent cash additions to the recipients and are subject to normal European Community audit arrangements.

The overall level of receipts is taken into account in the Government's decisions on public expenditure allocations and their availability enables public expenditure to be maintained at a higher level than would otherwise be feasible.

Rural Action Project

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has received a report from the interdepartmental working group on the future of the Rural Action Project, Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 12 February 1990]: No. The interdepartmental committee on rural development has only recently been set up and is unlikely to have even an interim report with us before March.

Stormont

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what building will be vacated in the Stormont estate with the transfer of civil servants to the Castle Court building; and what plans there are for the use of the vacant offices.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The transfer of civil servants to the Castle Court building will vacate part of Castle Buildings in the Stormont estate. It is proposed that the space freed in Castle Buildings will be used by DHSS staff moving from Dundonald house, and the space thus vacated in Dundonald house will be used by DANI and NIO, alleviating current overcrowding and allowing greater centralisation of departmental functions.

Cave Hill

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to the presence of mineral ores in commercial quantities in or under Cave hill.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 13 February 1990]: None.

Coleraine Hospital

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will ensure that the proposed option appraisal for the hospital needs of the Coleraine area is definitive and reach a final conclusion as to the needs of the area;

(2) what provision he is making for new hospital building in Coleraine in the current and the next five financial years; and what provision he is making to carry over from one financial year to the next sums allocated but not spent in each financial year;

(3) what steps he is taking to ensure that the new hospital building for Coleraine is completed by 1997;

(4) whether he will make it his policy to accept the findings of the option appraisal for the Coleraine hospital and immediately it is available build on the basis of its conclusions.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 13 February 1990]: Responsibility for preparing the option appraisal lies with the Northern health and social services board. Provided that it is carried out to the standards required under the Government's guidelines, the appraisal should lead to a final decision on the future provision of acute hospital services in the Coleraine, Ballymoney and Moyle area. The earliest on-site dates which can be accommodated within the Department of Health and Social Services major development programme are 1993 for a phased redevelopment of Coleraine hospital and 1997 for a new hospital. The completion date will depend on which option is chosen.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what sums have been expended on Coleraine hospital on (a) new building work, (b) maintenance and (c) other capital expenditure in each of the last 10 years; and in the case of (a) above what was provided by the major sums expended in that period.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The information is as follows:

	(a) New building work £	(b) Maintenance[1] £	(c) Other capital expenditure[2] £
1978-80		176,598	104,983

[1] Building and engineering.
[2] Capital works, furniture and equipment.
Expenditure at (a) provided a 72-bed geriatric unit and 15-place day hospital.

Fishing Industry

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what benefits are available to fishermen who are restricted to only one day's work per week due to the inclement weather; and if he will make a statement on social services assistance to those presently employed in the fishing industry at Portavogie.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 14 February 1990]: Unemployment benefit is available to fishermen for those days of the week on which they are unable to work because of inclement weather provided that their earnings for that week do not equal or exceed the lower earnings level for national insurance contribution liability. This is currently £43 a week. Income support may also be available to fishermen who work for fewer than 24 hours a week subject to the normal rules regarding income and capital.

The provision of social services in the Portavogie area is the responsibility of the Eastern health and social services board. The board would consider sympathetically any requests for social services assistance made to it by those employed in the fishing industry at Portavogie or their families.

Births

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table to show how many births there were in each hospital in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; what rate per thousand this represented in the catchment areas of those hospitals in Northern Ireland; and what is the number of births in each hospital to United Kingdom women from outside Northern Ireland and citizens of the Irish Republic.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 14 February 1990]: The number of live births in hospitals in Northern Ireland for each of the five years from 1984 to 1988 are shown in the table. The other information requested is not available.

DEFENCE

Polish Ex-Service Men

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice his Department will give to the dependants of Polish ex-service men who settled in the United Kingdom as to the circumstances in which his Department will be prepared to offer them assistance with their resettlement in accordance with undertakings given to the ex-service men when they were settled in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State will write to my hon. Friend.

Air Defence

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects that the improved United Kingdom air defence ground environment/integrated command and control system will be in operation.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the early 1990s.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effect Staff Requirement (Naval and Air) 908 will have on the date of coming into operation of the improved United Kingdom air defence ground environment/integrated command and control system.

Mr. Alan Clark: None.

Arbitration

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects that the arbitration between the Ministry of Defence and UKSL will be completed.

Mr. Alan Clark: Discussions on the interpretation of aspects of the MOD-UKSL contract are commercially confidential. It is not possible to predict when they might be completed.

Search and Rescue Helicopters

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, columns 690-91, how many persons were in the Independent Television network camera crew which embarked on the search and rescue helicopter from HMS Gannet at Glasgow airport; and whether any facility fee was paid to his Department.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Two persons were carried. No charges were levied against the camera crew. The extra costs to the Ministry of Defence were small.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, columns 690-91, what landing charges were paid for the search and rescue helicopter from HMS Gannet which landed at Glasgow airport; and who paid them.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Landing charges of £23·20 for landing at Glasgow on the outbound and return trips were paid by the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, columns 690-91, what were (a) the times of departure from Prestwick of the search and rescue helicopter from HMS Gannet, (b) the time of its arrival at Glasgow airport, (c) the time of its departure from Glasgow airport and (d) the time of its arrival over the search area.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The times were as follows: (a) 08.04, (b) 08.15, (c) 08.34 and (d) 09.13.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, columns 690-91, at what time the radio breakdown was discovered which delayed the departure of the search and rescue helicopter from HMS Gannet; and when this fault was rectified.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The defect was discovered at approximately 07.20 and was rectified at approximately 08.00.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, columns 690-91, what is the normal route to the Ben Nevis area from Prestwick by the search and rescue helicopter from HMS Gannet.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The route from Prestwick to Fort William taken by search and rescue crews will vary depending on circumstances such as predicted weather over the flight paths and the time of day. Given the prevailing weather conditions of the area the normal route is via the Crinan canal and then along the coast to Ben Nevis.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, columns 690-91, what time the request was received that an Independent Television network camera crew be carried on the search and rescue helicopter from HMS Gannet; and when the request was granted.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The request was received by HMS Gannet at approximately 07.20 and permission was given shortly afterwards.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the source or sources of his statement of 12 February, Official Report, column 116, that by all accounts Colin Wallace took a great interest in collecting any information, story or rumour which might be of interest.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The collection of information as background for briefing is a normal feature of the duties of information officers. The statement to which the hon. Member has referred was intended as a general acknowledgement of the long hours and considerable effort expended by Mr. Wallace in understanding all aspects of the Northern Ireland situation which might have been relevant to the fight against terrorism. Evidence to that effect was given to the Civil Service appeal board, and is available to Mr. David Calcutt QC in his inquiry.

Submarines

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress in the ELF submarine communications programme; what are the reasons for the delays in installation of a trial ELF transmitter in Glengarry; and when he now expects to submit a notice of intention to develop an ELF facility to the Highland regional council.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 9 February 1990]: Work on ELF communications continues at the Admiralty research establishment. A decision to proceed with limited testing of the technology at Glengarry will depend on the availability of resources. I cannot speculate therefore when a notice of proposed developments might be submitted.

US Military Personnel

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United States military personnel are living off-base in the United Kingdom; and what estimate he has made of the lost revenue to local authorities arising from these persons being exempted from paying the community charge.

Mr. Chope: I have been asked to reply.

The Ministry of Defence estimates that 12,500 US military and civilian personnel currently live off-base. I estimate that if they were subject to the community charge for standard spending these personnel would pay a total of £3,475,000 to local authorities in 1990-91. Individual local authorities in England will, however, receive sufficient revenue support grant to enable them to set a charge, before the safety net, at the level of the community charge for standard spending (£278 in 1990-91) if they budget to spend at the level of their standard spending assessment. The grant system therefore compensates for the fact that US military and civil personnel do not pay the personal charge.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Curry: The following list shows the companies that currently have contracts with the Department to provide private security guarding, together with the number of employees involved:

	Number of posts
Blackwater Property Protection Service	1
Compass Security Ltd.	4
Reliance Security Ltd.	1
Securiguard (London) Services Ltd.	2
Shorrock Guards Ltd.	10
UK Security Services Ltd.	2
Wakenhut (UK) Ltd.	1

In keeping with normal commercial practice it would not be appropriate in these cases for me to give the value of each individual contract. Contracts are not necessarily made for financial years but our calculation of the total value of all the contracts in each financial year is as follows:

	£'000
1984-85	170
1985-86	277
1986-87	297
1987-88	312
1988-89	329
1989-90	358

Meat Exports (West Germany)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the level of redundancies or lay-offs in the meat industry following the decision of the West German Government to ban meat imports from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: The German authorities have not banned imports of meat from the United Kingdom, but have imposed additional certification requirements for beef. I understand that these requirements do not now apply to boneless beef and that trade in bone-in beef is continuing. Thus the impact on our total meat export trade is only limited. Moreover, in 1989 our beef exports to Germany represented only about 1 per cent. of our total beef production.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many bulls at artificial insemination centres in the United Kingdom have been found to be afflicted by bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and what estimate can be made of the number of calves that these would have fathered during their lives;

(2) what are the latest figures for the number of (a) bulls and (b) cows affected by bovine spongiform encephalopathy;

(3) whether there is any restriction on the sale of calves from bulls later diagnosed as affected by bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: Up to 9 February, BSE had been confirmed in 9,976 cows and 22 bulls in Great Britain. Five of those bulls were found at artificial insemination centres and are estimated to have sired around 1,000 calves between them. Research is in hand to establish whether the BSE agent is transmitted in semen. However, analogy with sheep scrapie suggests that such transmission will not occur and restrictions on the progeny of affected bulls are not, therefore, appropriate.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider introducing a substantial educational programme for farmers including leaflets, booklets and the use of video film to help them recognise the symptoms of bovine spongiform encephalopathy-infected animals.

Mr. Maclean: Information about BSE has been disseminated extensively through the farming press and has received wide coverage in other press and media. Advisory leaflets are given to all farmers who report a suspect case of BSE. In addition, Ministry veterinary staff make regular presentations, involving widespread material, to farming groups.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the regulations concerned with preventing meat from cattle slaughtered because they are infected with bovine spongiform encephalopathy from reaching the human food chain and for ensuring that cattle slaughtered for food are not infected with bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: The legislation is as follows:

The Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (No. 2) Order 1988 (as amended).

The Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Compensations Order 1990.

The Bovine Offals (Prohibition) Regulations 1989.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is (a) the largest number of cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy recorded on a single farm, (b) the average number of cases per affected herd, (c) the proportions of herds which have had a single case, (d) the proportion of all dairy herds that have had one or more cases and (e) the proportion of all beef herds that have had one or more cases.

Mr. Maclean: The information for Great Britain is as follows:

(a) 29
(b) 1·75
(c) 63·3 per cent.
(d) 10·3 per cent.
(e) 0·7 per cent.

Scrapie

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he plans to place any restriction on the sale of breeding rams affected by scrapie.

Mr. Maclean: Research into scrapie has shown that the infective agent is not transmitted in semen. Controls on breeding rams are not, therefore, appropriate.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what contribution his Department will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. Maclean: None.

Veterinary Officers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many veterinary officers were permanently employed in all grades of the state veterinary service throughout England, Scotland and Wales in 1989 and currently; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: In 1989 422 veterinary staff were permanently employed in all grades of the state veterinary service throughout England, Scotland and Wales. The current figure is 430. It is likely that this number will increase particularly for food safety work including meat hygiene. This was recognised in the recent review of veterinary manpower under the chairmanship of Dr. Ewan Page.

Food Research

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list all the research projects currently being carried out at the Institute of Food Research in Bristol and indicate which ones will be transferred to other research establishments, giving the name of the research establishment in each case;

(2) if he will list the projects his Department is funding and the amount of this financial contribution to these projects at each of (a) Leatherhead Food Research Association, (b) Campden Food Preservation Research Association, (c) Huddersfield polytechnic, (d) Sheffield polytechnic and (e) Dorset Institute of Higher Education for (i) 1988, (ii) 1989, (iii) 1990 and (iv) 1991.

Mr. Gummer: I have placed in the Library of the House a copy of my Department's programme of external research and development on food for 1988-89 and 1989-90. Proposals for 1990-91 are currently under consideration.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the organisations and committees which give him advice on food safety research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I receive advice on research and development (R&D) into food safety from my own officials and the following bodies:

(a) the Priorities Board for R&D in Agriculture and Food;

(b) the Steering Group on Food Surveillance;
(c) the Food Advisory Committee;
(d) the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment;
(e) the Veterinary Products Committee; and
(f) the Advisory Committee on Pesticides.

From time to time, I also receive suggestions from other outside organisations.

The Government are firmly committed to funding research and development on food safety and hygiene issues of concern to consumers, producers and industry.

Perrier

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will place the results of his Department's tests on Perrier water in the Library.

Mr. Gummer: The results of my Department's tests on Perrier water were made available by the Food Safety Directorate in the form of news release 67/90 on 15 February. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Pesticides

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all (a) pesticide residue levels and (b) levels of pesticide residue breakdown products he has set, indicating the level and type of food and the date when the levels were set; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Statutory maximum residue levels (MRLs) for a range of pesticides used on the more important components of the United Kingdom diet are set out in the Pesticides (Maximum Residue Levels in Food) Regulations 1988, SI No. 1378, made on 1 August 1988. Schedule 1 of the regulations lists MRLs for cereals and products of animal origin and came into force on 2 August 1988. Schedule 2 lists MRLs mainly for fruit and vegetables and came into force on 31 December 1988. Schedule 3 lists the individual pesticides and describes how their residues are to be defined in terms of their metabolites or breakdown products.

Fungicides

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will place the results of his Ministry's tests on the presence of the ethylene biodithiocarbonate fungicides and ethylene thiourea in various foods in the Library.

Mr. Gummer: The Government's working party on pesticide residues carries out a programme of tests on food for pesticide residues, which has included these substances. The results are published: the latest report covering 1985-88 came out on 13 March 1989.

Very recently the results of tests for residues of these substances in a range of foodstuffs have been published by Friends of the Earth and Parents for Safe Food. These were carried out by an independent analyst and showed that the majority of the produce had negligible or no detectable residues. A few samples showed levels which, while giving no cause for concern, on health grounds were above predicted levels. With the agreement of the sponsors MAFF will be repeating these tests, both on the samples used by their analyst and on further samples. The results will be placed in the Library of the House, and published.

Domestic Animals (Diseases)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the diseases known to his Department that can cause domestic animal death, but which would not bar their meat from human consumption.

Mr. Maclean: Any animal which has died from any disease is prohibited from being sold for human consumption under the Slaughterhouse (Hygiene) Regulations 1977. The Meat Inspection Regulations 1987 require the meat inspector to have regard to the indications of unfitness set out in schedule 2 to those regulations: those indications include both specific diseases and more general symptoms or conditions.

Poultry Slaughtering

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why poultry slaughter figures are being reorganised from 10-day to monthly figures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: There are no such 10-day statistics on poultry slaughter.

Cattle Offal

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the food products and types of food products which are made, have added to them or are constructed from (a) beef cattle offal, (b) mechanically recovered beef or beef offal and (c) beef cattle residues.

Mr. Maclean: The Department does not hold such information. However, all meat products offered for sale must comply with the provisions of the Food Act 1984, the Food Labelling Regulations 1984 and the Meat Products and Spreadable Fish Products Regulations 1984. In addition, the Bovine Offal (Prohibition) Regulations 1989 prohibit the sale, or use in the preparation of foods for sale for human consumption, of bovine brain, spinal cord, spleen, thymus, tonsils and intestines.

Salmon

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will list the organisations which have made representations to his Department in support of the commercial drift netting salmon industry of the coast of north-east England.

Mr. Curry: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has received a large number of letters from organisations and individuals about this fishery and the current statutory review following section 39 of the Salmon Act 1986. Those who have made representations in favour of the fishery include:

Anglo-Scottish Fish Producers Organisations Ltd.
Beadnell Parish Council
Cornish Fish Producers Organisation Ltd.
Federation of British Port Wholesale Fish Merchants Associations
Fisheries Organisation Society Ltd.
National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations
North Eastern Sea Fisheries Committee
Whitby Cobleman's Association
Yorks and Anglia Fish Producers Organisation.

Ministers in the Department have also held meetings with representatives of the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and a number of local salmon net fishermen.

Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make it his policy to relocate the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce, currently in Reading, into the premises at Crown buildings, Cathays park, Cardiff, to be vacated in April 1991 by the insurance services group of the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Northern Ireland and myself are currently examining the location of part of the work of the intervention board away from Reading.

TRANSPORT

Severn Crossing

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the target date for the completion of the second Severn crossing and its approach roads.

Mr. Atkins: The decision on timing will depend on our final evaluation of the tenders; we remain on course to provide the second crossing by the mid-1990s.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contribution his Department will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. Portillo: None.

A27, Worthing

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many houses on the preferred route announced for the development of the A27 in the Worthing area are officially blighted; how many owners have begun negotiations for their sale to his Department; and how many sales have now been completed.

Mr. Atkins: The Department's preferred route for the A27 Worthing to Lancing would involve the acquisition of land from some 120 houses. Blight notices have been accepted from 79 owners. Of these, 59 have settled compensation with the district valuer and 25 have completed sales to the Department.

Air Safety

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from interested parties regarding the near miss involving an Air UK civil airliner and a military Tornado aeroplane which occurred over Kelso on Wednesday 31 January.

Mr. McLoughlin: The responsibility for investigating airmiss reports rests with the independent joint airmiss working group. This group arranges for all interested parties to make representations to the investigators and in this case it includes the Ministry of Defence, the civil operator and the air traffic control unit which was providing an advisory service to the civil aircraft at the time.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to investigate the near miss involving an Air UK civil airliner and a military Tornado aeroplane which occurred over Kelso on Wednesday 31 January; if he will make it his policy to publish a report on the background to the incident; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The investigation of airmiss reports is the responsibility of the independent joint airmiss working group. The group meets regularly to consider the circumstances surrounding every reported airmiss. Details of its deliberations and assessment of the risk and cause are published every four months by the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the civil aircraft involved in a near miss with a military Tornado aeroplane over Kelso on Wednesday 31 January was in unregulated air space at the time of the incident.

Mr. McLoughlin: The incident is the subject of a full investigation by the independent joint airmiss working group. From the facts available at present, it would appear that both aircraft were in unregulated airspace at the time of the incident.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many of the incidents reported to the joint airmiss working party since 1 January 1987 of helicopters coming dangerously close to other aircraft when operating to, from or between offshore installations (1) took place in controlled air space, (2) had aircraft operating under instructions given by air traffic control to either captain, (3) took place in air space for which an advisory service was available, (4) had aircraft in receipt of advisory services and (5) operated outside either controlled air space or advisory services;

(2) how many reported incidents there have been to the joint airmiss working party since 1 January 1987 of helicopters being claimed to have come dangerously close to other aircraft when operating to, from and between offshore installations; what were the identities of the other aircraft, by type and operator; at what heights the incidents took place; and in which cases either the helicopter or the other aircraft were on approach or take-off;

(3) if he will prepare and publish a report on the lessons to be drawn from the incidents of helicopters coming dangerously close to other aircraft;

(4) in which cases where incidents have been reported to the joint airmiss working party since 1 January 1987 of helicopters coming dangerously close to other aircraft when operating to, from or between offshore installations the incidents have been categorised as A, B or C; and where the responsibility for each incident has been laid.

Mr. McLoughlin: These are matters for the Civil Aviation Authority, which has the statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of civil aviation.

I have drawn the questions to the attention of the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority and will ask him to write to the hon. Member direct.

A3 (Noise)

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will complete his review of noise insulation and noise barrier needs to protect residents living adjacent to the A3 trunk road on the Ladymead to Hog's Back section.

Mr. Atkins: No review of noise insulation is being undertaken. I can agree to four of six noise barriers proposed as an interim solution pending the longer-term improvements to this section of the A3 recently announced. The case for two of these barriers nearest the A31 bridge is not made, but is being re-examined following the recent alterations to the A3 northbound carriageway. It is not possible to say yet when this re-examination will be completed.

Motorway Exits

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to eliminate the queueing which is occurring at the exits of junction 6 on the M3 at Basingstoke.

Mr. Atkins: The installation of peak hour traffic signals is being considered to deal with this problem pending longer-term solutions. A scheme for the grade separation of the Black Dam roundabout was added to the trunk road programme last year. This should overcome the problems in the longer term.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to remove the danger of stationary vehicles in queues in nearside lanes waiting to leave motorways.

Mr. Atkins: The proposals announced in "Roads for Prosperity" (Cm. 693) in May 1989, including widening and junction improvements of substantial lengths of existing motorway, will go a long way to reducing congestion, including that caused by vehicles queuing to leave motorways. In the case of some junctions not scheduled for major improvement, minor schemes such as installation of signal controls can reduce queuing, especially at peak periods.

Scottish Lowland Airports

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the reasons for the delay in the announcement of his decision on the review of Scottish lowland airports policy; and when he now expects to make it.

Mr. McLoughlin: There has been no delay. Careful consideration is being given to the very full response to our recent consultation, and my right hon. Friend hopes to announce his decision before long.

St. John's Wood Station (Escalators)

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply on escalators at St. John's Wood to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, Official Report, 12 February, column 112, concerning work on the out-of-service escalator at St. John's Wood station, if he will seek from London Underground an explanation as to why a notice states that the escalator in question will be out of service until early April.

Mr. Portillo: This is a matter within London Underground Limited's management responsibility.

Road Projects

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will publish tables showing the estimated completion dates for the major road projects outlined in the roads White Paper in 1987 and the present estimated completion dates; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if the roads report promised in the White Paper, "Roads for Prosperity", has been completed; and if he will make a statement;

(3) when he plans to complete and publish the roads report promised in the White Paper, "Roads for Prosperity"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Preparation of the roads report is complete and will be published very shortly. The report will include tables showing details of all schemes in the national trunk road programme, including completion dates where appropriate. It will cover the schemes under construction or in preparation at the time of publication of "Policy for Roads in England 1987" and additions to the programme made since, including those announced in the White Paper, "Roads for Prosperity" published last May.

A30 (Dualling)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the present target date for completing dualling of the A30 in (a) Cornwall and (b) Devon; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what progress has been made in drawing up plans for dualling the whole of the A30 in (a) Cornwall and (b) Devon; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether the review of plans for the dualling of the A30 in (a) Cornwall and (b) Devon, promised in the White Paper, "Roads for Prosperity", has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Dualling of the A30 in Devon, west of Exeter, is planned to be completed by the end of 1993.

Current plans for the improvement of the A30 in Cornwall do not provide for dual carriageways throughout, but the assessment of needs of the whole route foreshadowed in "Roads for Prosperity", which will start later this year, will include consideration of the need for further dualling.

A38 (Dualling)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what stage plans for the dualling of the A38 Liskeard to Bodmin have reached; if the review promised in the White Paper, "Roads for Prosperity", has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: We expect to consult the public on possible route options in the autumn. The assessment of needs of the A38 between Exeter and Plymouth is expected to start later this year.

Network SouthEast

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will direct British Rail to give priority in its investment plans for Network SouthEast to improving rolling stock.

Mr. Parkinson: Network SouthEast has already identified rolling stock as its top investment priority. It is planning to invest some £1·2 billion over the next three years, of which about 70 per cent. will be for replacement of old stock and additional trains to relieve overcrowding.

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has received from British Rail about the timing of investment plans to improve the least satisfactory commuter lines in Network SouthEast.

Mr. Parkinson: Network SouthEast will be bringing forward various investments over the coming months to back up its efforts to achieve the quality objectives over every route by 1993. I know that it has begun work on detailed investment proposals for modernising the north Kent lines and the London-Tilbury-Southend line and I look forward to receiving its formal investment submissions as soon as they are ready.

Pollution

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, further to his answer of 15 January, Official Report, column 46, what was the sample size of the 1988 survey which showed 3·6 per cent. of heavy goods vehicles emitting excessive smoke; and what results were obtained from the regional roadside visual checks of exhaust smoke from heavy goods vehicles undertaken by his Department's vehicle inspectorate in 1985, 1986 and 1987.

Mr. Atkins: The figures requested are:

Year and region	Number checked	Number emitting excess smoke	Per cent. emitting excess smoke
1985
North	18,637	663	3·56
Scotland	8,583	640	7·46

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about pollution from motor vehicles, including motor cycles, detected by his Department's vehicle inspectorate since 1986, including excessive smoke emissions and excessive noise; and whether he will in future take steps to publish annually a separate analysis of such information.

Mr. Atkins: The percentages of heavy goods and passenger service vehicles failing their annual test for excess smoke or for defective exhaust systems are as follows:

	Excess smoke		Defective exhaust
	PSV Percentage	HGV Percentage	PSV Percentage	HGV Percentage
1986-87	1·34	1·09	2·29	0·97
1987-88	1·60	1·18	2·86	1·11
1988-89	1·42	1·06	2·76	1·72

The percentages of vehicles selected at random seen emitting excess smoke during roadside surveys were:

	Heavy goods vehicles (Statistical checks) Percentage	Public service vehicles (Deregulation survey) Percentage
1985	8·49	—
1986	7·61	—
1987	6·87	1·89
1988	3·61	1·18
1989	2·83	1·31

The numbers of cars, light goods vehicles and motor cycles failing their MOT test for excess noise is not recorded separately. There are currently no checks for excess emissions in the MOT test.

The vehicle inspectorate executive agency publishes statistics relating to its work in its annual report, copies of which are in the House of Commons Library. It is going to expand the amount of data it publishes.

Ferries (Safety)

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the report and recommendations of phase I of the research programme into the safety of roll-on roll-off ferries.

Mr. McLoughlin: All the projects in phase I of the Department of Transport-sponsored research programme into ways of increasing the safety of ro-ro passenger ferries have now been completed. The steering committee which has been supervising the programme has nearly completed its assessment of the results, and I expect to receive its report next month. I will, of course, need to consider that report, but it is my intention to make the report and the results of the research widely available as soon as possible.

Clapham Rail Accident

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive British Rail's response to Sir Anthony Hidden's report on the Clapham Junction railway accident; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The chairman of the railways board, Sir Robert Reid, sent me his initial response to Sir Anthony Hidden's recommendations earlier today. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

I am pleased to see that the railways board has been able to accept all the recommendations which apply to it. It has already implemented many of these, including all those that required urgent action.

Several of the recommendations depend on developmental work for their full implementation. I know that Sir Robert Reid and the board are anxious to press on with full implementation as quickly as practicable, and to ensure that the systems are right before installing them. The railway inspectorate is discussing the detailed programme of implementation, including the prototype trials now going ahead, with BR. The implementation of some other recommendations depends on a satisfactory outcome to negotiations between BR and the railway unions: I am sure that both sides will do all they can to ensure the safe and efficient operation of the railway.

Part of the cost of implementation of the Hidden report is covered by the £125 million for safety measures already included in BR's expenditure plans for the next three years and endorsed by the Government. I have asked BR to produce detailed estimates of the cost of implementing the longer-term recommendations; it is now assessing these and will include them in its 1990 corporate plan, which I shall be discussing with it later in the year. We will continue to ensure that BR has adequate funds for safety.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Human Rights

74. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what manner the rights and freedoms guaranteed by the European Convention on Human Rights and by the international covenant on civil and political rights are directly secured by domestic law to everyone within the jurisdiction of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The provisions of our common and statute law have always recognised basic human rights and freedoms. New laws are drafted in the light of international conventions and covenants; and, where necessary, existing laws are amended in the light of international judgments to meet our obligations.

75. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about compliance by the United Kingdom with covenants on civil and political rights, detailing how decisions of United Kingdom courts are communicated to international bodies monitoring such covenants.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The United Kingdom fully meets its obligations under the various international instruments dealing with civil and political rights to which it is party. Details of court decisions relevant to a particular international instrument would normally be included in the United Kingdom's regular reports to treaty-monitoring bodies.

Criminal Proceedings

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any proposals to reduce the time taken to complete hearings in criminal proceedings.

Mr. John Patten: We have urged magistrates and court clerks to concentrate on reducing delays. A training video, "Court in Action", was launched earlier this year. A management information system has been introduced to help magistrates courts monitor their performance and performance targets have been set. We have authorised additional court clerk posts, and we shall be issuing guidance later this year on listing and efficient use of court resources. We intend to extend the operation of statutory custody time limits to the whole of England and Wales by the end of the year.

My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor has taken steps to tackle delays in the Crown court through the provision of more resources and improved management. Additional judges have been appointed and new courtrooms opened.

We shall be monitoring the impact of these initiatives carefully.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

Departmental Circulars

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the name and number of every circular issued by his Department since June 1979; and what monitoring is done for their implementation.

Mr. Waddington: Since 1979 the Home Office has issued each year an average of about 75 circulars to local and police authorities. A list giving details of these circulars is prepared quarterly and a copy sent to the Clerk to the Select Committee on Home Affairs. To list the name and number of every circular and to establish what monitoring has been done for their implementation would require a disproportionate use of resources.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the names and previous occupations of advisers currently appointed to his Department, stating their current salaries.

Mr. Waddington: The information is as follows:

Mr. John Godfrey—seconded from Daiwa (Europe) Ltd
Mr. John Taylor (from 19 February 1990)—barrister-at-law

It is not the practice to disclose the salaries of special advisers as they are negotiated individually in relation to previous outside earnings and are therefore confidential.

Dr. Malde Modhwadia

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the case of Dr. Malde Modhwadia of 245 Goodwood road, Leicester; and when he estimates the case will be resolved.

Mr. John Patten: The hon. Member is aware that inquiries are now being made into new information about this case. I understand that these inquiries will be completed shortly and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as we have had an opportunity to consider the results.

London Prisons

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to co-opt on to the local boards of visitors at each London prison members from the local education authorities which are shortly to be set up.

Mr. Mellor: No. At least two members of the board of visitors to prison establishments are required to be Justices of the Peace, but it is not otherwise the practice to appoint members to boards by virtue of their office. In making appointments to boards of visitors, consideration is rather given to the abilities of the individual candidate to discharge the duties effectively and the desirability of maintaining, so far as possible, a representative balance on the board in terms of age, sex and social and ethnic background.

Prison Officers

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons have failed to meet their full establishment figures for prison officers; and what is the shortfall of staff in each of these prisons.

Mr. Mellor: The initial complement figures set for each establishment during the introduction of the "fresh start" arrangements have already been modified in many instances and are in the process of further revision. They will continue to be reviewed during the period of the framework agreement to take account of the resources available to the prison service and of the progressive reduction in the working week for prison officers. This continuing series of changes means that any list of complement figures for each of the 124 establishments around the country would be misleading and unreliable. Nationally the position remains that we have provided and will continue to provide all the additional staff promised under "fresh start": the number of prison officers in post has risen by nearly 20 per cent. over the past three years.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total shortage of trained prison officers in England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: Although there are still problems in particular establishments, there is no general shortage of officers in the prison service. We are having no difficulty in attracting good quality recruits and are continuing to provide all the additional staff promised under "fresh start." The number of prison officers in post is now over 20,000, nearly 20 per cent. higher than three years ago.

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Waddington: The following private security firms are currently employed by my Department:

Burns International
Chubb Wardle Limited
Compass Security
Group 4 Total Security Limited
Potton Leisure Limited
Real Security
Reliance Security
Securicor
Securiguard Services Limited
Security Express
Security Services
Wray Security.

The value of each contract is a matter of commercial and contractual confidentiality. Information about the total value of all such contracts for each year since 1984-85 is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information about the number of staff employed on each contract is also not readily available; in some cases the number varies from day to day according to operational requirements.

Community Service Orders

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time between sentencing and the start of the community service order in (a) inner London and (b) the rest of the country.

Mr. John Patten: The implementation of the national standards for community service orders, which were introduced in April last year, is being monitored through quarterly returns from all probation areas. During the first six months (April to September 1989) the following delays were recorded between sentencing and the start of the community service work, based on the returns received and coded so far:

Delays in days	Inner London probation areas		Areas outside inner London
	Number	per cent.	Number	per cent.
0 to 6	127	19·00	4,737	47·8
7 to 9	137	20·50	1,912	19·3
10 to 13	139	20·75	1,570	15·8
14 to 20	139	20·75	1,074	10·8
21 and over	127	19·00	627	6·3
	669	100·00	9,920	100·0

The most frequent reason for delay in beginning work in inner London was the unavailability of work placements. Other reasons included the offender's failure to turn up for interviews or work, health, domestic or mental problems; further offending, conflicting employment commitments and administrative error.

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of criminals sentenced to community service orders completed their full hours.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 16 February 1990]: The information requested is published in "Probation Statistics England and Wales 1988" (table 6.11). In 1988, the proportion of community service orders that were terminated on completion of the specified number of hours was 72 per cent.

Violent Crime

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further proposals he has to combat and reduce the incidence of violent crime.

Mr. John Patten: Our proposals in chapter 3 of the White Paper, "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" (Cm 965), include empowering the Crown court to impose longer sentences on serious violent and sexual offenders where this is necessary to protect the public. I also refer the hon. Member to the reply given to questions from the hon. Members for Glasgow, Central (Mr. Watson) and for Hemsworth (Mr. Buckley) and the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer), on 25 January at column 864.

Licensed Hotels

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to compile statistics on how many licensing benches insist on a dry lounge in licensed hotels.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. It would not be practicable to compile statistics of the very many different types of conditions which licensing justices may attach when granting an on-licence; and we have no reason to suppose that licences granted under part IV of the Licensing Act 1964 do not normally have a "dry room" condition.

Drug Trafficking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons now serving sentences in British prisons have been convicted of crimes related to drug trafficking.

Mr. Mellor: The available information on the type of drugs offence for England and Wales is published annually in "Prison statistics England and Wales" (Table 1(a) of the volume for 1988, Cm 825). Information on custodial sentences imposed in the United Kingdom for drug trafficking offences is published annually in "Statistics of the misuse of drugs: seizures and offenders dealt with. Supplementary tables" (Table 2.6 of the issue for 1988). Copies of both volumes are in the Library.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the Home Office research unit budget is spent on evaluating the crime prevention potential of different building materials.

Mr. John Patten: None, although some crime prevention demonstration projects funded from time to time may involve, among other things, "target hardening" of doors, windows and frames through improved materials and design.

New Prisons

Mr. Heffer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department wh. sites for new prisons he has considered and rejected in the north-west over the last two years.

Mr. Mellor: During this period the Home Office has considered some 40 possible sites. Only one of these, at Fazakerley, Liverpool, is being actively pursued at present. Discussions on a number of the sites were on a confidential basis, because of commercial considerations, and it would not be right to list all of the sites involved.

Pop Concerts

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether he intends to introduce measures to ensure that all security staff at pop concerts are trained in fire control and emergency evacuation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he intends to introduce proposals to ensure that the conditions of entry to pop concerts are better publicised; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether he proposes to introduce measures to ensure that a common grid map should be devised and used by emergency services at all pop concerts; and if he will make a statement;

(4) whether he proposes to introduce measures to ensure that all sites used for pop concerts are surveyed for crowd safety purposes; and if he will make a statement;

(5) whether he proposes to introduce measures to ensure that all vendors on the sites of pop concerts are prevented from selling alcohol, or drinks in bottles or cans; and if he will make a statement;

(6) whether he proposes to introduce measures to ensure that an emergency control room should be set up at all pop concerts; and if he will make a statement;

(7) whether he proposes to introduce measures to ensure that an evacuation plan approved by the emergency services should be prepared prior to all pop concerts; and if he will make a statement;

(8) whether he proposes to introduce measures to ensure that the heads of security at all pop concerts should be allowed access to non-classified local emergency plans; and if he will make a statement;

(9) whether he proposes to introduce measures to ensure that there should be a defined head of security and a named site controller for all pop concerts; and if he will make a statement;

(10) whether he proposes to introduce measures to ensure that there should be a VHF exclusive frequency used for radio communications at all pop concerts; and if he will make a statement;

(11) whether he proposes to introduce measures to ensure the reduction of crowd build-up at entry points to pop concerts; and if he will make a statement;

(12) whether he will introduce legislation to ensure that all senior supervisors at pop concerts are (a) within constant radio contact and (b) trained in fire control, emergency evacuation and cardiac pressure and resuscitation; and if he will make a statement;

(13) whether he will introduce measures to ensure adequate training and discipline of security staff employed at all pop concerts; and if he will make a statement;

(14) whether he will introduce measures to ensure that all first-aid posts and treatment centres at pop concerts should be left to trained first-aid personnel; and if he will make a statement;

(15) whether he will introduce measures to ensure that one person at pop concerts should be stationed on the stage with the authority to stop the show at any time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Under the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982, or in London the London Government Act 1963, responsibility for controlling places which are used for public musical entertainments, including pop concerts, is vested in the local authority. One of the purposes of this licensing regime is to ensure that places used for such entertainments have adequate standards of safety and hygiene and the legislation empowers local authorities to attach terms, conditions and restrictions to an entertainments licence. When considering the issue of such licences the local authority will generally have regard to any observations submitted to it by the police and the fire authority, to which advance notice of the application must be given.

We have no present plans for any fundamental alterations to the existing arrangements for the licensing of public entertainments. The local authority is best placed to determine, in the circumstances of each individual application, exactly what conditions relating to crowd safety should be attached to any particular entertainments licence.

To assist local authorities and fire authorities, as well as managers and licensees of premises, we are shortly to publish a comprehensive "Guide to Fire Precautions in Existing Places of Public Entertainment and Like Premises". This consolidates and to some extent revises existing guidance and contains specific advice on fire safety at pop concerts. We are also considering, in consultation with other agencies with an interest in the question, whether any further guidance should be issued to local authorities about crowd safety at public musical entertainments.

Immigration

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a summary of the compelling and compassionate circumstances in which visitors from abroad initially refused entry by immigration officials have been allowed to visit, since the implementation of the relevant change in the immigration rules.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is not available in the form requested. Paragraph 10 of the guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases, which were sent to right hon. and hon. Members under cover of a letter from my right hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) on 14 December 1988 gives examples of the sort of exceptional and compelling circumstances which would justify deferment of removal. These examples are not exhaustive and each case is considered on its merits.

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to change the requirement for United Kingdom citizens resident in Hong Kong who marry other nationalities to be resident in the United Kingdom for three years before the spouse is granted permanent right of abode.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have no present plans for changes in the relevant law and practice other than those necessary to implement the announcement made by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 20 December 1989 at column 363.

Court Escort Services

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy towards privatising court escort services.

Mr Mellor: We are at present considering the outcome of the further studies into the likely cost-effectiveness of contracting out court escort services to the private sector, which my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd) commissioned (his statement on 1 March 1989 at columns 277-88 refers to that). We hope soon to announce our conclusions.

INFORM

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what grant has been given to INFORM; and for how long.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: INFORM became operational on 1 January 1988. The Home Office funding is designed on a reducing basis over three years: £50,000 in the first full year of operation, and £40,000 and £30,000 in the subsequent years. The amounts in the respective financial years are £25,000 in 1987-88, £45,000 in 1988-89, £35,000 in 1989-90 and (provisionally) £15,000 in 1990-91.

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Dr. Barker was appointed chairman of INFORM; and for how long her appointment runs.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We understand that Dr. Barker has been chairman of INFORM since its inception; that she was formally appointed chairman by the board of governors when INFORM became a limited company in February, 1989; and that the length of her appointment is at the discretion of the board of governors.

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the annual report of INFORM was published.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Under the terms of its grant INFORM is required to submit a report on its activities each year. The last such report was received by the Home Office in May 1989. Copies may be obtained from INFORM, and I am asking it to send one to my hon. Friend.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what subjects were discussed when he last met the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There has been no further formal contact between my right hon. and learned Friend and the Association of Chief Police Officers since I replied to a question from the hon. Member on 5 December at column 182.

Horserace Totalisator Board

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much, in each case, the Horserace Totalisator Board has invested in capital expenditure for the racecourse division and Tote Credit Ltd over each of the last six years ending 1989-90; and what is the current asset value in each balance sheet.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Other than its annual report submitted to Parliament or in its annual returns to Companies House concerning Tote Credit Ltd and Tote Bookmakers Ltd, the Tote does not publish detailed breakdowns of the information requested as it regards such information as commercially sensitive.

Figures for Tote Credit Ltd's capital expenditure as given in its returns are as follows:

1983-84	131
1984-85	225
1985-86	188
1986-87	243
1987-88	262
1988-89	[1]2,593

[1] Includes substantial one-off expenditure on the new Wigan headquarters which were opened by my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd) on 28 February 1989.

Figures for 1989-90 are not yet available.

The net book value of capital expenditure for Tote Credit Ltd on 31 March 1989 was £4,333,000.

Information Storage

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on the application of the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986 of the requirement of the Data Protection Act or other legislation controlling information storage and retrieval.

Mr. Mellor: The Drug Trafficking Offences Act enables banks and other financial institutions to disclose suspicions to the enforcement authorities without infringing the law on confidentiality and personal privacy. The evidence is that it has achieved this objective. The Government have stated, however, that they are keeping the working of the Drug Trafficking Offences Act under continuing review, and that they are prepared to take whatever action is necessary if problems are found to arise.

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on the applications of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 of the requirements of the Data Protection Act or other legislation controlling information storage and retrieval.

Mr. John Patten: I have no reason to believe that the application of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 has been impeded by the confidentiality or privacy requirements of other legislation. We will, however, keep the matter under review.

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on the application of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 of the requirements of the Data Protection Act or other legislation controlling information storage and retrieval.

Mr. Mellor: I have no evidence that the application of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 has been impeded by the confidentiality or privacy requirements of other legislation, but I will keep this matter under review.

London Prison Doctors

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of fully qualified medical doctors employed in each of the London prisons as at 7 February.

Mr. Mellor: The following is the information requested:

Medical practitioners occupying complemented medical officer posts in London prisons as at 7 February 1990

Establishments	Principal Medical Officer	Senior Medical Officer	Medical Officer	Part-time Medical Officer	Total
Ashford	—	1	1	—	2

DNA Testing

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his policy towards legal powers to take samples, such as blood or hair roots, in respect of screening people who there may be no reason to suspect of involvement in the offence;

(2) what proposals he has for a DNA databank for use in the fight against serious crime; what type of offences will be covered; what type of sample will need to be taken; and whether types of sample such as blood or hair roots will be taken without the consent of the individual concerned;

(3) whether he will consult the Law Lords on the question which would arise if a doctor was asked to take a blood sample without consent, the question being how to obtain a sample from someone who refuses consent, and may physically resist having a sample taken, and on the question of the acceptability of evidence obtained under duress by the courts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend is still considering the issues set out in the letter which my noble Friend the Minister of State sent to the hon. Member on 7 December. He is currently consulting the British Medical Association and the Association of Police Surgeons on the medical ethics of taking blood samples without consent from suspects in police detention and from convicted offenders. My right hon. and learned Friend will consider what further consultations are necessary in the light of their response. He has no plans to amend the law to enable the police to take blood or other samples from people who are not suspects or convicted offenders and who do not consent. The police are free to ask people to provide samples voluntarily.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to include provisions in his Computer Misuse Bill to promote safeguards to ensure that information stored in a DNA databank would not be open to misuse.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The Data Protection Act 1984 already provides appropriate safeguards against misuse of personal data held on a computer database. These include a requirement that the data user must take security measures against unauthorised access.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he is giving to the use of DNA material unrelated to crime.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: DNA testing has been used to establish relationship in immigration and paternity cases.

Blundeston Prison

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to publish the prison department's report into the serious disturbance in January at Her Majesty's prison, Blundeston.

Mr. Mellor: As indicated in the reply which I gave to a question by my hon. Friend on 18 January at columns 378-79, the regional director for the south-east region of the prison service is examining the cause of this demonstration. It is not the practice to publish internal management documents but I shall write to my hon. Friend when the regional director's report has been received and considered.

Management Consultants

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Oxford, East on 31 January, Official Report, columns 203-4, who awarded the contracts on (a) the practicality of private sector involvement in the remand system to Deloitte Haskins and Sells in 1988 and (b) the organisation of the prison service above establishment level to PA Consulting Group in 1989; what was the cost of each contract; and if he will list any similar reports commissioned from outside management consultants since 1985 and give their date of completion and cost.

Mr. Waddington: The Home Office awarded a contract to Deloitte Haskins and Sells for a study into the practicality of private sector involvement in the remand system, and another to PA Consulting Group for a review of the prison service organisation above establishment level. For details of the assignment to Deloitte Haskins and Sells I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his question on 13 February 1990 at column 131. The duration of the contract awarded to PA Consulting Group for a review of the prison service organisation above establishment level was extended in July 1989 and again in December 1989, and remains extant. The total cost of this assignment will not be available until April 1990. For details of similar reports from outside management consultants awarded and completed since 1985, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his question on 31 January 1990 at column 203.

Bingo

Mr. Ilsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will consider amending the appropriate legislation to allow the advertising of bingo games.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) on 17 January at column 265.

Correspondence

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for East Lothian dated 11 December 1989 about a claim for a refund of the cost of a passport on the part of Mrs. Cameron of Musselburgh, East Lothian.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A reply will be sent within the next few days.

Motor Vehicle Pollution

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about offences relating to pollution from motor vehicles since 1987, including excessive smoke emissions and excessive noise; and whether he will take steps in future to publish annually a separate analysis of such offences.

Mr. John Patten: The available information about offences relating to motor vehicles is published annually in Home Office statistical publications. Summary information is set out in the bulletin entitled "Offences relating to Motor Vehicles, England and Wales"; the most recent, number 34/89, included data for 1988. Detailed information is given in the publication, "Offences relating to Motor Vehicles, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables". Copies of these publications are available in the Library.

Details of noise offences, offence group 22, are included in the supplementary tables publications.

For information relating to emission of smoke offences, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to her question on 15 January 1990 at columns 33-34.

Written Answers to Questions

TRANSPORT

Airports

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what expenditure his Department will incur in assisting the development of British airports in 1990-91.

Mr. McLoughlin: My Department does not pay grant for airport development, but it authorises borrowing for the expansion and development of facilities at local authority airports. For 1990-91 borrowing approvals totalling £59 million will be available.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to approve access from the centre of London to Heathrow and Gatwick airports by road, rail and tube;

(2) what plans his Department has to improve the transport infrastructure serving the airports of London and the south-east in the next five years.

Mr. McLoughlin: A number of proposed schemes will improve access to airports in London and the south-east. I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to assist the expansion of London as an international hub for airline traffic.

Mr. McLoughlin: In Heathrow and Gatwick the United Kingdom has the world's two busiest international airports, and BAA plc is currently investing some £400 million in the development of Stansted airport. We have commissioned advice from the Civil Aviation Authority on United Kingdom airport capacity needed through to 2005.

HGV Drivers

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he intends to support the amendment proposed by the French Government to regulation 3820/85 on drivers' working hours;

(2) what assessment he has made of the contribution of driver fatigue to road accidents; and what steps he is taking to promote drivers' health, safety and welfare in the discussions at the Council of Ministers on amendments to EEC regulation 3820/85.

Mr. Atkins: The rules on drivers' hours were agreed in 1986 after lengthy discussions. It is too soon to be considering their amendment. A Council directive aimed at improving arrangements for enforcing the social regulations on drivers' hours and tachographs was implemented last year.

Most accidents are caused by a combination of many different factors. Studies indicate that fatigue is a contributory factor in between 4 and 11 per cent. of accidents.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the likely impact on heavy goods vehicle driver employment in the United Kingdom domestic haulage companies of the implementation of the single European market.

Mr. Atkins: A study by the Polytechnic of Central London showed that about 1 per cent. of United Kingdom domestic traffic was at risk from caboteurs, but that there were more than compensating opportunities for United Kingdom hauliers abroad.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the ratio between employed heavy goods vehicle drivers and owner-drivers employed in the United Kingdom and between the two categories of heavy goods vehicles drivers in other European Community member countries.

Mr. Atkins: There are over 1 million current holders of HGV driver licences. Information is not available on the ratio of employed to owner-drivers, but the latter will represent a relatively small proportion. Likewise, we do not keep information on other European Community countries.

Road Haulage

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the likely impact on road haulage rates of the implementation of the single European market.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to him today about the effect on the domestic market. Road haulage rates in the United Kingdom are subject to market pricing and this should also apply to rates across the liberalised transport services of the single European market.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria he has established for monitoring the introduction of the transitional road cabotage system from July for its effects on competition.

Mr. Atkins: We want to see United Kingdom hauliers making full use of the available cabotage permits. The Department will monitor applications for permits and the use made of them. The Department will also be liaising closely with industry representatives.

Each member state is required to send data to the Commission quarterly on cabotage operations carried out by its hauliers. This is to enable the Commission to analyse the overall effect of the trial scheme in preparation for the definitive scheme from 1992.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in achieving harmonisation of the conditions of competition between road haulage companies in the member states of the European Community prior to implementation of the single European market.

Mr. Atkins: Agreement has been reached on common social conditions (drivers' hours and tachographs), on rules for access to the profession, on weights and dimensions, and on enforcement. A draft directive on the harmonisation of vehicle taxes for heavy goods vehicles is under discussion.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safeguards he intends to introduce with the implementation of the single European market to protect the interests of the United Kingdom domestic hire or reward haulage companies against unfair competition by international hauliers.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to his previous question. We shall enforce the agreed rules. United Kingdom road hauliers are among the most competitive in Europe and have much experience of operating in a deregulated market.

Motorway Construction

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current cost per mile of motorway construction.

Mr. Atkins: Costs vary so much—because of differences in factors such as the location of the road, the number and design of junctions and structures, and ground conditions—that it is impractical to give an average cost per mile. Recent examples of works costs per mile of motorway schemes are, in outturn prices:

	£ million
New motorway
M40 Warwick North	4·2
M40 Warwick South	4·8
M63/M66 Portwood-Denton	10·0
Widening
M25 Junctions 11-13	4·5
M63 Stages 1 and 2 (with Barton Bridge)	12·0

Vehicle Speeds Experiment

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department's experiment to ascertain the effect on vehicle speeds of substituting 70 mph road signs for white circles with a black diagonal stripe took place; what the result of the experiment has been; and if he will place the data collected in the Library.

Mr. Atkins: An experiment to test the effect of 70 mph repeater signs has been carried out on a stretch of the M1 and the results are now being assessed. Initial indications are that these signs had no effect on the speed of the majority of vehicles. When a report has been prepared I shall place a copy in the Library.

A6 Bypass

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the 1989 prices of the modified brown, purple, brown as a public consultation and blue routes on the proposed A6 Disley-High lane bypass.

Mr. Atkins: The information is as follows:

	£ million
Preferred Route (modified Brown)	49
Brown	69
Purple	52
Blue	74

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he received from British Coal concerning the line of route of the proposed A6 Disley-High lane bypass.

Mr. Atkins: British Coal mentioned the existence of shafts and shallow mine workings in the areas. It referred to potential opencast coal reserves along the purple, blue and orange routes and asked to be kept informed of progress on the scheme.

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he received from the National Trust concerning the line of route of the proposed A6 Disley-High lane bypass.

Mr. Atkins: The National Trust supported the Department's preferred brown route in so far as it avoided the trust's property at Lyme park. It agreed with the Department's reasons for rejecting the purple route.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action under the control of industrial major accident hazard regulations which came into effect in 1986, his Department has considered with respect to toxic waste and dangerous chemicals that travel through south Yorkshire by road and rail.

Mr. Portillo: The Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazards Regulations 1984, as amended in 1988, apply only to fixed industrial installations. The transport of dangerous substances, including toxic waste, by road and rail is fully regulated to ensure maximum safety and the regulations are kept under review.

Black Cabs

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many London black cab taxis are on the road or licensed on any given day.

Mr. Portillo: A total of 15,792 licensed taxis are currently available for use in London. Given the flexible nature of taxi operations, it is not possible to estimate the percentage of black cabs which might be operating on any given day.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average income of the London black cab taxi drivers.

Mr. Portillo: No figures are available. London taxi drivers are private, often one-man operations and their income derives directly from the number of hours worked which varies considerably from driver to driver.

London Assessment Studies

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many copies of the abbreviated report on each of the London assessment studies have been produced and distributed; what languages they have been translated into; and what interpreters have been sent to public consultations.

Mr. Atkins: Each of the study consultants have produced some 50,000 copies of their stage 2 report summaries. Of these, between 30,000 and 35,000 have been distributed for each study. The east London assessment study summary has been translated into Bengali. No interpreters have been required to date.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many copies of the full report of each of the London assessment studies issued on 14 December 1989 have been made available to hon. Members, local authorities, press and community organisations; and at what cost.

Mr. Atkins: Over 1,500 copies of the London assessment studies stage 2 reports have been issued free of charge at a total cost to the Department of approximately £43,000.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many letters have been received by his Department (a) directly and (b) via consultants acting for him in response to each of the London assessment studies that he announced on 14 December 1989.

Mr. Atkins: Many letters on the assessment studies are received every day by the Department and the study consultants. Results of the consultations will not be available until after 28 February. Interim counts would involve disproportionate cost.

Electrically Powered Vehicles

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each year since 1980 the total number of electrically powered road vehicles in the categories of (a) delivery vehicles and (b) passenger vehicles.

Mr. Atkins: The total numbers of electric goods vehicles and passenger vehicles for each year since 1980 are:

Licensed at end of	Passenger vehicles	'Goods' vehicles
1980	124	[1]
1981	138	[1]
1982	156	[1]
1983	175	[1]
1984	189	[1]
1985	202	27,905
1986	208	27,401
1987	225	26,792
1988	170	26,110
1989[2]	155	25,138

[1] Figures for goods vehicles are not given for 1984 and before because changes in the way the figures are compiled prevent comparison with post 1984 figures.
[2] At September 1989.

Note:
No separate figures exist for delivery vehicles as such it is likely that the large majority of goods vehicles are 'delivery' vehicles.

The market has not shown any preference for electric passenger vehicles despite the exemption of electric vehicles from vehicle excise duty.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen), Official Report, 8 February, column 782, any high level waste as a constituent component of spent nuclear fuel has been transported by train since 1979.

Mr. Portillo: All irradiated nuclear fuel contains a small non-reusable component. This does not arise as waste until after the fuel has been reprocessed.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen), Official Report, 8 February, column 782, what is the basis of his calculation of the date 2005 as the definitive year before which there are no plans to transport nuclear waste through London.

Mr. Portillo: UK Nirex Limited is planning to develop a deep repository for the disposal of low and intermediate-level radioactive wastes and is also developing the necessary transport system. Nirex aims to start disposing of wastes in the year 2005.

Travel Information

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet with the Automobile Association to discuss the use of the Automobile Association roadwatch travel information database for the relief of road congestion and the promotion of tourism; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I visited the AA roadwatch headquarters on 24 January. The Department regards the provision of travel information as extremely important, and is considering with interested organisations ways of improving the reliability and availability of information through better arrangements for its collection, co-ordination and dissemination.

Special Constables

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the hon. Member for Uxbridge concerning the swearing in of special constables in accordance with the Harbours Docks and Piers Clauses Act 1847; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: On a number of occasions in the past year my hon. Friend has made known to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and his predecessor the views of the Police Federation about the use of these powers by harbour authorities. We shall shortly let my hon. Friend know the Government's views on the matter in connection with his Harbours Docks and Piers Clauses Act 1847 (Amendment) Bill.

Channel Tunnel

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will publish in the Official Report his letter of 12 February to the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling on the proposed joint venture agreement between British Rail and Eurorail.

Mr. Portillo: I have placed a copy of the letter in the Library.

Birmingham Airport

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has completed his examination of the question of according gateway status to Birmingham airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The "gateway international airport" was one of four categories of airport conceived in a 1978 White Paper as part of a framework for airports policy; the 1985 airports policy White Paper discontinued the other three categories. In view of the rapid development of international air traffic, including long-haul traffic, since 1985, and the increasing number of more liberal air services arrangements which the United Kingdom has negotiated, I have decided to discontinue the category of gateway international airport as used in the two White Papers.

The United Kingdom will continue to seek a balanced expansion of air services arrangements under which additional services will be able to operate from regional airports.

Roads Report

Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the roads report.

Mr. Parkinson: I am publishing the report "Trunk Roads, England—into the 1990s" today. Copies have been placed in the Library and are also available from the Vote Office. The report gives full details of our programme for improving the trunk road network in England. It also outlines new proposals for the enhancement of environmental treatment of schemes.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

The Attorney-General: Neither the legal secretariat to the Law Officers nor the Treasury Solicitor's Department has employed private security firms. The Serious Fraud Office currently employs the firm of Rodway Security. This contract provides for two employees and the value of the contract is £39,312 per year. The Serious Fraud Office engaged the firm of Reliance Security Services Limited from March 1988 to October 1988, the total value of this contract being £13,606·80.

The Crown prosecution service currently employs Reliance Security Services Limited and Diamond Security Services, the number of employees for each firm on the contract being four and two respectively. The total value of each contract, and the total value of all contracts since the financial year 1986-87 (when the CPS was created) are as follows:

	Reliance £	Diamond £	Total £
1986-87	9,000	—	9,000
1987-88	14,360	—	14,360
1988-89	33,459	—	33,459
1989-90	54,458	29,000	83,458
Total	111,277	29,000	140,277

Southwark Crown Court

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Attorney-General what was the cost of works carried out recently at Southwark Crown court; and if he will describe them.

The Attorney-General: The recent alterations to courtrooms at the Crown court at Southwark were as follows:

Court 2: For a trial which took place between May and August 1989 some fixed furniture was removed and replaced by loose furniture. The fixed furniture was replaced after the trial. In addition storage racks were provided and trunking for electrical cables. The total cost was £7,043. Further alterations which have recently been carried out are expected to cost about £25,000.

Court 4: For a trial which took place between May and December 1989 loose courtroom furniture and storage racks were provided at a cost of £4,216.

Court 1: For a trial which took place in January 1990 loose furniture which had been used in earlier trials was provided. The cost of adapting the courtroom is expected to be about £2,000.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Attorney-General what was the cost of works carried out recently to court 2 at Southwark Crown court, number 2; and if he will describe them.

The Attorney-General: The cost of the recent alterations to court No. 2 at the Crown court at Southwark is expected to be about £25,000. The work carried out included removal of fixed furniture and its replacement by loose furniture, the supply of storage racking for papers, and the provision of microphones and amplification equipment.

The Crown court at Southwark has been designated by the Lord Chief Justice as one of a number of Crown court centres at which serious fraud cases may be tried. It is expected that more such cases will be tried there in the near future and that further use will be made of the adapted courtrooms.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Forth: The private security firms currently employed by this Department, and the number of guards on each contract, are as follows: Thorn Security Services Limited (38 guards), Chubb Wardens Ltd. (21), Centuryan Security Ltd. (15), Group 4-Welsh Guards Limited (10), Shorrock Guards Ltd. (5), Security Express Guards Ltd. (3) and Sterling Guards Ltd. (1). The value of each contract is commercially confidential information. The total value (excluding VAT) of all contracts placed by DTI since 1984-85 is:

1984-85	657,000
1985-86	778,000
1986-87	993,600
1987-88	1,165,683
1988-89	1,168,813
1989-90	[1]1,318,800

[1] Estimated.

Solvents

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action is being taken to encourage manufacturers to produce safe alternatives to solvents which are open to abuse.

Mr. Forth: The Intoxicating Substances (Supply) Act makes it an offence to sell a solvent-based product to a young person if he appears to want it for sniffing. There are already available alternatives to many solvent-based products, which cannot be sniffed.

South Africa

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the percentage of United Kingdom exports going to South Africa in each of the 10 years ended 31 December 1989.

Mr. Redwood: The information is in the table:

United Kingdom exports to South Africa

Year	Value £ millions	Percentage of total United Kingdom exports
1980	998	2·1
1981	1,217	2·4
1982	1,191	2·2
1983	1,111	1·8
1984	1,204	1·7
1985	1,009	1·3
1986	849	1·2
1987	949	1·2
1988	1,075	1·3
1989	1,038	1·1

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: At present, paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paternity leave.

Consumer Protection

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans he has for protecting consumers involved in home annuity schemes for setting down guidelines for these schemes; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what proposals he has for (a) controlling the selling of home income annuity schemes, (b) issuing guidance to consumers considering such schemes and (c) requiring a period of consultation and cooling off before such schemes are finalised;

(3) what proposals he has for requiring special conditions and consumer protection for controls for the roll-up home loan or investments in home loans to pensioners;

(4) what representations he has received about (a) the effects of home income annuity schemes on the elderly, (b) the need for consumer protection in this area and (c) the dangers of schemes where unpaid interest is rolled up and added to the loan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has received only one letter about home income schemes and has no plans for legislation on this matter. Consumers are protected by the Financial Services Act 1986 which applies to the investment element in such schemes and by the Consumer Credit Act 1974 which applies to the connected loan.

Office of Fair Trading

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what proposals he has for reviewing publication of decisions by the Office of Fair Trading that it is minded to revoke licences as moneylenders and for speeding up the procedure of revocation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he asked the Office of Fair Trading to investigate the affairs of Richard Murtagh and Co. and its related companies; when that investigation was completed; when the firms were put out of business and their licences revoked; how many homeowners took out home income schemes with the companies; what interest rates were charged; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Consumer credit licensing is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading and I will ask him to write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, in the light of the statement by the Director General of Fair Trading that the practices of Richard Murtagh and Co. and its associated companies were deceitful, oppressive or otherwise unfair or improper but not illegal, he has any proposals for preventing such practices in future; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has no such proposals. Under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 the Director General of Fair Trading has the power to revoke the licence of any trader who engages in business practices which are deceitful, oppressive or otherwise unfair or improper.

Home Income Annuities

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what research he has initiated into the effect of falling house prices on home income annuity schemes; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will refer home income annuity schemes to the Office of Fair Trading to investigate the scale of any associated problems or dangers arising from such schemes and whether any controls or legislation are desirable.

Mr. Forth: Under the Consumer Credit Act 1974 it is the duty of the Director General of Fair Trading to keep under review and from time to time to advise my right hon. Friend about social and commercial developments in the United Kingdom relating to the provision of credit and related activities. I will write to the director general to draw his attention to the hon. Gentleman's questions.

Estate Agents

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has for requiring registration, training qualifications and insurance funds for estate agents.

Mr. Forth: I have no such proposals. The reasons why legislation on these matters would not be appropriate are set out in the report published in December 1988 of the Director General of Fair Trading's review of the Estate Agents Act 1979 and in the report published in June 1989 of my review of estate agency.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has for bringing estate agents within the terms of the Trade Descriptions Act.

Mr. Forth: As I told the hon. Member for Carlisle (Mr. Martlew) on 21 June 1989 at column 333, I have asked the Director General of Fair Trading to review the arguments for extending the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 to misdescriptions of property. His report is expected shortly.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what requirements for registration, professional competence tests and licensing exist for estate agents in (a) France, (b) West Germany and (c) Holland; and what proposals he has for bringing British requirements into line with other European Economic Community countries.

Mr. Forth: Information on the requirements for estate agents in European Community countries has recently been published by the Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors. I have placed relevant extracts from its publication "1992 A General Practice Guide To the Single European Market" by Michael Treays FRICS in the House of Commons Library. My right hon. Friend has no proposals for introducing such requirements.

Disabled Staff

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the number of disabled employees in his Department; and what is the applicable statutory quota.

Mr. Forth: The Department employs 128 registered disabled staff (1·1 per cent.). We also employ 73 other disabled staff (0·6 per cent.) who have chosen not to register.

Tampons

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what information he has on health warnings carried on tampons sold in the United States to alert women to the dangers of contracting toxic shock syndrome; and if he will consult manufacturers of tampons with a view to introducing a warning on each package of tampons that use of them can cause toxic shock syndrome and that it can be fatal;

(2) whether he will consider requiring manufacturers to print an ingredients list on the packaging of tampons;

(3) whether legislation would be necessary to require manufacturers to carry warnings on tampon packets that the use of tampons can cause toxic shock syndrome.

Mr. Forth: In the United States packets of tampons are required to carry a warning about the danger of toxic shock syndrome. In this country the industry labels packets of tampons with information about their use. The industry has been asked to provide in the safety instructions inside the packet, information about toxic shock syndrome and what to look for. The information given by manufacturers about tampons with these products is kept under review, but I have no present intention to make regulations under the Consumer Protection Act 1987.

Birmingham (Overseas Companies)

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what interest is being shown by overseas companies in becoming established in Birmingham.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Overseas businesses are currently showing great interest in Birmingham and in the west midlands in general. There are now over 100 overseas companies operating in the Birmingham area and I am pleased to be able to announce that the West German company Keiper Recaro, a leading manufacturer of car seats, is to establish a subsidiary company on the Woodgate business park in my hon. Friend's constituency. This project is forecast to create 96 jobs and an offer of regional selective assistance (of £250,000) has been made towards it.

This follows the recent announcement by another West German automotive components company, Kirsten Automotive of its plans to establish a facility on the same business park. That project is forecast to create a further 58 jobs.

We are in discussion with a number of other overseas companies planning to establish their United Kingdom headquarters in Birmingham. Prospects are very encouraging.

Light Sources

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the potential dangers to health known to his Department from the use of consumer products which can produce flicker or stroboscopic light sources with a flicker rate in excess of five flashes per second; and if he will issue a statement about those potential dangers of such products.

Mr. Forth: It is known that the direct exposure to flicker or stroboscopic light can create a susceptibility in a small proportion of the population—about one in 10,000—to flicker sensitive epilepsy. This can occur within a range of frequencies from five to 65 flashes per second which can be generated by television or amateur cine projection equipment. Additionally, of course, there is a physical danger that rotating equipment under stroboscopic light can be perceived to be stationary when it is in fact moving rapidly.

However, I am not aware of evidence where these effects have become a general threat to safety in the use of consumer products.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those consumer products on sale in the United Kingdom, of which he has knowledge, which are capable of producing a flicker or stroboscopic light source with a flicker rate in excess of five flashes per second.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 16 February 1990]: The information is not available in the form requested but there are two groups of products which are capable of producing regular pulses of light at a frequency greater than five flashes per second. The largest group includes lighting products such as fluorescent tubes or television screens where flicker is unintended but nonetheless produces flicker rates varying between 30 and 100 pulses per second, arising from the electrical mains frequency or screen scanning frequency. The second group covers products where the stroboscopic effect is intended, as with equipment for adjusting motor engine timing dynamically, where the strobe frequency is variable in a range upwards of about 10 pulses per second.

Any piece of continuous lighting equipment can, of course, be made to flash for effect, as in the case of discotheque lighting. Camera equipment normallly used for single flash operation can also create a stroboscopic effect with a series of flashes when used with a film motor drive.

Eastern Europe (Imports)

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which products from (a) Poland, (b) East Germany, (c) Czechoslovakia, (d) Romania, (e) Bulgaria, (f) Hungary and (g) Yugoslavia are subject to any form of import restrictions, including quotas, voluntary restraint agreements and tariffs at either European Community or national level; and if he will set out details.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 14 February 1990]: Details of the products which are subject to such restrictions are too numerous to set out in an answer. Most of them can be found in published sources which are available in the Library as follows:

Quantitative Restrictions

List of quantitative restrictions applied by one or more member states are covered by Annex III of Regulation 3420/83, which was last updated and published as Official Journal L217 of 6 August 1987. However, there are no quantitative restrictions on imports from Yugoslavia and on 1 January 1990, quantitative restrictions on imports to the EC from Poland and Hungary were liberalised or suspended. New arrangements for 1990 quotas are currently being considered by the EC Commission and are expected to be published shortly.

Steel and Textiles

Bilaterally agreed arrangements in limiting steel and textile imports into the Community from Poland, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Yugoslavia are in place. Textile products which are specifically affected by these arrangements are set out in EC Regulations 768/88 (as published in EC Official Journal L84 of 29 March 1988) and 669/88 (covered by EC Official Journal L73 of 18 March 1989). Quotas are operated on ECSC steel products for the GDR under Commission Recommendation 77/328/ECSC. Details of product coverage were last published in British Business magazine of 5 May 1989 and in future will be published in Lloyds List International. Voluntary restraint arrangements which are negotiated annually with the other countries cover most ECSC products and are not published because they are commercially confidential.

Leather Footwear

Although there are no formal United Kingdom quantitative restrictions on leather footwear from Eastern Europe, voluntary restraint arrangements have been negotiated by the EC Commission with Romania and Czechoslovakia on our behalf.

Tariffs

The EC's 1990 general tariff rates for all products are set out in EC Official Journal L282/89 published on 2 October 1989. Most Favoured Nation rates apply to each of the countries listed except where special arrangements apply. Poland, Hungary and Romania are beneficiaries of the EC's Generalised Scheme of Preferences and products from these countries which benefit from GSP provisions are set in EC Official Journal L383/89 published on 30 December 1989.

The EC has signed a trade agreement with Yugoslavia which provides for preferential access to the EC market for a range of products from that country. Details of these arrangements for 1990 are covered in EC Official Journal L352 of 4 December 1989.

Anti-Dumping Duties

Other EC anti-dumping measures involve the imposition of anti-dumping duties on the following products:

Product Chemicals	Country
Potassium Permanganate	Czechoslovakia
Copper Sulphate	Yugoslavia, Bulgaria
Light Sodium Carbonate	Bulgaria, Romania
Oxalic Acid	Czechoslovakia
Dinoseb	Romania
Welded Tubes of Iron or non-Alloy Steel	Yugoslavia
Sheets of Iron or non-Alloy Steel, Cold Rolled	Yugoslavia
Iron and Steel Sections	Yugoslavia
Iron or Steel Coils	Yugoslavia
Sheets and Plates of Iron or Steel	Yugoslavia
Synthetic Textiles Fibres of Polyester	Romania, Yugoslavia
Acrylic Fibres	Romania
Deep Freezers	GDR, Yugoslavia
Electric Motors	Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, GDR

In addition the EC operates an anti-dumping voluntary restraint on imports of urea from Hungary, the GDR, Czechoslovakia, Romania and Yugoslavia.

Other Measures

Other customs restrictions are also applied to products from third countries by the United Kingdom and other Member States on health, safety and public policy grounds.

Gas Consumers Council

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total number of complaints and representations dealt with by the Gas Consumers Council and by its predecessors in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The information is as follows:

	Complaints	Inquiries
1979-80	35,300	—
1980-81	28,000	—
1981-82	27,400	—
1982-83	28,200	—
1983-84	27,700	—
1984-85	27,000	—
1985-86	29,000	—
1987	26,400	64,400
1988	27,500	77,000
1989	21,400	66,000

Prior to 1987 and the setting up of the new Gas Consumers Council, statistics on the number of inquiries were not maintained. Moreover the statistics on the number of complaints are not directly comparable due to the different recording basis which took effect when the Gas Consumers Council was established.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total cost of wages and salaries and the total budget in each of the last 10 years for the Gas

Consumers Council and of its predecessors the National Gas Consumers Council and the regional gas consumers councils.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The information is as follows:

	Salaries £000	Total budget £000
1980-81	831	1,207
1981-82	913	1,355
1982-83	1,075	1,535
1983-84	1,088	1,585
1984-85	1,212	1,635
1985-86	1,294	1,710
1986-87	1,130	2,050
1987-88	1,034	1,918
1988-89	1,078	2,215
1989-90	1,129	2,212

The new Gas Consumers Council was set up in August 1986 and additional expenses of £588,000 and £700,000 were incurred in 1986-87 and 1987-88 respectively on setting up costs.

The total budget figures are not comparable: post 1986 the figures include accommodation costs. Prior to this date such costs were borne on the main departmental account and cannot be identified separately.

Meat Products

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the companies in the United Kingdom which have been given leave, or have applied, to manufacture blood gel plasma meat products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave today to his related question.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

South Africa

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of Her Majesty's Government's policy towards ending apartheid in South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We constantly assess policy in the light of developments in South Africa. The release of Nelson Mandela and the other steps announced by President de Klerk on 2 February are a vindication of our policy of contact rather than isolation and of a mixture of persuasive pressure and encouragement.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent communications he has had with the South African Government about the present situation in that country.

Mr. Waldegrave: We maintain regular contact with the South African authorities, both here and via Her Majesty's ambassador.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have invited Nelson Mandela to visit the United Kingdom for talks on the present South African situation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: On 14 February a message was delivered to Mr. Mandela inviting him to visit the United Kingdom.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to pay an official visit to South Africa over the coming year.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next envisages visiting South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs hopes to visit South Africa before long, perhaps at the time of Namibian independence.

China

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further steps Her Majesty's Government have taken since the Madrid council to encourage the Chinese authorities to admit independent observers to monitor political trials in China.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Presidency, on behalf of the Twelve, made representations on this subject to the Chinese authorities on 20 July 1989.

Human Rights

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will make a statement on initiatives taken by the Government and their European Community partners in the current session of the United Nations human rights commission.

Mr. Sainsbury: I outlined our priorities at the Commission on Human Rights on 13 February. Mr. Gerard Collins, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Ireland, made a statement on behalf of the EC on 2 February. Copies of these statements are being placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government intend to use the opportunity of the current session of the United Nations human rights commission to condemn human rights abuses in China.

Mr. Sainsbury: Together with our European partners, we raised our concerns about human rights in China in the opening week of the commission's current session. We intend to do so again under the item of the agenda which concerns situations in specific countries.

Immigration

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has yet arrived at a decision on entry clearance for the children of Mr. A. Hussein of Southend-on-Sea, reference GV100/6751.

Mr. Sainsbury: In accordance with the guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases, issued to Members on 14 December 1988, I have referred the question to the correspondence unit of the migration and visa department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. My hon. Friend will receive a reply from the unit as soon as possible.

East Timor

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which years since the adoption by the United Nations of a resolution on the right to self-determination of the East Timorese in 1975 the United Nations General Assembly has discussed the situation in East Timor; and how Her Majesty's Government voted on each occasion.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Nations General Assembly discussed East Timor at every General Assembly session between 1975 and 1982. We abstained on each occasion.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning the number and fate of people arrested, detained or tortured in East Timor since the visit there of Pope John Paul II in October 1989.

Mr. Sainsbury: We understand that 26 people may still be under investigation in connection with various incidents, including the demonstration after the Pope's mass on 12 October. A number of trials may follow. None was detained following the demonstration on 17 January during the United States ambassador's visit. There have been accusations of torture, but we are not in a position to substantiate them.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning the number of East Timorese who have disappeared or died through violence since the Indonesian occupation in East Timor in 1975; and what sources of information Her Majesty's Government have on this area.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have access to a range of sources which provide conflicting assessments. Estimates vary from 60,000 to 100,000 fatalities.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives Her Majesty's Government have taken to implement the right to self-determination for the people of East Timor (a) in direct contact with the Indonesian Government, (b) through the European Community, (c) in contact with the Association of South East Asia Nations, (d) at the United Nations and (e) in the inter government group on Indonesia.

Mr. Sainsbury: We consider that the conditions required for a definitive exercise of self-determination can be created only through co-operation between the two Governments directly concerned, those of Portugal and Indonesia. We and our EC partners have therefore sought to encourage such a settlement in contacts with the Indonesians and the United Nations. We are sure that the United Nations Secretary-General, Portugal and Indonesia will be concerned to find a settlement which fully protects the interests of the people of East Timor. We have not raised the issue in the intergovernmental group on Indonesia. ASEAN countries do not regard East Timor as a regional issue for discussion with Her Majesty's Government.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the inter government group on Indonesia has considered the request of parliamentarians for East Timor that the group discusses the occupation of East Timor by Indonesia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The intergovernmental group on Indonesia has not considered this request.

Turkey (Kurdish People)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Turkey concerning their treatment of the Kurdish people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are in regular touch with the Turkish Government about the human rights of all groups in Turkey, including Kurds. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs most recently raised the issue with the Turkish deputy Prime Minister, Professor Ali Bozer on 22 January.

Polisario Front

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings have been held by officials of his Department of Ministers with the Polisario Front.

Mr. Waldegrave: No Foreign Office Minister has met a Polisario representative. But there have been occasional informal meetings between Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials and Polisario representatives.

Nuclear Arms

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during his recent visit to Canada, he raised the issues of (a) the 1970 nuclear proliferation treaty and its forthcoming fourth review conference, (b) prospects for a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty and (c) the flight testing of missile and aircraft systems.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

ENERGY

Electricity Imports

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what percentage of electricity is now imported from French power stations via the Channel cable.

Mr. Baldry: In 1989 net imports of electricity from France accounted for 4 per cent. of total electricity available from the United Kingdom public supply system.

Nuclear Energy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has been sent a copy of the dossier "Why We Need Nuclear Electricity", produced by the British Nuclear Forum this year.

Mr. Baldry: Yes.

Global Warming

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of Wordwatch paper 91 "Slowing Global Warming: A Worldwide Strategy" by Christopher Flavin, published in 1989.

Mr. Wakeham: A copy of this paper is already held in the Department of Energy library.

Heat Pumps

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department will (a) be represented at and (b) present any paper to the International Energy Agency conference "Heat Pumps—Solving Energy and Environmental Challenges" to be held in Tokyo on 12 to 15 March.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department's views on heat pumps have been expressed at the two previous IEA Conferences in 1984 and 1987 and have not changed since.

Hinkley B Power Station

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) for how long both reactors at Hinkley B were without any means of cooling on Sunday 11 February;

(2) for how many minutes the nuclear reactor at Hinkley B was operating at full load on Sunday 11 February in the absence of any means of cooling;

(3) if he will instigate a full public inquiry into the incident at Hinkley B power station on 11 February;

(4) if he will make a statement on the incident which took place at Hinkley B on Sunday 11 February;

(5) what is the maximum estimated time an advanced gas-cooled nuclear reactor on full load can function without going into melt down in the absence of any means of cooling;

(6) when he commissioned a report from the nuclear installations inspectorate into the incident at Hinkley B power station on 11 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The matter in question concerned a loss of grid supplies at Hinkley Point B as a result of storms that night. The reactors, however, had already been shut down and were in a totally safe state when disconnection from the grid system occurred. The possibility of such loss of grid supplies was anticipated during the design of the station, which has more than adequate safety systems and back up generation facilities to ensure its safe operation. All station safety equipment functioned correctly. Station staff are trained to deal with this type of eventuality and did so successfully. The Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate will follow up the matter as part of its normal inspection duties in order to confirm details.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many people live within (a) 3 miles and (b) 15 miles of Hinkley B power station.

Mr. Baldry: There are 1,700 people living within 5 km (3·1 miles) and 286,000 living within 25 km (15·5 miles) of Hinkley B power station.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will detail the emergency procedures which exist in the event of a serious incident at Hinkley B power station.

Mr. Baldry: Operators of nuclear installations in the United Kingdom are required by Her Majesty's nuclear installations inspectorate (NII) of the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), as a condition of their licences, to prepare emergency plans which are also subject to approval by the inspectorate. These plans, on which local authorities, police and other bodies must be consulted, are kept under continuous review and are tested regularly in exercises monitored by the NII. They cover both emergency procedures at the site and off-site arrangements to protect the public.

Detailed emergency plans cover an area determined by the reference accident—that is, the accident which, although very unlikely, has the greatest off-site consequences that can reasonably be predicted, given the design of the plant, its protective systems and its operating limits. The emergency plans can be extended to deal with more serious and therefore, more improbable accidents. In such cases the police, emergency services and local authorities would make use of their general emergency planning arrangments for other accidents. This approach was endorsed by the Layfield report on the Sizewell inquiry.

In a statement on 12 December 1988, the Prime Minister said that extensive consultations with the emergency services and local authorities have "confirmed the availability of contingency plans which would permit an effective response to be made to any nuclear accident, including those with more widespread effects than the specific site and off-site plans are designed to cater for". —[Official Report, 12 December 1988; Vol. 143. c. 391.]

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the effect of sea spray on the insulators in the Hinkley B substation close to the shore.

Mr. Baldry: Excessive salt deposition in the 400 KW substation, at Hinkley Point B, can occasionally cause separation from the grid, but in such instances reactors are automatically shut down.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the safety procedures at Hinkley B power station.

Mr. Baldry: The Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate advises me that it is fully satisfied with the safety procedures at Hinkley Point B.

Nuclear Reactors

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy under what circumstances generators in advanced gas-cooled reactor nuclear power plants are switched on to manual overdrive; and under what circumstances they are switched back.

Mr. Baldry: Depending on the situation, there is a variety of procedures for switching electrical supplies available to the operators of advanced gas-cooled reactors.

IAEA Safety Review Team

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when the report of the International Atomic Energy Agency's operational safety review team's visit to Oldbury on Severn will be deposited in the Library.

Mr. Baldry: A copy of the report has been placed in the Library of the House.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to issue the consultation paper on the proposed new scheme of grants for the improvement of energy efficiency in low-income households.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department has today issued a consultation paper on a scheme which, subject to the approval of Parliament, I propose to introduce under regulations under clause 10 of the Social Security Bill. Copies of the paper are being placed in the Library.

The paper outlines the type of scheme it is hoped will be introduced, and invites comments from interested parties. Copies are available from the Energy Efficiency Office of the Department of Energy.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Aid Targeting

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts are made in the targeting of overseas aid to ensure that the benefits are obtained by the poorest citizens of those countries selected to receive aid.

Mrs. Chalker: The long-term alleviation of poverty requires sustained economic growth. But much can be done directly to help the poor participate in and benefit from the process of development. We therefore consider within all our bilateral country aid programmes the scope for targeting assistance on the poorest groups, as well as supporting the growth of the economy generally. We are channelling increasing amounts of aid through non-governmental organisations which are often best equipped to tackle poverty at grass roots level. In 1988-89 £63 million of aid was provided through non-governmental organisations.

Poorest Nations

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the 20 poorest nations measured by gross domestic product per head, indicating which of these received regular United Kingdom bilateral aid in the last 10 years.

Mrs. Chalker: The information is as follows:

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of United Kingdom bilateral aid has been specifically targeted towards the poorest nations, as measured by gross domestic product per head, during each of the last 10 years.

Mrs. Chalker: Figures for 1989 are not yet available. The information for the 50 poorest countries during the period 1979-88 is as follows:

East Timor

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the value of British economic and technical assistance to Indonesia since 1975; how much of this aid can be identified as having been used for projects in East Timor; and whether any efforts have been made to exclude aid from being used in East Timor.

Mrs. Chalker: Britain's gross bilateral aid to Indonesia from 1975 to 1988 (the most recent year for which records are available) totals £193,303,000. None of this aid has been used for projects in East Timor.

Primary Education Aid

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Overseas Development Agency plans to increase the proportion of overall project aid allocated to primary education in developing countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We shall first wish to discuss with overseas Governments at the forthcoming world conference on education for all the proportion of our assistance they wish to commit to primary education. We shall pursue these discussions in respect of developing Commonwealth countries at the conference of Commonwealth Education Ministers in Barbados later this year and with non-Commonwealth countries as opportunities arise.

Education Conference

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department will be represented at the world conference on education for all in Thailand in March; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 13 February at column 132.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to raise the need for increased expenditure on primary education by developing nations at the world conference on education for all.

Mrs. Chalker: We shall discuss with representatives of developing countries at the world conference on education for all the priority which should be given to increased expenditure on primary education. We shall pursue this discussion with Ministers of Education from developing Commonwealth countries at the conference of Education Ministers which is to be held in Barbados later this year and with non-Commonwealth countries as opportunities arise.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Reorganisation

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the extent of his powers to modify secondary school reorganisation proposals put to him by local education authorities.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend is empowered by section 12(6) of the Education Act 1980, after consultation with the local education authority, to approve proposals with such modifications as he thinks desirable. He is not, however, empowered to modify proposals to such an extent as to change them in substance or alter them in such a way as to deprive potential objectors of the opportunity of full and informed consideration of the proposals as a whole.

Medical Research

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received about the need for a better balance between medical research facilities in the north and south of England.

Mr. Jackson: None.

South African Students

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students from South Africa received tuition in Britain in 1989.

Mr. Jackson: In the academic year 1988-89 there were 619 full-time students on higher education courses in British universities, polytechnics and colleges whose country of domicile was recorded as South Africa.

"Industry Links"

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science to which organisation or company public funds have been granted for the making of the video "Industry Links"; how much money was involved; what information he has on which local authorities intend to use it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department of Education and Science has paid £12,000 to the company Dialogue to support the making of the video "Industry Links", slightly less than half the total cost of production. The balance is being met by contributions from Walsall local education authority, local and national businesses, and by sales of the video.

The video has been very well received. The Department intends therefore to fund its free distribution to every local education authority in England and Wales. The additional cost of this will be £1,924.

I am informed that the video has been in demand by chambers of commerce, compacts and businesses, and that copies have been bought by officers and advisers in some 30 local education authorities, and by some 70 individual schools and teachers' centres.

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy to propose limits to numbers in schools (a) to prevent schools maximising numbers and financial support under LMS and (b) to ensure equality between numbers in schools in difficult educational districts.

Mr. Alan Howarth: No. What the hon. Member proposes would run counter to the Government's policy of increasing parental choice through more open enrolment. There is no justification for keeping places empty in popular schools: if the demand is there, a school should be allowed to admit pupils up to its physical capacity.

Expenditure

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the amount of total local authority expenditure on education other than higher education in each year since 1979-80 in cash and in 1989-90 prices under the budget heads published in table 11.2 of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93", chapter 11, page 3, Cm. 1011.

Mr. MacGregor: The information requested is shown in tables 1 and 2.

Notes to tables:

1. The data in table 1 are those shown in table 11.2 of Cm. 1011 and the equivalent tables from previous public expenditure White Papers. Recurrent spending on higher education has been excluded, as has the "polytechnics (repayment of loans)" line from Cm. 1011 and the previous year's White Paper; a single sum is given for capital spending on further and higher education because the higher education element is not easily identifiable during the period in question.

2. The figures for 1988-89 and 1989-90 are provisional. Those for 1988-89 incorporate a distribution by sector of total current spending by local authorities based on their provisional outturn expenditure on education. The 1989-90 figures incorporate a provisional distribution by sector of total current spending by local authorities based on their budgets.

3. Figures for the breakdown of spending between non-maintained school fees, teachers' centres, child guidance and pupils support are not available for 1979-80 and 1980-81.

4. The data in table 2 reprice the data in table 1 to 1989-90 prices, using the current gross domestic product deflators.

5. Some of the columns may not sum due to rounding.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish figures for the amount of central Government-funded current expenditure on schools for each financial year from 1978-79 to date, in cash, and constant prices, and with a real terms index where 1978-79 = 100.

Mr. MacGregor: Central Government support local authority current expenditure on schools through specific grants and through general rate support grant (from April 1990, revenue support grant) which is not hypothecated to individual services. The amounts of expenditure local authorities in England have spent on schools between 1978-79 and 1989-90 in the light of the resources available to them are shown in table 1. The figures take no account of the significant fall in pupil numbers over the period. The Government have also directly funded since 1987-88 expenditure on city technology colleges and since 1989-90 expenditure on grant-maintained schools. The current element of this expenditure is shown in table 2.

Table 1
Local authority expenditure on schools

Year	Cash terms £ million	Real terms (1988-89 prices) £ million	Index (1978-79 = 100)
1978-79	4,547	9,999	100
1979-80	5,181	9,756	98
1980-81	6,283	9,997	100

1987-88	9,992	10,717	107
1988-89	10,794	10,794	108
1989-90	11,475	10,724	107

Notes:

1. The figure for 1978-79 contains small elements of central Government current expenditure. It is not possible separately to identify this element.

2. The cash terms figures are those shown in the Department of Education and Science chapters of successive public expenditure White Papers under the local authority schools heading, including expenditure on items such as pupil support and meals as well as direct institutional expenditure. The figures exclude grants paid by the Training Agency to local authorities in respect of the technical and vocational education initiative.

3. The figures for 1988-89 and 1989-90 are provisional. Those for 1988-89 reflect a distribution by sector of total current spending by local authorities based on their provisional outturn expenditure on education. The 1989-90 figures reflect a provisional distribution by sector of total current spending by local authorities based on their budgets.

4. The cash terms data have been repriced to real terms using the current gross domestic product deflators.

Note: The cash terms data have been repriced to constant terms using the current Gross Domestic Product deflators.

Student Grants

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a chart or table showing for each academic year since 1979 the maximum available student grant in cash figures, tabulated alongside the annual inflation rate for each academic year and the percentage increase of the grant for each academic year.

Mr. Jackson: The maximum available grant in any given year depends on the individual student's circumstances. The following table shows the information requested for the basic rate of maintenance grant appropriate to students studying outside London.

Academic year	Maintenance grant £	Increase on previous year per cent.	Inflation (R.P.I.) per cent.
1979-80	1,245	13·1	15·9
1980-81	1,430	14·9	11·4
1981-82	1,535	7·3	7·3
1982-83	1,595	3·9	5·1
1983-84	1,660	4·1	4·7

1988-89	2,050	4·0	7·6
1989-90	2,155	5·1	n/a

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a chart or table showing for each academic year since 1979 (a) the numbers of higher education students and (b) the percentage of the total number of students in higher education receiving (i) no grant, (ii) 1 to 25 per cent., (iii) 26 to 50 per cent., (iv) 51 to 75 per cent. and (v) 76 to 100 per cent. of the maximum grant allowance for that year.

Mr. Jackson: The information is not available in the format requested. The available data are as follows:

Mandatory award holders 1979-80 to 1987-88[1]

England and Wales

	Full maintenance award (no assessed parental or other contribution)		Reduced maintenance award		Nil or minimum[2] maintenance award
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Total

1987-88	150,978	37	153,273	38	100,064	25	404,315

[1] The years 1979-80 to 1982-83 include all full-value awards, some of which are local education authority discretionary awards.
[2] Between 1979-80 and 1984-85 all students received a minimum maintenance award. The mimimum award has halved in 1984-85 and abolished from 1985-86. All award holders have their fees paid by the local authority.

Tampon Education

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the tampon industry's schools education programme; and whether he will consider incorporating information for new tampon users about the danger of contracting toxic shock syndrome into schools' curricula.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Teaching about the use of sanitary protection would normally be covered within a school's programme of sex education. Under section 18(2) of the Education (No. 2) Act 1986 responsibility for determining an individual school's policy on the content and organisation of sex education rests with the school governors.

Independent Schools

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report, specifying in each case the local authorities concerned, those schools which, from 1980 to the latest date for which information is available, have changed from (a) independent to voluntary status and (b) voluntary to independent.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Community Charge

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information held by his Department will be available to community charge registration offices.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Community charge registration officers have no powers to seek information from the Department of Education and Science.

Welfare Officers

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will detail the number of education welfare officers engaged by local education authorities since 1978-79.

Mr. MacGregor: This information is not collected centrally by my Department.

Graduate Demand

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he received the study on graduate demand undertaken by the Policy Studies Institute; what are its conclusions; and when he expects to publish it.

Mr. MacGregor: I received this report of some commissioned research recently. I expect to make an announcement about publication and the implications of the report as soon as possible after I have completed my study of it.

School Buildings

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when his Department received a copy of the recent NFER survey of school buildings carried out under the auspices of the National Audit Office; if he will now publish the results of the survey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: My Department does not have a copy of the NFER survey. It is for the Comptroller and Auditor General to decide what use to make of any survey commissioned by the National Audit Office.

Student Unions

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he takes to ensure that the accounts of student unions are properly audited; and what legislation governs the auditing and publication of such accounts.

Mr. Jackson: None. Auditing and publication of accounts are matters for the relevant university, polytechnic or college. The Department's survey of student unions, published in September 1989, found that in over three quarters of the 71 unions surveyed, union accounts were subject to the approval of the institution involved.

Grant-maintained Status

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many objections were submitted to him in respect of each of the grant-maintained proposals that have subsequently been (a) approved and (b) rejected; and in each case how many people in total were signatories to such objections.

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The number of statutory objections received in respect of proposals for each of the grant-maintained proposals that were subsequently (a) approved and (b) rejected is as follows:

	Number of statutory objections

The total number of signatories in each case could not be established without disproportionate expense.

WALES

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial support his Department is giving this year towards the teaching of Welsh to adults in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: In the current financial year, Welsh Office support for the teaching of Welsh to adults is £305,000.

Community Charge

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will take steps to ensure that all district, borough and city councils distribute information leaflets on poll tax rebates to all individuals.

Mr. Peter Walker: Following consultations with the Welsh local authority associations, arrangements were made for all households in Wales to receive, in November 1989, a bilingual Welsh Office leaflet on community charge benefit. Local authorities are free to supplement these leaflets with their own information. Regulations which I shall shortly lay before the House will require Welsh charging authorities to include, in the material accompanying community charge demands, information about the availability of community charge benefit and how it may be claimed.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy have been confirmed to date (a) in the Carmarthen area, (b) in Dyfed and (c) in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: Total number of confirmed cases as at 9 February 1990.

	Number
(a) Old county of Carmarthen	101
(b) Dyfed	330
(c) Wales	690

Uniform Business Rates

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the level of uniform business rate set for each (a) university college, (b) college of further education, (c) college of higher education, (d) technical college and (e) tertiary college in Wales; and what are the current amounts paid in rates by each college.

Mr. Peter Walker: The uniform business rate for 1990-91 for each hereditament in the category listed is 36·8p in the pound. Information about the rates currently paid in respect of individual hereditaments is not held centrally.

Family Law

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representatives his Department has on the family law administration working party; and when those representatives last attended a meeting of the working party.

Mr. Grist: The Department is represented on the group of officials currently reviewing adoption law, an important aspect of the work of the family law administration working party. This group last met on Tuesday, 5 December 1989 and is due to meet again on Friday 2 March. Although not represented on the working party itself, we are kept in touch with developments.

A487

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to improve the A487 at Dyffryn Goodwick, Pembrokeshire, during the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: This road is the responsibility of Dyfed county council.

Acid Rain

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning the publication by the Natural Environment Research Council on acid rain in Snowdonia.

Mr. Grist: The scientists carrying out research for the Welsh Office on the effects of acid rain in Wales work closely with the Natural Environment Research Council and have noted the findings publicised by the council at their recent seminar.

Local Authority Budgets

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those Welsh local authorities (a) with an annual budget of £35 million or less and (b) those with budgets of over £35 million; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The latest budget information available relates to 1989-90. Based on this, all Welsh districts had annual budgets of less than £35 million and all Welsh counties had annual budgets of greater than £35 million.

Teachers' Pay

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will publish a table similar to appendix A of Cm. 973 showing the teachers' pay baseline 1990-91 for Wales; and if he will give a breakdown in similar form showing the cost of implementing the recommendations of the interim advisory committee in 1990-91 and in a full year thereafter;

(2) pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Pontypridd of 9 February, Official Report, column 811, what amount and proportion of the difference between the full £600 million remit given to the interim advisory committee and the £563 million English element of that remit has been included in the education component of total standard spending for authorities in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Welsh component of the total shown in appendix A of Cm. 973 is estimated at £485 million. The breakdown of the pay baseline in the categories set out in Cm. 973 is only available on an England and Wales basis. The cost for Wales of staging the interim advisory committee's recommendation in the way accepted by the Government would be around £37 million in 1990-91 and £44 million in a full year. The remit given to the IAC was allowed for in full in the Welsh local authority revenue settlement for 1990-91. Standard spending assessments are not hypothecated to particular services.

Community Care

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial support he intends to make available to organisations concerned with the needs of (a) elderly people, (b) people with physical, sensory or mental disability and (c) carers in the coming financial year to enable them to participate fully in the planning for, and implementation of, increased care in the community.

Mr. Grist: In addition to the sums made available to health and social services authorities for main programme expenditure, Welsh Office support is provided through a number of funding mechanisms including our mental illness and mental handicap strategies and the elderly initiative, the urban programme and grants under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968. Figures relating to elderly people, people with a physical and or sensory disability and carers are as follows:

	[1] 1990-91
Elderly people	3,200,000
People with a physical or sensory disability	744,000
Carers	87,000

We expect also to allocate, in addition to core funding of voluntary organisations, up to some £2·2 million in 1990-91 towards initiatives proposed both by voluntary and statutory agencies under the mental illness strategy. The strategy was specifically designed to promote the development of appropriate services in the community for those suffering from mental illness and for their carers.

An announcement will be made shortly in respect of the financial support available under the mental handicap strategy for 1990-91.

We also intend that voluntary organisations will be given every opportunity to participate in the planning of the new community care framework as outlined in our draft planning guidance issues on 26 January, of which the hon. Gentleman has been sent a copy.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current status of his Department's circular 51/89, also referred to as WO health (89)58 and FP (89)15, regarding services for people with physical and/or sensory disabilities in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The circular is a draft issued for consultation. It is intended to publish the final version next month.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to reply to the application of the Alzheimer's Disease Society for funding for the work of the development officer for south Wales.

Mr. Grist: We expect to make a decision within the next fortnight upon all those bids for funding under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 that are related to mental illness services; replies will be sent to applicants, including the Alzheimer's Disease Society, shortly thereafter.

Sports Council

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money he has made available to governing bodies of sports in Wales, via the Sports Council for Wales in each of the years 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90; what information he has on how much of the money in each of those years was allocated to assist (a) administration, (b) coaching and (c) international representation; what figures he will make available in the 1990-91 financial year; and what conditions or guidelines govern the proportion which may be allocated to administration, coaching and international representation, respectively.

Mr. Grist: The figures for the relevant years are as follows:

1987-88	[1]531,026
1988-89	[1]687,745
1989-90	[2]667,000
1990-91	[2]680,000

[1] from the council's annual reports.
[2] estimated

The grants to governing bodies are not allocated by the Sports Council for Wales in the terms requested.

Hospitals

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales over what period the £10 million cash boost for health care in the valleys is to be spent; and how much has been allocated to each hospital.

Mr. Grist: I refer the right hon. and learned Gentleman to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 12 February 1990.

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what extra money he is allocating to the proposed new hospital for Neath/Port Talbot.

Mr. Grist: The responsibility for funding the proposed hospital to serve the Neath/Port Talbot area rests with the West Glamorgan health authority.

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he now proposes to reach a decision as to whether to go ahead with a new hospital for Neath/Port Talbot; how much slippage there has been since his last announced date for commencement; and what is the reason for the delay in the progress of this proposal.

Mr. Grist: Discussions on technical details of the health authority's submission on this proposal are still proceeding between officials. We shall come to a decision on the scheme once the outstanding issues have been resolved. The health authority will review the projected start date at that time.

Local Government and Housing Act

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy that the time scale for implementation of part V of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 in respect of companies with which Welsh local authorities have an involvement is such as to allow the orderly rearrangement of the companies' structures and other arrangements to comply with the Act and achieve the continuation of their functions.

Mr. Grist: The timetable for implementation will facilitate an orderly transition.

EMPLOYMENT

Gateshead Central Training Unit for the Disabled

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has for the future of the Gateshead central training unit for the disabled.

Mr. Eggar: I understand that my hon. Friend is referring to the support under the sheltered placement scheme. The scheme is currently supporting 33 jobs for people with severe disabilities in Gateshead. Nine of these are sponsored by Gateshead metropolitan borough council and 24 by voluntary organisations. I shall be informing sponsors shortly about the level of resource for the sheltered placement scheme in 1990-91.

Labour Statistics

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number, and the relevant percentages, of young people aged 16 and 17 years who are currently (a) on YTS and (b) employed or unemployed.

Mr. Nicholls: The table sets out the numbers of 16 and 17-year-olds training under YTS, broken down by employed and non-employed status on 31 December 1989.

	Total employed	Per cent. of total	Total non-employed	Per cent. of total	Total
16-year-olds	29,500	25·0	88,300	75·0	117,800

TOTALS	84,200	28·4	212,800	71·6	297,000

There are also 88,600 trainees in YTS who are over 18 of whom 34 per cent. have employed status.

Factories (Registration)

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many informations were laid against employers for failure to register factory premises with the Health and Safety Executive in each of the last five years and in each Health and Safety Executive area.

Mr. Nicholls: The table shows the number of informations laid by Her Majesty's factory and agricultural inspectorates alleging contravention of section 137 of the Factories Act 1961 (which deals with the requirement to register factory premises with the Health and Safety Executive). Information about the informations laid by other Health and Safety Executive inspectorates could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Notes:

1986-87 onwards Financial years.

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what internal research the Health and Safety Executive has done in the last two years into the proportion of factory premises which are not registered with the factory inspectorate; and if he will summarise the findings of that research in relation to the proportion of premises which are unregistered and the proportion of factory employees who work in unregistered premises.

Mr. Nicholls: It is not possible to state the proportion of premises which are not registered or the proportion of factory employees who work in unregistered premises and there are no current research projects into non-registration. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) is aware that some firms have failed to register their manufacturing premises with it as required under section 137 of the Factories Act 1961. HSE's factory inspectorate plans to spend a fixed proportion of its resources each year on the identification and inspection of unregistered fixed workplaces as part of its programme of preventive inspection. HSE also encourages registration through publicity campaigns and publications such as "500 Dead".

Improvement and Prohibition Notices

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many improvement and prohibition notices have been issued in each of the Health and Safety Executive's areas for the last four quarters for which information is available; and how many of these have been identified as warranting public disclosure.

Mr. Nicholls: The table gives details of the enforcement notices issued by each area of Her Majesty's factory and agricultural inspectorates for the four quarters of 1987-88. Information about the enforcement notices issued by other Health and Safety Executive inspectorates could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Environment and Safety Information Act 1988 requires enforcing authorities to maintain public registers of details of improvement and prohibition notices which have public safety implications. The Act came into force on 1 April 1989 and was not retrospective. Prior to that date, no separate register of the minority of enforcement notices warranting public disclosure was kept.

Health and Safety

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to empower magistrates to refer for sentencing to the Crown court cases brought by the Health and Safety Executive under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act and any of the relevant statutory provisions within the meaning of section 53 of the Act.

Mr. Nicholls: Magistrates have existing powers under the Magistrates Court Act 1980 to refer individuals to a higher court for sentencing. This power does not extend to corporations. Any amendment to include corporations would be a matter for the Home Office. However, for serious health and safety cases, health and safety executive inspectors are increasingly seeking to persuade magistrates that such cases should be dealt with in the Crown court.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) improvement and (b) prohibition notices were issued by the Health and Safety Executive in the years 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989; to whom they were served; and what was the outcome.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 14 February 1990]: The table summarises the number of improvement and prohibition notices issued for the calendar year 1985 and the financial years 1986-87 and 1987-88, and their outcome. The figures for 1988-89 are not yet available. The names of those on whom the notices were served could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Skill Centres

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if any undertaking to provide employment training courses has been given by skill centres under the privatisation arrangements.

Mr. Nicholls: Astra Training Services Ltd. has announced that it intends to consolidate the STA's present position as a major provider of employment training. The other successful bidder for a skill centre, Metel, is already a training manager for ET.

Youth Training

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the differences between YTS and youth training which will replace it.

Mr. Nicholls: The youth training arrangements build upon the successes of YTS and incorporate major new flexibilities designed to meet a wide range of local needs both economic and individual.

The key differences are:

(a) an emphasis on outputs rather than training processes.
(b) flexible design of individual schemes to achieve outputs instead of a fixed national design structure.
(c) the two year and one year entitlements of YTS give way to programmes of varying duration suitable for particular types of courses and the types of trainee need involved.
(d) the promise of courses at a standard of at least level 2 as laid down by the National Council of Vocational Qualifications or at equivalent occupational training or educational standards. In addition, more purchase of training at levels 3 and 4.
(e) allowances for unemployed trainees based upon age rather than cumulative time in training.
(f) improved assessment and endorsement procedures for special training needs.
(g) enhanced training opportunities to help unemployed trainees nearing the end of training to secure jobs.
(h) extension of the guarantee to include certain groups whose entry into training has been unavoidably delayed.
(i) more scope for discretionary entry for people not covered by the guarantee.
(j) greater financial discretion to use YT funds to build up local training arrangements, improve local marketing, and to give specific support for individual young people on assessment, action plans and similar matters.

Contracts of Employment

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will now take steps to transfer the jurisdiction of courts to industrial tribunals, in respect of claims by dismissed employees against employers arising out of alleged breaches of contracts of employment.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend will be making a statement shortly.

Employment Training

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many filled employment training places there are in the Greater Manchester area; and what percentage this represents of the original departmental projections.

Mr. Nicholls: On 9 February 1990, the latest date for which information is available, there were 9,719 people on employment training in Greater Manchester. Departmental projections are for internal management information purposes only.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many places were filled on the Greater Manchester archaeological unit employment training scheme at the time of closure; and what percentage this represented of the original and revised contracted places.

Mr. Nicholls: The Greater Manchester archaeological unit employment training scheme has not closed. On 26 January 1990, a total of 241 places were filled on the scheme. This represents 80 per cent. of its current contracted capacity and 48 per cent. of its original contracted level.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much public money from the Training Agency has been given to the Greater Manchester archaeological unit employment training scheme; and on what dates.

Mr. Nicholls: Money advanced by the Training Agency to the Greater Manchester archaeological unit under employment training was in accordance with the terms of the university of Manchester's contract with the Training Agency. The precise terms of this contract are confidential to the parties involved.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the closure of the Greater Manchester archaeological unit employment training scheme; and what is his assessment of the implications of the closure for other employment training schemes in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholls: The Greater Manchester archaeological unit of the university of Manchester is still operating in employment training. The university's council of government is to meet on 27 February to consider the unit's future under ET. This has no implications for other ET training managers.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what are the total number of employment training trainees who have (a) successfully completed more than three months' training, (b) obtained a vocational qualification or credit towards one and (c) received a training bonus between December 1988 and December 1989 and the figures for each of the standard regions, Wales, Scotland and Great Britain;

(2) what was the average length of time a trainee spent at an employment training place in the period December 1988 to December 1989 for Great Britain;

(3) what was the total number of employment training trainees who have received qualifications in the period between September 1988 to December 1989 for Great Britain;

(4) what was the total number of positive outcome from employment training leavers who go into (a) further education and training, (b) self-employment and (c) jobs between December 1988 and December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The information requested is not available.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total expenditure on the £10 employment training trainee allowance in December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Expenditure on the £10 premium part of employment training (ET) trainee allowances in December 1989 is estimated to be over £8 million.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of unemployed receiving enterprise training within employment training between September 1988 and December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 12 February 1990]: A total of 547,000 people entered employment training between September 1988 and December 1989. Of these about 7 per cent. joined the programme to receive enterprise training.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on health and safety issues arising out of the construction of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Nicholls: Responsibility for health and safety during the construction of the Channel tunnel rests with the employers involved. The Health and Safety Executive will continue to enforce vigorously the health and safety regulations which apply to the construction of the tunnel.

Radiation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many workers in the nuclear industry have received, over the past year, exposures to radiation in excess of the new radiation safety thresholds introduced on 5 February; and if he will publish a table showing the source of the radiation, the number of dose units received and the location of the exposure for each case.

Mr. Nicholls: No new threshold dose was introduced on 5 February.

National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to improve co-operation in bringing about the comprehensive framework for national vocational qualifications.

Mr. Nicholls: The NCVQ will be building on the good progress made so far in reforming the vocational qualifications system and accrediting national vocational qualifications. There is still much to do. The Government will be looking to the NCVQ to carry forward purposefully and harmoniously the reform of qualifications and the need for a more and better qualified work force. There is good will for reform which I want to see skilfully harnessed to this vital work.

THE ARTS

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Arts what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days paid paternity leave.

The Three Graces

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether all the moneys raised by the Victoria and Albert museum in its efforts to keep in the United Kingdom the statues by Canova, "The Three Graces", will go directly towards paying the purchase price; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The Victoria and Albert museum has advised me that, in the event that it proves possible to make an offer to purchase "The Three Graces" by 12 March, all the money subscribed by the public will be used for the purchase. The cash costs of the appeal have been underwritten by an anonymous and separate donation; there have also been many contributions in kind to the organisation of the appeal. In the event that the appeal does not reach its target, all money subscribed in an identifiable and returnable form will be offered back. Money deposited in cash in collecting boxes will, as a notice beside the boxes clearly states, be put in the V and A central purchase fund and used to support the purchase of other major heritage objects.

CIVIL SERVICE

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days paid paternity leave. In my Department we have made full use of the flexibilities which already exist in the rules on special leave for this purpose.

House of Commons Disqualification Act

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what arrangements are to be made to provide hon. Members with information about the amendments contained in the resolution tabled on 19 February updating schedule 1 to the House of Commons Disqualification Act.

Mr. Luce: A detailed explanatory note is available from the Vote Office.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Bed and Breakfast

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the latest figures for the number of people living in bed and breakfast accommodation.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I understand from the chief executive of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that at 8 February 106 households were living in bed and breakfast accommodation secured for them under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1988.

Local Government Staff Commission

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria are used to select members to serve on the Local Government Staff Commission.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Local Government Staff Commission is established under the Local Government Act (NI) 1972

"for the purposes of exercising general oversight of matters connected with the recruitment, training and terms and conditions of employment of officers of councils and of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and of making recommendations to councils and to the Executive on such matters".

Membership of the commission is comprised of a chairman and up to 12 other members appointed by the Department of Environment for Northern Ireland after consultation with associations representative of councils or their staffs and any other appropriate association or public body.

The members of the commission are appointed on the basis that they reflect the interests of local government and that they can contribute to the work of the commission. In view of its wide remit it is also essential to appoint members who can assist the commission because of their skills and knowledge in particular areas. The criteria for selection are members who will represent employer interests, drawn from nominations from district councils; and other interests i.e. those who have a knowledge of local government or whose expertise on such matters as training, personnel, finance etc. will be of help to the commission."

"employee interests, drawn from nominations from trade unions, staff associations etc.;

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current composition of the Local Government Staff Commission by name, address and interests represented.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information is as follows:

Chairman

Professor D. Rea MSc (Econ) MBA PLD, Dip. Soc. Studies—Belfast

Coleraine Council (Employment Practices)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what steps are being taken by Coleraine borough council to ensure that the current imbalances in employment practices are being rectified;

(2) what steps are being taken by the Fair Employment Commission to ensure that the current imbalances in employment practices in Coleraine borough council are being rectified.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Under Section 12 of the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1976 the Fair Employment Agency (now the commission) investigated Coleraine borough council in 1987. The report of the findings of this investigation is still unpublished but the commission has advised that the council accepted all its recommendations for action to ensure that equality of opportunity in employment is afforded, except for signing the declaration of principle and intent and the introduction of work force monitoring.

The council is specified as a public authority by the Fair Employment (Specification of Public Authorities) Order (NI) 1989 and is therefore deemed to be automatically registered with the Fair Employment Commission to which it will submit annual returns monitoring the religious composition of its work force. The council has indicated that following the introduction of the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1989 a system of monitoring has been introduced.

Fair Employment

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by Derry city council to ensure that the current imbalances in employment are being rectified.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In 1986 at the request of Derry city council, the Fair Employment Agency (now the commission) investigated the council's employee patterns. A report on this investigation (published in 1987) found that the overall employment pattern derived from the analysis suggested that the council's employment procedures provided equality of opportunity in employment.

Under the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1989, the council has a duty to submit to the Fair Employment Commission annual returns monitoring the religious composition of its workforce. Until the first monitoring return is received, the commission will not hold up-to-date information on this breakdown.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by Down district council to ensure that the current imbalances in employment are being rectified.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In response to a request from the Fair Employment Agency (now the commission) in 1987, Down district council agreed to participate in a voluntary exercise to monitor the religious composition of its workforce and to submit the information obtained to the agency for consideration.

The Fair Employment Commission, in consultation with the council, is currently assessing the council's employment composition. This assessment has not yet been completed nor has a final report been sent to the council.

Under the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1989, the council has a duty to submit to the Fair Employment Commission annual returns monitoring the religious composition of its workforce. Until the first monitoring return is received, the commission will not hold up-to-date information on this breakdown.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by Newry and Mourne district council to ensure that the current imbalances in employment are being rectified.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Under section 12 of the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1976 the Fair Employment Agency (now the commission) investigated Newry and Mourne district council in 1987. The report of the investigation has not yet been published but the commission has advised that the council agreed to accept a programme entitled "Future Action" which was included in the report and designed to ensure that equality of opportunity in employment is afforded.

Under the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1989, the council has a duty to submit to the Fair Employment Commission annual returns monitoring the religious composition of its workforce. Until the first monitoring return is received, the commission will not hold up-to-date information on this breakdown.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken by Strabane district council to ensure that the current imbalances in employment at non-management levels are being rectified.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Under section 12 of the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1976, the Fair Employment Agency (now the commission) investigated Strabane district council in 1988. The report of this investigation is still unpublished but the commission has advised that the council accepted all its recommendations for action to ensure that equality of opportunity in employment is afforded.

Under the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1989, the council has a duty to submit to the Fair Employment Commission annual returns monitoring the religious composition of its workforce. Until the first monitoring return is received the commission will not hold up-to-date information on the religious breakdown at non-management or other levels of employees.

Residents' Parking Schemes

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects his Department to have completed its consideration of residents' parking schemes; when he expects to take powers to implement such schemes; what representations he has had from people and organisations in Northern Ireland about residents' parking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There has been some interest in residential parking schemes in some parts of inner Belfast. There would be problems of financing and policing. Enabling legislation available is not expected before 1993.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, further to his written answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 8 February, Official Report, column 745, what information was discovered regarding the activities of Colin Wallace and his section during the detailed study of the relevant Northern Ireland Office files; and whether any files or their contents were missing.

Mr. Brooke: Study of Northern Ireland Office files did not produce any information which would require me to add to the detailed reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces to my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel (Mr. Marshall) on 30 January. I am not aware of any missing files or missing contents of files.

DHSS Officers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table showing the number of (a) administrative assistants, (b) administrative officers, (c) executive officers grade 2, (d) executive officers grade 1, and (e) staff officers employed in the Department of Health and Social Services offices in (i) Strabane, (ii) Limavady, (iii) Londonderry, (iv) Lisnakelly, (v) Coleraine, (vi) Omagh and (vii) Magherafelt at the present time; and what was the number five years ago.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The figures requested are:

	Administration assistant	Administration[1] officer	Executive[1] officer 2	Executive officer 1	Staff officer
1. February 1990
Strabane	13	46	15	4	2

Coleraine	11	50	17	4	2
Omagh	12	46	13	4	2
Magherafelt	8	41	11	3	2

[1] The grades of administrative officer and executive officer 2 are not used in social security offices. The equivalent grades in those offices are social security officer II and social security officer I respectively.

[2] March 1985 is the nearest comparable date for which figures are available.

Registration

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he intends to introduce legislation to reform the system for registering births, marriages and deaths in Northern Ireland, along the lines proposed for England and Wales in the White Paper, "Registration: Proposals for Change".

Mr. Needham [holding answer 16 February 1990]: Many of the changes recommended for the registration system for England and Wales already apply in Northern Ireland. The Government will consider, in due course, those reforms which may require comparable action here and whether it may be necessary to make changes to the relevant separate Northern Ireland legislation.

PRIME MINISTER

Commonwealth

Q28. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations she has received concerning the Commonwealth.

The Prime Minister: I frequently receive representations relating to many Commonwealth issues from hon. Members and from members of the public.

Sunday Newspaper Editors

Q55. Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to meet officially editors of Sunday newspapers.

The Prime Minister: I have no specific plans at present but I do meet editors from time to time.

Eastern Europe

Q89. Mr. Latham: To ask the Prime Minister whether she is now in a position to announce details of her proposed visits to east European countries.

The Prime Minister: No firm arrangements have yet been made for further visits to east European countries, though I hope to visit a number during the course of this year.

Q117. Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister if she has had any recent discussions with (a) Chancellor Kohl and (b) other European Community state leaders concerning the provision of invited official observers, drawn from European Community national legislatures, for the general elections which are to be held throughout central and eastern Europe.

The Prime Minister: I have not, though I understand that the IPU is discussing with the east European Governments concerned, the possible provision of observers from this House.

South Africa

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make it her policy to provide special assistance in the form of environmental protection expertise and environmental clean-up technology to the Republic of South Africa.

The Prime Minister: We have received no requests for such assistance.

Poland

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if, during the recent visit of the Polish Prime Minister to the United Kingdom either she or other Ministers of Her Majesty's Government discussed with him (a) the forthcoming fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, (b) technological aid to Poland under article IV of the non-proliferation treaty and (c) the availability of pollution abatement and clean-up equipment to assist in the ecological amelioration of Polish industry.

The Prime Minister: None of these subjects was discussed.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagemens for Tuesday 20 February.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 20 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Jamie Lloyd Stewart

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the action taken following the inquest into the death of Jamie Lloyd Stewart.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The circumstances of Mr. Stewart's death have been investigated by the Metropolitan police under the supervision of the Police Complaints Authority. The investigating officer's report has been sent to the Director of Public Prosecutions and the Police Complaints Authority, who will consider whether there are grounds for taking criminal or disciplinary action against any officers involved.

Immigration

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total number of arrivals from Jamaica for each month since January 1989 who have been (a) interviewed on arrival or (b) refused entry.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available information is given in the table. All Jamaican citizens are interviewed when seeking leave to enter. Figures for those subjected to further examination are not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Jamaican citizens admitted to, and refused leave to enter and removed from, the United Kingdom

1989	Total admitted[1]	Total refused leave to enter and removed

Metropolitan Police Funding

Mr. Ground: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the total cost to public funds of the Metropolitan police in 1989-90 and 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: As police authority for the Metropolis, I have approved estimates which provide for net revenue expenditure of £1,265·075 million in 1990-91. There will be a cash limit on current expenditure of £1,223·389 million. Capital expenditure is subject to separate controls.

I have also approved the issue of a precept of £112·79 per head of relevant population for Metropolitan police purposes. This is not the charge levied on individual community charge payers, but will be levied on local authorities' collection funds which will derive income from revenue support grant, national non-domestic rates and community charges.

I have approved an increase of £10·461 million in the cash limit of £1,082·391 million for the current year, which was announced on 14 February 1989. This increase has been necessitated by the 57·5 per cent. increase in the police rent allowance made during the year, which imposed additional spending of £23 million over and above the provision made in the cash limit. The Metropolitan police have succeeded in absorbing about half this sum, but I am satisfied that they could not meet the whole of it without affecting police recruitment plans, and have therefore approved this increase.

Babies (Abduction)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by year and by police authority for the last 10 years, the number of cases of baby abduction that have been investigated.

Mr. John Patten: The available information relates to children aged under 16 and is published annually, and most recently under offence classification 13 in table S3.1 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables, 1988 Vol. 3", a copy of which is available in the Library. More precise information on the age of victims of these offences could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Grendon Prison

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for which period of time Her Majesty's prison Grendon will be closed for refurbishment.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) on 16 January 1990 at column 176.

The establishment is likely to remain closed for a further five to eight months while the essential refurbishment work is in hand.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the cost of refurbishing Her Majesty's prison Grendon.

Mr. Mellor: It is estimated that £1·335 million will be spent on refurbishing the establishment while it is temporarily closed. This work is, however, part of a wider programme of refurbishment which began in 1986 and is likely to extend over the next eight to 10 years. We expect that the total cost of this programme will amount to £9 million—£9·5 million (at current prices) of which £1 million has already been spent.

Wellingborough Institution

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for which period of time the Wellingborough young offenders institution will be used as an adult prison.

Mr. Mellor: Her Majesty's YOI Wellingborough was converted to adult use on 27 January. It will remain as a prison until the repairs at HMP Grendon—whose inmates it is temporarily holding—are completed. This is estimated to be in about five to eight months' time. The use to which Wellingborough will be put once its current population is returned to HMP Grendon is under consideration as part of a wide-ranging review of the young offender estate.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost of modifying Wellingborough young offenders institution to make it suitable for adult prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: The latest estimated cost is £230,000.

Everthorpe Prison

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will review his plans to build a new prison facility at Everthorpe in Humberside, in the light of his proposals in the criminal justice White Paper Cm. 965.

Mr. Mellor: The need for additional prison places is kept under constant review, in the light of existing or anticipated changes in the level of the prison population.

The new remand centre at Everthorpe, on which work has already begun, will provide much needed relief to the severely overcrowded local prisons in the area when it opens early in 1992. I do not anticipate that the proposals in the criminal justice White Paper, "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public", once enacted, will remove the need for this particular establishment.

London Prisons

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the inner London borough authorities who will shortly assume responsibility for education in their area, and have prisons within their boroughs, as to how they propose to develop education facilities for inmates within such local prisons.

Mr. Mellor: Discussions have taken place with the appropriate London boroughs, resulting in agreement regarding the continued provision of teaching staff on secondment to the prison education service in respect of Brixton, Wandsworth and Wormwood Scrubs prisons, and for the new Belmarsh prison at Greenwich. Negotiations with the London borough of Islington regarding education provision at Holloway and Pentonville prisons have yet to be finalised.

It is considered that the proposed abolition of the ILEA and the assumption of responsibility for the provision of education facilities by the London boroughs should not lead to any diminution of these facilities.

Executioners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of qualified executioners at present in the United Kingdom; and how and by whom such people are trained for this work.

Mr. Mellor: No one is now employed or trained for this task, and we do not know how many of those who performed it in the past are still alive.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had from police forces concerning the effect of the Crown prosecution service on the police's operations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Association of Chief Police Officers has made representations about the effect of the Crown prosecution service's requirements as to the content and presentation of paperwork. An inter-departmental group has recently been established to examine this and other pre-trial issues.

Data Protection Register

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce costs in running the data protection register, in order to bring forward the date of the break-even point; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The registrar's expenditure proposals are scrutinised carefully as part of the process of public expenditure control; and we shall shortly be considering future registration fee levels in the light of the registrar's costs, the expected numbers of registrations and renewals, the impact of the registration fees on those required to register and the need to reach break-even as soon as this can reasonably be managed. The general operation of the Data Protection Act is also under review, but it is too early to say what impact that might have on the registrar's costs and income.

Independent Broadcasting Authority

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next plans to meet the chairman of the Independent Broadcasting Authority to discuss broadcasting.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his question on 25 January at column 875.

Drugs

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research information is available to him relating to the elasticity of demand for cocaine and heroin from their users.

Mr. Mellor: Information on the elasticity of demand for class A controlled drugs is included in "Managing Drug Use", a report of a study by Whynes et al, financed by the Home Office, which was published in the British Journal of Addiction (BJA (1989) 84, 533-540). The same edition of the journal contains a summary of the report of Home Office research unit study No 95, "Economic Aspects of the Illicit Drug Market and Drug Enforcement Policies in the United Kingdom", by Wagstaff and Maynard (BJA (1989) 84, 461-475), much of which is also relevant. Copies of the Journal and the Home Office research unit study are in the Library.

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next expects to meet fellow European Economic Community interior Ministers to discuss further measures to control drug abuse.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. and learned Friend and I expect to meet a number of interior Ministers at the world ministerial drugs summit, which will be held in London from 9-11 April.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies his Department has commissioned into why individuals take drugs.

Mr. Mellor: Although the Home Office has not commissioned specific studies on this aspect of the drugs problem, information on the factors which lead people to misuse drugs is available from research. In its report on prevention (published 1984), the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs discussed the main theories which had emerged from research about causation, and concluded that no single cause, or consistent pattern of multiple causes, had been identified.

All-seater Stadiums

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial support he plans to make available to football clubs converting to all-seater stadiums.

Mr. John Patten: None. Responsibility for meeting the cost of safety and improvement of football grounds rests with the ground occupiers.

Neighbourhood Watch

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources are provided to police forces to manage neighbourhood watch schemes throughout the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: In England and Wales resources allocated to the police service—which we have increased substantially—are not dedicated to particular police activities. It is for chief constables to decide on the deployment of police officers and other resources and consequently on the extent to which to offer support to neighbourhood watch, which is essentially a community activity. The position in Scotland is similar. There are no neighbourhood watch schemes in Northern Ireland.

Some forces in England and Wales have developed ways of supporting neighbourhood watch, which reduces the demand on police officers, including the use of civilian liaison officers; trainees on Government-sponsored employment training schemes during their periods of practical training; and answerphone facilities to pass information and advice to local volunteer co-ordinators.

Overtime

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the amount of overtime worked in the fire service in each of the last four years for which figures are available; if he will publish such information, in summary form, in the Official Report; and if he will make a statement on his proposals to reduce the amounts of overtime worked.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not collected centrally. However, I understand from the National Joint Council for Local Authorities' Fire Brigades that the average amount of overtime per firefighter worked over the past 10 years has been of the order of 16 to 20 minutes per week.

The Government have not proposed a reduction in the amount of overtime worked. The more flexible use of manpower in the fire service, including the use of overtime, is one of a range of issues currently being considered by a joint working party of the national joint council and the Government, chaired by my noble Friend the Minister of State, Earl Ferrers.

Charities

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of the staff of the Charity Commission are employed to investigate charity-related fraud including tax evasion.

Mr. John Patten: Forty members of the Charity Commission staff are employed in the monitoring and investigation of charities at risk of abuse, and in dealing with fraud, included tax-related schemes involving charities.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many qualified accountants there are on the staff of the Charity Commission.

Mr. John Patten: There are two qualified accountants on the staff of the Charity Commission. In addition, training is provided for staff who do not have accountancy qualifications in posts calling for it. The charity commissioners can also appoint qualified accountants for specific inquiries.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Secretarial and Research Allowances

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is the level of secretarial and research allowance available to a Member of (i) the United Kingdom Parliament, (ii) the United States Congress and (iii) the Federal Republic of Germany Bundestag.

Sir Geoffrey Howe [pursuant to his reply, 31 January 1990, c. 183]: Subject to detailed regulations of the House of Representatives, Members of the United States House of Representatives receive two allowances:

(a) one for "Clerk Hire" or US$441,120 per annum (£261,219) for staff costs; and

(b) one for office expenses of between US$104,000 (£61,586) and US$302,000 (£178,836) calculated according to the Member's district's distance from Washington. The average is US$146,000 (£86,457).

Each Member is allowed to hire not more than 18 permanent staff, and not more than four non-permanent staff in his Washington and district offices.

Members of the Bundestag in the Federal Republic of Germany are allowed to claim up to DM 11,600 (£4,091) per month (DM 139,200 (£49,088) per annum) for secretarial and research help.

Note: the sterling figures calculated using rates of exchange at the close of business on 13 February 1990.

ENVIRONMENT

Eriswell

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with Forest Heath district council regarding the impact on Eriswell parish of the loss to its local revenues of the rates previously paid by American service men and their dependants living in that community; what share of Eriswell parish's revenues arose last year from the Americans living there; by how much he expects the contributions of Eriswell's British residents to be increased this year to cover the cost of the same services, that last year were paid for by parish rates paid by Americans and

British; what steps he is taking to enable Forest Heath district council to offset Eriswell parish's loss of income from its American community from the moneys that he expects to receive from the United States in lieu of community charge payments by its nationals and their dependants living in that district; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what discussions he has had with Forest Heath district council regarding the impact on Eriswell parish of the loss to its local revenues of the rates previously paid by American service men and their dependants living in that community; what share of Eriswell parish's revenues arose last year from the Americans living there; and by how much he expects the contribution of Eriswell's British residents to be increased this year to cover the cost of services paid for by parish rates;

(2) what steps he is taking to enable Forest Heath district council to offset Eriswell parish's loss of income from its American community from the moneys that he expects to receive from the United States in lieu of community charge payments by its nationals and their dependants living in that district; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Taylor Report

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will arrange to meet the football authorities to discuss the implementation of the Taylor report.

Mr. John Patten: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans at the present time to meet the football authorities but we are willing to consider any request from them for a meeting.

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Chris Patten: My Department currently uses the following firms to guard buildings occupied and managed by the Department's staff:

Royal British Legion Attendance Co Ltd
Yeoman Security Ltd
Centuryan Security Ltd
Initial Contract Services
Reliance Security Services Ltd
Securiguard Services (Northern) Ltd
A-One Guard Services Ltd
County Guards
Compass Security

The total number of employees is 54. More than one employee may be needed to cover a given post if there is part-time working or if the hours are very long. The total value of the contracts in the present financial year is £590,000. The expenditure in previous years includes elements of the costs for DTp. No separate figures are therefore available for DOE.

Waste Disposal

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the dates of all meetings of his Department's working party to examine the feasibility of compiling a register of contaminated land, referred to in his answer of 10 April 1989, Official Report, column 399; and if he will place a copy of the committee's proceedings in the Library.

Mr. Trippier: Full working party meetings took place on 7 January and 3 March 1988 and on 21 February and 20 March 1989 with related policy discussions between and since those dates. The next meeting is proposed for 28 February 1990. I expect to receive a report from officials shortly and would want to announce my proposals on the subject as soon as possible. However, it is not our practice to supply records of interim discussions by an internal group preparing proposals for my consideration.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make available in the Library work completed under the site survey conducted by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in conjunction with local authorities as detailed in his answer of 11 April 1989, Official Report, column 459.

Mr. Trippier: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, working with the waste disposal authorities, has sought to survey the likely scale of the potential problem posed by landfill gas. The results of the survey have now been agreed with the waste disposal authorities and the report, which will be published shortly, will be placed in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to provide information on the distributional impact of the poll tax on various household sizes in the same manner that such information was made available during the passage of legislation.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply by my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities to my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, North (Mr Thompson) on 15 February.

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what criteria he proposes to use in deciding which local authorities to charge cap;

(2) whether he will make it his policy to charge cap those local authorities who propose to levy a community charge that, taking account of any adjustment that may need to be made because of the transitional safety net, is over 15 per cent. higher than what would be needed if authorities spent in line with the standard spending assessment.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Bristol, North-West (Mr. Stern) on 17 January.

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to announce his decisions as to which local authorities he proposes to charge cap.

Mr. Chris Patten: It would not be right for me to speculate on the timetable of any capping scheme we might need to operate for 1990-91.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the economic consequences of the introduction of a roof tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The principal disadvantages of such a tax include its unfair and arbitrary impact on homeowners and tenants, its discouragement of home improvements and the lack of any clear link between the spending of a local authority and the size of an individual's tax bill.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the current community charge publicity campaign that reference to the community charge rather than poll tax will result in confusion among potential rebate applicants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 16 February 1990]: I have received no such representations.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the criteria for capping that will be applied to local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Wall) on 24 January.

Mr. Paul Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in view of the level of community charge proposed by the finance committee of Southend council, he will make it his policy to charge cap the council.

Mr. Chris Patten: Selection of authorities for capping has to be on the basis of general principles and it would not be right for me to speculate on whether Southend-on-Sea borough council or any other authority would be capped if I needed to use my capping powers for 1990-91. But I have made it clear that if authorities do insist on budgeting excessively I shall not hesitate to cap them.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to bring forward regulations to enable let holiday cottages to be subject to business rate rather than standard community charge before the owners become liable to pay standard community charge.

Mr. Chope: Section 66(2B) of the Local Government Finance Act 1988, inserted by the Standard Community Charge and Non-Domestic Rating (Definition of Domestic Property) Order 1990 S.I. No. 162, laid before Parliament on 9 February, provides broadly that a building is not domestic property if in the forthcoming year it will be available for letting commercially, as self-catering accommodation, for short periods totalling 140 days or more. In such cases business rates will be payable.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each local government housing authority the number of council houses at the latest available date and in 1978, together with the number of adults and children resident therein.

Mr. Chope: Information for April of each year has been reported since 1979 by local authorities in their annual housing investment programme returns (HIP1). The number of dwellings owned by the authority and situated in its own area appears in column B11 of "HIP1 All Items Print (1979)" and for 1989 in column A11 of "HIP1 All Items Print (1989)". In 1989 they also reported any stock owned by the authority but situated ouside its area and this appears in column A16 of "HIP1 All Items Print (1989)". Copies of both documents are in the Library. The numbers and ages of residents in local authority dwellings are not held centrally.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contingency plans exist for interim storage of intermediate-level nuclear waste awaiting encapsulation, should the Nirex repository not come on line by 2005.

Mr. Trippier: Intermediate-level radioactive waste can continue to be stored safely at nuclear establishments until a Nirex repository becomes available.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans exist for the placement of the intermediate-level waste produced during the third stage of power decommissioning.

Mr. Trippier: Intermediate-level radioactive waste arising from the decommissioning of nuclear power plants will be consigned to a deep repository, possible sites for which are currently being investigated by UK Nirex.

Homelessness

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what statistics he has about the number of elderly people made homeless after taking out home income annuity schemes in which lenders foreclose, making the purchaser homeless; and if he will make a statement on such schemes and the problems of whether those who lose their homes in this way can be construed as intentionally homeless.

Mr. Chope: Local authorities make quarterly returns of the numbers of households for whom they had accepted responsibility for securing accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act. These provide breakdowns of the total number of households accepted as homeless by category of priority need, including "vulnerable due to old age", and by main reason for homelessness, including mortgage arrears, but do not separately identify foreclosure on home income annuity schemes. We have no evidence to suggest that this is a widespread problem but anyone considering such a scheme would be well advised to seek independent financial advice on the scheme most suitable for their needs.

Standard Spending Assessment, Grimsby

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how he reached a scaling factor of 1·00026898014558 for other education in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessment; what this means; and what the effect of this scaling factor is on the calculations;

(2) how he reached a scaling factor of 1·00000302142846 for secondary education in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessment; what this means; and what the effect of the scaling factor is on the calculations;

(3) how he reached a scaling factor of 1·00000076166512 for children's personal social services in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessment; what this means; and what the effect of this scaling factor is on the calculations;

(4) how he reached a scaling factor of 1·0000000836736 for police in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessment; what this means; and what the effect of this scaling factor is on the calculations;

(5) how he reached a scaling factor of 0·999210311847682 for fire in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessment; what this means; and what the effect of this scaling factor is on the calculations;

(6) how he reached a scaling factor of 0·999455449128694 for elderly residential personal social services in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessments; what this means; and what the effect of this scaling factor is on the calculations;

(7) how he reached a scaling factor of 0·999976590394325 for other PSS in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessment; what this means; and what the effect of this scaling factor is on the calculations;

(8) how he reached a scaling factor of 0·999997123020877 for post-16 education in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessment; what this means; and what the effect of the scaling factor is on the calculations;

(9) how he reached a scaling factor of 0·999997693248915 for elderly domiciliary personal social services in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessment; what this means; and what is the effect of this scaling factor on the calculations;

(10) how he reached a scaling factor of 0·9999993385376896 for under-five education in table C of the calculations for Grimsby's standard spending assessment; what this means; and what the effect of this scaling factor is on the calculations.

Mr. Chope: The scaling factors are calculated as described in paragraph 3.3 of section 3 of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) approved by the House on 18 January. None of these factors is used in calculating the standard spending assessment for Great Grimsby since they are used in the calculation of elements for services not provided by Great Grimsby as a non-metropolitan district authority.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how, with reference to paragraph 3.32 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £1,928·93 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials may check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the SSA arrived at for Grimsby;

(2) how, with reference to paragraph 3.29 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £464·33 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby;

(3) how, with reference to paragraph 3.29 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £7·11 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby;

(4) how, with reference to paragraph 3.29 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £556·93 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby;

(5) how, with reference to paragraph 3.29 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £1·37 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby;

(6) how, with reference to paragraph 3.32 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £4·03 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby;

(7) how, with reference to paragraph 3.32 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £0·29 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby;

(8) how, with reference to paragraph 3.32 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £13·05 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby.

Mr. Chope: The amounts referred to in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) were arrived at by my right hon. Friend after full consultation with local authority representatives. They have no effect on the SSA for Great Grimsby since, as a non-metropolitan district, Great Grimsby is not responsible for the services to which these indicator weights relate.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how, with reference to paragraph 3.19 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £145·23 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby;

(2) how, with reference to paragraph 3.23 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figures of (a) £22·86 and (b) £184 are aimed at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of the figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby;

(3) how, with reference to paragraph 3.26 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), the figure of £33,771 is arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby.

Mr. Chope: The amounts referred to in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) were arrived at by my right hon. Friend after full consultation with local authority representatives. They have no effect on the SSA for Great Grimsby, since, as a non-metropolitan district, Great Grimsby is not responsible for the services to which these indicator weights relate.

Subterranean Fires

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the locations and types of subterranean fires in England in the period 1985 to 1988 which are referred to in paragraph 5.9 of the memorandum submitted by his Department to the Environment Select Committee on 22 May 1989 during its investigations into contaminated land.

Mr. Trippier: Building Research Establishment information paper IP 3/89 set out the distribution of fires by region. I will write to the hon. Member about location. The types of fire were classified as follows:

Site material	Number of incidents
Domestic waste	27
Coal or colliery waste	16
Peat	13
Industrial waste	6
Sewage beds	2
TOTAL	64

Property Services Agency

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the entertainment budgets of (a) the Property Services Agency chief executive and (b) each Property Services Agency regional director for the last three financial years and for the current financial year to date; and if he will itemise the spending of those individual budgets by date, amount, purpose of expenditure, name and organisation of those present.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: The budgets for entertainment are:

	1987-88 (outturn)	1988-89 (outturn)	1989-90 (allocations)
Chief Executive	1,777	2,824	2,250
Regional Directors:
London	—	7,220	4,500
Wales	—	1,287	2,500
Scotland	—	6,220	7,000
Midlands	—	1,658	2,500
North West	—	910	2,500
North East	—	1,415	2,500
Southern	—	1,506	2,500
South East	—	3,325	4,000
South West	—	2,126	2,500
Eastern	—	2,668	4,000

Figures for the earlier years are not readily available. The money is spent on a wide range of activities, including working lunches, light refreshments and the occasional reception for visitors and officials, including clients and those from overseas Governments.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any proposals to guarantee a minimum level of Ministry of Defence or Property Services Agency work to the privatised Crown Suppliers.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: Departments including the Ministry of Defence and the Property Services Agency are free to enter into agreements with the Crown Suppliers on a commercial basis. These may contain certain undertakings about future business levels for a period where it is consistent with EC and GATT rules and to the mutual advantage of customer and supplier.

Solid Waste Management

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will be represented at the conference on solid waste management in Toronto on 25 to 27 April.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 16 February 1990]: The Department will not be represented at this conference.

Landfill Gas

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will be represented at the international landfill gas symposium, to be held in Chicago on 27 to 29 March.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 16 February 1990]: My Department will not be represented although I understand that the Department of Energy is considering possible representation.

Grove Farm, Goring

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what types of (a) toxic wastes and (b) radioactive wastes are deposited at Grove farm in Goring.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Information concerning the disposal of toxic wastes is not held centrally and the responsible waste disposal authority should be consulted. The Department of the Environment has not issued any authorisation for the disposal of radioactive waste at Grove farm, Goring.

American Forces

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what progress he has made in agreeing with the United States Government the contributions to be made on behalf of the United States to local authorities where United States airbases are located, in lieu of the loss of revenue that results from American airmen and their adult dependants no longer contributing to local revenues via the rates;

(2) what sums received from the United States are being made available in the financial year 1990-91 to Suffolk county council and Forest Heath district council; and when the cash in question will be received;

(3) which Suffolk parish councils have indicated to him that they intend to cease providing certain local services on the grounds that the revenues they expect to receive from their British charge payers, following the cessation of rates from American service men, are insufficient.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 19 February 1990]: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Waste Disposal

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many landfill waste sites visited under duties provided by section 91 of the Public Health Act 1936 in each of the last three years were found to constitute a statutory nuisance; what action was taken; what action is still outstanding; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what information he has on the number of sites visited in each of the last five years in respect of section 91 of the Public Health Act 1936.

Mr. Trippier: Information on the number of landfill or other sites visited and on subsequent action taken, under section 91 of the 1936 Act, is not available centrally.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will detail the programme, by date, function, and staff numbers, for transferring work out of the Property Services Agency, Hastings;

(2) what plans he has to avoid redundancies amongst Property Services Agency staff in Hastings.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: The PSA will do its utmost to avoid compulsory redundancies in Hastings. Principal establishment officers of other Government Departments were invited last October to consider whether they have work which could be transferred to Hastings. We are also considering whether other PSA work might be transferred there and I am writing to other Departments to consider whether any part of their Departments' organisations might be relocated there. Until we have the responses to these invitations we shall not be able finally to work out our own plans for activities now done in Hastings, which will remain the prime focus of PSA's accounting and IT work. Should there eventually be a surplus of staff, the agency's redundancy arrangements, which include the transfer of staff to other Departments wherever possible, will apply.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect of the use of waste disposal units in kitchen sinks in (a) reducing problems for waste disposal authorities and (b) increasing problems for water companies in respect of both volumes of water used and type of sewage to be treated.

Mr. Trippier: My Department has in the past assessed the effect of sink grinders both in reducing the weight of domestic waste requiring disposal and in increasing water usage and sludge production. The benefits and drawbacks of grinders are being kept under review.

Dog Whelk

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last commissioned a study into the dog whelk population; what signs there are that the TBT ban has led to a recovery of the dog whelk; and if he will list those areas where the dog whelk population is showing a substantial increase.

Mr. Trippier: The Government currently fund three studies of dog whelk populations and their response to TBT contamination. These are carried out by the Plymouth Marine Laboratory, by the Marine Laboratory of the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland and by the Institute of Biology and Marine Conservation Society. They indicate that populations of the dog whelks, which is the most sensitive species to TBT, have been affected to varying degrees in different parts of the British Isles by past exposure. In extreme cases, particularly in sheltered localities, populations can no longer reproduce. The species has only limited capacity to recolonise such areas and it will take some time before the studies are able unequivocally to demonstrate any recovery since the ban.

DEFENCE

Air Misses

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many air misses were recorded in the airspace over and in the vicinity of the Western Isles in each year from 1985 to 1989; and if he will provide a breakdown of these figures into air misses between (a) two civil aircraft, (b) two military aircraft and (c) a civil and a military aircraft.

Mr. Neubert: There were no air misses reported in the airspace over and in the vicinity of the Western Isles between 1985 and 1989.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many air misses were recorded within a 10-mile radius of Stornoway airport in each year from 1985 to 1989; and if he will provide a breakdown of these figures into air misses between (a) two civil aircraft, (b) two military aircraft and (c) a civil and a military aircraft.

Mr. Neubert: No air misses were reported within a 10-mile radius of Stornoway airport between 1985 and 1989.

Military Aircraft (Stornoway)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many practice approaches and overshoots were carried out by military aircraft at Stornoway during 1989.

Mr. Neubert: A total of 186 practice approaches and overshoots were carried out by military aircraft at Stornoway during 1989.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the use made of Stornoway airport for military exercises during 1989, providing details of the numbers and types of aircraft, durations of their deployments to Stornoway, the titles of the exercises or deployments in each case and the number of aircraft movements carried out during each deployment.

Mr. Neubert: Stornoway airport was activated on two occasions for military exercises during 1989. Six RAF Tornado F3 aircraft and one RAF Sea King helicopter were deployed to Stornoway from 22 June to 30 June as part of a joint maritime course exercise (JMC 89/2); and six RAF Tornado F3 aircraft and one RAF Sea King helicopter were deployed there from 7 to 15 September 1989 as part of Exercise SHARP SPEAR. If takeoffs, landings, practice approaches and overshoots are counted as separate movements, there were 198 movements by aircraft deployed to Stornoway during JMC 89/2, and 167 during Exercise SHARP SPEAR.

Low Flying

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Western Isles are included in the revised night low flying system introduced in 1989; and what regulations are in force concerning carrying out of mock attacks or practice approaches at airfields in the Western Isles by military aircraft conducting night low flying in the area.

Mr. Neubert: The area of the Western Isles constituency is not specifically allocated for use in the structure of the revised night low flying system but night low flying activity may take place in the area under the same general regulations as apply elsewhere in the United Kingdom. Pilots wishing to carry out simulated airfield attacks or practice approaches at civil aerodromes, including Stornoway and Benbecula in the Western Isles, must obtain any necessary clearance from the relevant controlling authorities.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the numbers and types of aircraft which will be operating in and around the Highlands restricted area as part of Exercise JMC 90/1 on Wednesday 21 February; what minimum height has been authorised for fixed-wing aircraft taking part in this activity; and how many low-level sorties are planned as part of this activity.

Mr. Neubert: On Wednesday 21 February, the highland restricted area (HRA) will be activated as is usual for the purpose of terrain following radar training. Buccaneer, Hunter, Canberra, Falcon, Tornado, F-111, and some air defence and maritime patrol aircraft are expected to participate in Exercise JMC 90/1 in and around the HRA; the exact numbers of aircraft will depend on prevailing weather conditions and operational considerations. Some helicopter activity is also planned. Use of the HRA itself will be allocated as necessary to meet exercise requirements. The minimum height authorised for fixed-wing aircraft over land during the exercise will be 250 feet and some 75 fixed-wing low level sorties are anticipated in the area concerned.

Aircraft Separation

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum authorised separation (a) vertically and (b) horizontally between civil and military aircraft under the "Military Assumes Responsibility for Separation of Aircraft" provisions.

Mr. Neubert: The term military assumes responsibility for separation of aircraft (MARSA) relates solely to the separation of aircraft within a military formation operating under air traffic control. Under MARSA, the formation leader assumes responsibility for maintaining separation between the individual aircraft comprising the formation.

In regulated airspace, the normal United Kingdom criteria for separation between aircraft apply between the formation and any civil aircraft. These are a minimum of 1,000 ft vertical separation when the aircraft are flying below 29,000 ft, and a minimum of 2,000 ft vertical separation when they are flying above 29,000 ft. In the absence of vertical separation, the minimum horizontal separation is normally never less than five nautical miles. The responsibility for ensuring that these criteria are met remains with air traffic control.

Exercise JMC 90/1

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what use will be made of Stornoway airport during Exercise JMC 90/1.

Mr. Neubert: Stornoway airport has not been activated for military use during Exercise JMC 90/1, although very occasionally aircraft involved in the exercise may land there to refuel.

RAF Buccaneer (Emergency Landing)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the extent of the damage to the RAF Buccaneer which made an emergency landing at Stornoway airport on 26 June 1989 following a birdstrike; where the birdstrike occurred and at what height the aircraft was flying at the time; which unit repaired the aircraft; and on what date the aircraft was flown out from Stornoway after repair.

Mr. Neubert: The Buccaneer XW 543 was struck by a single fulmar bird while flying at 100 ft above sea level, 100 nautical miles north west of Stornoway, on 26 June 1989. The aircraft landed at Stornoway airport following a satisfactory handling check by the pilot. Ground personnel from RAF Lossiemouth assessed the damage and found a crack in the windscreen quarter-light, a dented right engine intake and skin damage to the fairing between the intake and the fuselage. The aircraft was considered in a serviceable condition to fly back to RAF Lossiemouth for repair, and left Stornoway on 27 June 1989. At RAF Lossiemouth, the aircraft servicing flight replaced the damaged quarter-light and engine intake and repaired the fuselage skin and its supporting frames.

RAF Tornados (Stornoway)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the purpose of the visits to Stornoway airport by RAF Tornado GR 1 aircraft on 10, 22, 27, 28 and 29 November 1989.

Mr. Neubert: On 10 November 1989, an RAF Tornado GR 1 on a routine training sortie landed at Stornoway airport to refuel. During a routine safety check it was found to be unserviceable. The four subsequent visits by Tornado GR 1 aircraft during November 1989 were for the purpose of bringing in spares for the unserviceable aircraft and changing aircrews.

Woolwich Arsenal

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the historic buildings at the royal arsenal, Woolwich, indicating when each became vacant or its current use.

Mr. Neubert: The information requested is as follows:

Building	Date of construction	Category of listing	Use of date of vacation
1. Royal laboratory pavilions	1696	Grade II	Last used c1960 as workshops
2. Royal brass foundry	1717	Grade I	In use as archive store
3. Academy building	1719	Grade II	In use as mess
4. Dial square block	1717	Grade II	Last used c1964 as workshops
5. Verbruggen's house	1772	Grade II	Last used c1975 as offices
6. Grand store	1806-1813	Grade II	A proportion in use for offices and stores. Other offices last used in 1986. Remainder last used as stores c1960.
7. Middle gate house	1810	Grade II	In use as offices.
8. Riverside guard rooms	1814-15	Grade II	Last used for storage c1978.
9. New carriage store	1778	Grade II	In use as forms store.
10. Main guard house	1788	Grade II	In use as pedestrian access and offices
11. Rifle shell factory gate house	1856	Grade II	Last used c1964 for foundry offices.
12. Middle gate	c1850	Grade II	Last used as access c1970.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the progress of his plans to redevelop the area of the royal arsenal, Woolwich, declared surplus to defence requirements.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A presentation has now been given to the London borough of Greenwich outlining our proposals for the development of the royal arsenal west site, which we intend to vacate during the period 1993 to 1995.

This is part of a continuing process leading to disposal of the site. We await the council's response to our ideas.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he now expects his Department to (a) start and (b) complete the vacation of the royal arsenal Woolwich.

Mr. Neubert: In the spring of 1990 about 50 staff employed on Army publications will move from the royal arsenal to Woolwich common. The major occupier of the royal arsenal, the directorate general of defence quality assurance (DGDQA), is currently scheduled to be transferred progressively to Teesside between mid-1993 and the end of 1994. A number of other branches and organisations also accommodated on the site will need to vacate before DGDQA leaves.

Classified Documents

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the statement of the Minister of State for the Armed Forces in the Adjournment debate of 12 February, Official Report, column 116, to whose discretion and at what level the release of classified documents in Northern Ireland is left.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Management of classified documents in Army units in Northern Ireland is the responsibility of the general officer commanding, who exercises that responsibility in accordance with the manual of army security and Queen's regulations for the Army.

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of Defence if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The following private security firms are employed by the Ministry of Defence.

	Number of Contracts
Airwork Ltd.[1]	1
C. J. Bell	1
Bells (Group Services) Ltd.	1
Burns International Security Services (UK) Ltd.	6
Centuryan Security Ltd.	5
Custodian Security Guards Ltd.	1
Chubb Wardens Ltd.	1
CSE Aviation Ltd.[1]
Grampian Specialist Dogs	1
Medway (Chatham) Dock Company Ltd.	1
Plessey Assessment Services Ltd.[1]	1
Reliance Security Services Ltd.	6
RCO Contract Services Ltd.	1
Securiguard Services Ltd.	9
Securiguard Services (Southern) Ltd.	3
Securi-Guard (South West) Ltd.	4
Securicor Ltd.	2
Serco Ltd.[1]	3
Shorrocks Guards Ltd.	2

[1] Multiactivity contracts where security is only one element.

The total value of contracts for each financial year since 1984-85 is as follows:

1984-85	350
1985-86	600
1986-87	1,100
1987-88	1,350
1988-89	1,900
1989-90	4,418

We would not wish to give information on the numbers of people employed on each contract, on security grounds. We would regard the value of each contract as commercially-in-confidence.

Pursuant to my answer to the hon. Member of 14 February, Official Report, column 311, I am afraid that, owing to an element of double counting that was not previously identified, the figure given for the number of private security firms employed at present was incorrect. The true number of firms is 19, not 21. Figures for earlier years may also be affected.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: At present, paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days paid paternity leave.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishing (Greenland)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what amount and proportion of European Community quotas in Greenland waters was taken by (a) Scottish and (b) English vessels in each year going back to 1976.

Mr. Curry: As catches of species other than cod such as Greenland halibut and redfish are minimal, being essentially by catches, the information in the following tables is for cod catches only.

Meat Products

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what legislation his Department is considering to ensure that blood gel plasma meat products are adequately labelled before being purchased by the consumer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Should a company decide to use this technique for the preparation of meat products it would need to ensure that the product was safe and labelled in accordance with the Food Labelling Regulations 1984. This would apply equally to home-produced and imported products. In particular, those regulations require that food labels carry details of any process which the product has undergone where the omission of such detail would mislead the consumer, details of any ingredients used in the product which would include blood enzymes, and a name for the food which would distinguish it from any other foodstuff with which it might be confused.

Misleading labelling of food is an offence under the Food Act 1984. It is not for me to suggest particular forms of words for labels. A company would need to decide what description of this or any similar process would adequately explain to its intended customers the exact nature of the foodstuff. Trading standards officers are responsible for enforcing the law; I expect that they are already aware of the development of this process but I am drawing the matter specifically to their attention.

The labelling rules apply equally to catering supplies as they do to retail sales. As part of its current labelling review I have already asked the Food Advisory Committee to look at the difficult matter of information provided to customers in restaurants, cafés or other catering outlets.

I am not aware of any British company that has decided to use this technique; nor is it my understanding that any such products are currently being marketed in the United Kingdom.

However, the Department is monitoring developments closely and I will take any further action that seems appropriate in the interest of either food safety or consumer protection.

Sheep Farmers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sheep farmers in each of the northern counties of England have flocks of 1,000 or more ewes.

Mr. Curry: Information on flock sizes is not available in the form requested.

Pesticides

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to publish his report into the investigation of suspected poisoning of animals by pesticides in respect of 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Maclean: The 1988 report of the environmental panel of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides will be published during the second quarter of this year, while that for 1989 is scheduled for publication during the autumn.

Departmental Expenditure

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 13 February, if he will list the amount spent by his Ministry in each category given.

Mr. Gummer: The table sets out figures showing the expenditure by my Department on food R and D over the last 10 years. Data on expenditure on food quality, safety and processing are not readily available before 1984-85. Figures for research and development separately are not available.

Fungicides

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for the last 10 years what research has been carried out by his Department in respect of crop fungicides alar, mancozeb, maneb and zineb; what results were obtained; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Department does not generally conduct research into individual pesticides. Stringent evaluations are carried out before products are approved for use, based on criteria laid down by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides (ACP). The safety in use of pesticides once approved is ensured by a wide ranging surveillance of pesticide residues in food, and monitoring of incidents involving wildlife, the results of which are published. The ACP reviews approved products causing concern; the substances listed were reviewed by the committee within the last 12 months but found to present no danger to health. The detailed evaluations supporting these findings have been made public.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultation his Department has had with the United States Environmental Protection Agency in respect of crop fungicides alar, mancozeb, maneb and zineb; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Department maintains liaison with overseas regulatory authorities including the United States Environmental Protection Agency. In the case of daminozide (Alar) and the ethylene bisdithiocarbamates (mancozeb, maneb, and zineb) all the data which the EPA had studied together with its evaluations were made available for assessment to my Department.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultation his Department has had with the World Health Organisation in respect of crop fungicides alar, mancozeb, maneb and zineb; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Department is represented on the FAO/WHO Codex committee on pesticide residues which meets annually. This committee considers recommendations for maximum residue levels and acceptable daily intakes, and has discussed the active ingredients daminozide (used in the product Alar) mancozeb, maneb and zineb.

Helicopters

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice his Department issues on the use of helicopters near horses and other animals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I am not aware of any particular problems caused by helicopters near horses or farm animals and the Department has not issued specific advice on this issue.

Pressure Stock Licences

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has had any representations about claims by official receivers that pressure stock licences given to individuals under entitlement are company rather than individual assets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I have not received any representations in these terms. Fisheries Departments issue licences both to individuals and to companies in respect of named vessels. Most licences are transferable between vessels and between owners, provided that conditions attached to licence transfer are met. Transferable licences thus acquire a financial value and can be either company or individual assets, depending on the particular circumstances.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to review the scope and wording of pressure stock licences.

Mr. Curry: The scope and wording of pressure stock licences are kept under constant review.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the legal status of all pressure stock licences; and if he has any further plans to review the future of the licensing regime.

Mr. Curry: Pressure stock licences are granted at the discretion of Fisheries Ministers, and within an announced framework of rules, using powers from section 4 of the Sea Fish (Conservation) Act 1967, as amended, and the Sea Fish (Licensing) Order 1989, as amended. The licensing scheme is kept under constant review.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the monetary value of pressure stock licences that his Department assumes when licences are given to or acquired by individuals under entitlement.

Mr. Curry: Pressure stock licences acquire monetary value in so far as they are transferable between vessels and between owners. These values are matters for the buyers and sellers concerned and my Department makes no assumptions about them.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what distinction his Department draws between the monetary values of pressure stock licences held by individuals and those by companies; and what assessment he has made of the level of trading in licences which takes place.

Mr. Curry: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer to his separate question on the value of licences. Under the current rules, licences can only be transferred between owners upon application to the Fisheries Departments when the vessel to which the licence applies is sold. Vessels are regularly traded both by companies and individuals, and the prices set are matters for negotiation between the individuals or companies concerned.

Farm Woodland Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the operation of the farm woodland scheme; and if he will indicate the area taken into the scheme; expenditure (a) incurred to date and (b) committed for the future; and what is his estimate of common agricultural policy savings resulting from the scheme.

Mr. Curry: In the first 16 months of the farm woodland scheme applications to plant a total of 9,740 hectares throughout the United Kingdom have been received. United Kingdom expenditure incurred as at the end of January 1990 amounted to £1,378,000 for planting grants and £240,347 in annual payments. United Kingdom future expenditure commitments in respect of approvals to plant as at the end of January 1990 amount to £6,519,097 for planting grants and annual payments of £1,112,004 per year. An estimate of common agricultural policy savings resulting from the scheme will be made as part of the review of the scheme in 1991.

Catering Facilities

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost of installing (a) a ministerial dining room in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and (b) a new kitchen as part of that installation; what company manufactured the kitchen units; and what was their country of origin.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 19 February 1990]: During refurbishment of the building, one room is being furnished to serve mainly as a conference room and to double as a dining room when necessary. The cost of works and furnishings is approximately £8,500. The kitchen replaces a wholly inadequate kitchen facility. The cost of units, appliances and works is approximately £9,800. The work was carried out by a British firm following competitive tender. All the kitchen units are of British manufacture and mainly of British wood.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Residential Care

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the basic weekly costs of care in a nursing home for (a) the elderly, (b) Alzheimer's disease sufferers and (c) the physically disabled; and what levels of income support are available to people in each of these categories.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that figures are not available in the form requested. The levels of fees charged are a matter between proprietors and residents or their relatives and will depend upon various factors, including the facilities available and the degree of care provided.

The levels of income support available are dependent on the type of care a person receives and are subject to national limits. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 25 October at column 841 the limits to be introduced in April.

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received calling for extra Government assistance to be available to income support dependent elderly persons, Alzheimer's disease sufferers and the physically disabled in residential homes where charges are in excess of income support levels.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have received a number of representations from a variety of interested organisations and individuals.

National Insurance Benefits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each change in national insurance benefit entitlement since 1979 and the number of claimants affected.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 26 January 1989 to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) at columns 712-14, which listed the main changes to national insurance benefits since 1979. The numbers affected by each of these changes could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Further changes occurring since that reply are given in the table.

	Financial year change introduced	Number affected
UB abatement for occupational/personal pension reduced from age 60 to 55	1988-89 and 1989-90	45,000 in a full year
Weekly earnings rule introduced for UB	1989-90	5,000 at any one time
UB "full extent normal" rule—de minimis provision	1989-90	1,000 at any one time
"Actively seeking work" test for UB	1989-90	[1] 50,000
Abolition of pensioners earnings rule	1989-90	400,000 approx.
Widows: revised entitlement conditions for women widowed before April 1988	1989-90	20,000 approx.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each change since 1979 in the Exchequer subsidy to the national insurance fund and the annual savings made by each change; and what is the cumulative saving to the Exchequer since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The estimated reduction in payments from the Consolidated Fund to the national insurance fund as a result of changes in the Treasury supplement for the financial years from 1979-80 to 1988-89 is shown in the table.

Year	Per cent.	Amount (£ million)	Notional amount[1] (£ million)	Reduction (£ million)
1979-80	18	2,343	—	—
1980-81	18	2,848	—	—
1981-82	14·5	2,433	3,020	587
1982-83	13	2,591	2,890	299
1983-84	13	2,807	—	—
1984-85	11	2,597	3,069	472
1985-86	9	2,163	2,644	481
1986-87	9	2,412	—	—
1987-88	7	2,135	2,745	610
1988-89	5	1,653	2,314	661

[1] This is an assumed figure, had the Treasury supplement remained at the level for the previous year.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Paternity leave is not available to civil servants at present. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the Greater Manchester area will be eligible for the community charge rebate.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that reliable estimates of numbers of recipients cannot be provided on a detailed regional basis. The models used by this Department produce estimates of the numbers of people expected to receive community charge benefit, not of numbers who may be eligible.

Pensioners (Incomes)

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the most recent figures on pensioners' incomes; and what were the comparable figures in 1974 and 1979.

Mr. Newton: Detailed analysis, recently completed, of data from the 1987 family expenditure survey shows that the average pensioners' total net income increased by over 31 per cent. in real terms between 1979 and 1987. Table 1 shows a breakdown of the individual components which contributed towards this increase.

Table 1—Pensioners' Incomes

	1974	1979	1987	real terms increase 1979-87 Per cent.	real terms increase 1974-79
Total social security benefits	45·00	50·50	59·20	17	12
Occupational pensions	11·80	13·20	23·30	77	12
Savings income	10·70	9·10	20·90	130	−16
Earnings	13·60	9·90	7·90	−20	−27
Total gross income	81·10	82·80	111·20	34	2
Total net income	73·80	75·90	99·90	31	3

Notes:
1. Source: Family Expenditure Survey.
2. £s per week at 1987 prices.

The analysis also shows that the proportion of pensioners in the lowest quintile of income distribution fell from 38 per cent. in 1979 to 24 per cent. in 1987. Pensioners who receive all of their income from state benefits have experienced a real increase of more than 27 per cent. over the same period. The figures also show that the average pensioners' gross income represented 61 per cent. of the average earnings of all manual workers.

In 1987 a total of 73 per cent. of all pensioners received income from savings and the average amount that they received was £28·40. Also, 52 per cent. of all pensioners had an occupational pension and the average amount received was £44·80. Table 2 shows the comparable figures for 1974 and 1979.

Table 2—Pensioners' Income from Savings and Occupational Pensions 1974, 1979 and 1987

	1974	1979	1987
Percentage of pensioners with savings income	53·0	62·0	73·0
Average amount received from Savings Income (£ per week)	20·50	14·60	28·40
Percentage of pensioners with Occupational Pensions	35·0	41·0	52·0
Average amount received from Occupational Pension (£ per week)	33·70	32·10	44·80

Notes:
1. Source: Family Expenditure Survey.
2. £s per week at 1987 prices.
3. Averages are for those who actually received savings income/occupational pensions.

Computers

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the date on which the invitation to tender to run the social security computer operation at Norcross, Lancashire was published in the Official Journal of the European Commission;

(2) what was the date on which the invitation to tender to run the social security computer operations at Livingston was published in the Official Journal of the European Commission.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is not the practice to publish in the Official Journal of the European Commission invitations to tender for service contracts such as those for the area computer centres at Norcross and Livingston.

Rents

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has about the difference between rent officer determination and market rents since the implementation of new restrictions under the housing benefit regulations.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information supplied by rent officers is being collected by the Department of the Environment and will be published in due course.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what provision exists to ensure that if rents are increased as a result of inclusive private sector rents becoming net rents after the abolition of the rating system such increases are not caught by subsidy restrictions imposed by rent officer determination.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We intend to introduce arrangements in the 1990-91 subsidy order to allow authorities to receive full subsidy on housing benefit paid in respect of any element of rent which, prior to 1990, was treated as rates. When the rent is next referred to the rent officer in the normal way (after a maximum of 12 months), the rent officer will look at the full charge, and the subsequent position will depend on the new determination.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Income Tax

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the income tax yield would be were all incomes below £100 zero rated, and incomes at £100 per week rated at 1 per cent., with each £4 rise in income incurring a further 1 per cent. increase in tax up to a limit of 40 per cent. tax rate for incomes of £260 per week and above.

Mr. Lilley: At 1990-91 levels of income, the yield in a full year under the proposed rate schedule would be some £10 billion less than under the 1989-90 income tax rates and allowances indexed by 7·7 per cent. to 1990-91.

The estimate allows for the start of independent taxation in April 1990. It is based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and is therefore provisional.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families with children are estimated to have taxable incomes below the income tax threshold; and what proportion this represents of all families with children.

Mr. Lilley: In 1989-90 it is estimated that some 1·6 million families with children have taxable incomes below the income tax threshold. These represent about 23 per cent. of all families with children. The estimates are based on a projection of the 1987 family expenditure survey and are therefore provisional.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount of income tax collected from people resident in Wales during 1988-89, or the latest year for which figures are available; and how much of this arose from payments made at (a) the standard rate and (b) the higher rate of tax.

Mr. Lilley: The latest available information covers residents of Wales in 1987-88 and is in terms of liabilities rather than tax collected. Total income tax was about £1·5 billion of which some £65 million was in respect of tax in excess of the basic rate.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the review into the relocation of Customs and Excise activities will be complete; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: At the moment I have nothing to add to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Gloucester (Mr. French) on 15 November (Official Report, column 316) but I hope to be able to make a statement shortly.

Interest Rates

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families (a) with children and (b) without have lost more as a result of increased interest rates since the Budget of 1988 than they have gained as a result of Budget changes made in 1988 and 1989; and what are the amounts by which they are worse or better off at various total income levels.

Mr. Lilley: Families will have benefited from many Budget measures since 1988, with the size of the gain depending on a range of other factors as well as total income levels. Many families will also have seen other changes in their circumstances since March 1988. There is thus no satisfactory basis on which to answer the hon. Member's question.

Business Expansion Scheme

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax relief has gone to the BES on residential property; and what his estimate is of the BES tax relief on residential property in 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Lilley: The cost of BES tax relief on residential property in 1988-89 is provisionally estimated as £110 million. Costs in 1989-90 and 1990-91 will depend on take-up.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what areas of activity have been outlawed from BES investments over the last three years; and how much tax was forgone for ongoing BES investment made in these areas in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: Nearly all trades qualify under the business expansion scheme. A trade does not qualify if it consists to a substantial extent of non-qualifying activities; these are set out in section 297 of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988. No activities have been added to this list in the past three years.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has for each of the years of the existence of BES on the percentage and amount of BES money invested in residential and assured tenancy schemes.

Mr. Lilley: The business expansion scheme was extended to include investment in private rented housing in 1988-89 and £350 million was invested. This comprises about 85 per cent. of total BES investment in the year. Information is not available for 1989-90.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has for each of the years of the existence of BES of (a) the cost of BES to the Exchequer, (b) the percentage of investments made by high rate taxpayers, (c) the cost to the Exchequer divided into top rate and other taxpayers and (d) the number of net new jobs created as a result of BES.

Mr. Lilley: The estimated cost of BES tax relief for 1983-84 to 1989-90 is as follows:

	£ million
1983-84	50
1984-85	75
1985-86	85
1986-87	95
1987-88	110
[1]1988-89	130

A forecast of £60 million for the cost of relief for the business expansion scheme in 1989-90 was published in the Government's expenditure plans, 1990-91 to 1992-93 (chapter 21, reference CM1021, appendix F), but no information is yet available centrally from official sources to provide a reliable estimate of the outturn.

Information is not available on the percentage of investments made by higher rate taxpayers, the cost to the Exchequer divided into top rate and other taxpayers, and the number of net new jobs created as a result of BES.

Taxation

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average individual cumulative gain (a) in current prices, (b) in 1988-89 prices and (c) in 1990-91 prices to those earning £5,000, £10,000, £15,000, £20,000, £25,000, £30,000, £40,000, £50,000, £60,000, and £70,000 as a result of changes in taxation and national insurance since 1979.

Mr. Lilley: Estimates of the annual change in liability resulting from the changes in income tax rates, allowances, and thresholds and national insurance contribution rates and limits are in the table. All estimates are based on a provisional 1989-90 income base projected from the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes. The 1978-79 income tax regime has been indexed to 1989-90 levels by reference to the statutory formula and national insurance contribution limits have been indexed by the change in the RPI between October 1977 and October 1988. The post-October 1989 NIC rates are used for 1989-90.

For the purposes of these calculations, the indexed regimes of 1978-79 are directly applied to the income base of 1989-90. In practice, retention of these regimes, indexed as appropriate, for the intervening years would have led to changes in the income base.

Average reduction in income tax and National Insurance contributions per tax unit[1] in 1989-90 compared with 1978-79 indexed regimes

Total all incomes	870	930	990

[1] Married couples and single people paying either income tax or NIC under the 1978-79 indexed regimes.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the reduction in annual liability to (a) capital gains tax and (b) capital transfer tax in 1989-90 and 1990-91 as against the 1979-80 indexed regime, specifying in each case the total and average reduction per taxpayer as well as the number of taxpayers in each year;

(2) what is the reduction in annual liability to (a) capital gains tax and (b) capital transfer tax in

1989-90 and 1990-91 as against the 1978-79 indexed regime specifying in each case the total and average reduction per taxpayer as well as the number of taxpayers in each year.

Mr. Lilley: Latest available estimates for 1989-90 and for 1990-91, based on the 1989-90 regime with statutory indexation, are as follows:

	Head of tax and regime for comparison
	Capital gains tax		Capital transfer tax/Inheritance tax
	Indexed 1978-79	Indexed 1979-80	Indexed 1978-79	Indexed 1979-80
Reduction under present regime in:
Total liability (£ million):
1989-90	1,400	1,450	680	820
1990-91	1,350	1,400	650	780
Average liability[1] (£):
1989-90	2,100	1,950	8,900	10,100
1990-91	2,450	2,300	9,400	10,400
Taxpayer numbers (thousands)
Indexed regime:
1989-90	670	730	77	81
1990-91	550	600	68	75

[1] The reduction in the average liability is calculated using estimated numbers of taxpayers under the indexed 1978-79 or 1979-80 regime.

The numbers of taxpayers based on the tax regimes in force in 1989-90 and in 1990-91, assuming statutory indexation of the 1989-90 regimes, are:

thousands

	Capital gains tax	Inheritance tax
1989-90	180	26
1990-91	150	22

The figures for capital gains tax exclude capital gains realised by companies and taxed within corporation tax. For each tax, the 1989-90 and 1990-91 tax bases are taken as given. It is not possible to determine to what extent changes to the taxes between 1978-79 or 1979-80 and the present may have affected the levels of transfers and disposals. The above comparisons can therefore be regarded as no more than indicative of the orders of magnitude involved.

Incomes

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the investment income and earned income in 1988-89 and 1989-90 of (a) the top 1 per cent., (b) the top 5 per cent., (c) the top 20 per cent., (d) the top 30 per cent., (e) the bottom 70 per cent., (f) the bottom 50 per cent. of taxpayers and (g) all taxpayers.

Mr. Lilley: Estimates are given in the table. They are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional. All estimates are subject to a large degree of uncertainty since some investment income on which tax is deducted at source is not reflected in the survey.

Privatisations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the maximum number of individuals who have owned shares in each of the privatised companies; and how many individuals currently hold shares in those companies.

Mr. Lilley: The information the hon. Member requested is as follows. Information for the 10 water companies is not yet available. The latest Treasury/stock exchange survey showed that in 1989 there were 9 million individual shareholders in the United Kingdom, three times as many as in 1979.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much corporation tax was collected between 1984 and 1988 as a result of major public companies selling their leasing subsidiaries; and how many of these arrangements are monitored by the special investigations section.

Mr. Lilley: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of energy costs allowed against United Kingdom companies' liability to corporation tax in each of the last five financial years.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are currently taken by the Inland Revenue to check that company expenditure offset against corporation tax as general company expenses is not being used to fund donations to political parties or organisations.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue takes the same action in relation to political donations as to any other expenditure not allowable for tax purposes.

Companies (Leasing Subsidiaries)

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax has been (a) assessed and (b) collected from those financial institutions that funded the purchase of major public companies' leasing subsidiaries between 1984-88, in respect of these arrangements.

Mr. Lilley: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the policy of the Inland Revenue towards the sale by public companies of their leasing subsidiaries between 1984-88 and towards the scope for tax avoidance afforded the purchaser; and what assessment, in these circumstances, the Inland Revenue makes of the true value of the transaction.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue examines such transactions to ensure that they are dealt with properly for tax purposes.

Leasing Schemes

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the policy of the Inland Revenue, in assessing leasing schemes for tax relief, in respect of establishing that the taxpayer has, in fact, completed meetings and signed documents on the dates claimed; and what are the Inland Revenue manpower considerations involved.

Mr. Lilley: As in other areas of investigation, whatever steps seem appropriate in individual cases are taken to verify the facts where there are doubts about the true sequence of events. It is not possible to isolate the manpower costs associated with such verifications.

Personal Data

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many members of staff in the Inland Revenue have been disciplined for breaching internal regulations on the disclosure of personal data within the last five years.

Mr. Lilley: During the years 1985 to 1989 inclusive, nine Inland Revenue officers have been formally disciplined for improperly disclosing confidential taxpayer information.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the procedure within the Inland Revenue for authorising transfers of personal data to other Government Departments; and at what level such decisions are authorised.

Mr. Lilley: The Revenue's procedure is to refer all requests for disclosure of personal data to a nominated officer at not less than grade 7 in the Revenue's head office. As regards the arrangements for local exchanges of information between the Revenue and Customs and Excise, I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary, then Financial Secretary, gave on 8 March 1988, (Official Report, column 128), to my hon. Friend the Member for Derbyshire, West (Mr. McLoughlin).

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what grounds decisions are taken to transfer personal data held by the Inland Revenue to other Government Departments;

(2) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from the Inland Revenue to other Government Departments; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(3) what kind of personal data held by the Inland Revenue, whether on computer or manually, are transferred to other Government Departments;

(4) what records are kept of transfers of personal data from the Inland Revenue to other Government Departments; and whether the Data Protection Registrar has access to the relevant records.

Mr. Lilley: Personal data held by the Inland Revenue are not disclosed to other Government Departments except as required by statute. Many routine exchanges of information under statute are made on a day-to-day basis and not recorded for statistical purposes. The legislation under which disclosures to other Government Departments are made is as follows:

Statute	Recipient	Nature of disclosure
Section 129 Land Registration Act 1925	Land Registry	Particulars of land and changes.
Section 9 Charities Act 1960 as amended by Section 33 Finance Act 1986	Charity Commissioners	(a) Information to establish charitable status; purpose of the institution and details of the trusts under which it is regulated. (b) Information on non-charitable activities and non-charitable applications of funds.
Section 58 Finance Act 1959	Department of Employment (which is authorised to pass information also to other Departments and various local bodies)	Names and addresses of employers operating PAYE schemes. Number of employees in each scheme.

Section 8 Parliamentary Commissioner 1967	Parliamentary Commissioner (Administration)	Any information required by the Parliamentary Commissioner for the purposes of his investigations.
Section 8 National Audit Act 1983	National Audit Office	Any information required for the purposes of National Audit Office's examinations.

Statute	Recipient	Nature of disclosure
Section 17 Protection Act 1984	Data Protection Registrar or Data Protection Tribunal	Any information Data necessary for discharge of their functions under the Act.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on what statutory basis transfers of personal data take place from the Inland Revenue to the police; and how many such transfers take place each year;

(2) what kinds of personal data held by the Inland Revenue are transferred to the police; and whether records are kept of such transfers.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue discloses personal information to the police under the following sections:

Section 27, Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986—Information relevant to investigation of an offence under the Act (by order of Circuit Judge/Sheriff).

Section 17, and Schedule 7, Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989—Information relevant to investigation of offence under the Act (by order of Circuit Judge/Sheriff or Secretary of State for Northern Ireland).

There were 107 disclosures in 1988-89 under the Drug Trafficking Offences Act. The Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act has only recently come into operation.

In all other cases the Revenue claims immunity from disclosure on grounds of public interest unless the police are acting on the Revenue's behalf or the police inquiries are directly relevant to the investigation of the serious crimes of murder or treason. There is no record of the number of such disclosures.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what internal guidelines covering the transfer of personal data to other Government Departments are available to staff in the Inland Revenue; and whether he will place a copy of any such guidelines in the Library.

Mr. Lilley: Detailed instructions are incorporated in numerous manuals dealing with each of the Revenue's areas of work. A notice reminding all staff of their personal responsibility was issued recently. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans exist in the Inland Revenue for the transfer of personal data via the Government data network; and what new procedures have been adopted to prevent unauthorised transfers of such data.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue at present transfers large quantities of personal data over a private network of lines leased from British Telecom. These transfers take place solely between Inland Revenue offices. There are plans to absorb the whole of this existing network into the Government data network and to validate these plans a pilot operation is currently running in the Greater Manchester region. The stringent controls which already exist in the Revenue network to prevent the unauthorised transfer of personal data will remain in force when the network becomes part of the Government data network and no new procedures are envisaged or thought necessary.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether records will be kept of all personal data, transferred from the Inland Revenue to other Government Departments via the Government data network.

Mr. Lilley: There are no plans to transfer any personal data from the Inland Revenue to other Government Departments via the Government data network.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the rules governing the transfer of personal data from the Inland Revenue to other Government Departments are the same for data held manually as for data held on computer.

Mr. Lilley: Yes.

Mortgage Interest

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amounts would be payable each month at today's interest rates and at the lowest interest rate in the last three months on a standard repayment mortgage which was adjusted in line with the change of interest rate and repayable over 25 years of (a) £10,000, (b) £20,000, (c) £30,000, (d) £40,000 and (e) £50,000.

Mr. Lilley: The monthly mortgage interest payments after deduction of basic rate tax relief for an endowment mortgage are given in the table, based on a 14·5 per cent. mortgage interest rate and on the 13·5 per cent. rate which existed until November:

Mortgage (£)	Monthly payment (£)
	13·5 per cent. interest rate	14·5 per cent. interest rate
10,000	84·38	90·63
20,000	168·75	181·25
30,000	253·13	271·88
40,000	365·63	392·71
50,000	478·13	513·54

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the amount payable in mortgage interest each year since 1979 as a percentage of (a) disposable incomes and (b) consumer expenditure.

Mr. Lilley: The latest estimates are as follows:

	Mortgage interest payable as a percentage of
	Personal disposable income (a)	Consumer's expenditure (b)
1979	3·5	4·0
1980	4·4	5·1
1981	4·4	5·1
1982	4·9	5·5
1983	4·5	5·0
1984	5·3	5·9
1985	6·7	7·4
1986	6·6	7·1
1987	7·0	7·4
1988	7·3	7·6

Energy Management

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the cost in 1988-89 of increasing the investment allowance on contract energy management schemes from 25 to 40 per cent. per annum;

(2) what was the investment level in, and value of tax allowances given on investment by business in energy-saving equipment and schemes during 1988-89.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information needed to answer these questions is not available.

Tax Avoidance

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money the Inland Revenue has (a) assessed, (b) collected, (c) written off following settlement or other reasons and (d) still to collect from taxpayers who engaged in corporate tax avoidance schemes involving section 64(11) type leases where banks claim allowances on assets leased to local authorities.

Mr. Lilley: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money the Inland Revenue has (a) assessed, (b) collected, (c) written off following settlement or other reasons and (d) still to collect from taxpayers who engaged in corporate tax avoidance schemes known as film schemes and structured in such a way as to exploit capital allowance legislation by enabling companies to buy in tax losses artificially.

Mr. Lilley: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money the Inland Revenue has (a) assessed, (b) collected, (c) written off following settlement or other reasons and (d) still to collect from taxpayers who engaged in corporate tax avoidance schemes known as funded lease schemes involving hire purchase and leaseback, and other schemes along similar lines.

Mr. Lilley: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money the Inland Revenue has (a) assessed, (b) collected, (c) written off following settlement or other reasons and (d) still to collect from taxpayers who engaged in corporate tax avoidance schemes along the lines of film schemes.

Mr. Lilley: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend section 20 of the Taxes Management Act to cover those who are actively promoting tax avoidance schemes.

Mr. Lilley: Amendments to section 20 made in the Finance Acts 1988 and 1989 already cover this matter.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to prevent tax avoidance promoters from exporting key documents required by the Inland Revenue to the Isle of Man, the Channel Islands or other offshore tax havens.

Mr. Lilley: I refer the hon. Member to section 145 of last year's Finance Act.

Advisers and Banks

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to extend section 20 of the Taxes Management Act to cover professional advisers and banks located in the Channel Islands, Isle of Man and Gibraltar.

Mr. Lilley: No. Those territories have their own tax administrations.

Mr. Patrick Taylor

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider amending section 20 of the Taxes Management Act in the light of the Revenue's legal cases with Mr. Patrick Taylor.

Mr. Lilley: An appeal is pending in this matter and comment would be inappropriate.

Overseas Trusts

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation requiring the trustees and settlers of overseas trusts to appear before the appropriate tax authorities and the courts.

Mr. Lilley: There are existing powers enabling the general and special commissioners to summon any person (other than the appellant) to appear before them and give evidence.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to enable the Inland Revenue to freeze the activities of overseas trusts pending the trustees and settlers' co-operation with the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Lilley: It is not clear what activities the hon. Member wishes to freeze.

Residential Property

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the average ratio of capital values to rateable values of freehold residential property in each region in 1988.

Mr. Lilley: This information could not be produced without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will provide a breakdown on a regional basis for the 1988 public sector figures in table 15.3 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1989", distinguishing: (a) freehold and (b) leasehold residential properties sold to (i) individuals and (ii) others.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that reliable information is not available at the level of detail requested. Available information is in the tables:

Property sales in 1988 by the public sector

Housing (Essex)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will provide for the districts of Basildon, Harlow and Thurrock the number and rateable value of houses and so on, with a rateable value not exceeding £100 and by (a) £50 steps to £400, (b) £100 steps to £800, (c) £800 to £1,000, (d) £1,000 to £1,500 and (e) over £1,500.

Mr. Lilley: This information could not be produced without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources.

Age Allowances

Mr Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes there have been in policy on the award of age allowances.

Mr. Lilley: Under independent taxation, which starts on 6 April 1990, the present single and married age allowances will be replaced by age-related levels of the new personal and married couple's allowances. A wife aged 65 or over will be entitled to an age-related personal allowance in her own right, if her own income is below the income limit for the higher allowance levels. She will be able to set her personal allowance against any kind of income. As a result of this and other changes introduced with independent taxation some three quarters of all elderly married couples who currently pay tax will pay less tax, and some 180,000 will be taken out of tax altogether.

Retail Sales

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the basis upon which the Central Statistical Office calculates the monthly retail sales figures; upon how many returns from retailers these statistics are based; and what types and sizes of retailers are represented in the sample to ensure that the sample is a true reflection of the overall structure of the retailing industry.

Mr. Lilley: The monthly retail sales figures are based on a voluntary inquiry which collects figures of turnover from a sample of 3,500 retailers covering about 60 per cent. of total retail sales. Provisional estimates of the monthly index are based on nearly 2,000 returns; the final index incorporates about 2,800 replies. All types and sizes of retailers are included in the sample. The method of calculation of the index uses information on the overall structure of retailing and is designed to ensure that the index is a good measure of changes in total retail sales.

Further details of the survey are given in "Monthly Retail Sales Inquiry: Summary of Principles and Procedures", a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Third-world Debts

Miss Hoey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amount of tax relief banks receive when setting aside money as a provision for non-payment of Third-world debts; what is the time limit on this tax relief; and whether banks can retain this relief indefinitely or use this money for purposes other than writing off debt payments.

Mr. Lilley: Banks are entitled to make a deduction from their profits for tax for provisions they make against non-payment of loans, including loans to sovereign debtors, to the extent that the loan is estimated to be irrecoverable. The amount estimated to be irrecoverable has to be agreed with the Inland Revenue. Once a deduction has been agreed, there is no limit on the time a bank may retain the provision, but if the debt is repaid, or if prospects for recovery improve, the tax relief is clawed back. The making of provisions reduces a bank's profit or creates a loss, it does not provide money for other purposes.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what contribution his Department will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. Ryder: None.

Hong Kong (United Kingdom Assets)

Mr. Heseltine: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what calculations he has made of the value of United Kingdom assets in Hong Kong.

Mr. Major: Information is available only for certain categories. The latest information for direct investment is for end-1987 when the book value of United Kingdom direct investment in Hong Kong was £1,924 million. There is no information on United Kingdom portfolio investment by country. Information is available on external assets and claims on Hong Kong by banks and other financial institutions in the United Kingdom. (See table 14 of the Bank of England Quarterly Bulletin.) At end-September 1989 United Kingdom liabilities to Hong Kong were £18,781 million whilst United Kingdom claims on Hong Kong were £18,446 million.

Import Duties (Brize Norton)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the sum collected at RAF Brize Norton by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in import duties for the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Ryder: Revenue collected at RAF Brize Norton for the financial year ended 31 March 1989 totalled £62,300. Separate figures for VAT, Customs and Excise duties are not available. No anti-dumping duties or agricultural levies were collected.

Tax and National Insurance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount collected in tax and national insurance contributions by central Government as a percentage of gross domestic product for each year since 1977-78; and what is his estimate for 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: From 1977-78 to 1988-89 available information is included on the CSO database in the following series (identified by their database codes):

Total CG taxes and NICs	(GTEA-ADAB)
GDP(A)	(CAOB)

On the basis of the Autumn Statement forecast, the percentage for 1989-90 is 33·2.

Rateable Values, South-West

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will provide for the districts of Plymouth, Bristol and Kingswood, the number and rateable value of houses etc. with a rateable value not exceeding £100 and by (a) £50 steps to £400, (b) £100 steps to £800, (c) £800-£1,000, (d) £1,000-£1,500 and (e) over £1,500.

Mr. Lilley: This information could not be produced without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources.

Poultry Statistics

Mr. Morley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what grounds 10-day import/export figures have ceased to be made available to the poultry industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The 10-day information contained provisional, unverified data which could be misleading and it was therefore decided that as from February 1990 only verified monthly statistics would be published.

HEALTH

City and Hackney District Health Authority

14. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next plans to visit City and Hackney district health authority.

Mr. Freeman: I hope to visit St. Bartholomew's and Homerton hospitals in the next few months.

Abortion

15. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the selective reductions undertaken at Humana hospital have been registered as abortions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This hospital is approved under section 1(3) of the Abortion Act 1967. The abortion notification forms completed by operating practitioners cover the method used to secure termination but do not require the practitioner to specify whether the termination has been a selective reduction.

Hospital Medical Staff

16. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the contents of the interim report on patterns of hospital medical staffing.

53. Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the contents of the interim report on patterns of hospital medical staffing.

71. Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the contents of the interim report on patterns of hospital medical staffing.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The report contains some useful information, but it covers the period before we launched two initiatives on junior doctors' hours of work in 1988 and 1989. It cannot, therefore, be expected to reflect the considerable progress made since then. That is not to say that I am complacent about some of the issues contained in the report and I have called all the interested parties together to discuss what solutions can be found jointly to reduce the hours our junior doctors have to work.

Income Generation Schemes

17. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has as to the amount likely to be raised in income generation schemes by the National Health Service in 1989-90.

Mr. Roger Freeman: A total of £28 million.

Social Workers

18. Mr. Cabom: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received regarding the implications of shortages of local authority social workers.

58. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received regarding the implications of shortages of local authority social workers.

64. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received regarding the implications of shortages of local authority social workers.

105. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received regarding the implications of shortages of local authority social workers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have had a number of representations about the problems faced by some local authorities, particularly in London, in attracting and retaining suitably qualified social workers.

Resource Management Initiative

19. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether further progress will be made with the resource management initiative in the coming financial year.

Mr. Freeman: The National Health Service Management Executive has been discussing with the National Health Service details of the programme for the coming financial year for which the Government have made available an additional £78 million. Fifty more hospitals in England have been chosen to prepare and implement the main resource management programme in 1990-91. Since my announcement last March about the extension of the programme a total of 100 hospitals have been selected to implement the main resource management process. We are proceeding at a pace that the service can sustain in setting up project management teams and purchasing computer equipment. This is backed-up with guidance from the Management Executive on the best way to proceed.

Medical Audit

20. Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give further details of the recently announced £31 million allocation for medical audit.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Most of this money—£24 million—is being allocated to regional health authorities to help doctors in hospital and community health services set up new systems of quality control of clinical services known as medical audit. In addition, about £5 million will be used by family practitioner committees to further the development of medical audit in general practice and £2 million will be used to fund audit initiatives proposed by the medical royal colleges and other professional bodies.

Drug Budgets

21. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the Health Reform Group to discuss the proposals relating to the management of indicative drug budgets.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I last met the Health Reform Group formally on 9 January 1990 and had a wide-ranging discussion on our proposed National Health Service reforms which it warmly supports.

106. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the proposed indicative drug budgets.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received 766 representations specifically referring to the proposals on indicative prescribing budgets. In addition we have received some 14,000 representations about the White Paper proposals in general, many of which have raised questions about, amongst other things, indicative prescribing budgets. Many of the letters concern the availability of medicines under the new system. As representations of the profession accept general practitioners will be able to continue to prescribe all the medicines which individual patients might need.

Stone House Hospital

22. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding proposals to change the status of the Stone House hospital at Bishop's Castle.

Mr. Freeman: I am aware of only five inquiries, in the form of letters received direct from members of the public.

British Medical Association

23. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the British Medical Association; and what subjects were discussed.

29. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the British Medical Association; and what subjects were discussed.

43. Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the British Medical Association; and what subjects were discussed.

76. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met representatives of the British Medical Association; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I met members of the general medical services committee on 14 February when the report of the doctors and dentists review body and the pay of doctors and dentists were discussed.

Carers

24. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given to the need for carers to be able to request an assessment under the proposals in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In practice requests for local authority services will often, as at present, come from carers rather than from people who are being cared for. We want carers to play an active part in the assessment process and have already made clear that assessments should take account of their own needs, their preferences and their ability to go on providing care.

Primary Health Care

25. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the report on primary health care in Wolverhampton.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The report on primary health care in Wolverhampton contains, for the most part recommendations which are for the local FPC and DHA, in collaboration, to implement. I have asked both authorities to proceed with implementing them and I have now written in more detail to my hon. Friend. We are most grateful to Sir Michael Drury, professor of general practice at Birmingham university, for his report.

Community Care

26. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to encourage the development within the community of alternatives to the use of institutional care for elderly and disabled people.

79. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to encourage the development within the community of alternatives to the use of institutional care for elderly and disabled people.

85. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to encourage the development within the community of alternatives to the use of institutional care for elderly and disabled people.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to encourage the development within the community of alternatives to the use of institutional care for elderly and disabled people.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government's White Paper "Caring For People" published in November 1989 included as a key proposal that domiciliary, day and respite services should be developed to enable people to live in their own homes for as long as possible. Existing funding structures have worked against the development of home based services. The Government seek to establish the right financial and managerial framework to help local authorities to provide the services that are needed. That objective is central to the new community care arrangements in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill currently before the House.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision he is making to take back into psychiatric hospitals those patients released into the community who have not succeeded in establishing themselves there; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Where it seems likely to a consultation psychiatrist that a patient discharged from hospital would benefit therapeutically from readmission, it is open to the consultant to propose, and if the patient agrees, seek to arrange, readmission.

87. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to visit Birmingham to discuss community care.

97. Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he plans to make an official visit to Bromley to discuss community care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I recently visited both Bromley and Birmingham as part of a series of visits planned to see how community care services are being developed and improved at a local level. The visits are proving highly informative and have provided valuable insights into how the Government's proposals for the future organisation and management of community care can be implemented successfully.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received regarding the Government's proposals for community care.

60. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received regarding the Government's proposals for community care.

110. Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received regarding the Government's proposals for community care.

118. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received regarding the Government's proposals for community care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to my replies on 23 January at column 663. We have received further representations from voluntary organisations and others on the Government's proposals for community care and will be taking careful note of them as part of our preparations for implementation of the main proposals in the White Paper "Caring for People".

42. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision is being made to provide community facilities for the mentally ill and handicapped.

Mr. Freeman: It has long been policy for health and social services to collaborate to provide such facilities as resources allow. As a consequence there has been substantial growth in places in local authority, voluntary and private homes; day centres, day hospitals; mental health centres and in the number of community psychiatric nurses.

I refer my hon. Friend, for statistics on the growth of community facilities, to statistical bulletin 3(2)90 "Personal Social Services Provision for Mentally Handicapped People in England 1978-88" and statistical bulletin 3(4)89 "Personal Social Services Provision for Mentally Ill People in England 1977-87". Copies are available in the Library.

Family Planning

27. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the future of the family planning services.

73. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the future of the family planning services.

133. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the future of the family planning services.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale) earlier today.

52. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the current number of patients is who annually seek doctors' advice on family planning matters.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not available in precisely the form requested.

Figures are recorded on the number of patients in respect of whom a fee is payable to a general practitioner for providing contraceptive services, and the number of people attending family planning clinics. For 1987-88, the latest year available, the information is shown in the table.

Family Planning Services (1987-88—England)

	Thousands
Patients seen by GPs	2,554·9
Persons attending Family Planning Clinics	1,352·0

Hospices

28. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement on funding for the hospice movement.

96. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will give more details of the £8 million funding for the voluntary hospice movement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We shall shortly be notifying health authorities of the allocation they will receive for this purpose, and giving guidance on its distribution.

125. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospice projects have now been assisted directly with resources provided by his Department.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Two projects for people with AIDS, the London Lighthouse and the Mildmay Mission, currently receive direct assistance from the Department, and from health authorities. The funding of individual projects is otherwise a matter for discussion between the health authorities and the organisations concerned. Authorities will receive an additional allocation of £8 million for 1990-91 to enable them to increase their existing contributions to the voluntary hospice movement.

NHS (Patient Involvement)

30. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to increase the involvement of patients in the running of the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Members for Glasgow, Pollock (Mr. Dunnachie), for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle), for Renfrew, West and Inverclyde (Mr. Graham) and for Wigan (Mr. Stott) on 23 January at column 662.

NHS Trusts

31. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to specify the core services provided by National Health Service trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are no plans for the core or "designated services" provided by an NHS trust to be specified routinely by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State. Designated services are simply those which need to be pro ided locally and can be provided only to a defined population by a particular hospital, which has become an NHS trust. Designation becomes relevant if the trust does not wish to provide those services. The NHS and Community Care Bill provides for powers of direction by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State to achieve provision of designated services by NHS trusts as a last resort. The responsibility for identifying services which need to be designated for a particular population will rest with the DHA concerned.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about feasibility studies being carried out by hospitals considering opting out of health authority control.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 18 January at column 402.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was his Department's total expenditure on the meetings on National Health Service trusts held on 23 and 24 October 1989, 14 and 15 December 1989 and 22 and 23 January.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: These were internal management meetings with senior NHS managers. It is not our practice to disclose such costs.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health up until what stage a potential self-governing trust's application for self-governing hospital status may be withdrawn; up to what date new applications may be submitted; and if he will list those which have been withdrawn to date.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Formal application for NHS trust status may be made only after Parliament has approved the necessary legislation. Applications may, thereafter, be submitted at any time. They may be withdrawn at any time before the order establishing a particular trust is laid.

84. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received on the need for a ballot to take place before hospitals opt out of the existing National Health Service management structure.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: One letter has been received since the beginning of the year.

59. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have now shown an interest in self-government; and what is the precise method for doing this.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A total of 191 units have, to date, expressed an interest in NHS trust status, including a number with more than one hospital. For the precedure for registering an interest in NHS trust status, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 17 January at column 277.

56. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has had from district health authorities on his proposals for self-governing hospitals.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received representations from a wide range of individuals and representative bodies, including district health authorities, on the NHS review proposals over the past year. These have included representations on our proposals for NHS trusts.

Regional Health Authorities

32. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement on the new system of distributing resources to regional health authorities.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Hereford (Mr. Shepherd) on 23 January at columns 673-74.

Nurses and Midwives

33. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any changes have been made in the provision of training for nurses and midwives since 1978-79.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes. There have been important and far-reaching changes over this period.

The Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1979, in setting up the United Kingdom Central Council and four national boards, one for each country in the United Kingdom, introduced a unified statutory structure for the nursing, midwifery and health professions. Under this Act, the council is responsible for establishing and improving standards of training for the nursing professions.

In January 1987 the council presented to the four Health Departments proposals, known as Project 2000, for a major reform of nurse education and training. These proposals, designed to secure a more appropriately prepared profession better able to meet future health needs, have been largely accepted by the Government. By April 1990, a total of 13 Project 2000 schemes will have started in England. We hope to announce further sites shortly.

The past decade has also seen the development of a variety of links between schools and colleges of nursing and further/higher education establishments. There has been a growth in the number of degree courses in nursing and associated degree courses combined with registered nurse training. Several chairs of nursing have been established within universities, to enhance developments in nurse education and practice.

Curricula for pre-registration nurse education have developed to ensure that all nursing staff are able to meet changing demands in health care. In particular there has been a growth in post-registration courses in high technology areas to meet advances in medical technology.

Waiting Lists

34. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he proposes to make any additional resources available to reduce hospital waiting lists in the current year.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have made £31 million available through the waiting list fund in 1989-90. This will enable health authorities to treat over 100,000 additional in-patients and day cases and 90,000 out-patients from the waiting lists. A further £33 million is being allocated in 1990-91. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Sutton and Cheam (Sir N. Macfarlane) on 6 December 1989 at columns 280-81.

Ambulance Dispute

35. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now meet representatives of ambulance staff.

38. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now meet representatives of ambulance staff.

83. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now meet representatives of ambulance staff.

100. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now meet representatives of ambulance staff.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend gave the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner) on 23 January at columns 655-56.

140. Mrs. Rosie Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the National Health Service management board has any plans to meet representatives of the Association of Professional Ambulance Personnel to discuss the current ambulance dispute.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. The board would not expect to have meetings with any trades union on disputes about pay and conditions for any group of staff. Negotiations of pay of Whitley council groups is for the relevant Whitley council.

132. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his current estimate of the costs arising out of the ambulance dispute.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: It is too soon to form a clear estimate of the costs arising out of the dispute. The cost of military involvement to the end of December 1989 was £1·8 million, although there will of course be offsetting savings on salaries and fuel costs from the normal service. Figures for assistance provided by the police have not yet been assessed by all the authorities concerned.

98. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received concerning the ambulance workers' dispute.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received numerous recent representations concerning the ambulance workers' dispute.

57. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the ambulance workers' dispute.

114. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the present situation concerning the ambulance dispute; and if he will make a statement.

123. Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the dispute in the ambulance service.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: NHS management has always wanted to have further talks with the unions on the basis of its final offer, provided the unions changed their position and did not simply repeat their demands for a high pay increase and a pay formula. I am pleased that the two sides are meeting this afternoon at ACAS. I hope that today's talks will bring about a swift resolution of this dispute.

NHS Administrators

36. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what restrictions are placed on administrators in the National Health Service from working part time for any form of private trust to facilitate opting out by National Health Service hospitals; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Health authorities are responsible for determining the detailed terms and conditions of employment of NHS administrators. Any decision to place restrictions on outside activities by administrators would be a matter for the health authority concerned.

Drug Misusers

37. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many injecting drug misusers are known to have been infected by HIV; and how many of them are known to be still alive.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The table shows the cumulative totals of HIV anti-body positive reports, up to the end of December 1989, and AIDS cases, up to the end of January 1990.

	AIDS cases (United Kingdom figures)			HIV anti-body positive (United Kingdom figures)
	Men	Women	Total[1]	Men	Women	Total[2]
TOTAL	2,803	117	2,920 (1,660)	10,204	1,251	11,676
Injecting drug misusers	66	20	86 (38)	1,145	551	1,727
Injecting drug user/homo/bisexual	39	—	39 (19)	92	—	92

[2] Includes small numbers where sex not specified.

Day Nurseries

39. Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has had from the Royal Berkshire hospital concerning day nursery provision in the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Since opening the rainbow nursery at the Royal Berkshire hospital on 22 January I have received no representations.

Emergency Calls

40. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the number of people who have died where there was delay in response to an emergency call by the ambulance service; and if there has been any monitoring of the recent position in regard to response times.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No reasonable estimate can be made on the effect that industrial action is having on patient care, but plainly the unions are organising activities which are designed to reduce and delay the service to patients. I have no evidence yet that the unions' industrial action has definitely caused the death of anyone.

Ambulance services continue to monitor their own response times, even where the service is disrupted by industrial action, though the data may then be less reliable.

Health Authority Expenditure

41. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much will be spent on the health authority capital programme in the next financial year.

Mr. Freeman: Total gross spending on the hospital and community health services capital programme in 1990-91 is planned at £1,377 million.

NHS, Cornwall

44. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement on the proposed reorganisation of the National Health Service in Cornwall.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are no proposals to reorganise the National Health Service in Cornwall. Four units have expressed an interest in becoming NHS trusts. Subject to parliamentary approval, applications for formal NHS trust status will be invited later this year and it remains to be seen whether the expressions of interest already received will be taken further.

Social Work Training

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of social work training.

45. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of social work training.

46. Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of social work training.

127. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of social work training.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Glasgow, Rutherglen (Mr. McAvoy) on 16 January at column 195.

National Health Service and Community Care Bill

47. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent so far by his Department, by district health authorities and family practitioner committees to prepare for the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

72. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent so far by his Department, by district health authorities and family practitioner committees to prepare for the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

120. Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent so far by his Department, by district health authorities and family practitioner committees to prepare for the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Oldham, Central and Royton (Mr. Lamond) earlier today.

141. Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given to the need to ensure good quality service provision under the proposals in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The need to provide good quality services was a primary consideration in drawing up the proposals to improve services contained in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill. Our proposals will ensure high-quality, value-for-money services.

South East Thames Regional Health Authority

48. Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the chairman of the South East Thames regional health authority; and what was discussed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State last met the chairmen of regional health authorities, including Sir Peter Baldwin, on 17 January. The main topics discussed were implementation of "Working for Patients" and "Caring for People", and the ambulace dispute.

Disabled People

49. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state those local authorities that presently make payments direct to disabled people to make their own care arrangements; and if he has considered proposals for ensuring such arrangements are made more widespread.

108. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given to enabling local authorities to make payments directly to disabled people to make their own care arrangements.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 15 January at column 83.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on making arrangements for local authorities to make payments direct to disabled people to make their own care arrangements.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: None other than parliamentary questions and an amendment to the NHS and Community Care Bill.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received on implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

54. Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received on implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

67. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received on when implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 is likely to be fully implemented.

99. Mr. Bell To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received on when the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 is likely to be fully implemented.

Mr. Freeman: Since the beginning of this year hon. Members have addressed five parliamentary questions on this issue to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State. In addition an amendment to the National Health Service and Community Care Bill was put down in Committee, the effect of which would be to implement remaining sections of the Act. The Department has received no letters on this subject in this period.

Corneal Transplants

50. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many corneal transplants took place in each of the last five years in the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: Accurate statistics are not available on the number of corneal transplants performed in the National Health Service. The United Kingdom transplant service estimates that the United Kingdom total is in the region of 2,000 transplants per annum.

Eye Tests

51. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the results of his Department's monitoring of the effects of the introduction of charges for eyesight checks.

91. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the results of his Department's monitoring of the effects of the introduction of charges for eyesight checks.

107. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the results of his Department's monitoring of the effects of the introduction of charges for eyesight checks.

124. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the results of his Department's monitoring of the effects of the introduction of charges for eyesight checks.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Bradley) on 23 January at columns 654-55.

Psychiatric Care

55. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy towards the long-term development of psychiatric services and care.

Mr. Freeman: The Government's position is set out in chapter 7 of our White Paper "Caring for People".

General Practitioners

61. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners are employed in the National Health Service at present; and what was the figure in 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Ipswich (Mr. Irvine) on 23 January at column 678.

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will outline the mechanism by which family practitioner committees will be allocated moneys to pay general practitioners for conducting health screening and promotion clinics under the new general practitioner contract; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if the moneys allocated for family practitioner committees to pay general practitioners for conducting health screening and promotion clinics under the new general practitioner contract will be sufficient to cover clinics in addition to those specifically mentioned in the contract;

(3) if the moneys allocated for family practitioner committees to pay general practitioners for conducting health screening and promotion clinics under the new general practitioner contract will be a separately devoted budget.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: General medical practitioners will from 1 April 1990 be able to claim fees under the statement of fees and allowances (a copy is in the Library) for providing health promotion clinics. Family practitioner committees have discretion under paragraph 30.2 of the statement to decide which clinics qualify for payment. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supply estimates, claims which are accepted for payment will be met from a non-cash limited vote incorporating provision for the general medical services. Individual FPCs will not be allocated separate budgets for such fees.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will make a statement on the benefits of the new general practitioner contract for elderly people.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The new GPs' contract to be introduced with effect from 1 April, is to be more performance-related than the present arrangements. GPs are encouraged to meet the needs of particular patient groups. Elderly patients will benefit from these new arrangements. The annual payment to a doctor for each patient over 75 on his list will increase from 1 January 1991 to £31·45. This illustrates the importance the Government attach to the care of these patients. This compares with a payment of £12·40 for those under 65. Family doctors will offer an annual check-up and a home visit to those over 75 with a view to maintaining the quality of life as far as possible.

77. Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to make it easier for elderly people to be accepted on to a general practitioner's list.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The procedure for registering with a family doctor is unchanged; it involves the individual patient asking if the doctor will accept him or her as a patient. We have, however, made it easier for people of all ages to change doctors if they wish. In recognition of the additional care and attention that elderly patients sometimes require, the capitation fee for patients aged 65 and over and aged 75 and over are higher than the standard fee for those aged under 65. Under the new contract the capitation fee for the over-75s is to be increased considerably and will be some 2·5 times the fee for the under 65s.

From 1 January 1991 the capitation fee for those over 75 will be £31·45. For those under 65 it will be £12·40.

West Midlands Regional Health Authority

62. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will next meet the chairman of the West Midlands regional health authority to discuss the funding needs of health authorities in the region and the effects of population bias toward the elderly living in rural areas.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has at present no plans to do so.

63. Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given to the West Midlands health authority plan.

Mr. Freeman: Matters that have been discussed by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State and the chairman of the West Midlands regional health authority have included the regional health authority's plans for Birmingham which were the subject of preliminary local consultation last year. Revised proposals were issued for further local consultation on 30 January, and will be carefully considered as and when they are approved by that authority for submission to Ministers.

St. George's Hospital, Tooting

65. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to visit St. George's hospital, Tooting; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to visit St. George's hospital.

Health Authorities (Maintenance Backlog)

66. Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total figure for the estimated maintenance backlog for health authorities.

92. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total figure for the estimated maintenance backlog for health authorities.

94. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total figure for the estimated maintenance backlog for health authorities.

138. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total figure for the estimated maintenance backlog for health authorities.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Members for Pontefract and Castleford (Mr. Lofthouse) and for Leigh (Mr. Cunliffe) on 23 January at column 656.

National Health Service Consultants

69. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether there has been a change in the number of consultants employed in the National Health Service since 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes, the number of consultants has risen from 12,361 in 1979 to 14,950 in 1988; an increase of 21 per cent.

Clinical Research

70. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations or individuals have expressed concern that the reorganisation of the National Health Service will damage clinical research and training; and what replies he has sent.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received various representations concerning the effect of our proposals for improving the National Health Service on clinical research and training. In response we have explained the steps we are taking following our commitment in "Working for Patients" to maintain the quality of medical education and research.

GP Contracts

68. Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to monitor the impact of the new general practitioners' contracts.

130. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to monitor the impact of the new general practitioners' contracts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Members for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) and for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery) on 13 February at column 160.

74. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the implications of the new general practitioner contract and his proposals for practice and drug budgets for doctors working with AIDS/HIV patients and drug misusing patients.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The GPs' new contract is intended to raise standards and extend services and will therefore benefit all patients, including those receiving care and treatment for AIDS and drug abuse. Under both the fund holding and indicative drug budgets schemes general practitioners will be able to prescribe for their patients all the medicines they need.

NHS Pay

75. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the annual percentage increase in each of the past five years for (a) staff nurses, (b) consultants, (c) ambulance men of five years' service, (d) hospital administrators and (e) regional health officials.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Data are not available for three of the five groups over the period requested. Staff nurses ceased to exist as a separate pay grade on 1 April 1988. Hospital administrators were replaced by general managers from 1984 onwards. Regional health officials is a diverse category of staff with a number of different pay determination arrangements. The table shows settlements of the other two groups.

Percentage settlements in pay years (1 August to 31 July)

Years	Consultants	Ambulancemen
1984-85	6·2	[1]7·8
1985-86	9·5	6·0
1986-87	8·2	5·0
1987-88	8·1	[2]5·4
1988-89	8·0	[3]—

[1] A salaried pay structure was introduced on 1 March 1986. The level of increase assumed that all productivity increases were achieved.
[2] In addition the standard working week was reduced by one hour from 40 to 39 hours.
[3] The management side has offered 9 per cent. over 18 months. Staff in the London ambulance service would receive increases ranging from 10·9 to 12·1 per cent. and some 2,000 staff with extended training to NHSTA standards and who are required to use paramedical skills would receive an additional £500 per annum.

Prescribing Costs

78. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will clarify how prescribing costs will be monitored.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Prescribing costs will be monitored by means of simple monthly statements sent to general practitioner practices, family practitioner committees and regional health authorities by the Prescription Pricing Authority. These statements will show how much of the budgets have been taken up and project the likely end of year outcome. This will allow practices to monitor their own costs without needing to set up their own information systems and will enable regional health authorities and family practitioner committees to monitor the operation of the scheme.

The monthly statements will be in addition to the more detailed PACT reports which will continue to be issued quarterly as at present.

Women's Health Care

80. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's policies on health care for women.

136. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes have been made in the provision of health care for women in the last 10 years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We are proud of our record on women's health. Government policies over the last 10 years have brought enormous improvements to the health and well-being of the women in this country.

We have implemented screening programmes for breast and cervical cancers to reduce the number of women who die each year from these diseases. Between 1978 and 1988 deaths from cervical cancer in England and Wales fell by 10 per cent. to under 2,000 women per annum and the death rate per million women aged 20 to 74 years fell by 16 per cent.

There have been great improvements in maternity care and a range of new services, such as prenatal screening for inherited genetic disorders, is widely available. Between 1979 and 1988 perinatal mortality in England fell from 14·6 to 8·7 per 1,000 births; between 1978 and 1988 the maternal death rate per 1,000 total births in England and Wales fell from 0·11 to 0·06.

Since 1986 one of the Ministers within the Department has taken a special responsibility for women's health. We regularly meet representatives from women's voluntary organisations and this year are helping to support over 30 such organisations by way of the section 64 scheme. The Department also funds research, study days and courses on different aspects of women's health.

Our proposals for the National Health Service of the future will also ensure that the choice of health care services available to women will be extended and that greater attention will be focused on the quality of this care.

Invoice Settlement

81. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has issued any guidelines to local health authorities about the settlement of invoices from suppliers.

Mr. Freeman: Specific formal guidance has not been issued to health authorities, but the Treasury publication "Government Accounting" is published by HMSO and contains guidance of general applicability to all bodies under ministerial control. We continue to expect health authorities to meet their obligations within a reasonable time in accordance with contractual requirements and responsible practice, and have sent the Department of Employment booklet "Prompt Payment Please" to all health authorities.

Dental Charges

82. Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effects of the introduction of charging for dental inspections.

111. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effects of the introduction of charging for dental inspections.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the right hon. Member for Morley and Leeds, South (Mr. Rees) and the hon. Member for Vale of Glamorgan (Mr. Smith) earlier today.

Immunisation

86. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the percentage of children aged five years or under who are known to have received some form of immunisation.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not available. However, for the year 1987-88, the percentages of children in England who were born in 1985 and had completed their immunisations by the end of March 1988 were;

	Percentage
Whooping Cough	73
Measles	76
Diphtheria, Tetanus and Polio	87

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

88. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further funding he will provide for research into Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Department of Health has recently commissioned a research project to review the incidence, prevalence and trends of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. There are no plans, at present, for the Department to fund further research into this disease.

Capital Charging

89. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress of the capital charging initiative.

Mr. Freeman: The Inland Revenue is currently undertaking a valuation of the National Health Service estate, and the results of this exercise will be available in the Library from April 1990. Health authorities are making good progress in preparing registers of their capital assets, which will enable them to calculate estimated capital charges during the period of shadow operation in 1990-91 described in the working papers Nos. 5 and 9. These estimates will be reviewed before the scheme is fully implemented in April 1991.

116. Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what implications there will be for hospital nationalisation schemes of his proposal for capital charging.

Mr. Freeman: From April 1991, health authorities will be expected to include the effects on capital charges of their proposals for hospital rationalisation schemes in the submissions they make to the Department of Health. This will enable better informed decisions to be taken, as full consideration will be given to the recurring costs of using assets over a future period, and not just to the capital outlay involved.

Handicapped Children

90. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest annual figure for the number of children in the United Kingdom who were born either mentally or physically handicapped.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not available centrally.

The third report from the OPCS on disability in Great Britain "The Prevalance of Disability Among Children", published last year following surveys in 1985 and 1988, estimated that there are some 360,000 children in Great Britain under 16 with one or more disability. The definition was wide enough to include most children usually considered to be physically or mentally handicapped. It is not possible to distinguish the number of children who were born either mentally or physically handicapped from those who acquired a disability later since the surveys did not publish information on whether disabilities existed at birth. A copy of this report is in the Library.

NHS (Service Quality)

93. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on action being taken to improve the quality of service being given by the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The White Paper reforms aim to provide a better National Health Service with more attention to quality of care and customer service flowing from greater devolution, the separation of the purchaser and provider functions and introduction of contracts, wider choice and the extension of medical and clinical audit. These proposals are being reinforced by a series of initiatives to make the consumers' interest more central to the management and delivery of health care.

North West Thames RHA

95. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to meet the chairman of the North West Thames regional health authority to discuss the allocation of funds to the region's district health authorities.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State and I met the chairman of North West Thames regional health authority, together with a number of other colleagues, on 17 January to discuss allocations of districts. My right hon. and learned Friend meets the chairmen of all the regional health authorities regularly.

Orthopaedic Hospital, Stanmore

101. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will consider the creation of a special health authority to supervise the management of the Royal National orthopaedic hospital, Stanmore, Middlesex.

Mr. Freeman: We do not consider the creation of a special health authority for the Royal National orthopaedic hospital is the best way forward.

North East Thames and North West Thames regional health authorities issued proposals last August to transfer the management of the Royal National orthopaedic hospital (Stanmore) from Bloomsbury district health authority to Harrow district health authority as the most effective arrangement for securing the future of the hospital. No definitive proposal has yet been put to Ministers.

I discussed options for the hospital's future management with my hon. Friend when he led a delegation from the hospital to see me last week. I plan to visit the hospital shortly.

Infertility Treatments

102. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve the range and availability of infertility treatments.

128. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve the range and availability of infertility treatments.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Members for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan), for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo), for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) and for Newcastle-upon-Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson) on 23 January at columns 660-61.

Northumbria Ambulance Service

103. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what expenditure has been incurred in pursuing the opting-out proposals for the Northumbria ambulance service.

Mr. Freeman: Over £85 million has been made available this year for the implementation of the NHS review proposals. Of this, £35 million has been allocated to regional health authorities to enable them to develop the finance and personnel functions, to strengthen the public health function, to prepare for the introduction of capital charges and medical audit, and to create new consultant posts as promised in the White Paper, Northern RHA has been allocated £2,478 million. No additional resources have been made available specifically for the preparation of NHS trusts. However, all authorities including those with units considering this option will benefit from the overall strengthening of key management functions.

NHS Reform

104. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on implementation of the National Health Service reforms.

113. Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made on the implementation of the proposed reforms of the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We are making good progress in putting into action the changes outlined in the White Paper "Working for Patients". We are confident that the NHS will be ready to implement the basic elements of the new and better systems of matching growth and resources with expansion of patient services by April 1991 once Parliament approves the necessary legislation. We have made £85 million available to finance progress towards implementation this financial year and more than £300 million will be available in 1990-91.

We have issued detailed guidance on many subjects including the education and training of non-medical staff. Guidance on the principles of the new contracting system was issued in September and further guidance on additional aspects of the contracting system will be issued shortly.

We have published a GP fund holder programme which gives details about the operation of a GP practice fund. There has been an encouraging level of interest in the proposed scheme in all regions in England.

A new working paper, the 11th in the series, has been published, called "Framework for Information Systems: Overview". This working paper covers two documents issued for consultation, looking at the way ahead for information and information technology and concentrating on action in preparation for April 1991.

We intend to publish a further working paper on indicative prescribing budgets within the next few weeks.

We have launched a project to support district health authorities in detailed work in developing the key role which DHAs will have under the new system of identifying and obtaining the best pattern of services which will most effectively meet all the health needs of the population they serve.

We have received 190 expressions of interest from potential NHS hospital trusts, 80 of them are proceeding towards being the first wave of applicants for trust status within the NHS in April 1991. Subject to progress in Parliament, we expect many more to be ready for later waves of applicants in future years.

We have made £2 million available for implementation of medical audit this financial year, and a further £26 million has been allocated to hospital and community health services for the development of medical audit in 1990-91. A £4·5 million scheme has been launched to develop information technology skills. Demonstration projects, aimed at improving the quality of care and services to patients, have been announced for five out-patient departments. The principles of general management are being introduced into the family practitioner committee system.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has invited the medical and nursing royal colleges and the statutory bodies concerned with clinical issues to early talks on how, if necessary, clinical standards can be reinforced after the proposals in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill are implemented.

Good progress is also being made in relation to medical education and research. As my right hon. and learned Friend explained in a speech on 10 July 1989, since sent to all hospital doctors, we intend to take powers to ensure, for example, the continuation of high standards of undergraduate, postgraduate and continuing education and research in all National Health Service hospitals. We will also ensure that postgraduate training posts are provided in National Health Service hospital trusts in accordance with the national objectives set out in "Achieving a Balance". Medical education and research will be further enhanced by the proposed increase in the service increment for teaching (SIFT) to meet 100 per cent. of the median excess costs of teaching hospitals. This will be distributed by regions in consultation with universities.

The National Health Service and Community Care Bill is now before the House.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a pamphlet summarising the implications for patients of the Health Service reforms; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A leaflet (reference HSR1) setting out the implications of the proposed reforms for patients was published together with the White Paper "Working for Patients". We will consider further the need for additional public information.

Operating Theatres

109. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any steps are being taken to ensure that operating theatres are utilised effectively.

Mr. Freeman: In December 1989 a report by the Department's value for money unit on the management and utilisation of operating departments was issued to health authorities. This made a number of recommendations concerning the efficient utilisation of operating theatres, and suggested a target planned level of utilisation of 90 per cent. should be achievable. The Department is currently consulting health authorities and others about guidance following the recommendations made in the study report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Model Contracts

112. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will indicate when guidance will be published on model contracts for use in 1991-92.

Mr. Freeman: We expect to publish this guidance shortly.

Hospital Services (Islington and Bloomsbury)

115. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he will take to ensure there are no further cuts in hospital services in Islington and Bloomsbury if the health authorities are required to merge.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A consultation document on the proposal to merge Islington and Bloomsbury health authorities was issued at the end of last year. Comments have been requested by 12 April 1990. Until the outcome of the consultation is known it would be inappropriate for Ministers to comment on any aspects of the merger.

Eye Consultants

117. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has regarding the number of referrals by opticians to eye consultants in the periods 1 April to 31 December 1988 and in the same period in 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We do not collect this information. Opticians normally refer patients to their general practitioner if, as a result of an eye examination, they suspect disease, abnormality or injury. The general practitioner may then refer the patient on to the hospital eye service, if appropriate.

Capital Expenditure (Bury)

119. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the figures for capital expenditure in the Bury health authority in the years 1979-80 and 1988-89; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The capital expenditure figure for Bury health authority is shown in the table:

	Total expenditure (in cash terms)
1979-80	1,539,000
1988-89	1,484,000

These figures do not represent the trend, as expenditure has fluctuated during the intervening years.

Birmingham General Hospital

121. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received in respect of the proposed closure of the general hospital, Birmingham.

Mr. Freeman: Since the West Midlands regional health authority first published its preliminary proposals for the reorganisation of Birmingham's health services in April 1989 the Department has received a number of inquiries about the future of the general hospital from right hon. and hon. Members and direct from members of the public.

Voluntary Organisations (Consultations)

22. Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from voluntary organisations on the need to ensure service users and providers are consulted as part of an ongoing process under the proposals in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill; and if he will ensure local authorities establish an advisory body to do this.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received representations on this from several voluntary organisations. Ministers and officials meet regularly with national organisations to discuss such matters of common concern. The White Paper makes it clear that local authorities, when drawing up plans for community care, should consult interested agencies. We believe that they should determine for themselves the most appropriate way of doing this.

Nurses (Regrading)

126. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the regrading of nurses has now been completed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The new clinical grading structure for nursing and midwifery staff was implemented during 1988, with staff concerned being informed of their new grades by the end of October that year.

Royal College of Nursing

129. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the general secretary of the Royal College of Nursing; and what matters were discussed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State last met the general secretary of the Royal College of Nursing on 1 February when he informed representatives of nursing and midwifery staff and the professions allied to medicine of the Government's decision on the 1990 review body reports.

Patient Services

131. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what experience there has been within the National Health Service of using contracts for patient services.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friends the Members for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) and for Hexham (Mr. Amos) on 12 December at columns 843-44.

GP Lists

134. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are on the average general practitioner's list at present; and what was the comparable figure in 1979.

Mr. Freeman: At 1 October 1988 (the latest year for which figures are available) the average list size in England was 1,999 compared to 2,286 at 1 October 1979—a decrease of about 12·5 per cent.

Rural GPs

135. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the future of general practice in rural areas under his proposed changes and under the new contract.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Patients living in rural areas will benefit from the changes to the GPs' contract. In particular the new contract encourages more minor surgery and child health surveillance in general practice, extra services for elderly patients, greater cover for childhood immunisation and more screening for cancer of the cervix, more health promotion advice for all adults and more professional staff in the surgery such as nurses, counsellors and chiropodists.

GPs working in rural areas sometimes experience difficulties due to the scattered nature of their practices. In consultation with the BMA's general medical services committee, the Department of Health and the Welsh Office are reviewing the present arrangements (in England and Wales) for paying these GPs a rural practice payment. In doing so, full account will be taken of changes that are taking place in rural practice.

Cornwall Air Ambulance

137. Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the 1990-91 financial allocation to the South West regional health authority includes an element for public funding of the Cornwall air ambulance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No. The Cornwall air ambulance is a local service and funding is a matter for the Cornwall and Isles of Scilly health authority.

Nurses

139. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the nurse in-patient ratio in 1979 and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Manpower statistics cover staff working in hospitals and are collected at a particular point in time; they do not show what activities within the hospital the staff are engaged upon—for example, whether they are providing treatment to in-patients, out-patients or accident and emergency patients. By contrast, activity statistics show the number of cases treated during the year in National Health Service hospitals. It is possible, however, to give a ratio in terms of the population being served. At 30 September 1979 the number of qualified nursing and midwifery staff, measured in whole-time equivalents, was 438·6 per 100,000 population for England. At 30 September 1988 the number of qualified nursing and midwifery staff, measured in whole-time equivalents, was 508·9 per 100,000 population. These ratios have been adjusted to take account of the change in nurses' working hours (from 40 to 37·5 hours per week) during 1980-81. The average number of in-patients treated in a week was 103,848 in 1979 and 126,654 in 1988.

Press and Publicity

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each health authority the amount of money spent on press and publicity in each of the past three years.

Mr. Freeman: The information specifically requested is not collected centrally. However, the summarised accounts of health authorities in England record in total the following categories of revenue expenditure:

	Advertising £000 (cash)	Public relations £000 (cash)
1986-87	14,089	1,297
1987-88	19,021	2,174
1988-89	22,363	2,690

Notes:

1. Expenditure on advertising relates primarily to staff recruitment while that on public relations includes all pay and other costs incurred on public relations departments.

2. The annual figures for each category are not necessarily mutually exclusive being derived from separate analyses of total revenue expenditure within the accounts.

Preventive Health Care

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of general practitioners are currently meeting the targets for preventive health care to be brought into effect by the new contract.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In 1987-88, over half of all district health authorities (DHAs) had exceeded 90 per cent. coverage levels for diphtheria, tetanus and poliomyelitis. The national average was 87 per cent. in the same year the average for measles was 76 per cent. and for whooping cough 73 per cent. This is above the lower target of 70 per cent. for childhood immunisation.

Data for individual general practitioners are not collected centrally.

St. Catherine's House

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to enable applicants in person for copies of birth certificates and so on at St. Catherine's house to make only one visit both to record the intention and to collect the certificate.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter) on 1 February at columns 354-55 about the publications of a White Paper "Registration proposals for change" (Cm. 939). This includes proposals for changes to the present arrangements for issuing birth, death and marriage certificates at St. Catherine's house, including the introduction of a one-day search and collections service.

Abortion

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the figures by year and in total for the number of hospital posts notified to his Department in which the job description included a duty to advise, undertake or participate in abortions from 31 December 1983 to the latest date for which figures are available; and what was the total number of such posts vacant in each year and in total for (a) psychiatry, (b) anaesthetics and (c) obstetrics and gynaecology.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally.

Shropshire Health Authority

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is (a) the national average and (b) the sum for Shropshire of expenditure per patient for family practitioner committees.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook) on 12 February, at columns 28-30.

Doctors (Training)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current cost of training a doctor; how many doctors have left the National Health Service to join private health organisations; and how many doctors have been trained by private health organisations at their own expenses.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Undergraduate education is provided at universities with medical schools and, for the clinical part of the course, in association with the NHS. The public expenditure cost associated with that process is of the order of £130,000. The cost of subsequent postgraduate training varies according to the speciality and may take an additional four to nine years.

Although some data are held centrally on the number of National Health Service leavers, these are not complete, and it is not possible to identify those who have left to join private health organisations.

Postgraduate training of qualified doctors is carried out almost entirely in the NHS and universities.

Electoral Rolls

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of voters for each shire county and former metropolitan county on the electoral rolls effective from 16 February.

Mr. Freeman: The 1990 electorate statistics are still being collected from local authorities. Following the usual timetable, figures will be published in "OPCS Monitor" El 90/1 at the end of April. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Mink

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the health implications of the recent invasion of the Hertfordshire and Essex hospital in Bishop's Stortford by mink.

Mr. Freeman: This is for the local health authority, which I understand has dealt with the matter.

Homeless People (Storm Shelter)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he is making any arrangements to safeguard the health of people sleeping rough in central London in the event of severe weather by providing some form of temporary shelter.

Mr. Freeman: In the event of exceptionally cold weather I have prepared contingency plans for temporary shelters to be provided by certain health authorities, local authorities and voluntary organisations. The estimated total cost of this service for this winter, if the scheme is activated, is £450,000. Parliamentary approval to expenditure by local authorities on this new service will be sought in a supply estimate for the Department of Health administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England vote (class XIV vote 3). Pending that approval urgent expenditure estimated at £40,000 will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

Kidney Transplants

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the currently available figure for the shortage of kidney organs for transplant.

Mr. Freeman: The shortage of cadaveric kidneys available for transplant is conveniently measured by the waiting list held by the United Kingdom transplant service. The United Kingdom waiting list on 8 February 1990 comprised 3,485 patients.

Calderdale Hospital

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the proposed new Calderdale district hospital is subject to the Government's review of new capital projects.

Mr. Freeman: There is no Government review of capital projects in the National Health Service.

Visual Handicap

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions his Department has had with local authority associations on the training of specialist workers with visually handicapped people;

(2) what progress has been made to remedy the deficiency in training of workers with blind and visually handicapped people, identified in paragraph 181 of the social services inspectorate report, "A Wider Vision".

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department has not discussed this subject specifically with the local authority associations. Following the publication of "A Wider Vision", the social services inspectorate organised a number of seminars aimed at senior managers in social services departments and involving national voluntary organisations, covering a wide range of issues arising from the report. Discussions are in progress with the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work and others to consider how developments in social work education can incorporate the training needs of staff working with people in visual handicap.

Airports

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines he is giving to local health authorities with hospitals in the vicinity of, and servicing, airports.

Mr. Freeman: None. When drawing up plans for dealing with major accidents and other contingencies, district health authorities take account of such factors as airports in their locality.

Chipboard Factories

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of any potential health hazards resulting from emissions to the air from chipboard factories; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: None. Environmental pollution is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, and I understand that emissions to the air from chipboard factories are controlled by the local authority, under public health legislation. The Department of Health would, on request, provide medical and toxicological advice on specified substances emitted.

General Acute Hospitals

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the principle of a minimum size for future general acute hospitals, adopted by East Anglian regional health authority, has been accepted by his Department; and if he will be making any observations to the regional health authority on this policy.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The appropriate basis on which to plan future general acute hospital provision is a matter for local decision, in the light of judgments about priorities and resources.

Children Act 1989

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding the implementation of the Children Act 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received representations from a number of organisations about implementation of the Children Act 1989 for which the target date is October 1991. We will be consulting representatives of practitioners, local authorities, voluntary organisations and court and legal interests on the content of regulations and guidance.

Severn Trent Water Authority

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. and learned Member for Burton on 15 February, if he will publish the full indemnity for the Severn Trent water authority in the Official Report; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Freeman: I am placing in the Library copies of the statutory indemnity provided on 21 November 1989 to Severn Trent Water by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health under the provisions of section 172 of the Water Act 1989, together with copies of the non-statutory indemnity issued on 22 December 1989 in accordance with the minute which was laid before Parliament by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health on 23 November 1989.

SCOTLAND

Rural General Practitioners

142. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review the criteria for eligibility for financial support to general practitioners who practice in less densely populated country areas.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Financial support for general practitioners who practice in less densely populated country areas is provided through the long-standing and well-targeted Scottish rural practices fund. In addition, on 11 December 1989, my right hon. and learned Friend said that he intended to fulfil the undertaking given in chapter 10 of "Working for Patients" by funding, on a long-term basis, a further scheme to safeguard the position of such doctors. Details of this scheme, which is to be administered by the Scottish rural practices fund committee, will be set out shortly in an amendment to the statement of fees and allowances.

Roof Tax

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will undertake an assessment of the effects on the elderly of a roof tax; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Following the introduction of the community charge, it was estimated that 85 per cent. of single pensioners in Scotland would be better off than under domestic rates. The replacement of the community charge with a roof tax would mean a return to the anomalies of domestic rates including those of a single pensioner having to pay as much tax as a pensioner couple or even a family of working adults living in identical housing—anomalies removed by the community charge.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will undertake an assessment of the implications of the introduction of a roof tax on the Eastwood constituency; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The proposed roof tax would reintroduce anomalies and unfairness associated with domestic rates and would seriously reduce the democratic accountability of local government both in Eastwood and in the whole of Scotland.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the economic consequences of the introduction of a roof tax in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The introduction of such a tax would increase the cost of occupying houses and therefore reduce the effective demand for housing and the value of domestic property. Apart from the effects this would have on individuals it would tend to reduce demand on the construction and related industries.

Mr. Allen Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the effects on the construction industry of the introduction of a roof tax; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The proposed roof tax would increase the costs of occupying property and reduce the effective demand for housing with consequential reduction in demand for investment in housing. This would in turn lead to lower output by the construction industry on housing.

Mr. Allen Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the effects on the do-it-yourself industry of the introduction of a roof tax; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As a roof tax would relate people's tax bills to the value of their property, it would act as a disincentive to people to make improvements to their homes which increased their value and could therefore reduce the demand for do-it-yourself goods and services.

Mr. Allen Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the implications of a roof tax for council tenants who have exercised their right to buy.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Council tenants who have exercised their right to buy and been eligible for a discount on their house must be expected to have their liability to pay the roof tax assessed on the full value of the property.

Mr. Allen Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of adults who would be required to pay a roof tax in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The introduction of a roof tax would be a return to a system similar to domestic rates. About 1·8 million people paid domestic rates, compared with 3·9 million who are liable for the community charge. Actual numbers paying would depend on the extent of exemptions or reliefs given but must be expected to be well below half the number of those liable to pay the community charge.

National House Condition Survey

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the nature and content of the sample he proposes to take for the national house condition survey; what methods he will employ to ensure its accuracy; whether it will be compulsory; and what kind of refusal rate he is building into the survey.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish national house condition survey, which will be conducted by Scottish Homes, is being designed to provide an achieved sample of 15,000 dwellings. Scottish Homes is currently investigating the most effective way to obtain a sample which is representative of all the major Scottish housing tenures and which is statistically significant down to a Scottish Homes's regional level. The survey will not be compulsory, and Scottish Homes will be taking account of likely refusal rates in their sample design.

Community Charge

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland have not paid the poll tax; and how many people are in arrears.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Figures for the number of people who have paid the community charge are not held centrally but we understand that in most regions 85 per cent., and 95 per cent., of chargepayers have made some community charge payment, with a figure of 98 per cent., in one area. While no overall figure is yet available, it would appear that the proportion of people in arrears with their community charge payments is broadly the same as under the rating system last year.

Rating Reform

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a complete list of subsections of sections and paragraphs of schedules to the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc (Scotland) Act 1987 which have been amended, substituted or inserted by later legislation, including those themselves the subject of further alteration and those which it is proposed to amend; and if he will provide the derivation and the date of the coming into force of each alteration listed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The amendments and repeals which have been made to the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc (Scotland) Act 1987 are as follows:

(1) Schedule 12 Part II, paragraphs 15-38 and schedule 13 to the Local Government Finance Act 1988. The dates from which these provisions took effect or will take effect are laid down in the Local Government Finance Act 1988 Commencement (Scotland) Order 1988 (SI 1988/1456);

(2) section 140, subsections 1 and 2; section 141, subsections 1-4; sections 142-145 and schedule 6, paragraphs 10-15 and 20-28 to the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. The dates from which most of these provisions took effect or will take effect are laid down in the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 (Commencement No. 1) Order 1989 (SI 1989/2180). Section 141 of the 1989 Act will be the subject of a separate commencement order in due course;

(3) paragraph 4 of schedule 1A to the 1987 Act (which was inserted by the 1988 Act) was amended by regulations 3 and 4 of the Personal Community Charge (Exemption for the Severely Mentally Impaired) (Scotland) Regulations 1989 (SI 1989/2234) which came into force on 24 December 1989.

There are no immediate plans to make further amendments.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what contribution his Department will make to the NATO exercise due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. Rifkind: None.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of decrees of sequestration registered annually by the Accountant of Bankruptcy in the year to 1 April and the total gross payment made under the provisions of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 to trustees in sequestration from public funds in the financial year 1989-90.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is estimated that during the year ending 31 March 1990 there will be approximately 2,500 awards of sequestration and that the gross payments from public funds will be about £6 million.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what average hourly rate is applied by the Accountant in Bankruptcy for the remuneration of trustees in sequestration in (a) small asset cases and (b) other cases.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no fixed rates for the remuneration of trustees. The Accountant in Bankruptcy, in discharging his statutory duties to determine the appropriate level of payment, has regard in both types of cases to the rates published by the Law Society of Scotland in respect of charges by the legal profession for similar work.

Free School Milk

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children are receiving free milk in schools within Scotland.

Mr. Lang: From a census undertaken in January each year 67,813 children were receiving free milk in 1989. the figure for 1990 is not yet available.

Fishing Vessels (Licensing)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many responses he has received on the DAFS consultative paper studying the United Kingdom licensing system for fishing vessels.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Thirteen replies have been received by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland from organisations based in Scotland in response to the consultation paper issued in November 1989 on changes to the United Kingdom's licensing system for fishing vessels. Representations have also been received by other Fisheries Departments from organisations based in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many full-time jobs have been created in Scotland for (a) males and (b) females aged 16 years to 25 years in each year from 1980;

(2) how many part-time jobs have been created in Scotland for (a) males and (b) females aged 16 years to 25 years in each year from 1980.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 12 February 1990]: There is no information available in the form requested on the number of jobs which have been created in Scotland. The table shows the estimated total number of employees in employment in Scotland in each year since 1980, separately for all men and for women working full-time and part-time.

Note: Information on the number of men working part-time is available only from the censuses of employment in 1981, 1984 and 1987. The numbers were 59,600 men working part-time in 1981, 60,800 in 1984 and 70,200 in 1987.

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many part-time jobs have been created in Glasgow for males and females aged 16 years to 25 years in each year from 1980.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Information on the number of jobs created is not available in the form requested. The table gives the number of employees in employment of all ages in Glasgow district in 1981, 1984 and 1987 as estimated by the census of employment in each of these years. Separate estimates are provided for men and women and for those working full-time and part-time. The census of employment does not gather information on the ages of employees.

Clothing Factory, Denny

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will intervene to stop the threatened closure of James Seddon's clothing factory in Denny; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 12 February 1990]: James Seddon (UK) Ltd. went into receivership on 12 February. The future of the Denny factory is a matter for the receiver who is, I understand, exploring the prospects for disposing of the company as a going concern.

House Prices

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will commission research into house price movements in each local authority ward in the Eastwood constituency over the past five years; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will commission research into movements in house prices in each local authority area over the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: I have no plans to commission such research.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on movements in house prices in Scotland over the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Average Scottish house prices rose by 53 per cent. between 1984 and the third quarter of 1989.

TVEI

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the current plans for the administration of the technical and vocational education initiatives after the implementation of the Scottish Enterprise proposals.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 February 1990]: As my right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State, announced on 26 July 1989 the technical and vocational education initiative (TVEI) in Scotland will become the responsibility of the Industry Department for Scotland.

Water Supplies

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by what date he expects drinking water in Scotland to meet the standards laid down in the water regulations.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Programmes for meeting the standards set in the regulations are currently being prepared by the water authorities and will be submitted for approval by the Secretary of State shortly. Target dates by which individual supply zones will be expected to comply with the various standards have yet to be agreed.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will be applying to the European Economic Community for additional article 9 derogations for Scottish water supplies which currently fail to meet the aluminium standard of 200 ug/l but are not the subject of a permitted delay.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Derogations under article 9 are granted by member states and require to be notified to the European Commission only if they relate to water supplies of more than 1,000 cu m per day or serving over 5,000 people. A small number of additional derogations for naturally occurring aluminium may have to be notified.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the Scottish water supplies which currently fail to meet the aluminium standard of 200 ug/1.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer that I gave to him on 15 November 1989 at columns 363-65 to a similar question.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the supplies by name which have been notified to him by the regional water departments for authorised relaxation of the water regulation standard on aluminium; and whether in each case he proposes to give consent.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Water authorities are preparing details of supply zones for which application will be made for authorisation to relax standards set in the regulations. No formal applications have yet been received by the Secretary of State. Authorisations to relax the aluminium standard will be considered only if the aluminium occurs naturally in the source water.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to offer the Scottish water authorities a green dowry similar to that offered to the English and Welsh authorities.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The green dowry for English and Welsh water authorities was part of a financial restructuring necessary prior to privatisation; there are no plans for the privatisation of water services in Scotland.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what grounds article 9 derogations for water standards are given; and how these criteria were applied in the case of each derogation for aluminium standards in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Derogations in respect of aluminium were given, on application by water authorities, as permitted by article 9.1(a) of the drinking water directive (80/778/EEC) for situations arising from the nature and structure of the ground, but not constituting a public health hazard. Applications were required to state average and maximum concentrations expected and derogation was conditional on averages not exceeding the value stated.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what budget he has allocated for a phased programme of investment in Scottish water to minimise delays due to the shortage of suitably qualified contractors;

(2) what funds he proposes to make available to assist in bringing Scotland's drinking water into line with the current European and United Kingdom standards.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The programming of investment is a matter for the water authorities who have adequate flexibility to phase their capital expenditure to suit varying circumstances. The Government have made increased capital expenditure allocations to authorities for their water and sewerage programmes. These were announced on 15 February 1990. For 1990-91, the allocations have been set at £137·5 million rising provisionally to £159·6 million and £182·0 million in 1991-92 and 1992-93 respectively. The need to comply with EC and United Kingdom standards for drinking water quality, and the ability to undertake works, were factors taken into account in setting the increased capital allocations.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he anticipates that the supplies in Scotland which have delays for aluminium due to expire in 1990 will meet the 200 ug/1 quality standard in the current year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Meeting the standard for aluminium is largely dependent on the water authorities concerned completing the required improvement works by the due date. I have no reason to believe that this will not be achieved.

Schools (Assisted Places)

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will list the schools in Scotland which participate in the assisted places scheme; what is the number of places and the money paid for each school for each financial year since the scheme began; and what are the dates of Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools inspections at each school since the scheme began.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is collected on a school year basis and is set out in the tables. All independent schools are inspected before final registration and are subject to further visits by Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools on a continuing basis thereafter. The dates given are for full formal inspections; those carried out after 1983 resulted in a published report.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's policy on admission to the assisted places scheme of schools which use corporal punishment.

Mr. Lang: Section 48A of the Education (Scotland) Act 1980 rules out the use of corporal punishment for assisted places pupils. The use of corporal punishment for other pupils in an independent school is not a criterion for determining participation in the assisted places scheme.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether Her Majesty's inspectors of schools have reported any incidence of the use of corporal punishment in any schools which participate in the assisted places scheme.

Mr. Lang: No.

ENVIRONMENT

Derelict Land

4. Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many acres of derelict land in public ownership are currently on the register; and how many have been removed as a result of privatisation of statutory undertakings and nationalised industries.

Mr. Moynihan: A total of 82,400 acres of unused and underused land were on the register at 30 September 1989, including 1,900 acres owned by the water authorities; 5,000 acres had been removed from the register earlier as a result of privatisation of other bodies.

72. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to conclude his review of derelict land policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The Department is currently considering responses to the derelict land policy review which was published for consultation in September 1989 and any policy changes will be announced later in the year. It is also planned to issue further consultation papers on proposed measures to prevent land from becoming derelict and on alternative financing arrangements for the payment of derelict land grant.

Private Rented Accommodation

16. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to abolish controls on the letting of private property in the residential sector.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We made important changes to the controls on rent and security of tenure in the private sector in the Housing Act 1988, and we have no plans for further legislation in this area.

Local Government Finance

15. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received concerning the introduction of the poll tax in England and Wales in the current year.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Nellist) earlier today.

19. Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the number of representations that he has received from Devon and Cornwall concerning the application of the community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: On 6 November my right hon. Friend announced to Parliament his proposals for the amount of revenue support grant to be paid to receiving authorities and specified bodies. As well as a letter from my hon. Friend the Member for Cornwall, South-East (Mr. Hicks) I received representations from Cornwall and Devon county councils and from four district councils in those counties. In addition I met a deputation from Torbay on 5 December.

22. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the level of the community charge to be set in Basildon.

Mr. Chope: None.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update to 1990-91 the answer given to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett), Official Report, 2 February 1989, columns 359-60, showing the distributional effect of the community charge in comparison with domestic rates.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is not at present available.

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update to 1990-91 the answer given to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle), Official Report, 2 February 1989, columns 359-60, showing the numbers of gainers and losers by family type and income band from the introduction of the community charge.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is not at present available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how, with reference to paragraph 3.36 of his revenue support grant distribution report (England), the figure of (a) £18·55, (b) £4·77 and (c) £5·21 are arrived at; how poll tax payers and council officials can check its validity; and what effect the choice of this figure has on the standard spending assessment arrived at for Grimsby.

Mr. Chope: The figures referred to in the revenue support grant distribution report (England) were determined by my right hon. Friend after full consultation with local authority representatives. Together they account for £27 per adult of Great Grimsby's SSA.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes were made to the indicator data for calculating revenue support grant for local authorities between 16 November 1989 and 12 January 1990; why they were made; and what was the effect of the changes on the standard spending assessment for local authorities.

Mr. Chope: The two main changes to the indicator data were that credit approvals reflected more up-to-date information on each authority's actual credit approvals for 1990-91; and that the adult population for the area was based on information from authorities' community charge registers. In addition, a number of minor changes were made as a result of further checking and correspondence with local authorities, particularly with respect to the information on traffic flows. SSAs were calculated according to the formulae set out in the revenue support grant distribution report (England) approved by the House on 18 January using the indicator data as specified in annex A to that report.

Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to cap Wolverhampton council's community charge in response to that council's proposal to set a community charge in excess of the Government's guideline.

Mr. Chope: We have made it clear that if authorities budget excessively for 1990-91 we shall not hesitate to cap them, but it would not be right for me to speculate on the detailed operation of any capping scheme we might need to introduce or on which authorities would be capped were we to introduce such a scheme.

108. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much he estimates the level of poll tax in Lambeth to be on the assumption that the current levels of expenditure including expenditure on education remain unchanged in 1990-91.

Mr. Chope: The exemplifications that the Department issued on 11 January show that if Lambeth borough council and the London fire and civil defence authority budget in line with our assumptions consistent with authorities broadly maintaining current policies, the community charge in Lambeth next year will be £308. The level of the actual charge set in Lambeth in 1990-91 is a matter for the council.

102. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the Association of District Councils on the introduction of the poll tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Over the last four years the Association of District Councils has been invited to comment on all aspects of the implementation of the community charge and has made many representations and suggestions.

95. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the criteria for assessing rate support grant.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has said that he is prepared to consider new evidence relating to the standard spending assessments on which the distribution of revenue support grant is based. Any new evidence that comes to light will be taken into account before he issues his proposals for the 1991-92 RSG settlement.

93. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to reduce the rate capping ceiling for local authorities spending less than £15 million.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has no power to reduce the £15 million budget threshold in section 101 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988, below which local authorities are exempt from charge capping.

91. Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to monitor the implementation of the community charge by local authorities.

Mr. Chope: The Department issued a questionnaire to all charging authorities in May 1989 which gave us a clear picture of how authorities were progressing with implementing the charge. A copy of the results of the survey were placed in the Library of the House on 6 December. The Department keeps in constant touch with local authorities and their software suppliers and has just completed a further series of visits to a number of authorities to monitor preparations for billing and collection of the charge later this year.

89. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received in favour of replacing the community charge with a tax on home improvement.

Mr. Chope: I am not aware of any such representations. Financing local expenditure through a charge linked to the capital value of people's homes would, however, amount to a tax on home improvement. The Government have no intention of introducing such a system.

67. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the effect of the proposed community charge on the outer London boroughs.

Mr. Chope: If local authorities in outer London spend in line with our spending assumption, the average charge will be £320.

64. Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received on the community charge.

105. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received about the standard community charge.

Mr. Chope: We continue to receive a good many representations on all aspects of the community charge, including detailed aspects of how the standard charge may affect the owners of domestic property which is not used as a sole or main residence.

47. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what meetings he has had with private landlords on the implementation of the community charge in England and Wales.

Mr. Chope: So far as England is concerned, no such meetings have been sought by landlords or their representatives. The implementation of the community charge in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

43. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received urging him to replace the community charge with a system of local income tax.

46. Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received seeking the introduction of a tax on home ownership in place of the community charge.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received seeking replacement of the community charge with a system of local government finance based on property values.

Mr. Chope: While we continue to receive a good many representations on all aspects of the community charge, very few correspondents suggest that this should be replaced by a system of local income tax and none that I am aware of are in favour of any form of roof tax. My hon.

Friends' questions might be more appropriately directed to the hon. Member for Dagenham (Mr. Gould) who is reported to be wrestling with a policy that combines both types of tax in ways that have yet to be explained.

31. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the number of local authorities setting a poll tax figure of £278 in 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

36. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is yet in a position to assess the amount of increased spending by county councils in the forthcoming year.

97. Mr. Terry Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his best estimates of the average level of poll tax in England in 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

104. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities have indicated an intention to levy a community charge at or below the Government's projected poll tax figure for their area.

Mr. Chope: Charging authorities are not required to set their amounts for the personal community charge until 1 April, and little firm information about charges set is yet available to the Department. Local authorities have recently been asked to report to the Department basic information about their spending plans and where appropriate the average charge set.

32. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he intends to use in deciding which local authorities will be poll tax capped in 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 16 February to my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor).

Home Ownership

24. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any fresh proposals to assist first-time house buyers.

40. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to extend the opportunities for home ownership.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We will continue the policies which have enabled around 6 million people to buy a home for the first time since April 1979.

North Sea (Pollution)

25. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of pollution entering the North sea comes from rivers; and what proportion comes from British rivers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Rivers are the most important source of North sea pollution, but not all other inputs can be reliably quantified. The combined effect of all United Kingdom rivers flowing into the North sea is to contribute about 20 per cent. of riverborne pollutants.

Methane Gas

26. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the number of sites in England and Wales that may be emitting methane gas in quantities likely to present hazards to personal health and the local environment.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Reliable and complete information on these sites is not held centrally. This is the responsibility of waste disposal authorities which have co-operated in studies made by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution. I expect to receive a report on this shortly.

Bellwin Formula

27. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to revise the operation of the Bellwin formula; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Government will be making revisions to the Bellwin scheme from 1 April 1990 following consultation with the local authority associations. These will reflect the changes to the local government finance system generally.

Capital Controls

28. Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will finalise the new system of capital controls to be brought in under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. Chope: Part IV of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, which provides for the new local authority capital finance system, came into force on 16 January 1990. Consultation on a draft of the main capital finance regulations ends on 23 February. We expect to lay the regulations before Parliament shortly thereafter.

Housing Improvement Grants

29. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to help elderly people obtain housing improvement grants.

Mr. Chope: Under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 we are introducing a new system of house renovation grants which will allow local authorities to help the poorest households, including the elderly, with grants of up to 100 per cent. to repair and improve their homes. Minor works assistance of up to £1,000 will be available to help elderly people stay in their own homes or move in with relatives.

United Nations Environment Programme

30. Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of funds the Government provide for the United Nations environment programme; and what are the comparable levels from other countries.

Mr. Trippier: In 1989 the Government contributed £3 million ($4,705,500) to the United Nations environment programme. This was the third largest contribution, with only the United States and Japan donating more. Contributions from other countries in 1989 were as follows (where over $100,000):—

	($000)
Australia	273
Canada	940
China	129
Denmark	487
Finland	1,292
France	1,077
FRG	2,565
GDR	211
Italy	664
Japan	5,000
Kuwait	200
Netherlands	791
Norway	1,338
South Arabia	250
Spain	505
Sweden	2,591
Switzerland	900
USSR	4,224
United States of America	9,500

Toxic Waste

33. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in recent months concerning the import and incineration of toxic wastes.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Department has received a variety of representations revealing public concern about the import of toxic waste for incineration and other methods of disposal under the operations of the Transfrontier Shipment of Hazardous Waste Regulations. The Department intends to review the operation of these regulations with disposal authorities and industry.

We are already seeking to persuade developed countries that they should be self-sufficient in dealing with wastes. Meanwhile, those transfrontier movements that continue are well controlled under international transport regulations and disposal in the United Kingdom takes place at properly regulated facilities. We also have proposals in the Environmental Protection Bill for powers for the Secretary of State to control imports where this is necessary to prevent risk of pollution or harm to human health.

99. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to discuss the management of toxic waste tips with the leadership of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has arranged to meet the AMA, ACC and ADC on 26 February to discuss all aspects of environmental protection policy.

71. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what methods he regards as acceptable for disposal of toxic wastes.

Mr. Trippier: Landfill, chemical treatment and incineration are all suitable methods in appropriate circumstances.

37. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will launch a comprehensive assessment on the state of toxic tips in the United Kingdom and their effect on ground water supplies.

Mr. Trippier: A specific review of waste disposal sites is not required. A 1988 assessment by independent consultants concluded that the quality of groundwater used for public supply in England and Wales was generally good, although a number of detailed recommendations concerning monitoring and research are being followed up by the Department. Waste disposal authorities are required to consult the National Rivers Authority over all applications for waste disposal licences. The National Rivers Authority already has extensive programmes for monitoring ground and surface waters which it is reviewing; these will cover, inter alia, the possible effects of disposal sites that predate licensing controls.

Chlorofluorocarbons

34. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress Britain has made towards meeting the terms of the Montreal protocol on chlorofluorocarbons use.

79. Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in Britain towards meeting the international commitment under the Montreal protocol to reduce chlorofluorocarbon emissions.

Mr. Trippier: Action taken already, especially by the aerosol industry to remove CFCs from 90 per cent. of its products, means the United Kingdom met the 1999 requirement of the protocol by the end of 1989. The Government believe that the protocol should be strengthened to require a full phase-out of CFCs within 10 years.

Homelessness

35. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated cost to London local authorities of placing homeless families with private landlords.

Mr. Chope: The Department collects information on the cost to local authorities of using bed and breakfast hotels as temporary housing for homeless families. In 1987-88, the last year for which estimates are available, the gross cost to London boroughs of using this type of temporary accommodation was £127 million. Housing subsidy claim forms provide some further information on the cost to local authorities in London of leasing (which includes accommodating homeless families). The provisional figure for 1988-89 was £20·25 million. The Department also takes full note of data available from time to time through other sources.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will carry out a survey of the level of homelessness caused by the number of mortgage repossessions by companies other than building societies.

Mr. Chope: Local authorities already make quarterly returns of the numbers of households for which they had accepted responsibility for securing accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act. These provide a breakdown of the total number of households accepted by main immediate reason for homelessness including mortgage arrears; although it does not distinguish households which were actually subject to repossession or between those which were building society or other types of borrower.

Latest estimates appear in table 2 of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the third quarter 1989. Supplementary Tables", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to cut homelessness in Leicester; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The review of the homelessness legislation, published in November 1989 sets out the Government's proposals for tackling homelessness. Copies are in the Library.

103. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has of the number of homeless people in England.

94. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has of the number of homeless people in London.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Latest estimates of households accepted as homeless in England appear in table 1(a) of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the third quarter 1989. Supplementary Tables", which is in the Library.

100. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the most rapidly growing cause of homelessness for families seeking emergency accommodation under the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act.

Mr. Michael Spicer: In percentage terms there has been no significant change over recent years in the reasons why those for whom local authorities accept responsibility to secure accommodation are homeless.

101. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with companies and societies providing mortgages about the effects of their policies on repossession on the problem of homelessness.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Ministers and officials at the Department of the Environment frequently meet representatives from institutions which provide mortgages and discuss a range of issues, including possessions.

90. Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures for homeless households in bed and breakfast accommodation in England and Wales.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Latest estimates of households temporarily resident in bed and breakfast accommodation in England appear in table 4(a) of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the third quarter 1989. Supplementary Tables", which is in the Library.

For information about Wales I refer the right hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

57. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new proposals he has to combat homelessness.

87. Mr. James Lamond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any new proposals for combating homelessness.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given to the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale) on 17 January at column 249.

54. Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will carry out a survey of homelessness in rural areas in England.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department publishes quarterly statistics, based on returns from local authorities, which show the numbers of households accepted as homeless in each district and the numbers in bed and breakfast and other temporary accommodation. Copies are in the Library.

49. Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest estimate of the cost to local authorities of placing homeless families in bed and breakfast accommodation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The latest estimate of the cost to local authorities of keeping homeless families temporarily in bed and breakfast accommodation is £143 million (£104 million net of offsetting income such as DSS allowances) for 1987-88.

51. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures for homeless households in temporary accommodation in England and Wales.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Latest estimates of households resident in temporary accommodation in England appear in tables 4(a), 4(b) and 4(c) of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the third quarter 1989. Supplementary tables", which is in the Library.

For information about Wales, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

45. Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's most recent estimate of the number of households accepted as homeless for Greater London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Latest estimates of households accepted as homeless in Greater London appear in table 1(a) of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the third quarter 1989. Supplementary tables", which is in the Library.

Farm Buildings

38. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue further guidelines to planning authorities regarding the change of use of redundant agricultural buildings.

Mr. Moynihan: The re-use of rural buildings is one of the subjects covered in the draft planning policy guidance note "The Countryside and the Rural Economy" issued by the Department on 13 December. The closing date for comments on this document was 19 February, and all comments received are now being considered.

Association of County Councils

39. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the Association of County Councils; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment met representatives of the Association of County Councils informally at a dinner on 10 January. Matters of mutual interest were discussed.

Rural Deprivation

41. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has taken in response to the McLaughlin report on rural deprivation; and if he will make a statement.

50. Mr. Michael Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies have been undertaken by his Department of rural deprivation since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

55. Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further action he proposes to take on the McLaughlin report on rural deprivation; and if he will make a statement.

70. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies have been made by his Department of rural deprivation and of the variation in housing standards in the rural communities; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has taken on the problems identified in the McLaughlin study commissioned by his Department on rural deprivation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A research report "Deprivation in rural areas" was completed in 1985. An analysis of the need for and supply of affordable rural housing has recently been completed by Action with Communities in Rural England for the Rural Development Commission. The commission, which is the Government's principal agency for carrying forward the Government's policy on the rural economy, is developing and implementing a wide range of initiatives which deal with economic and social problems in the countryside, including those identified in the report.

Anti-competitive Practices

42. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received about anti-competitive practices by councils; and what action he is taking to eliminate the problem.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Department has to date received just over 200 representations alleging anti-competitive practices by local authorities in respect of services put out to tender under the terms of the Local Government Act 1988 and about 35 relating to services put out to tender under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980. Each case is investigated and appraised on its merits. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has powers of sanction under the legislation and is prepared to use them where necessary.

Council House Sales

44. Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the practice of council house tenants being offered discounts on the price of their home if they wish to purchase it.

Mr. Chope: Council tenants exercising the right to buy are normally entitled to a discount. Local authorities may also sell housing by agreement at a discount to sitting tenants and to purchasers in priority categories such as homeless people and first-time buyers, but are under no duty to do so.

Housing Associations

48. Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many extra homes he plans for housing associations to build over the next three years.

76. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the increase in the provision of the Housing Corporation to provide new homes through housing associations over the next three years.

Mr. Chope: In his Autumn Statement my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that provision for the Housing Corporation's gross capital expenditure programme would increase from £815 million in the current year to £1,185 million in 1990-91 and to £1,736 million in 1992-93, doubling over a period of three years. On 30 January my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced at column 175 that £120 million would be brought forward from next year's provision to this year's. On the basis of these plans, we expect housing associations, with funds from the Housing Corporation, to be able to provide about 93,000 homes by new build, rehabilitation and acquisition over the next three years.

Environment White Paper

52. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what groups he consults before publishing an environment White Paper.

Mr. Trippier: We welcome the constructive input to our White Paper preparation from many interested groups and individuals, in response to our general invitations to contribute.

Litter

53. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in response to the Government's proposals for tackling litter contained in the Environmental Protection Bill.

Mr. Trippier: We received over 800 representations from local authorities and other interested parties in response to the consultation on the Government's proposals for litter legislation. These were considered in drawing up the provisions contained in the Environmental Protection Bill. In general, we receive a great deal of correspondence about litter demonstrating the high level of national concern about the problem.

62. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what current steps he is taking to ensure that local authorities keep the streets free from litter.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside gave on 4 December to my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter), Official Report, column 44. As my hon. Friend will be aware, those proposals are now contained in the Environmental Protection Bill currently under consideration by Standing Committee H. Additionally, a draft code of practice will be published shortly for consultation with local authorities and other interested parties.

Housing

56. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further plans he has to increase the supply of affordable accommodation for rent and sale.

74. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to increase the supply of low-cost housing (a) for sale and (b) for rent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Government have taken a variety of measures to encourage the supply of low-cost housing, including the deregulation of the private rented sector and the encouragement of private investment in housing associations. In addition, planned public funding for the Housing Corporation is being more than doubled, from £818 million originally planned for this year to £1,736 million by 1992-93, for the development of new housing for rent by housing associations and the promotion of low-cost home ownership, including shared ownership.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates his Department has made of total local authority capital expenditure on housing in the years 1989-90 and 1990-91 by (a) all local authorities in England and Wales and (b) London boroughs.

Mr. Chope: The latest estimated outturn for gross capital expenditure by English local authorities in 1989-90, based on payments made in the first half of the year, is £3,990 million, some £680 million in excess of planned provision of £3,303 million. Under the new capital finance system the Government do not plan the amount of expenditure by authorities which is financed from the receipts remaining after debt redemption or from revenue. The figure of £3,131 million for 1990-91 in the latest expenditure plans (Cm. 1008) is therefore only illustrative and reflects the changing role of local housing authorities, away from being direct providers of subsidised rented housing, while the capital resources available to housing associations are substantially increased.

Equivalent estimates for London boroughs are not readily available. For information about Wales I refer the hon. Member to the Secretary of State for Wales.

84. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement concerning the allocation of funds to Leicester city council for the building of new houses.

Mr. Chope: Leicester city council was informed on 21 December 1989 that its housing investment programme allocation for 1990-91 was £18·320 million. This compares favourably with allocations to other authorities of a similar size. In addition, up to a further £2·5 million is available for new Estate Action schemes. It is for the council to decide how much of its HIP allocation should be spent on a new build programme.

60. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to increase the supply of low-cost housing for sale or rent in rural areas.

Mr. Chope: The Government have more than doubled public funding through the Housing Corporation for new investment by housing associations, so enabling the corporation to increase the target for development of new subsidised rented housing under its special rural programme to 1,500 a year by 1992-93 and to identify a rural element within its low-cost home ownership programme. We have also made changes to the planning rules, to permit development of low-cost housing for local needs on small sites not otherwise designated for housing, and introduced a repurchase scheme to ensure that shared ownership housing in rural areas remains available for local people.

South Africa (Sporting Links)

58. Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, during his meeting in Auckland with other Commonwealth Ministers of Sport, sporting links with South Africa were discussed.

Mr. Moynihan: Sporting links with South Africa were briefly raised at the informal meeting of Commonwealth Sports Ministers. Ministers confirmed their continued support for the Commonwealth statement on apartheid in sport (the Gleneagles agreement) and the Commonwealth games code of conduct (the Brisbane code).

River Pollution

59. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he has implemented to tighten controls of river pollution.

Mr. Trippier: The Water Act 1989 extended the range of controls over water pollution in several significant respects, and established the National Rivers Authority in England and Wales. The National Rivers Authority has extensive powers to control pollution, and wide discretion over the use of those powers.

Unleaded Petrol

61. Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures for sales of unleaded petrol.

Mr. Trippier: Unleaded petrol now accounts for over 29 per cent. of the United Kingdom market.

Housing Action Trusts

63. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government have any plans to introduce legislation on housing action trust areas.

Mr. Chope: The legislation that provides for the designation, establishment and operation of housing action trusts is contained in part III of the Housing Act 1988.

Local Authorities (Politically Restricted Posts)

65. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many posts are on the lists of politically restricted posts lodged by English and Welsh local authorities with the independent adjudicator appointed under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Secretary of State has no power to require the independent adjudicator to provide him with information. I have therefore drawn the hon. Member's question to the independent adjudicator's attention: he will no doubt write to the hon. Member.

85. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the regulations to be made under section 1(5) of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: As soon as possible.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

66. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what evidence his Department has submitted to the intergovernmental panel on climate change about projections of United Kingdom carbon dioxide emissions for 2000 and 2005; and if he will indicate broadly what those projections are.

Mr. Trippier: Estimates of carbon dioxide emissions in the United Kingdom under a wide range of scenarios has been submitted to the IPCC by the Department of Energy. The study was placed in the Library of the House on 30 November 1989.

Debt Charges (Liverpool)

68. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the outstanding debt charges on properties owned by Liverpool city council which have been demolished or are to be demolished.

Mr. Chope: My Department does not have this information. I suggest that the hon. Gentleman should ask Liverpool city council.

Bathing Waters

69. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the change in the number of beaches conforming with the EC bathing waters directive over the last year.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In the 1988 bathing season, 267 of the 403 of the bathing waters then identified in the United Kingdom under the EEC bathing water directive met the directive's mandatory coliform standards. In the 1989 bathing season 336 out of 440 identified waters in the United Kingdom met the mandatory coliform standards. This is an increase in compliance from 66 to 76 per cent.

Environmental Protection Commission

73. Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for an environmental protection commission.

Mr. Trippier: Institutional aspects of environmental protection policy will be reviewed in the preparation of the Government's White Paper on the environment this autumn.

Air Pollution

75. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what processes he is proposing to be subject to local authority controls over air pollution.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside tabled at the first Committee sitting on the Environmental Protection Bill on 23 January a draft list of processes proposed for local authority air pollution control. I have arranged for copies of the list to be place in the House Libraries.

Further revisions will be needed if any of the processes are instead scheduled for integrated pollution control because they generate significant quantities of special waste.

83. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total sum currently paid to local authorities in clean air grants.

Mr. Trippier: Clean air grant reimburses four sevenths of grants made by local authorities to private householders for the necessary conversion of heating and cooking appliances to smokeless fuel, and two fifths of the costs of this work in respect of public sector housing. In 1988-89 the total amount of clean air grant paid to local authorities was £1·3 million.

Commonwealth Sports Ministers

77. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what subjects were discussed at the meeting of Commonwealth Sports Ministers at the Commonwealth games in Auckland.

Mr. Moynihan: The informal meeting of Commonwealth Sports Ministers in Auckland on 4 February discussed a broad range of issues affecting Commonwealth sport and the Commonwealth games. These included the International Olympic Committee charter on anti-doping in sport and the Commonwealth working party being set up to look at ways of strengthening the Commonwealth games.

European Community Environment Ministers

78. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met Environment Ministers and their equivalents from other member states of the European Community; and what was discussed.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend last met his European Community counterparts at the Environment Council on 28 November. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Luton, South (Mr. Bright) on 30 November at column 370.

Refuse Contracts

80. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities have had section 13 notices served against them for uncompetitive tendering of refuse contracts.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Four. Notices have been served on Bristol city council, Wolverhampton metropolitan borough council, Knowsley metropolitan borough council and Charnwood borough council seeking their response to inquiries about the decisions they have taken to assign their refuse collection work to their own DSOs.

Fly-Tipping

81. Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he is proposing to tackle the problem of fly-tipping.

Mr. Trippier: The Environmental Protection Bill contains a number of measures to tackle the problem of fly-tipping. The Bill carries forward from the Control of Pollution Act 1974 the offence of depositing waste without a licence. The Bill extends the provision through the duty of care on all producers, carriers and other holders of waste who must take all reasonable steps to ensure that their waste is not illegally disposed of by any other person. To this end, they would be responsible for ensuring that waste is handed over to an authorised person and is packaged and described in a way which allows that other person to take care of it safely.

There is also provision in the Bill for a person controlling the use of a vehicle that has been used for fly-tipping to be prosecuted unless he can show that he used due diligence to prevent an offence being committed. This is aimed at organised fly-tipping where it is particularly difficult to prosecute the owner of a vehicle who may benefit from the crime but not actually drive the vehicle.

North Sea

82. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he intends to attend the next North sea conference.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be attending the third North sea conference which takes place in The Hague on 7 and 8 March and looks forward to joining with colleagues from other North sea states in achieving a successful conference.

Planning Applications (Compensation)

86. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in the past six months concerning compensation for people and communities adversely affected by major planning applications for infrastructure projects.

Mr. Moynihan: We have received 60 responses to our consultation paper on land compensation and compulsory purchase legislation which was issued on 7 March 1989. In addition, my Department regularly receives letters and inquiries about the land compensation provisions.

Integrated Pollution Control

88. Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to cover industrial sites by integrated pollution control.

Mr. Trippier: Part I of the Environmental Protection Bill sets out proposals for a system of integrated pollution control (IPC) for the major industrial sites in Great Britain. We are the first country in Europe to legislate for such a sophisticated system of pollution control. We shall be consulting interested bodies on the categories of industrial processes which will be prescribed for integrated pollution control.

Canned Spray Paint

92. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had recently with the manufacturers of canned spray paint regarding its effects on the environment and its misuse for graffitti.

Mr. Trippier: I will write to the hon. Member.

Sellafield

96. Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the level of radioactive liquid discharges entering the Irish sea from the British Nuclear Fuels plc reprocessing plant at Sellafield; and what was the level in 1979.

Mr. Trippier: Information on radioactive discharges from British Nuclear Fuels plc Sellafield works can be found in the company's annual reports "Radioactive Discharges and Monitoring of the Environment", copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Landfill Sites

98. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what funds the Government intend to make available to local authorities to help offset the costs of locating and making safe former waste landfill sites.

Mr. Trippier: Local authority costs in monitoring their areas—including landfill sites—for public health purposes, and in taking remedial action where necessary, are reflected in standard spending assessments and annual capital guidelines provided by my Department. For 1990-91 we have also earmarked a £33 million allocation for capital expenditure on landfill gas remedial work and the revenue costs of monitoring activity will be supported through the revenue support grant system.

Competitive Tendering

106. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the potential total savings across local government as a whole through competitive tendering and other cost-efficient practices.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Audit Commission's annual report for the financial year ended 31 March 1989 identified total achievable financial savings or added value (arising from service improvements) of £920 million for projects undertaken by local authorities between 1983 and 1989 but concluded that at 31 March 1989 savings of only £372 million had been fulfilled. The report notes, however, that the rate of improvement by authorities in implementing achievable savings has increased steadily.

Estate Action

107. Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total allocation of funds for the Estate Action programme being made available in 1989-90.

Mr. Chope: The Estate Action budget for 1989-90 is £190 million.

Disabled People (Public Toilets)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the names of organisations dealing with the needs of the disabled he intends to consult on the question of access to public toilets.

Mr. Chope: My Department intends shortly to commission a programme of research on access to public toilets for people with special needs, the primary purpose being to provide information on the needs of disabled people. To ensure that this research addresses all relevant practical issues, my Department will be consulting representatives of the Access Committee for England, the Centre on Environment for the Handicapped, the Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation, the Spastics Society, Arthritis Care, the Association for Spina Bifida and Hydrocephalus, the Multiple Sclerosis Society, the Muscular Dystrophy Group of Great Britain, the Spinal Injuries Association, the Royal National Institute for the Blind and the British Council of Organisations of Disabled People.

New Parliamentary Building

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the new parliamentary building will be finished and ready for occupation.

Mr. Chope: I advised the House on 25 January 1990 that, subject to there being no further slippage in the contractor's programme, the building should be fitted out and ready for occupation around Easter 1991. I regret to say that the contractor has now reported further slippage which suggests that it would be unrealistic to expect the building to be available for occupation before mid-1991.

The New Building Sub-Committee is currently investigating this project and I understand that it expects to report to the House before the Easter recess.

Helicopters

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what advice his Department makes available to local planning authorities in respect of helicopter stations on (a) the storage of fuel, (b) the prevention of nuisance from noise and (c) general safety; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what matters are included in general planning guidance to local authorities on helicopter operation areas; and if he will make a statement.

(3) what representations he has received from the Civil Aviation Authority on the planning and layout of helicopter ports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: Planning applications for development associated with helicopter operations must be determined having regard to the local development plan and to any other material considerations. My Department has issued no specific guidance to local planning authorities on such development, although DOE circular 10/73 "Planning and Noise" contains advice on the development control implications of aircraft noise.

The safety aspects of fuel storage and of helicopter operations are the responsibility of the Health and Safety Executive and the Civil Aviation Authority respectively. My right hon. Friend has received no representations from the CAA on the planning and layout of helicopter ports.

Chemicals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list those chemicals or chemical compounds that are classed as toxic in the United States of America, but which are classed as non-toxic in England and Wales;

(2) if he will list those chemicals or chemical compounds that are shipped from the United States of America to England and Wales that are classed as non-toxic waste in the United States of America, but which are classed as toxic waste in England and Wales.

Mr. Trippier: My Department does not hold sufficient information to allow a list of toxic and non-toxic chemicals or chemical compounds, as defined under United States legislation, to be prepared. It is, therefore, not possible to list those chemicals, or chemical compounds, classed as toxic in the United States of America which are classed as non-toxic in England and Wales, or vice versa.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many opencast planning inquiries his inspectors have attended in the last 10 years; and how many appeals against planning refusal have been allowed.

Mr. Moynihan: This information is available only in respect of planning appeals decided since 1 April 1987 and is as follows:

Year	Appeals Decided	Appeals allowed after Inquiry	Appeals allowed by Written procedure	Inquiries Held
1987-88	15	6	1	12
1988-89	16	8	—	14
[1]1989-90	9	4	2	7

[1] To 31 December 1989.

Coal-fired Power Stations

Sir Ian Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what information he has on the levels of alpha activity in becquerels per kilogram of fly ash from Blyth coal-fired power station; and whether this exceeds the lower limit for low-level waste from a nuclear installation;

(2) what information he has on the levels of alpha activity, in becquerels per kilogram in fly ash from all major coal-fired generating plants in the United Kingdom with a capacity exceeding 500 MW.

Mr. Trippier: The levels of alpha activity in fly ash from the major coal-fired generating plants in the United Kingdom would be typically in the range 1,000 to 2,000 bec/kg. The ash from Blyth power station is likely to contain similar concentrations of alpha activity. These levels are lower than the thresholds set out in schedule 3 to the Radioactive Substances Act 1960, below which certain naturally occurring substances are not considered to be radioactive material for the purposes of control under this Act.

High-level Radioactive Wastes

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions have been held between his Department and (i) Nirex and (ii) the radioactive waste producing agencies on future inclusion of high-level radioactive wastes into the deep repository being investigated by Nirex.

Mr. Trippier: No discussions have been held with Nirex or the nuclear industry on this subject.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals there are to allow the inclusion of high-level radioactive wastes in the deep repository, currently being investigated by Nirex.

Mr. Trippier: UK Nirex Ltd. has responsibility for providing disposal services for low and intermediate-level radioactive waste. There are no proposals for Nirex to assume responsibility for the disposal of heat-generating or high-level radioactive waste.

Norwich and Norfolk Councils

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will set out for each year since 1985-86 in a table the expenditure of Norwich city council (a) in cash terms and (b) in constant price terms;

(2) if he will set out for each year since 1985-86 in a table the expenditure of Norfolk county council (a) in cash terms and (b) in constant price terms.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Net Current Expenditure

	Cash Terms (£ million)	Real Terms—1989-90 Prices (£ million)[1]
Norfolk County Council
1985-86	234·656	293·132
1986-87	254·034	307·000
1987-88	281·686	323·263
1988-89	312·355	334·220
1989-90	335·435	335·435
Norwich City Council
1985-86	7,599	9·493
1986-87	6,343	7·666
1987-88	8·567	9·831
1988-89	9·670	10·347
1989-90	10·858	10·858

[1] Using the GDP deflator to convert from cash values to constant prices.

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total number of people employed by (a) Norfolk county council and (b) Norwich city council for each year since 1985.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Staffing Levels at June

	Norfolk County Council	Norwich City Council
1985	23,985	2,189
1986	24,378	2,250
1987	25,176	2,221
1988	25,447	2,259
1989	26,293	2,180

Water and Sewerage Charges

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the new infrastructure charges on water and sewerage being introduced by each water plc in England and Wales as from 1 April 1990.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The infrastructure charges limits which the Secretaries of State for England and Wales have determined for the 10 water service companies and 27 of the statutory water companies, together with the proposed limits for Mid Kent and Mid Sussex Water Companies, are listed in the tables:

Water Services Companies: Water and Sewerage infrastructure charges (at 1990-91 prices)

Infrastructure Charges

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to amend the Water Act 1989 to remove multi-occupancy, self-contained, charitable developments from the requirements of section 79 of that Act.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. It is for each water and sewerage undertaker to decide what infrastructure charge, if any, to make in specific cases, provided the charge does not exceed the limit specified in its instrument of appointment and is in accordance with its charges scheme.

Housing Completions

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the housing completion figure in (a) 1960 to 1970, (b) 1970 to 1980 and (c) 1979-89.

Mr. Chope: Total new housebuilding completions in England for these periods were 3·303 million, 2·779 million and 1·963 million dwellings, respectively.

Airborne Lead

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment by how much the level of airborne lead has changed since 1985.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The report by the Warren Spring laboratory on airborne lead concentrations in the United Kingdom 1984-88 shows a decrease from 408 nanogrammes of lead per cubic metre of air (ng/m) in 1985 to 190 ng/m in 1988—a decrease of 53 per cent.

Land Register

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any proposals to increase the rate at which land in public ownership currently on the land register is being disposed of.

Mr. Moynihan: The new codes of practice requiring owners to publish their own registers of unused and underused land place the responsibility clearly on them to ensure that such land is brought into use. Members of the public can use our PROD ('Public Request to Order Disposal') scheme to bring to my right hon. Friend's attention cases where the use of his powers to require disposal might be appropriate; these powers have been used in relation to 81 sites since 1984. Overall half the land entered on the register since 1981 has subsequently been removed.

Internal Delivery Service

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to move the internal delivery service from its current Ponton road site.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: New premises for the IDS are being sought, but no commitment will be made prior to sale as it is possible that the purchaser may be able to provide premises.

Urban Development Corporations

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is his most up-to-date estimate of the number of jobs (a) in construction and (b) in all other categories in the area administered by the London Docklands development corporation; and what were the equivalent numbers of jobs in the same area or the nearest area for which statistics are available in the last full year before London Docklands development corporation was set up;

(2) what is his most up-to-date estimate of the number of jobs currently in the area of the Merseyside development corporation in (a) construction and (b) all other categories; and what were the equivalent number of jobs in the same area or the nearest area for which statistics are available in the last full year for which statistics are available;

(3) what is the most up-to-date estimate available to him of the total number of jobs in (a) construction and (b) all other categories for areas administered by urban development corporations; and what were the nearest equivalent figures for the same areas in the last full year before those urban development corporations were set up.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The information available is as follows:

UDC and designation date	Estimated total number of permanent jobs in area		Estimated total[1] number of construction jobs 1988-89
	At designation	At March 1989
London Docklands—July 1981	[2]25,200	48,000	[2]5,000
Merseyside: original area—March 1981	1,500	2,900	1,110
Black Country—May 1987	70,500	75,100	n.a.
Teesside—May 1987	9,500	10,900	[3]66
Trafford Park—February 1987	24,500	26,000	[3]736
Tyne and Wear—May 1987	40,200	41,500	[3]249

[1] Pre designation figures are only available for LDDC.
[2] LDDC figures:
—the permanent job figures are not directly comparable. 1981 data was derived from the Census of Employment which included only jobs with a pay point in the UDA. The 1989 data includes all jobs in the UDA.
—the construction job figures are similarly not comparable. The 1981 Census gave a total of 1,964 construction jobs with a pay point in the UDA.
[3] Information is only available in terms of man-years, not actual numbers of jobs.

The UDCs in Bristol, central Manchester, Leeds and Sheffield, and Merseyside's extended area, were established during 1988-89. They had therefore not been in existence long enough, by March 1989, for the total number of jobs in their areas to have altered significantly.

Denham Court

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to reach a decision on the application by Buckinghamshire county council for consent under the London and Home Counties (Green Belt) Act 1938, to grant a lease of the land at Denham court, Denham.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 19 February 1990]: A decision is being announced today.

Audible Bird Scarers

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations from which he has received written representations concerning the use of audible bird scarers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 20 February 1990]: The following organisations submitted comments on the draft code of practice on audible bird scarers issued for public consultation by the Department in December 1988:

Association of District Councils
Association of Noise Consultants
Birdscarers Anti-Nuisance Group
The British Horse Society
Country Landowners Association
The Environment Council
The Law Society
National Society for Clean Air
National Farmers Union
Nature Conservancy Council
Noise Abatement Society
The Noise Council
National Physical Laboratory
The Ramblers Association
South Cambridgeshire District Council

The working party that drafted the code included the Institution of Environmental Health Officers and the National Farmers Union.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisatons with which he has met to discuss the future use of audible bird scarers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 20 February 1990]: None.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to meet with representatives of the birdscarers' anti-nuisance group.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 20 February 1990]: None at the moment.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish a further draft code of practice relating to the use of audible bird scarers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 20 February 1990]: By the end of March 1990.

Chipboard Factories

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make it his policy to require chipboard factories to be fitted with electrified filter bed equipment;

(2) what analysis has been made of the emissions from chipboard factories in England; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what controls exist on emissions to the air from chipboard factories; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 20 February 1990]: Emissions to the air from chipboard factories are subject to control by local authorities under the statutory nuisance provisions of part III of the Public Health Act 1936. I understand that analyses of emissions from three major chipboard factories have been undertaken by, or on behalf of, local authorities.

Under part I of the Environmental Protection Bill it is proposed to give local authorities powers of prior authorisation over air pollution from certain categories of timber processes including chipboard factories. These processes will not be scheduled under the Bill until national guidance on appropriate air pollution controls has been issued by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. Different pollution abatement technologies including electrified filter bed equipment are currently being considered in drawing up this guidance.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action under the Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazards Regulations, which came into effect in 1986, his Department has considered with respect to the waste recycling plant at Wath-on-Dearne, where toxic and dangerous chemicals are stored.

Mr. Nicholls: I have been asked to reply.

None. The waste recycling installation at Wath-on-Dearne is a site licensed under section 5 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974, and as such is excluded from the Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazards Regulations 1984 by virtue of regulation 3(1)(e).

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ambulance Union

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions have been held with officials of the ambulance union in Northern Ireland about proposed salary increases and a pay review formula.

Mr. Needham: None.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met officials of the trade union representing ambulance drivers and associated paramedic staff in Northern Ireland; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Needham: The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has not met these officials.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the ambulance service dispute in Northern Ireland and (a) salary increases and (b) a pay review formula.

Mr. Needham: Representations have been received from six district councils supporting the request of staff side of the ambulance Whitley council to have the dispute referred to arbitration. One council also recommended that the ambulance service should be treated no differently from the emergency services for the purpose of determining pay.

Bomb Explosions

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many bomb explosions there have been at the premises of Short Bros. since 25 May 1989; and if he is giving this firm security advice about future employees.

Mr. Cope: Since May 1989, there have been three separate incidents of terrorist attack against property belonging to Short Bros. plc, during which a total of seven bombs exploded. The security of Shorts' property is kept under review and, in line with longstanding Government policy on such matters, I know the right hon. Gentleman would not expect me to elaborate further on the measures being taken to safeguard this firm's property.

School Rolls

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils there are at each primary school in the constituency of Newry and Armagh.

Benefits

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table showing the latest figures of how many people are dependent upon (a) income support, (b) family credit and (c) housing benefit, broken down into claimants, dependants and children.

Mr. Needham: The latest available figures are:

	Claimants	Dependent partners	Children
(a) Income support (May 1988)[1]	184,140	44,940	118,240
(b) Family credit (February 1990)	14,524	11,118	[2]36,000
(c) Housing benefit (February 1990)	164,754	n/a	n/a

Stalker Inquiry

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 12 February, whether any aspect of the Stalker inquiry was on the agenda at the meeting held on 12 June 1986.

Mr. Cope: It is not the practice to divulge the content of discussions within Government, but the hon. Member will note that by that date Mr. Sampson had been appointed to head the Northern Ireland inquiry.

Housing

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were (i) the number and type of houses, (ii) the date of contract, (iii) the contract price and (iv) the final cost of Northern Ireland Housing Executive schemes (a) phase 6 RDA 1 project 2610263, (b) phase 1 RDA 89 project 2610376, and (c) phase 3 RDA 89 project 2610430.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. We have been advised by the chief executive that project Nos. 2710376 and 2610430 relate to phases 1 and 3 in RDA 87 not RDA 89. On this basis the information requested is as follows:

(a) Project 2610263 RDA 1 Phase 6: (i) 56 dwellings comprising five 3-person bungalows, eight 3-person houses, ten 3-person flats, twenty-four 5-person houses and nine 7-person houses; (ii) 9 February 1987; (iii) £1,314,551·51; (iv) not yet available but anticipated to be £1,349,298.

(b) Project 2610376 RDA 87 Phase 1: (i) 60 dwellings comprising five 3-person bungalows, fifteen 3-person houses, ten 3-person flats, fifteen 4-person houses, eight 5-person houses, six 6-person houses and one 7-person house; (ii) 18 March 1985; (iii) £1,442,279 (Fluctuating Price Contract); (iv) not yet available but anticipated to be £1,742,754.

(c) Project 2610430 RDA 87 Phase 3: (i) 41 dwellings comprising one 3-person bungalow, nine 3-person houses, fourteen 3-person flats, ten 4-person houses, and seven 5-person houses; (ii) 26 May 1987; (iii) £1,028,050; (iv) not yet available but anticipated to be £1,150,000.

Civil Servants

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on the number of civil servants in Northern Ireland who (a) have made applications for and (b) are in receipt of (i) family credit and (ii) housing benefit.

Mr. Needham: I regret that no such information is available.

Income Support

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate what the overall cost in Northern Ireland would be of increasing the rate of income support for all single people under 25 years to the same rate as for those over 25 years.

Mr. Needham: The estimated weekly cost would be £265,000.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate what the overall cost in Northern Ireland would be of extending entitlement to full income support to all those under 18 years of age in receipt of bridging allowance and special hardship allowance in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The estimated weekly cost for those getting bridging allowance would be an extra £1,500. Young people entitled on severe hardship grounds already receive the full rate of income support.

Students (Benefits)

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available to indicate the number and cost of student claims for housing benefit, unemployment benefit and income support/supplementary benefit in the past five years.

Mr. Needham: The information is available only for income support, and is as follows:

Summer vacation (1989)

Number of claims	Amount paid £ million
12,720	2·15

Note:—Excludes claims from lone parent and disabled students.
Source: 20 per cent. sample.

Life Sentences

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners in Northern Ireland prisons are serving a life sentence for (a) murder and (b) other crimes; and of these how many are admitted members of (1) the Ulster Defence Association, (2) the Ulster Freedom Fighters, (3) the Ulster Volunteer Force, (4) the Red Hand Commando, (5) other Protestant paramilitary groups, (6) the Official Irish Republican Army, (7) the Provisional Irish Republican Army, (8) the Irish National Liberation Army, (9) other Roman Catholic paramilitary groups and (10) none of these, or as much of such information as is available to him.

Mr. Cope: A total of 379 prisoners are serving life sentences in Northern Ireland; of these, 350 were convicted for murder and 29 for other very serious crimes. It is not possible to list the current paramilitary affiliation of these prisoners but at the time of conviction it was as follows:

	Numbers
UDA	64
UFF	5
UVF	107
RHC	1
Other Loyalist	14
OIRA	Nil
PIRA	136
INLA	15
Other Republican	Nil
None	37

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the total number of life sentences received for crimes committed in Northern Ireland since 1974; and what was the average length of imprisonment served.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 20 February 1990]: The information is not available in the form requested. However, between 1974 and 1989, a total of 467 individuals were sentenced to life imprisonment (which were not subsequently quashed on appeal) by the courts in Northern Ireland. Of these, 63 had been released on licence at 31 December 1989 after serving an average of 13 years and eight months in prison.

Republic of Ireland (Extradition)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show by organisation and date the number of persons who have been members of a proscribed organisation and have been extradited from the Irish Republic in each year since 1968, or as much of such information as is available to him.

Mr. Cope: Statistical material about extradition from the Republic of Ireland to Northern Ireland has been collected by the RUC since 1971. The information is not available precisely in the form requested: records differentiate only between terrorist and non-terrorist cases. The information available is summarised in the table:

Persons extradited

Year of return	Terrorist offences	Non-terrorist offences
1971	—	7
1972	—	—
1973	—	3
1974	—	9
1975	—	1
1976	—	7
1977	1	8
1978	—	15
1979	—	8
1980	—	12
1981	—	5
1982	—	18
1983	—	10
1984	2	1
1985	—	5
1986	—	—
1987	1	—
1988	2	1
1989	1	—

DHSS Offices

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of (a) Roman Catholic and (b) Protestants in each of the following grades (i) administrative assistants, (ii) administrative officers, (iii) executive officers grade 2, (iv) executive officers grade 1, (v) staff officers in each of the following Department of Health and Social Services offices: (1) Strabane, (2) Omagh, (3) Londonderry, (4) Lisnakelly, (5) Limavady, (6) Coleraine and (7) Magherafelt.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The Northern Ireland Civil Service has an equal opportunities monitoring system which contains information on the sex, religious affiliation and disability of its staff. Disclosure of information on the religious affiliation of Northern Ireland Civil Service staff is governed by a code of practice which stipulates that no statistical summaries will be produced which fall outside the categories of analyses agreed with the equal opportunities Whitley committee.

The most recent agreed analyses were published in October 1989 in the third report of the Northern Ireland Civil Service equal opportunities unit; a copy of that report was placed in the Library.

Terrorist Offences

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people charged with terrorist-type offences were employed in Government offices and in the SPED dwellings department of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 14 February 1990]: I am not aware of anyone employed in Government offices being charged with terrorist-type offences. Under both the Northern Ireland and Home Civil Service codes, a civil servant is required to report to his Department if he is arrested and refused bail or if he is convicted. He is not required to report that he has been charged.

I am advised by the chief executive of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that no person employed in the Executive's SPED department has been charged with terrorist-type offences.

Fishermen (Financial Aid)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial aid package will be provided by the Government to the fishermen on the County Down coast as a consequence of the inclement weather combined with the effect of the social security regulations introduced on 10 December 1989.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Social security legislation provides for the payment of unemployment benefit in respect of weeks throughout which fishermen are unable to work because of inclement weather. Where fishermen are able to work only on certain days of a week, unemployment benefit is payable for the remaining days provided that the earnings for that week do not equal or exceed the lower earnings level for national insurance contribution liability. This is currently £43 a week. Income support may also be available to fishermen who work for less than 24 hours a week subject to the normal rules regarding income and capital.

While I would sympathise with the difficulties caused by the recent adverse weather the Government have no plans to introduce special assistance for fishermen on the County Down coast.

Housing

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dwellings or percentages of dwellings in Northern Ireland are at present (1) owned outright by the occupant, (2) have owners with a mortgage, (3) are rented from a private owner, (4) are rented from a public body and (5) other types of tenure; and what were the percentages five, 10 and 15 years ago.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 20 February 1990]: The information is not available in the form required. Details of housing stock by tenure are given in tables 2.2A and 2.2C of "Housing Statistics 88" published by the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland). Copies of this publication are available in the Library.

The figures are given in the table for 1988, 1983 and 1978.

Percentage of dwellings by tenure

	1988	1983	1978
Owner Occupied	62	57	51
Rented from Northern Ireland Housing Executive	33	36	39
Rented from Registered Housing Association	1	1	—
Private rented and other	4	6	10

Figures available from the Northern Ireland continuous household survey published in the "Northern Ireland Annual Abstract of Statistics No. 7" which is available in the Library show 30 per cent. of dwellings were owned outright in 1987 compared with 42 per cent. in 1983.

Supplies and Services Boycott

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list in the Official Report those firms which have made it known by advertisement or statement in the press that they will not provide material to any firm which carries out work for the security forces in Northern Ireland and the date on which such advertisements or statements were published or as much of such information as is available to him.

(2) if he will list in the Official Report those firms which have made it known by advertisement or statement in the press that they will not carry out work for the security forces in Northern Ireland and the date on which such advertisements or statements were published or as much of such information as is available to him.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 20 February 1990]: No.

Constituency Boundaries

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the boundary commission for Northern Ireland intends to conduct any interim reviews of the Northern Ireland parliamentary constituencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 20 February 1990]: I understand that the commission has not yet decided its future programme of work.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Government Departments (Accounts)

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Norfolk, North (Mr. Howell), of 22 January, Official Report, column 540, when the format of commercial-style accounts produced by certain Government Departments will comply with the requirements of the Companies Acts.

Mr. Ryder: Government Departments which produce commercial-style accounts are as a general rule directed to meet the accounting and disclosure requirements set out in the Companies Acts, except where it would be impracticable to do so—for example, the disclosure of called-up share capital which has no counterpart in the central Government sector.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements will be made for customs checks on the passengers using the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Ryder: Customs' overall approach has been to devise arrangements which best suit the different types of train while observing the need for economy in the use of public sector staff. There will be three types of passenger train using the tunnel:

(a) shuttle services carrying private cars, coaches and ro-ro vehicles between Coquelles and Cheriton. For these, customs checks will be done at Coquelles before vehicles join the train, allowing them a free exit on arrival in the United Kingdom;

(b) through trains bound for points beyond London. In accordance with the Channel Tunnel Act, Customs are planning for all checks to be performed on the train during the journey, subject to the operators providing satisfactory facilities and to the payment of any fees or charges that may be imposed;

(c) capital-to-capital services terminating at Waterloo. Customs checks will be done at Waterloo station using the familiar airport-style red/green system.

Customs checks are highly selective in green channel systems, and only a very small percentage of passengers on the trains bound for Waterloo will experience any delay in their journey.

AIDS

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister if, pursuant to her reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe, on 18 January, Official Report, column 382, she will state the proportion of people with AIDS who are eligible for payments from the Macfarlane trust; and if she will make a further statement.

The Prime Minister: At 31 December 1989, approximately 6 per cent. of people in the United Kingdom reported to have AIDS were haemophiliacs who may qualify for payments from the Macfarlane trust. The trust was set up with an ex-gratia payment from the Government in recognition of the wholly exceptional circumstances of people with haemophilia and HIV.

ENERGY

Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what will be the non-fossil levy on electricity prices to (a) industrial and (b) domestic consumers.

Mr. Baldry: The fossil fuel levy will be charged to licensed electricity suppliers as a percentage of their total leviable electricity sales revenue. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 12 February that the rate for 1990-91 would be 10·6 per cent.

Nuclear Fuels (Disposal)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what studies his Department has carried out to compare the costs of dry storage with the costs of reprocessing and ultimate disposal of spent fuel from (a)

Magnox, (b) advanced gas-cooled reactors and (c) pressurised water reactors and nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: My Department has carried out no such studies. However, in May 1988, my right hon. Friend the Member for Cirencester and Tewkesbury (Mr. Ridley), the then Secretary of State for the Environment, deposited in the Library of the House studies by the generating boards and by Ove Arup and Partners into the storage and disposal of spent Magnox fuel. The decision to reprocess spent fuel is taken by the owners of the fuel on safety, technical and economic grounds.

Liquid Petroleum Gas Tanks

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if the Government have any plans to give grant aid for the removal of liquid petroleum gas tanks.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No.

Public Relations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether under its contract to provide public relations and marketing advice to his Department, Lowe Bell has direct dealings with the news media.

Mr. Wakeham: Contact with the news media is an integral part of the marketing of the forthcoming offers for sale in the privatisation of the electricity supply industry in England and Wales. Lowe Bell Communications will, if required, be in contact with the news media in its role as special marketing and public relations adviser to my Department.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether, under its contract to provide public relations and marketing advice to his Department and the electricity supply industry, Dewe Rogerson has direct dealings with the news media.

Mr. Wakeham: Contact with the news media is an integral part of the marketing of the forthcoming offers for sale in the privatisation of the electricity supply industry in England and Wales. Dewe Rogerson will be in contact with the news media in its role as joint marketing and public relations adviser to my Department and the electricity industry.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the percentage of the energy research budget in each of the OECD countries that is devoted to the development and application of renewable energy techniques.

Mr. Wakeham: No figures are available for private sector expenditure on renewable energy in OECD countries. Statistics on Government expenditure on energy R and D are collected for member countries by the International Energy Agency. The percentages requested for such countries, given in the 1988 IEA review, are as follows:

Percentage of Energy R and D Budget (which in some cases includes expenditure on Nuclear R and D) committed to Renewable Energy Research and Development (1988)

Country	Percentage
Austria	16·63
Belgium	4·09
Canada	4·23
Germany	17·61
Greece	61·46
Italy	6·51
Japan	5·95
Netherlands	13·39
Norway	6·95
Portugal	26·07
Spain	20·71
Sweden	21·06
Switzerland	14·19
United Kingdom	5·40
United States	6·08

The United Kingdom percentage is rising and, in 1989, was about 6·5 per cent. Care must be exercised in using such international statistics since countries differ in their definitions. The figures are also influenced by the extent to which countries have nuclear programmes which, of their nature, involve large expenditure.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the total output of British nuclear power plants as a percentage of total power generation for each month in 1989.

Mr. Baldry: The total output of electricity generated by nuclear power plants as a percentage of total generation in the United Kingdom public electricity supply industry for each month in 1989 was:

	Percentage
January	24·4
February	22·5
March	21·9
April	21·9
May	27·4
June	26·5
July	23·8
August	23·9
September	24·8

Advanced Gas-cooled Reactors

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what were the load factors for the advanced gas-cooled reactors at (a) Hartlepool, (b) Heysham and (c) Dungeness, for each of the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: This is an operational matter for the CEGB.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list any projects in the Eastwood constituency which have received more than £100,000 in assistance from the Scottish Development Agency in the last five years.

Mr. Lang: No projects in the Eastwood constituency have received over £100,000 in assistance from the Scottish Development Agency in the last five years. However, in the period 1 April 1984 to 31 March 1989, agency expenditure in Eastwood has amounted to £457,000.

Non-domestic Rates

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the potential economic consequences of the removal of the present limitations on increases in non-domestic rates; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The fact that the increases in non-domestic rates in Scotland have been held to inflation during the current year has already benefited industry and commerce. They will benefit further next year by my right hon. and learned Friend's decision to reduce poundages by 6·25 per cent. below indexation as the first step towards a common business rate with England. The Labour party's proposal to return to local authorities freedom to set rate poundages would on the basis of experience inflict a significantly higher rate burden on Scottish business than borne by its competitors south of the border and would consequently damage Scotland's economic prospects. It would also remove any prospect of harmonisation of business rates in Great Britain, a prospect which has been welcomed both by the business community and the general public in Scotland.

Rating Reform

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list all the orders made under the Abolition of Domestic Rates etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, including any subsequently revoked;

(2) if he will list all the paragraphs of orders made under the Abolition of Domestic Rates etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, including any subsequently revoked, which have been the subject of later amendment, substitution or insertion; and if he will provide the derivation and the date of the coming into force of each alteration listed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

Funerals

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the 1989 Office of Fair Trading report entitled "Funerals"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I have received no such representations.

Library Services

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Government's response to the recent report on public library provision in rural Scotland; and if he will introduce a rural public library incentive scheme to help local authorities to develop the service and meet new demands.

Mr. Lang: My officials recently met representatives of the Scottish Library Association and the Library and Information Services Committee (Scotland) for which the report was prepared. I shall consider the report's recommendation for a rural public library incentive scheme in the light of an evaluation of a comparable initiative in England, and other relevant factors. The report also calls for action by rural library authorities to improve services to meet the needs of rural communities.

North East River Purification Board

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will outline the detail of the letter his Department received from the clerk to the board of the North East river purification board, in October 1989, which intimated the board's intention to restructure its management organisation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have nothing useful to add to the answer which I gave the hon. Member on 9 February 1990.

Acute Hospitals

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the acute hospitals with fewer than 600 beds.

Mr. Rifkind: There are 149 NHS hospitals with fewer than 600 beds providing inpatient services in the acute, supra-area and special categories speciality groups. These are listed in the table. Fourteen hospitals which provide maternity services but no other inpatient acute services are excluded.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will now give details of the effects of the recently announced increases in hill livestock compensatory allowances, for eligible sheep and cattle, paid to farmers in the Highlands and Islands Development Board area.

Mr. Rifkind: I have made a scheme under the powers contained in section 4 of the Congested Districts Act 1987 which will increase the HLCA supplement on hill sheep within the HIDB area in line with those awarded in the less-favoured areas generally. The new rate of HLCA supplement will be raised to 64p. The rate for cows maintained on C grade farms within the HIDB area is increased by £1·18 to £70·36 to take account of recent devaluations in the green pound. The increases will apply from 1 January 1990 and their cost will be covered by the provisions already made for such supplements within the vote for agricultural support in Scotland (class XVI, vote 1).

Cash Limits

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he proposes to make any further changes to the cash limits for 1989-90 within his responsibility.

Mr. Rifkind: Yes. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVI, vote 22, revenue and rate support grants, Scotland will be increased by £9,481,000 from £2,336,800,000 to £2,346,281,000 to cover adjustments in rate support grant payments for 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Lothian Health Board

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for East Lothian on 5 February, if he will now give the detailed terms of reference of the inquiry into the finances of Lothian health board; amd when he will publish the report.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The independent inquiry into the financial position of Lothian health board is complete and the chief executive, NHS in Scotland is now working with the board to ensure that the necessary steps are taken to rectify the board's problems. I would be unhappy about publishing the report without the agreement of the health board.

Housing Benefit

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was paid in housing benefit to tenants in the private sector in Scotland in 1988-89 to cover domestic rate bills.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

I regret that actual expenditure information is not collected in the detail requested. It is estimated on the basis of the average weekly value of rate rebate in payment to private tenants on 31 May 1988 that the overall cost was about £13·75 million. This includes both cases where the tenant paid rates directly to the local authority and those where rates were included in the rent.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Eastern Europe

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on measures implemented by the Hungarian Government to establish a law of contract and property rights and on further measures planned by the Governments of Poland and Hungary.

Mr. Redwood: Hungarian law on contract and property rights is embodied in the 1959 civil code (as amended). Other relevant economic and legislative measures recently adopted in Hungary include the law on economic associations, the law on foreign investment, the transformation law and the law on the protection of state assets. As far as we are aware, no fresh legislation in this field is currently planned. Ministers recognise the need to make long leases available to inward investors.

We understand that Poland is currently drafting new legislation on the law of contract and on property rights in conjunction with a privatisation bill. But the process is at an early stage. The present law of contract is, we understand, governed by the civil code of 23 April 1964 (as amended). Expropriation of property is governed by a special act, published in 1985 in the state gazette. We are led to believe that this will shortly be amended.

Companies considering investment in Poland and Hungary are welcome to consult my Department's east European branch or the commercial sections of our embassies to obtain fuller details of relevant legislation.

Inward Investment

Mr. Heseltine: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the total cost to United Kingdom taxpayers of all forms of grant and subsidy paid to encourage inward investment by Japanese industry in the United Kingdom since 1979.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Around £190 million was paid in investment incentives to Japanese-owned companies in the United Kingdom in the period 1 January 1979 to 31 December 1989 under the main schemes of regional and national assistance for industrial development.

Company Investigations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what means are open to an investor to discover whether the auditors of his company have been criticised by his Department's inspectors or any disciplinary committee of the profession.

Mr. Redwood: Apart from writing direct to the auditors, or raising the matter at the company's general meeting, an investor may as appropriate consult my Department's investigations division or the professional accountancy body to which the firm of auditors belongs.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will take steps to ensure that sole practitioners and partnerships which are permitted to carry out statutory audits will be required to file annual accounts and reports with the appropriate supervisory body.

Mr. Redwood: Decisions on the information which company auditors should furnish to recognised supervisory bodies have yet to be made.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to require companies to supplement their accounts-based financial statements with cash flow statements.

Mr. Redwood: No. Such supplementary information is best dealt with by means of accounting standards.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether any accountancy firm was criticised by his Department's inspectors in their report on Orbit Holdings.

Mr. Redwood: Yes. I regret that no reference was made to this report or the inspectors' report on Burnholme and Forder Limited and Brayhead Limited in the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 19 December 1989, Official Report, column 139.

Name of company	Date of publication of report	Name of accountants
Burnholme and Forder Limited	17 July 1979	Josolyne Layton Bennett and Co.
Brayhead Limited
Orbit Holdings Limited	23 December 1981	C. T. Moore and Co. Peat Marwick Mitchell and Co.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will take steps to require companies to publish profit forecasts.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list the names and business connections of the 13 non-departmental inspectors appointed by him in 1988-89;

(2) if he will list the names and business connections of the non-departmental inspectors appointed by him in 1989-90.

Mr. Redwood: The information is as follows:

Textiles

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that the ban on sectoral aid schemes for the textile industry has been adhered to by all member states of the European Economic Community; and if he will make a statement concerning the results of his monitoring of this agreement and the effects on the British textile industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is the responsibility of the European Commission to maintain the regulation of sectoral aid schemes for the textile industry, and the Government are confident that it vigorously enforces the rules in an even-handed way.

The United Kingdom closely monitors the Commission's work to ensure a level playing field for British industry and we are satisfied that it is not having an adverse effect on the industry.

Advertising

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his advertising budget for each of the next three years; and on what basis it is to be allocated.

Mr. Ridley: Individual allocations within the publicity budget beyond the current year have yet to be decided, but the Department's central publicity budget will fall in real terms over the next three years. I expect the majority of next year's publicity spend to go towards information materials other than paid advertising. Expenditure is decided according to need, and on a case-by-case basis.

Brand Valuations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department will issue guidance on the inclusion of brands valuations in the balance sheet.

Mr. Redwood: No. The Accounting Standards Committee has already issued guidance on this subject, which will be included in an exposure draft due to be published later this year.

Newtech, Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will visit Newtech, Deeside industrial park, Clywd, to see the one-stop shop for business advice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have no present plans to visit Newtech.

Departmental Structure

Mr. Knowles: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for the future structure of his Department.

Mr. Ridley: The organisation of DTI was changed in 1988 at the time of the White Paper "DTI—the department for Enterprise" (Cm 278). One of the main changes then was the replacement of "industry" divisions by "market" divisions, organised by sector and covering a wide range of activities for each sector including collaborative projects, technology transfer, standards, market information, international trade issues and the promotion and presentation of policies for which other DTI divisions were responsible, such as the single market, deregulation and business/education links. My predecessor as Secretary of State decided last year that these organisational arrangements should be reviewed; the review has now been completed and I have decided to make some modifications to this part of DTI's organisation.

There are key priorities spanning all industrial sectors, on which the industrial side of my Department needs to concentrate. They include policies and programmes for collaborative research projects, technology transfer and standards; and there are other important issues for my Department, such as the response of business to environmental issues. I intend to bring together DTI expertise to provide a more concentrated focus on these long-term issues.

The present activities of "market" divisions will be better managed by a different structure of divisions each concentrating on a set of policies or programmes; expertise will then be focused on information technology, on manufacturing technology, on the environment and business, and on market assessment. Divisions with policy responsibilities for matters such as international trade, the single market, business/education links and deregulation will be responsible for communicating with business direct, rather than through the "market" divisions as at present. The focus of responsibility, and lines of communication, will both be clearer and more direct.

Where there are continuing Government responsibilities towards specific industrial sectors—such as aerospace, shipbuilding, vehicles, industrial materials and steel—these responsibilities will be handled, so long as they are required, by task forces which focus on the sectors in question. The task force approach will also provide a capability for responding flexibly to specific but temporary issues affecting industry and commerce.

For other sectors of the Department's work, I intend to continue my predecessor's policy of setting up entities such as the Patent Office, Companies House, the Insolvency Service and the research establishments as Next Steps agencies. Good progress is being made.

As I said in my letter to the Chairman of the Select Committee on Trade and Industry on 26 January, I intend no changes in the arrangements for the regulatory divisions of the DTI—other than to make sure they continue to be adequately staffed to pursue their important functions. More widely, I am continuing to study how best industry and commerce should be provided with other DTI services.

The changes in the organisation of the market divisions will be implemented over the next few months. This process will lead to a reduction in the number of posts in the Department, of probably about 100 to 150 posts. I do not expect there to be any redundancies.

Military Equipment Exports

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many applications for the export of military equipment were made in (a) 1988 and (b) 1989; and in each case how many of these applications were successful.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 13 February 1990]: The number of licence applications submitted, and licences granted, in 1988 and 1989 to export goods classified as military equipment or technology defined as falling within group 1 of part II of schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1987 is as follows:

	Applications	Licences granted
1988	10,756	11,020
1989	10,099	9,952

The statistics of licence applications received and licences granted in the same calendar year are not strictly comparable because the processing of some applications carries over into the following year.

Car Phones

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on east and west European countries that have regulations banning or affecting the temporary importation and use of cars equipped with permanently fixed telephones that can be operated only within the United Kingdom; and if he has any plans to make bilateral or international arrangements to reduce this problem.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 20 February 1990]: My Department does not collect such information on a systematic basis. However, I am aware that many countries make arrangements to prevent the operation of mobile radio equipment installed in cars which because of differing frequency allocations or equipment standards cannot be lawfully used in those countries, either through sealing up the radio equipment or preventing its importation entirely.

As international radio networks develop, arrangements are being put in place to permit the temporary importation and operation of this type of equipment. Eighteen member nations of CEPT, the organisation of European telecommunications operators, including the United Kingdom, have signed a memorandum of understanding for the introduction of a pan-European cellular radio network which will, among other things, allow for the free circulation of the relevant equipment in these countries. Similar moves are contemplated by the European Commission, both with regard to equipment standards and free circulation, although discussions on the latter are at an early stage.

I believe that these moves will go a considerable way towards alleviating this problem where it occurs.

Footwear Imports

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the total value of imports of both leather and synthetic footwear from (a) the Republic of Korea and (b) Taiwan, in each of the past three years.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The available figures are as follows:

United Kingdom imports of footwear by country of origin

	Leather uppers £000[1]	Rubber-plastic uppers £000[2]
(a) Republic of Korea
1987	16,862	2,807

Electric Vehicles

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what investments have been made by his Department into research into electrically powered vehicles for each year since 1980.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 20 February 1990]: Assistance given by my Department towards research into electrically powered vehicles for each year since 1980 is as follows:

Year	Assistance £
1980	763,740
1981	658,223
1982	1,317,449
1983	1,541,799
1984	2,111,109
1985	2,169,772
1986	1,737,317
1987	816,995
1988	184,469
1989	Nil
Total	11,300,873

Post Office (Privatisation)

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) at whose instigation companies have submitted proposals to his Department in relation to the privatisation of Post Office Letters;

(2) if the Post Office has been involved in consideration of proposals from companies in relation to the privatisation of Post Office Letters;

(3) what was the nature of the proposals sent by companies to his Department in relation to the privatisation of Post Office Letters; and on what basis they have been rejected;

(4) which companies have approached his Department in relation to the privatisation of Post Office Letters;

(5) if, in relation to the privatisation of the Post Office, he will indicate which companies were approached by his Department.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 19 February 1990]: As I said on 14 February 1990, Official Report, column 260, my right hon. Friend has met a number of parties some of whom have put forward proposals in relation to letters delivery, and some of whom have not. My right hon. Friend requested these meetings in order to hear all points of view, but the discussions were on a basis of confidentiality.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what manpower in his Department is devoted to providing advice and briefing to industry, commerce and the general public on the 1992 proposals; and what expenditure is devoted to this area of policy.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: My Department's "Europe Open for Business" campaign, which is dedicated to providing factual information to business on single market proposals, is run by a unit of 13 staff, supported as required by officials elsewhere in the Department, including regional offices. Expenditure on the campaign since its launch in March 1988 has been £4·7 million, excluding advertising to alert firms to the challenges and opportunities.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

County Courts

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the county courts in England and Wales and the current backlog in unopened mail at each county court.

The Attorney-General: I am informed that there is no unopened mail at any of the 275 county courts in England and Wales. At Manchester county court mail was not opened for the period 29 January to 1 February 1990 when the court was closed and moved to new premises. The backlog of unopened mail was dealt with by 11 February 1990.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Human Rights

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on closer scrutiny of the human rights situation in Guatemala by the United Nations human rights commission;

(2) what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the renewal of the mandate of the United Nations special rapporteur on Afghanistan;

(3) what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the renewal of the mandate of the United Nations special rapporteur on Romania;

(4) what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the renewal of the mandate of the United Nations special rapporteur on Chile;

(5) what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the renewal of the mandate of the United Nations special rapporteur on Iran;

(6) what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the renewal of the mandate of the United Nations special rapporteur on El Salvador.

Mr. Sainsbury: We strongly support the United Nations system of special rapporteurs and special advisers on human rights. We shall be studying their recommendations to this year's commission on human rights and, in the light of these recommendations, shall make a decision on each of their mandates.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether Her Majesty's Government will raise human rights violations in Burma in the United Nations human rights commission;

(2) whether Her Majesty's Government will raise the human rights situation in Sri Lanka in the current session of the United Nations human rights commission;

(3) whether Her Majesty's Government will raise the human rights situation in Peru at the forthcoming session of the United nations human rights commission;

(4) whether Her Majesty's Government will raise the torture and ill-treatment of political prisoners in Turkey at the forthcoming session of the United Nations human rights commission.

Mr. Sainsbury: At this year's commission on human rights, for the first time, the 12 members of the European Community agreed to make a common statement on item 12 (country situations). In view of this development, national statements will not be made. The common statement was delivered by the Irish Presidency on 21 February. It raised our concerns about human rights in a wide range of countries including Burma and Sri Lanka. It did not raise Peru or Turkey. A copy of the statement is being placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during his recent visit to Washington DC, he discussed with his counterpart progress in arrangements for the fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: This subject was not discussed. However, there is regular contact at official level with United States representatives.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during the European Foreign Affairs Council on 5 February, he discussed the international nuclear non-proliferation regime.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Mr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during his meeting in Bonn on 6 February wih Chancellor Kohl and Foreign Minister Genscher, he raised the matter of the fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. We do, however, have regular contact on this subject at official level.

English Teaching

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current annual expenditure on schemes funded by all Government agencies to teach English to adults around the world.

Mr. Sainsbury: About £30·7 million in 1988-89, of which £23 million was on direct teaching by the British Council, covered by income generated. The remainder was made up of FCO scholarships, ODA schemes and BBC World Service English programmes. Expenditure in the current financial year is expected to be about 5 per cent. higher.

Ivory

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any evidence of breaches of the worldwide ban on ivory trade involving elephants slaughtered in Kenya.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have seen no evidence of breaches of the ban on international commercial trade in ivory introduced by CITES on 18 January. Infractions of CITES rules are in the first instance a matter for the CITES secretariat.

South Africa

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals the Government have put to European Community Governments for the lifting of sanctions against South Africa: and which sanctions were involved.

Mr. Waldegrave: At the European political co-operation meeting on 20 February my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pointed out to EC partners that for all practical purposes President de Klerk has taken the steps demanded by EC Foreign Ministers in 1986 when they imposed restrictive measures on South Africa and that it would be logical therefore to respond by lifting those measures. The measures concerned are a ban on new investment in South Africa, a ban on the import of gold coins and a ban on the import of iron and steel. My right honourable Friend urged our European Community colleagues to begin this process by lifting the ban on new investment in South Africa.

Hong Kong

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to his supplementary answer of 16 February. Official Report, column 581, he will state the occasions on which the Chinese Government publicly expressed a preference for direct elections in Hong Kong to start with 10 directly elected seats.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are not aware that the Chinese Government have publicly expressed a view on the precise number of directly elected seats before 1997.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability Employment Credit

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the disability employment credit will be available to previous recipients of severe disablement allowance who have completed a youth training course; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: It is our intention that people who have completed a youth training course and who were previously receiving severe disablement allowance will be eligible to claim the disability employment credit.

Civil Servants (Benefits)

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take steps to collect information on the number of staff in each Government Department who (a) have made applications and (b) are in receipt of (i) family credit and (ii) housing benefit and (1) are likely to receive from April or (2) are already in receipt of community charge rebate; and if he will give as much information as is already available to him.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The total number of families receiving family credit where the main earner is a civil servant is 6,000. The number of families receiving family credit where the main earner is a member of staff of the Department of Social Security or the Department of Health is 835. We have no plans to collect any more detailed information on a routine basis. The numbers within DSS/DH are known only because the cases concerned are held separately for reasons of confidentiality.

Since these considerations do not apply to housing benefit or community charge benefit, separate figures are not recorded to show the number of claims from staff in Government Departments.

Relocation

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends (a) to publish the results of the further study of the options for relocating some headquarters work and (b) to make a decision regarding relocation of further offices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 14 November 1989, concerning relocation of headquarters work, to my hon. Friend the Member for Colne Valley (Mr. Riddick) at column 170. A copy of the review team's report was placed in the Library.

There are no further central plans to relocate work from any social security local offices other than the 21 local offices in London, the details of which were announced to the House by the then Secretary of State for Social Security on 16 January 1989 at column 46-47.

All regions are currently reviewing their network of local offices in consultation with local management to take account of the changes flowing from the introduction of the operational strategy, the creation of the Contributions Unit/Agency, the creation of the Benefits Agency, and other related issues. Regions will be producing proposals for consideration at the end of March 1990. Any proposals for further relocation of work will be considered on their merits as part of this exercise.

Sick Pay

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the Government will amend the relevant statutory provisions so that women can apply for payment of statutory sick pay over the age of 60 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No. Statutory sick pay (SSP) is not payable to women (or men) employees whose sickness begins after reaching state retirement pension age. Instead such people receive sickness benefit based on the rate of retirement pension which would have been payable if they had retired. We could not expect employers to know about their employees' entitlement to retirement pension. However, an employee whose period of entitlement to SSP begins shortly before minimum pension age can continue to get SSP after that age for as long as that period of entitlement lasts, subject to a maximum of three years.

Benefits (Child Rates)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table in the Official Report giving the child rates of national assistance, supplementary benefit, income support (a) as a percentage of the adult rate and (b) in real terms for each year 1960-1990.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 15 February 1990]: The information requested is in the tables.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Secretaries and Clerical Assistants

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement on the pay of school secretaries and clerical assistants.

Mrs. Rumbold: The pay of non-teaching staff in schools is a matter for their employers.

GCSE

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the percentage increase in GCSE A-grades in each of the past two years.

Mrs. Rumbold: The following figures relate to attempts made by 14 and 15-year-olds. In 1988, 8·6 per cent. of GCSE attempts resulted in a grade A. Grade A results at O-level in 1987 constituted 13·9 per cent. of all O-level attempts and 5·3 per cent. of all O-level and CSE attempts. Comparable figures for 1989 are not yet available.

Agricultural and Food Research Council

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Motherwell, South (Dr. Bray), of 30 January, Official Report, column 148, when he expects to complete his consideration for improving co-ordination between the AFRC and the Natural Environment Research Council.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Martin) on 1 February at columns 289-90.

Standards of Attainment

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the achievements of Her Majesty's inspectors in relation to standards of attainment in schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: Her Majesty's inspectorate makes an important contribution to the standards of education in schools by reporting impartially on the existing state of education across the country; by providing the Secretary of State and the Department with advice on policy matters; and by evaluating the impact of Government policy on schools.

Workers Education Association

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he next plans to meet the general secretary of the Workers Education Association; and what matters he intends to discuss.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to do so. A working party composed of representatives of the workers educational associations, the local authority associations and the Department is currently discussing the practical arrangements for the funding of the WEA districts in England over the next four years.

Tertiary Colleges (Outer London)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the quality and effectiveness of the educational services offered in the tertiary colleges of the outer London boroughs.

Mr. Jackson: Two outer London boroughs, Harrow and Richmond, provide maintained education for those over the age of 16 through tertiary colleges. The colleges in Harrow were the subject of a report by Her Majesty's inspectorate last October, entitled "Aspects of Tertiary Education in the London Borough of Harrow". I am placing a copy in the Library. The inspectorate found that the quality of teaching and learning was generally sound, with good work leading to satisfactory examination results in many cases. There is no recent information available for Richmond.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking in respect of the disciplinary record of the city technology colleges; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend is not taking any steps, and sees no need for a statement.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what allowances for special needs or handicapped children are being made under LMS in respect of the greater expense of welfare and ancillary help for these children; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: In line with the Government's statutory guidance on LMS, all LEAs have taken into account in their resource allocation formulae the variations between schools in the incidence of pupils with special educational needs.

Teachers (Financial Incentives)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a chart or table showing, for each academic year since their introduction the percentage of each category of financial incentive, A, B, C, D or E, offered to teachers in (a) infant schools, age range five to seven years, (b) junior schools, age range seven to 10 years, (c) middle schools, age range eight to 12 or nine to 13 years, and (d) secondary schools, age range 11 to 16 years.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is not available.

Non-contact Time

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has regarding Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools' recommendations in respect of non-contact time for primary school teachers; whether the Government plan to act upon any of the recommendations; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The organisation of the school day and the duties to be undertaken by individual teachers in their 1,265 hours of directed time are matters for head teachers. The interim advisory committee on school teachers' pay and conditions has recently drawn attention to the scope that exists for LEAs and governing bodies to develop policies to increase teachers' non-contact time.

Geography

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the teaching of geography in schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: The national curriculum geography working group was established last May to make recommendations about the geography to be taught to 5 to 16-year-olds in maintained schools. Its final report is due to be submitted by 30 April 1990.

Teacher Unions

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what meetings he has planned with teacher unions' representatives; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend expects to meet the teacher unions shortly to discuss their response to the recommendations of the interim advisory committee on school teachers' pay and conditions and to his proposal for implementation.

Capital Allocations, London

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what elements are taken into account to reflect the higher London costs in the capital allocations made to schools and colleges in London.

Mr. Alan Howarth: When local education authorities submitted their cash plans for education for 1990-91, these reflected regional differences in costs. In setting annual capital guidelines for education for 1990-91 the Department took into account local authority plans, and where the component of the annual capital guideline relating to a genuine need for additional school places was based on a standard building cost multiplier it was adjusted to reflect regional differences in building costs.

Further Education

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the proportion of children aged 16 to 18 years who attended schools or colleges of further education in each education authority in England and Wales (a) in 1980-81 and (b) for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to Department of Education and Science statistical bulletin 9/86 tables 1 and 2 and Department of Education and Science statistical bulletin 3/89 tables 4 and 8, copies of which can be found in the Library. Statistics for Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

National Curriculum

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the rate of implementation of the national curriculum.

Mrs. Rumbold: The full national curriculum will be implemented as soon as practicable to raise standards of education as quickly as possible. Implementation is proceeding in phases to make it manageable for schools. To ease pressure on secondary schools, my right hon. Friend recently announced that the requirement to teach 14 to 16-year-olds the foundation subjects outside the core subjects of maths, science and English would be introduced no earlier than autumn 1993.

Workers Education Association

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many (a) district secretaries and national officers, (b) tutor organisers, (c) development officers and (d) clerical/administrative staff, are employed full-time by the Workers Education Association in England (i) in total and (ii) by district.

Mr. Jackson: The information provided by the Workers Education Association is set out in the following table:

Number of full-time staff employed by the Workers Education Association in England listed by district and category of staff

Medical Research Council

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to suspend the funding of the Medical Research Council.

Mr. Jackson: No.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has concerning the amount of money spent by the Medical Research Council on the dissemination to Members of both Houses of Parliament of information concerning experimentation upon the human embryo.

Mr. Jackson: I understand that, since the beginning of 1989, the Medical Research Council spent a total of £3,530 in dissemination to Members of both Houses of Parliament of information concerning human fertilisation and embryology.

Study Vouchers

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether his Department has any intention of introducing study vouchers for the 16 to 18-year-old age group; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether his Department has any intention of introducing study vouchers for the 16 to 18-year-old age group; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The Government believe that all young people leaving full-time education at 16 or 17 should have the opportunity to pursue good-quality part-time education and training leading to nationally recognised qualifications. It is essential that our work force has the skills necessary to compete in the 1990s. The Government are giving serious consideration to the CBI's proposals for credits as a possible means of achieving this.

Assessment

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of the objective criteria for assessment at seven, 11, 14 and 16 years are now in place; and by when he expects the balance to be in place.

Mrs. Rumbold: Criteria for assessment at seven, 11, 14 and 16 years are embodied in national curriculum attainment targets for key stages 1 to 4. Attainment targets have already been laid down in maths and science for all four key stages and in English for key stage 1. My right hon. Friend expects to make orders shortly laying down attainment targets in English for key stages 2 to 4 and in technology for all key stages. He intends to lay down attainment targets for the remaining foundation subjects by 1992.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has received concerning the Government's pay policy for teachers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend is currently consulting the interested parties on his proposals in response to the interim advisory committee's recommendations for teachers' pay for 1990-91. He has received representations from three of the bodies concerned so far.

Physical Education

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list recent reports from Her Majesty's inspector of schools on the provision of physical education in schools; and if he intends to publish these reports.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is Government policy to publish all Her Majesty's inspectorate inspection reports. Some assessment of physical education provision would be included in all full inspection reports of primary and secondary schools. The most recent published Her Majesty's inspectorate documents which deal specifically with PE are as follows:

A Survey of Work in Physical Education in 16 Secondary Schools
A Survey of Some Aspects of Dance in a Sample of Secondary Schools
Curriculum Matters No. 16—Physical Education from 5-16

Grant-maintained Status

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those schools which have been (a) given grant-maintained status, (b) refused grant-maintained status and (c) await a decision on an application for grant-maintained status.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is set out in the table.

Teachers (Employment Costs)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the latest available figures for the annual cost of employing (a) a primary teacher, (b) a secondary teacher and (c) a teacher in further education.

Mrs. Rumbold: In April 1989 the estimated average cost, including employers' on-costs, of employing a primary teacher outside London was £16,190 per annum. The comparable figure for a secondary teacher is £17,490 per annum. The estimated average cost of employing a further education lecturer, including those in London, was £18,400 per annum.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Television Signal Feed

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will take steps to provide a feed of the television signal from the Chamber to offices and facilities used by Members in the vicinity of the Chamber.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The report of the Select Committee on Televising of Proceedings of the House, agreed to by the House last June, did not envisage the provision, for the direct use of Members, of monitors carrying the live feed from the Chamber, with the exception of two sets in the Division Lobbies. The Committee has since approved the installation of monitors to meet the special requirements of Mr. Speaker and the Chairman of Ways and Means. So far as the rest of the House is concerned, the Committee has so far taken the view that the presence of monitors in Members' rooms could be intrusive and might constitute a distraction from the Chamber, leaving aside the question of cost. The Committee will, however, keep the matter under review during the course of the experiment.

Bleepers

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Lord President of the Council what are the regulations governing the use of radio pagers and other bleeping machines within the precincts; and what steps he is taking to prevent their use in areas used by other hon. Members.

Sir Geoffrey Howe [holding answer 20 February 1990]: The use of radio pagers by right hon. and hon. Members is a personal matter and no regulations exist governing their use within the precincts of the House. I am aware that such devices can cause annoyance and I have asked the Serjeant at Arms to remind Members that pagers should be switched off while they are present in the Chamber or in Committees of the House.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Duchy of Lancaster has a small staff and there are no formal arrangements for paternity leave. Requests for paternity leave would be considered as and when they arose.

WALES

Cataract Treatment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing, for the latest available date, and for 12 months earlier, the number of people in each district health authority area, or at each district general hospital, as convenient, awaiting treatment for eye cataracts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Waiting list information on individual types of treatment is not collected centrally on a routine basis. However, information on patients waiting for treatment in the specialty of ophthalmology is published in Welsh hospital waiting list bulletin: 1988, Vol. 2 and 1989, Vol. 2, copies of which are in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made, in deciding on community charge relief for certain community council areas in Wales, of the adequacy and comprehensiveness with which the last rate revaluation throughout each such community was completed.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Entitlements to community charge relief have been calculated on a uniform basis, using information on domestic rateable values supplied by Welsh charging authorities (district councils), and duly certified by the principal finance officers of those authorities.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

Transport Policies

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will publish details of the current and relevant transport policy and programme submissions of Gwent, South Glamorgan and Mid-Glamorgan county councils;

(2) what are the delays on progress in the current transport policy and programmes submitted by the Gwent, South Glamorgan and Mid-Glamorgan county councils.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: County councils in Wales are no longer required to submit transport policy and programme statements to me though a number of counties continue to produce them for their own use. The outcome of the transport grant submissions for 1990-91 from all Welsh counties and the submission from Mid Glamorgan for acceptance of the second phase of the valleys rail strategy as a project of regional or national importance was announced on 29 November 1989.

Hospitals

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans have been initiated for restructuring the organisation of certain hospitals in Gwent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Gwent health authority is formulating proposals for revised management arrangements for the South Gwent health unit, which include organisation of hospitals in the unit's area.

I understand that after further local consultation the authority will submit the proposals to the Welsh Office for approval.

Fishguard Bypass

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans for a bypass at Fishguard, Pembrokeshire, on the suggested route 6 from the A40 to A487 during the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. Such a scheme might be a possibility in the longer term.

"Wales: Land of Quality"

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many companies are currently licensed to use the "Wales: Land of Quality" identity; and what is their turnover and number of employees;

(2) what income has been gained from licence fees for using the "Wales: Land of Quality" identity for selling the labels;

(3) what were the itemised costs for the design and development of the "Wales: Land of Quality" identity;

(4) what were the itemised costs of producing, distributing and promoting the "Wales: Land of Quality" identity in terms of product labels, promotional material and advertisements.

Mr. Peter Walker: The cost of producing the "Wales: Land of Quality" emblem was £60,000 resulting from a competitive tender between three firms, which represented professional fees for design and production by outside consultants and transfer of copyright to the Welsh Office.

The emblem and the positive image it conveys has been used as part of a wider strategy to help develop the Welsh economy by reinforcing the growing perception of the high quality of Welsh firms and their products. The costs incurred so far in promoting its use have been limited to the cost of writing to eligible Welsh companies (principally those awarded quality certification under BS 5750, BS 9000, MoD allied quality assurance procedure quality marks), to appropriate public agencies and to local authorities, urging them to use the emblem.

Eligible organisations are issued with a licence, for use of the emblem, and sample artwork, for which no fee is charged. Currently 72 companies and 12 agencies are licensed to use the emblem. A further 100 companies and agencies have recently been approached with a view to their adopting the emblem. (No details are available of turnover and number of employees).

GCSE Cources

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many courses were offered by the Welsh joint education committee (a) at the start of the GCSE programme and (b) at the current time.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Fifty-three courses were offered by the WJEC at the start of the GCSE programme, and 57 courses are offered at the present time.

Craft Initiative

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many extra jobs and sales have been achieved following the setting up of the craft initiative; and what were the original targets set for (a) 1988, (b) 1989, (c) 1990 and (d) 1991.

Mr. Peter Walker: The craft initiative was launched in early 1988 with the overall aim of boosting sales and jobs in the Welsh craft industry by at least 50 per cent. within three years of the start of the initiative (April 1988). An evaluation of the campaign's impact on the industry will be carried out once the final year, which starts on 1 April 1990, is complete.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which of the consultants and consultancies involved in the initial review of the craft industry have subsequently had contracts with or provided services to (a) his Department, (b) the Welsh Development Agency and (c) the Development Board for Rural Wales; and what is the worth of these contracts or services.

Mr. Peter Walker: The craft initiative review was carried out by Tony Ball Associates. Since the review was completed in 1988, Mr. Ball and his company have undertaken no paid work in connection with the craft initiative for my Department.

I am not responsible for or consulted on contracts placed by the WDA or the DBRW and have therefore asked them to provide the hon. Gentleman with the information he is seeking.

Road Improvements

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many road improvement schemes costing over £1 million have been developed in Wales in each year since 1980.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Forty-one major road improvement schemes have been completed since 1980. Completions up to January 1989 are given in table 4 of "Roads in Wales; Progress and Plans for the 1990s." Since then the following have been completed:

	Opening Date
A55 Northop by-pass	June 1989
A55 Penmaenbach-Dwygyfylchi	June 1989
A55 Penmaenmawr by-pass	October 1989
A55 Llanfairfechan by-pass	October 1989

Nine schemes are under construction as follows:

A55 Conwy Crossing
A483 Newbridge by-pass and Whitehurst Link
A55 Travellers Inn
A483 Chirk by-pass
A48 Nant-y-Caws-Coed Hirion
A470 Llanidloes by-pass
A487 Cardigan by-pass
A40 Haverfordwest Eastern by-pass II
A55 Pen-y-Clip

Fifty schemes listed in table 6 of "Roads in Wales" are in preparation; and the addition to the programme of schemes for the A5 on Anglesey has been announced.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total spending on road improvement schemes within his Department's responsibilities in the areas of (a) each district borough or city council and (b) each county council area in Wales, for each year since 1980.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information on trunk roads and motorway expenditure, for which the Welsh Office is the responsible highway authority, is not readily available analysed by district borough or city council area, or by county prior to April 1981. The available information by county is shown in the table:

Opencast Mining, Buckley

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will establish a public inquiry to enable local residents to put their case concerning the application by British Coal to begin opencast mining operations at Bannel Bridge, Buckley, Clwyd.

Mr. Grist: The application is before Clwyd county council as minerals planning authority. On the information available to him my right hon. Friend sees no reason why an application of this nature, which does not appear to raise planning issues of more than local importance, should not be decided by the council. He is unable, therefore, to agree to the hon. Gentleman's request.

Primary School Classes

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of primary classes in each of the Welsh counties now contains more than 40 children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The proportion of registered ordinary classes in maintained primary schools containing more than 40 pupils at September 1988 is shown in the table:

	Percentage
Clwyd	0·2
Dyfed	0·1
Gwent	0·1
Gwynedd	0·1
Mid Glamorgan	—
Powys	—
South Glamorgan	0·1
West Glamorgan	0·1

Water Supplies

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements have been made with water companies in Wales to ensure that water supplies are readily accessible and available to the emergency services in Wales to deal with fires and other emergencies.

Mr. Grist: This is a matter for the fire authorities concerned. Section 47 of the Water Act 1989 places a duty on a water undertaker to allow any person to take water for extinguishing fires from any of its water mains or other pipes on which a water hydrant is fixed. Section 51 places a duty on a water undertaker to cause the water in such of its water mains and other pipes that have fire hydrants fixed on them to be laid on constantly and at such a pressure as will cause the water to reach to the top of the topmost storey of every building within the undertaker's area. The obligations of a water undertaker under both sections are enforceable under section 20 by the Secretary of State; and in addition, where a water undertaker is in breach of a duty under this section, the undertaker shall be guilty of an offence and liable on conviction to a fine.

Llandudno Centre

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will reconsider the application by Aberconwy borough council to spend £11 million on an arts, leisure and conference centre for Llandudno.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn (Mr. Jones) on 15 January 1990.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will widen the remit of the Welsh Development Agency in line with that of the Development Board for Rural Wales to include social improvements and tourism facilities.

Mr. Peter Walker: No. Adequate provision already exists for aiding social and tourism facilities in areas which are not served by the Development Board for Rural Wales.

Teachers

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of vacant teaching places in each of the education authorities in Wales; and what is the number of teachers leaving the profession in Wales each year from 1985.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The number of vacant teaching places in each of the education authorities is shown in the table:

	Number[1]
Clwyd	26
Dyfed	7
Gwent	61
Gwynedd	24
Mid Glamorgan	125
Powys	16
South Glamorgan	15
West Glamorgan	12
Total Wales	286

Source: Form 618G, supplied by local education authorities at 19 January 1989 relating to full-time teacher vacancies.

Information on the number of teachers leaving the profession in Wales is not available. The number of teachers who ceased full-time teaching in the maintained schools sector for any one of a number of reasons including retirement is as follows:

Year ending	Number
31 March 1986	1,971
31 March 1987	1,879

Rural Wales

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy to urge the Welsh Development Agency and Development Board for Rural Wales to give special attention to areas of rural Dyfed and Gwynedd in the drive to revitalise the economy of rural Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: The distribution of WDA and DBRW resources to particular areas is largely a matter for the bodies themselves. Government policies are, of course, directed towards the establishment of a thriving and self-sustaining rural economy. The WDA's recently launched rural strategy and the DBRW's strategy for the 1990s and its western initiative provide clear evidence of those bodies' commitment to those policies. Dyfed and Gwynedd, along with the rest of rural Wales, will continue to benefit from the activities of the agency and the board.

Monitoring Officers

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to allow adequate time for consultation with bodies representing local authorities in Wales on the draft subsidiary legislation bringing into effect the provisions of section 5 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. Grist: As I stated in my reply to the hon. Gentleman's question on 8 February I will provide local authority associations in Wales with an advance draft of the order, bringing into effect the regulations on companies, for comment.

Acute Hospitals

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the acute hospitals with fewer than 600 beds.

Mr. Grist: The information, as at 31 December 1988, is shown as follows:

State Schools

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the state primary and secondary schools he has visited in Wales, by county, since June 1987.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Since 1 June 1987 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State or I have visited maintained schools as follows:

LEA	Primary	Secondary
Clwyd	—	2
Dyfed	1	2
Gwent	1	2
Gwynedd	2	3
Mid Glamorgan	2	3
Powys	3	—
South Glamorgan	3	1
West Glamorgan	1	1

I hope to visit a further eight maintained schools later in this school year.

Psychiatric Units

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has for the development of medium secure psychiatric units; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Efforts to make the substantive progress in this area which I believe is necessary have been hampered by the difficulty of recruiting the necessary expert advisory staff. Now that appointments have been made of the consultant forensic psychiatrist (who is also co-ordinator of forensic psychiatric services and adviser to the chief medical officer) and the senior nurse adviser to the chief nursing officer of the Welsh Office, I propose to set up an all-Wales advisory group to determine a comprehensive policy for forensic psychiatric services in the Principality and to report as speedily as possible.

The remit of the group will be as follows:

In the context of the document "Mental Illness Services —A Strategy for Wales" to develop an operational framework for the provision of a comprehensive forensic psychiatric service in Wales in the light of the needs of patients and the experience of health authorities in England of setting up similar services: identifying in particular the appropriate district and regional elements of the service, an operational policy and development programme for medium secure psychiatric units and the future role and functioning of Garth Angharad Hospital.

I shall shortly announce the membership of the group, which is to be chaired by an official of the Welsh Office NHS directorate, once consultations have been concluded.

I intend that the group should undertake its work quickly, but it is clear that it will be some time before its agreed recommendations can be implemented. I accept that further delay in providing facilities for mentally abnormal offenders in Wales is undesirable. I also note the recommendation in the third biennial report of the Mental Health Act Commission that interim arrangements should be established in Wales. This has also been recommended by the Department's specialist advisers. As a consequence, I propose that interim secure facilities should be established in north and south Wales and Clwyd and Mid Glamorgan health authorities have been invited to prepare proposals to that end. They will be assisted by the Department's specialist advisers and their proposals will be considered by the all-Wales advisory group. I have asked that, the practical arrangements including recruitment of staff permitting, efforts be made to admit the first patients in 1990-91. I do not propose to initiate any further work on the development of individual substantive medium secure psychiatric units, including a decision on provision in west Wales, or on the development of Garth Angharad hospital until the all-Wales advisory group's report is to hand.

It is my expectation, subject to consultation on the report of the all-Wales advisory group, that these interim secure arrangements will be subsumed within the framework of the comprehensive forensic psychiatric services which will be formulated by the advisory group and thereby enable us to provide in the Principality as speedily as possible a service of excellence based on the experience of best practice gained in other parts of the United Kingdom.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Community Service

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what stricter elements he will be introducing into community service orders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: We introduced the National Standards for Community Service Orders on 1 April 1989. These were designed to ensure that offenders in all areas do work which is demanding and seen to be of use to the community and that the discipline of the order is maintained. The White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" contains proposals for combining community service and probation orders, and for requiring offenders on community service to report to their supervisor at any time when the supervisor considers this necessary to secure compliance with the order.

Police Officers (Ports)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the manning of ports by police officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Waddington: There are continuing discussions on the policing of ports between the Home Office and the police forces and authorities concerned.

EC Nationals (Right of Residence)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many EEC nationals and their dependants will have the right of residence in the United Kingdom in consequence of the right of residence directive; and if he will make a statement on the implications for the United Kingdom of the minute of the Council relating to the further extension of the definitions of relative.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is not possible to predict with any precision the numbers of people who will benefit from the proposed right of residence directives. There is, however, no evidence to suggest that the numbers seeking to take advantage of them will be very large.

The Government have not agreed to any widening of the definition of dependants. As revised by the Council, in the light of concerns expressed by the United Kingdom and a number of other member states, the proposed directives will specify precisely to which family members they apply and will not be linked to the definition in other Community legislation dealing with the family members of other groups such as workers.

The Council and the Commission have agreed that the definition of family members in the new right of residence directives may be reviewed in the light of the proposal for a regulation amending article 10 of regulation 1612/68. The position of the United Kingdom and of a number of other member states in relation to that proposal is, however, reserved.

If a change were nevertheless made to regulation 1612/68, it is likely that a corresponding change would be sought to the new right of residence directives. The Council minute does not, however, commit any member state to accepting any such change, and any proposal to that effect would be for separate negotiation.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will meet representatives of the Pensioners Association to discuss the question of free television licences for all pensioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to his question on 7 December 1989 at column 470. As he knows, the question has been raised many times before, and I doubt whether further discussion would serve any strong purpose.

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to amend the concessionary television licence regulations.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Basildon Courthouse

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the new courthouse in Basildon will be opened.

Mr. John Patten: The courthouse is due to be completed and ready for use in October 1990, and the official opening will take place in November 1990.

Drugs

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of juveniles arrested for drug-related offences in 1989.

Mr. John Patten: Information is not held centrally on the number of arrests by age of offender. However, in England and Wales in 1988, 721 juveniles were cautioned for drug offences and 234 juveniles were prosecuted: of those prosecuted 181 were found guilty.

Information for 1989 will not be available until the autumn of 1990.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contribution his Department will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. John Patten: None.

War Crimes

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the individuals identified in the unpublished part II of the war crimes report are currently alive and resident in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: The war crimes inquiry set out in chapter 9 of its published report (Cm 744) its information about whether individuals in respect of whom it had received allegations were alive and resident in this country.

"How You Can Help the Police"

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many copies of the pamphlet "How You Can Help the Police" have been distributed; and what percentage of those distributed elicited a written or telephoned response.

Mr. John Patten: Between May 1988 and February 1990 1·1 million copies of the leaflet "Victims of Crime —how you can help the police to help you" were issued. The Home Office does not have statistics on the responses.

Forensic Science

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff have left the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory, other than for normal retirement, in each year of the past 10 years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that since 1982 (the earliest year for which the information is available) the following staff of the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory have left for reasons other than normal retirement, and, in the case of administrative staff, career transfer to other parts of the Metropolitan police:

	Scientists	Administrative staff
1982	7	[1]4
1983	17	4
1984	[2]13	7
1985	[3]11	15
1986	8	[4]11
1987	12	15
1988	12	9
1989	18	[5]10
1990	1	—

Note:
The figures for scientists include those who have transferred to other Government Departments on promotion.
[1] Includes one officer who died.
[2] Includes one officer who retired on medical grounds and one who died.
[3] Includes one officer who left at the end of a one-year contract.
[4] Includes one officer whose employment was terminated.
[5] Includes one officer who died.

National Association of Probation Officers

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met representatives of the National Association of Probation Officers; what matters were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The last such meeting with the Home Secretary took place on 3 August 1987, when my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd) met representatives of the National Association of Probation Officers to discuss the document "Probation—The Next Five Years". I last met NAPO on 4 July 1988 to discuss the forthcoming Green Paper "Punishment, Custody and the Community". It has not requested a meeting since that date. Home Office officials have frequent meetings with NAPO.

West Midlands Police

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has anything to add to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 304, concerning Detective Sergeant Morton.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The answers I gave on 25 January and 1 February referred only to those officers who conducted interviews with those later convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on the progress of his electronic tagging programme.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to questions from the hon. Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Bermingham) on 9 February at column 823.

Charities

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many charities registered with the Charity Commission have failed to submit accounts for the last financial year; and if he will express this figure as a percentage of the total number of charities registered with the commission;

(2) how many of the charities registered with the Charity Commission have submitted annual accounts that have been professionally audited.

Mr. John Patten: Some 12 per cent. of registered charities submitted accounts to the commission in 1989. However, under the Charities Act 1960 only charities possessing a permanent endowment are required to submit accounts annually without request. In addition, some of these are excepted by order or regulations from the need to submit accounts. In the circumstances it is not possible to say how many charities obliged to submit accounts yearly failed to do so.

Information about the number of registered charities which have submitted annual accounts that have been professionally audited is not readily available. There is at present no general statutory obligation for the accounts of a charity to be professionally audited, although those charities which are companies have to be audited under companies' legislation. In addition, some charities are required to have their accounts audited by their own governing instruments; and the Charity Commissioners may, at their own expense, order an audit of a charity's accounts.

Our proposals for reforming the law on the submission and auditing of charity accounts are contained in chapter 4 of the White Paper "Charities: A Framework for the Future" published in May last year. Our main proposals are that in future all registered charities should be required to submit proper accounts annually to the Commission; that trustees should be obliged to make copies of their charity's statement of account available to the public on request; and that large charities should be required to have their accounts professionally audited.

Channel Tunnel

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what immigration control arrangements will be made for the Channel tunnel when it opens.

Mr. Waddington: For Eurotunnel shuttle train journeys ending at Cheriton, inward controls are planned at Coquelles. For through trains proceeding beyond London the Channel Tunnel Act provides for immigration controls to be carried out on train subject to the provision of satisfactory facilities to enable the controls to be exercised on those trains and to the payment of any fees or charges that may be imposed. For trains terminating in London I have now decided that passport checks should normally take place on the trains subject to the payment by British Rail of the additional costs involved and to the provision of satisfactory accommodation and control arrangements on board the trains and at the stations. These matters are being discussed with the train operators.

Refugees, Azad Kashmir

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure those from Azad Kashmir who seek political asylum in the United Kingdom are interviewed before decisions are taken on such applications.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 February 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his question of 5 December 1989 at column 182. With the exception of those whose applications are based solely on links with the Pakistan People's party, asylum applicants from Azad Kashmir would be interviewed before a refusal decision was taken.

Underground (Fire Inspections)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what routine fire inspections of underground system railways stations are required by the relevant statutory authorities in respect of London Regional Transport, the Paris Metro and RER and the Berlin U-Bahn.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Fire precautions on the London Underground are controlled by regulations made under the Fire Precautions Act 1971 which are enforced by the London fire and civil defence authority.

The regulations themselves do not specify what fire inspections should take place. London Underground Ltd. has, however, applied to the authority for temporary exemption from certain provisions of the regulations which came into force on 1 January 1990. As a condition of granting the exemptions, the LFCDA has required LUL to carry out regular inspections of high-risk areas in particular Underground stations. These inspections will continue until LUL complies with regulations and the exemptions can be lifted.

I have no information on the routine inspections required by the relevant statutory authorities in respect of the Paris Metro and RER, or the Berlin U-Bahn.

Batons

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces in the United Kingdom are at present conducting field trials of martial-arts type batons for the control of civilians.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 12 February 1990]: I understand that the West Midlands police have acquired 100 batons which are inflexible cylindrical rods about 6 in long and five eighths of an inch in diameter. These are being made available to trained officers in a pilot scheme running until the end of March. As with any other piece of equipment these batons may be used only in accordance with the principle of section 3 of the Criminal Law Act 1967 which requires the use of no more force than is reasonable in the circumstances.

Civil Defence

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total amount of civil defence grant aid for (a) staff costs, (b) building work and (c) other costs in the financial years from 1983-84 to 1988-89 and projected for 1989-90, received by each London borough.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 8 January, c. 471-74]: I am sorry to say that there was an error of transposition in the table headed "Civil Defence Grant Aid Received by London Boroughs 1986-87". The sums of £29,279 and £94,582 shown in the "Staff" column for Richmond and Waltham Forest respectively should have appeared in the "Building" column. The amended table reads as follows:

Civil Defence Grant Aid Received by London Boroughs 1986-87

TRANSPORT

London Taxis

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many registered London black cabs there are; what this number is as a percentage of the population of London; and what information he has on the comparable figures in capital cities of other industrial countries.

Mr. Portillo: Statistics on foreign taxi operations are not kept by the Department. However, I have obtained the following information:

City	Number of licensed taxis	Population	Taxis as a percentage of population
London	15,800	7,200,000	0·22
Washington	7,000	3,100,000	0·23
Paris	14,300	5,500,000	0·26
Tokyo	50,300	11,900,000	0·42

Figures may not be on a comparable basis.

Road-building

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many acres of land in public ownership have been utilised for the building of motorways and trunk roads; and what is his estimate of such building over the next five years.

Mr. Atkins: I regret that the information requested cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

HGV Drivers

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will outline the steps he intends to take to ensure that the drivers' hours and rest period regulations, vehicle weights and dimensions are conformed to by foreign international hauliers within the United Kingdom, following elimination of frontier checks.

Mr. Atkins: Traffic examiners will continue to carry out selective checks on United Kingdom and foreign heavy goods vehicles at ports and inland sites. Checks will be carried out without discrimination of vehicles or drivers. Vehicles will be weighed in the ports using more automated weighing systems being installed for this purpose.

Drivers' tachograph charts will be checked to ensure that drivers are complying with the legal requirements for driving limits and rest. Vehicle dimensions will also be checked to ensure that they conform with the requirements of United Kingdom law.

Single Market

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he intends to take to ensure that the introduction of the single European market does not have an adverse effect on the environment.

Mr. Atkins: All member states of the European Community and the Commission itself are mindful of the need to protect the environment and are taking account of environmental aspects in all proposals for new Community measures. A number of specific measures to protect the environment have already been agreed, in particular controls on vehicle emisions. In so far as the introduction of the single European market will encourage greater efficiency in the use of transport, it will have a beneficial effect on the environment.

British Rail

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the income from the sale of British Rail land and property in 1989.

Mr. Portillo: The income for the 1988-89 financial year was £263·5 million.

Road Maintenance

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the planned expenditure for the maintenance of motorways and trunk roads in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The information is as follows:

£ million (cash)

Year	Capital expenditure	Current expenditure
1985-86	164	77
1986-87	218	93
1987-88	264	84
1988-89	190	102
1989-90	337	99

Notes:

1. All figures are for national roads, England.
2. 1985-86 to 1988-89 are outturn figures; 1989-90 revised vote provision.
3. Capital expenditure comprises renewal of roads, and renewal and strengthening of bridges including the Severn Bridge.
4. Current expenditure is net of receipts (tolls, damage claims, administration and hire charges and VAT refunds).

Outturn expenditure was close to or above original planned targets in each year except 1988-89, when it was necessary to transfer some capital maintenance resources to new construction to avoid an overspend on the roads vote as a whole in the face of increased construction prices and faster progress with some new road schemes.

Traffic Flow

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to improve traffic flow from all directions by removing the traffic lights recently installed at the junction of St. George's road and Garden way, London; at what level the decision to instal them was taken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The decision to instal the traffic lights was taken by Southwark borough council following consultation with the traffic control systems unit. The Department of Transport was notified of the council's intention. The traffic lights and pelican crossings installed by the council are designed to improve safety for pedestrians. I see no reason to intervene.

Vehicle Excise Tax

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many reports of vehicle excise tax evasion were processed during 1989; and how many summonses for non-payment were issued.

Mr. Atkins: During 1989, 875,639 vehicle excise duty evasion reports were actioned by the Department. Summonses were issued against 192,813 evaders. In addition, 184,131 out-of-court settlements were paid by evaders.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many civil servants are currently employed to detect vehicle excise duty offenders.

Mr. Atkins: Outside London, vehicle excise duty enforcement is conducted from the Department's network of vehicle registration offices, where staff also deal with vehicle licensing and registration. A total of 984 man-years was allocated to enforcement in 1989-90, taking those offices, the London enforcement office, and staff at DVLC together.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in which geographical areas publicity campaigns were mounted to encourage vehicle owners to tax their vehicles during 1989; and at what cost to public funds.

Mr. Atkins: During 1989 vehicle excise duty enforcement campaigns were held in the following geographical areas:

Devon and Cornwall
Kent
Leicestershire
London
Sussex
Central Scotland
Humberside
South Yorkshire
Staffordshire
West Mercia
Hertfordshire
Dumfries and Galloway
Dorset
Derbyshire
Nottinghamshire
Surrey
Fife
Essex
West Yorkshire
Northern (Highlands)
West Midlands
Bedfordshire
Thames Valley

The publicity costs of the 1989 campaign programme were £776,180. In addition the Department's staff costs, including the prosecution of evaders caught during campaigns, totalled £170,000. Police costs are not available.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the average cost to public funds of prosecuting non-payment of vehicle excise duty in 1989; and how much was recovered by orders of courts to prosecution costs.

Mr. Atkins: The estimated average cost to public funds of prosecuting a vehicle excise duty evader in 1989 was £21·78. The amount ordered by courts in finds, back duty orders and costs amounted to £17·5 million.

Docks

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has commissioned or undertaken into (a) employment prospects on the docks and (b) company liquidations before arriving at his estimate that the Dock Work Act 1989 will lead to 1,500 to 2,000 redundancies and cost £25 million over the full period, Official Report, Standing Committee A, 16 May 1989, column 537.

Mr. McLoughlin: The estimate of redundancies among registered dock workers was the best that could be made in all the circumstances. As my hon. Friend the Minister of State emphasised to the Standing Committee, no one could tell with any precision what would happen when the dock labour scheme ended; the figures were between an estimate and a guess.

Manchester Airport

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe, 11 December 1989, Official Report, column 486, what further negotiations his Department has had on additional transatlantic flights to and from Manchester airport since 1 December 1989; what has been the outcome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: A round of talks was held in London on 29 November to 1 December 1989. My right hon. Friend went himself to Washington to meet the US Secretary of Transportation, Mr. Skinner, on 11 and 12 January. Negotiations continue, and my right hon. Friend hopes to welcome Mr. Skinner here soon for further talks.

Regional Airports

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he intends to discuss transatlantic flights from Glasgow airport with the United States Secretary of Transportation; and when he next intends to meet the United States Secretary of Transportation;

(2) if he will list the flights from United Kingdom airports outside London which his Department expects to discuss at the next meeting with the United States Secretary of Transportation.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend hopes to welcome the United States Secretary of Transportation here soon, but no date or agenda has been settled. However, it is perhaps unlikely that the United States side will wish to raise the question of services from Glasgow, since it already has extensive unused rights to that airport.

Scottish Airports

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in which calendar month he expects to announce his decision on the review of Scottish airports policy.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend hopes to be able to announce his decision next month.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail about the minimum period of time needed to manufacture the trains necessary for the direct link from the Channel tunnel to the north of England and Scotland.

Mr. Portillo: This is a commercial matter for the railways concerned. I understand that BR is planning for through trains to be in operation when the Channel tunnel opens.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether British Rail has sought approval for investment in the trains necessary for the direct link from the Channel tunnel to the north of England and Scotland.

Mr. Portillo: No. British Rail has published its proposals for through services but has not yet submitted the application to make the necessary investment.

DEFENCE

Search and Rescue Helicopters

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discretion is given to the co-ordinating centre at RAF Pitreavie to disregard the restriction on night-time flying search and rescue operations from RAF Leuchars.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The operating procedures of the rescue co-ordination centre at RAF Pitreavie state that the RAF Leuchars flight will operate at night only if the rescue operation in question began during daylight hours, or in the event of a major disaster.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he intends to review the current restriction on night-flying operations on search and rescue helicopters operating from RAF Leuchars.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) at what time on Monday 12 February the request from Ninewells hospital, Dundee, for the assistance of a search and rescue helicopter, was received by the co-ordinating centre at RAF Pitreavie;

(2) why a search and rescue helicopter from RAF Leuchars was not scrambled on Monday 12 February in response to the request for assistance from Ninewells hospital, Dundee.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: At 7.42 pm on Monday 12 February 1990, the rescue co-ordination centre at RAF Pitreavie received a request for a helicopter to airlift a man suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning from Ninewells hospital in Dundee to a specialist medical unit in Aberdeen. By this time of day RAF Leuchers had ceased operations. The duty controller informed the hospital that any helicopter would have to come from one of three bases; RAF Lossiemouth, RAF Boulmer or HMS Gannett. The request for assistance was therefore withdrawn and the patient was transferred by road.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set up an inquiry to establish whether there is an abnormal level of childhood leukaemia among the children of nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I understand that the national radiological protection board is examining the possibility of a nationwide study of leukaemia in 0 to 25-year-olds in th United Kingdom, in which the children of nuclear test veterans might be included.

EMPLOYMENT

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on the number of accountancy firms that have failed to meet statutory quotas on the recruitment of disabled persons.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is not held centrally and could be assembled only at disproportionate cost.

Factory Inspectors

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many factory premises are registered with the factory inspectorate in each of the Health and Safety Executive's geographical areas and were registered with the factory inspectorate in each of the last five years; and for each Health and Safety Executive area, how many trained factory inspectors were employed in each area in each of the last five years.

Mr. Nicholls: The following table gives details of fixed premises (including factories) registered with the factory inspectorate in each of the Health and Safety Executive's areas at 31 March for the last three years. Information for March 1990 is not yet available. Other information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Numbers of trained factory inspectors employed in each area for the last five years are included in the table.

Employment Training

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has to improve employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: Employment training is successfully meeting its objective of helping large numbers of unemployed people to get the skills and experience they need to obtain jobs. Its success will be further reinforced through the introduction of training and enterprise councils (TECs) which will have the flexibility to make the programme even more responsive to the training needs of both individuals and employers within local labour markets.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the numbers of unemployed entering employment training for each of the categories (a) six months to 12 months, (b) one year to two years, (c) two years to three years, (d) three years to four years, (e) four years to five years and (f) over five years between September 1988 and December 1989 for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The information is not available in the form requested. Of those people entering employment training between September 1988 and December 1989, 169,000 had been unemployed for between six and 12 months, 72,000 for between one and two years and 186,000 for over two years.

Sick Pay

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the implications for British legislation of the European Court of Justice decision in Rinner-Kuhn v. FWW Spezial-Gebaudereinigung GmbH and Co. of 13 July 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: This is a decision which arises from German domestic legislation on the payment of sick pay. Ministers will have to consider whether it has any implications for the law in this country.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to ensure that at least one person on each training and enterprise council has experience of working with young people with special needs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Training and enterprise councils (TECs) are independent companies which will appoint their own board members subject to the criteria laid down by my Department.

However, to be effective and credible TECs will need to establish local partnerships and collaborate with a wide range of local interests and organisations including bodies representing young people with special needs.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the contracts with training and enterprise councils will include national targets to guarantee the quality of training for young people with special needs under the new arrangements for youth training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Each training and enterprise council (TEC) will be set an agreed performance-related target for the number of people with special needs who start training. Each TEC will in addition need to set out in its business plan proposals for ensuring that those young people in its area with special needs are properly identified and assessed and given access to quality training leading to qualifications appropriate to their individual levels of ability.

Youth Training

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the funding arrangements for youth training will include incentives to ensure quality training for young people with special needs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Youth training funding arrangements will include incentives to ensure quality training for young people with special needs.

Each young person identified as having special training needs will have an endorsement certificate which will be lodged with the training provider. The provider will then be obliged by contract to provide appropriate training and the Training Agency's area office or the training and enterprise council (local enterprise company in Scotland) will have regard to that in determining the appropriate funding levels.

In addition, at least 10 per cent. of each TEC's youth training budget will be paid on qualifications achieved. Those who gain national vocational qualifications (NVQs) at level II (or equivalent as determined by the Training Agency) will count towards TECs' output-related funding. In addition, level I (or equivalent) NVQs gained by young people with particularly severe special training needs will also count.

TECs will also be eligible for a 2 per cent. performance bonus. Criteria for earning this will include NVQs as for output-related funding, the percentage of starts on youth training of young people with disabilities, members of ethnic minority groups and, where appropriate, people from the inner cities.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements will be made to ensure that the interests and views of organisations and agencies providing training for young people with special needs are represented on training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Each training and enterprise council (TEC) will be expected to consult and work closely with appropriate organisations and agencies to ensure that the needs of disadvantaged young people in their area are met. A number of TECs are establishing sub-groups to take account of different interests in the community.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from Barnardo's about employment and training of young people with a mental handicap; what reply he has given; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department received representations from Barnardos last year raising a number of issues about the employment and training of young people with special needs, particularly in relation to the setting up of training and enterprise councils (TECs).

My Department gave assurances that TECs will be expected to set out in their plans proposals on how they intend to provide for young people with special needs. These proposals will be looked at very carefully before plans are approved.

Employment Centres

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list (a) employment rehabilitation centres and (b) asset centres nationally; and if he will list the services they provide.

Mr. Eggar: A list of the employment rehabilitation service's employment rehabilitation centres and asset centres is given in the table.

The employment rehabilitation service offers a wide range of services including assessment, rehabilitation and preparatory training, practical experience with employers or in workshops, help in finding jobs and access to open learning materials. Employment rehabilitation centres offer the full range of services. Asset centres are similar but do not operate workshops.

(a) Employment Rehabilitation Centres

Bellshill	Leeds
Bristol	Long Eaton
Croydon	Plymouth
Egham	Preston
Humberside	Birmingham
Liverpool	Coventry
North Staffs	Edinburgh
Portsmouth	Glasgow
South Gosforth	Leicester
Billingham	Manchester
Cardiff	Port Talbot
Dundee	Sheffield
Garston Manor

(b) Asset Centres

East Ham	West London
Birtley	Medway
Exeter	Wrexham

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Stretford of 14 February, if he will identify on whose initiative the employment of two occupational psychologists by Grand Metropolitan community services at Exeter asset centre was undertaken.

Mr. Eggar: The employment of two occupational psychologists at Exeter asset centre was a joint initiative by the Training Agency and Grand Metropolitan community services.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the actual and percentage fall in unemployment in the Birkenhead constituency for 1981; and what is the comparable figure overall in other inner city areas.

Mr. Nicholls: Unemployment figures for parliamentary constituencies and the 57 local authority districts in England within which the Government target inner city aid are not available before June 1983. The following table shows the number of unemployed claimants at that date compared with the latest available figures.

Unemployed claimants (unadjusted)

	June 1983	January 1990	Change	Percentage change
UPAs[1]	1,130,512	658,947	−471,565	−41·7
Birkenhead parliamentary constituency	8,726	6,479	−2,247	−25·8

Note:
Comparisons over time are affected by changes to the count over the period as well as seasonal influences.

Deptford Skillcentre

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the development value of the site of the Deptford skillcentre now that the sale of the Skills Training Agency is completed.

Mr. Nicholls: Terms for the sale of the training business at Deptford skillcentre have been agreed with Astra Training Services Limited, the management buy-out team. Astra plans to lease part of the site, and my right hon. and learned Friend intends to offer the property for sale via open market competition subject to that lease. My right hon. and learned Friend has taken professional advice on the value of the site; the sale of the site has not yet been completed and it would be inappropriate to reveal a valuation.

Disabled People (Employment Quotas)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list how many firms received quota exemption permits under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944 for the latest date for which information is available; and how many of these firms held quota exemption permits for longer than two years, five years and 10 years, respectively.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 20 February 1990]: On 1 June 1989, the latest date for which information is available, the number of firms issued with quota permits was 18,530. Permits are issued for a maximum period of six months. Information on the length of time for which individual employers have held a continuous series of such permits is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if, pursuant to his answer of 13 February to the hon. Member for Stretford, he will list (a) the number of firms not meeting their quota obligations under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944 for every year since 1979 to the latest available date and (b) the number of firms not meeting their quota obligations and without permits, for each year from 1979 to the latest available date.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 20 February 1990]: The information requested is as follows:

Year ending	Firms not employing the quota of 3 per cent. people with disabilities	Firms not employing the quota of 3 per cent. people with disabilities and which are without permits
1 June 1979	31,234	8,822
1 June 1980	30,226	8,225
1 June 1981	29,073	7,890
1 June 1982	28,828	9,032
1 June 1983	25,681	7,145
1 June 1984	25,550	6,781
1 June 1985	25,501	6,829
1 June 1986	24,643	5,803
1 June 1987	24,593	6,016
1 June 1988	24,705	6,111
1 June 1989	24,700	6,170

Employers who are below quota and without permits have not necessarily committed an offence unless they have engaged people who were not registered as disabled when a suitable registered disabled person was available.

HEALTH

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will identify the revenue costs of alternative arrangements for each Thames regional health authority of the ambulance dispute to date.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: These costs have not yet been assessed by the authorities concerned.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what has been the cost of using the army, police and voluntary bodies on ambulance duties on (a) a daily basis, (b) a weekly basis and (c) total cost;

(2) what has been the cost to date of using the Army and police in each health authority in which the Army or police began performing ambulance duties.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 8 January 1990]: It is too soon for all these costs to have been assessed. The total cost for the provision of military assistance up to the end of December 1989 was £1·8 million. Figures for the costs of police assistance have not yet been assessed by all the authorities concerned.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to date of (a) the police and (b) the Army doing ambulance duties; and what is the estimated daily cost.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 15 January 1990]: Costs have not yet all been assessed. The total cost for the provision of military assistance up to the end of December 1989 was £1·8 million. There are some offsetting savings from the normal service. The cost of police assistance has not yet been assessed by all the authorities concerned.

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the normal weekly cost of the emergency service (a) to Coventry district health authority and (b) to each county.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We do not collect this detailed local information centrally.

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the weekly cost of (a) police assistance, (b) Army assistance, and (c) the emergency ambulance service that is still being incurred in each county.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: This information is not available. However, the cost for the provision of military assistance to the end of December 1989 was £1·8 million. The cost of police assistance has not yet been assessed by all the authorities concerned.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he is considering making tests on blood donations to ensure that they are not contaminated by Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

Mr. Freeman: There is no blood test to detect the causative agent of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. However, there is no evidence that this rare disease can be transmitted via blood.

Babies (Abduction)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by year and by regional health authority for the last 10 years the number of cases of babies that have been abducted while in hospital.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We do not hold information on such incidents centrally.

The Department has commended to all health authorities a security manual prepared by NAHA. Copies were distributed to the NHS in 1984. The manual includes advice on the issue of personal identification badges to all members of staff.

In the maternity field, the health building note on maternity departments refers specifically to the need to consider the safety of babies temporarily unattended in postnatal areas or neonatal units. The design briefing states that accommodation for babies must be sited so as to be easily visible from the staff base.

Nurses

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many appeals of nurses concerning their clinical grading (a) have been submitted, (b) have been heard and (c) await decision; and how many have been upgraded for each district health authority in the west midlands area.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how self-governing trusts will be asked to alter employees' contracts, conditions of service and superannuation rights;

(2) whether self-governing trusts will be allowed to opt out of the Whitley system;

(3) whether the employment conditions and employment protection rights for self-governing hospital trusts will differ from the present arrangements in the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Staff who transfer from health authority to NHS trust employment will retain their existing contracts and all rights arising from them, subject to the substitution of the new employer for the old and any consequential technical changes. It will be open to the NHS trusts to seek to introduce changes in existing contracts at any time after transfer. In doing so, they will be free to decide whether to continue to adopt Whitley council conditions or to make alternative arrangements if they so wish.

Employees of NHS trusts will be eligible to stay in or to join the NHS superannuation scheme. However, subject to the passage of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill, trusts will have the power to establish their own arrangements for providing pensions if they wish.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to introduce any change to the ratio of trained nurses coupled with untrained nurses in the National Health Service; and whether self-governing trusts will be under any obligation to maintain any given ratio.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department does not lay down any ratio of qualified to other nursing staff in the National Health Service. The planning and setting of staffing establishments is a matter for individual health authorities to determine in the light of local needs and priorities. National Health Service trusts will be free to determine the number, skill and grade mix of nurses they employ.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if self-governing hospital trusts may decide to give up self-governing status.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if there will be any changes to the skill and grade mix of nurses who work in the self-governing trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: NHS trusts will be free to determine the number, skill and grade mix of nurses they employ.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes are planned for the education and training of nurses; what requirements of education and training he intends to impose on self-governing trusts; and whether he intends to allow competition in training.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We intend to ensure that NHS trusts participate in the training of key professional staff, including nurses. Detailed proposals for dealing with the education and training implications of the White Paper "Working for Patients" are set out in working paper 10, a copy of which is in the Library. This document has been the subject of a widespread consultation exercise, which ended on 31 January 1990. The comments which we have received are being carefully studied: we shall announce decisions as soon as possible.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what control his Department will exercise over the accounts of self-governing hospital trusts; what will be the position should self-governing trusts go bankrupt; and who will be accountable to Government for providing continuity of health service in this eventuality.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: NHS trusts will be required to keep proper accounting records and to draw up accounts each year as directed by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State with the approval of the Treasury.

Should a trust become financially unsound and the services which it provides still be needed, it might be necessary to transfer responsibility for managing those services to another trust or to a health authority. In the event of the financial failure of any provider unit, district health authorities will be responsible for securing continued provision of health care for their residents.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what industrial relations rights Royal College of Nursing stewards will have in the self-governing trusts; and what structure of industrial relations he intends to propose for them.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: NHS trusts will be free to make their own arrangements for union representation for their employees.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information systems need to be installed to set up self-governing trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: NHS trusts will be expected to have information systems which are adequate for the effective and efficient management of the trust.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what rights staff will have to opt out of self-governing trusts and to safeguard their employment, pension and other rights in this event.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Staff of a hospital which is to become an NHS trust will transfer to employment by the trust unless other arrangements have been individually agreed with them beforehand. A member of staff who is transferred to trust employment will retain the right to terminate his contract of employment if a substantial change to his detriment in his working conditions is brought about by the transfer; no such right will arise solely by reason of the change in employer on transfer.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether all staff affected by the establishment of a self-governing trust will be eventually transferred to the self-governing trust.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All staff who were employed at a unit which is to become an NHS trust will transfer to employment by the trust from the date when it becomes fully operational unless other arrangements have been individually agreed beforehand. Special arrangements will be made for splitting the contracts of employees who work partly in a unit which is to become a trust but will continue to work partly in other units.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) trade unions, (b) local government, (c) local business, (d) medical representatives and (e) nursing representatives will be represented on the boards of self-governing trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All NHS trusts which are established to manage hospital or community health services will have executive medical and nursing directors on their boards. The non-executive directors on NHS trust boards will be chosen for the personal contribution they can make to the effective management of the trust and not to represent any interest group. In the case of trusts with a significant teaching commitment one of the non-executive directors will be drawn from the relevant university or medical or dental school.

Abortions

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a breakdown of the numbers and percentages of abortions performed on pregnancies of 18 weeks' or more gestation under the statutory grounds 2 (alone) and 3 (with or without 2) by (a) age of mother, (b) marital status, (c) numbers of previous children, (d) number of previous abortions and (e) whether performed in the public or private sectors, distinguishing in each category between residents and non-residents.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table:

Number of abortions performed in England and Wales, 1988 by statutory grounds: 2 (alone) and 3 (with or without 2), by (a) age of mother, (b) marital status, (c) number of previous children, (d) number of previous abortions, and (e) category of premises, for residents and also non-residents, at 18 weeks and over gestation.

1. The continuance of pregnancy would involve risk to the life of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated.
2. The continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk of injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated.
3. The continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk or injury to the physical or mental health of any existing child(ren) in the family of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated.
4. There is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped.
5. To save the life of the pregnant mother.
6. To prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the child.

Note:—The notification form for abortions carried out under the Abortion Act 1967 requires information about previous abortions to the woman concerned to be recorded, distinguishing between spontaneous miscarriages and legal terminations.
Notifications having at least one previous spontaneous miscarriage and also at least one previous legal termination, and women having more than one abortion under the Act in 1988 will be counted more than once in the statistics.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the numbers of abortions performed on pregnancies of 18 weeks' and more gestation under statutory grounds 2 (alone) and 3 (with or without 2) which were done by (a) prostaglandins and (b) D and E, distinguishing in each category between residents and non-residents.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is shown in the table:

Child Care

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals the Government have to promote child care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The range and level of day care services for pre-school children and after school and holiday schemes for school-age children is best decided locally by parents, voluntary bodies, employers, local authorities and the private sector.

NHS Reform

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what criteria are being used for establishing asset management and capital charging within the National Health Service;

(2) what progress there has been in establishing efficient asset management and capital charging in the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The intention to introduce a system of capital charges was announced in the White Paper, "Working for Patients". Each hospital will be required to calculate and pay capital charges to its regional health authority from April 1991. The capital charge represents depreciation and interest calculated on the value of assets held. In order to facilitate the introduction of this scheme health authorities are being required to compile, value and maintain asset registers with effect from April 1990. This will enable the capital charging scheme to operate on a shadow basis during 1990-91. Managers will begin to understand the value of assets held and will, under the full scheme, have direct incentives to make best use of assets in order to minimise capital charges. In this way the capital charge scheme will be an impetus to good asset management, which the Government have been encouraging in the NHS in recent years.

Hormone Replacement Therapy

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to fund research into the costs and benefits of hormone replacement therapy and of screening techniques for detecting osteoporosis; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department of Health is funding two research projects at a total cost of around £128,000, which will examine the costs and benefits of hormone replacement therapy (HRT) and screening techniques for detecting osteoporosis before it is severe enough to cause symptoms.

Professor Martin Vessey of Oxford University will be examining the cost-effectiveness of HRT in relation to the menopause. HRT, which is already available on the NHS, has a role to play in the treatment of menopausal symptoms and the prevention of osteoporosis.

Dr. John Kanis of Sheffield university will be conducting a critical review of screening techniques for detecting osteoporosis—a disease of the weakening of the bones which primarily, but not exclusively, affects women after the menopause—before it is severe enough to give rise to symptoms.

The Department will be meeting the full costs of both studies. Professor Vessey's two-year project and Dr. Kanis' one-year project are expected to be completed by 31 January 1992 and 31 March 1991 respectively.

Menopausal symptoms or the development, later, of severe osteoporosis cause misery to many women in this country. For some of the symptoms can be very severe. We hope that these studies will enable us to find ways to improve the quality of life for women.

Opticians

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the dates of the ophthalmic service committee hearings referred to in the Minister's written answer of 5 July 1988, Official Report, column 506; and what were the dates of the endorsements of the ophthalmic committee's decisions by Manchester family practitioner committee.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The ophthalmic service committee of the Manchester family practitioner committee considered the complaints without a hearing at its meeting on 20 April 1988. The FPC endorsed its recommendations on 25 May 1988.

Leukaemia

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, following the announcement of 15 February about possible leukaemia and lymphonia links between those working at Sellafield and their children, when he expects the consideration of the case control study by COMARE at AWE Aldermaston and Burghfield to be completed.

Mr. Freeman: The Department of Health funded the case control study in west Berkshire and north Hampshire in 1987 for three years; we therefore expect it to be completed by the end of this year. The results of the study should be available shortly after completion.

Food Imports (Holland)

Mr. Oakes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what tests are generally applied to food imported from Holland.

Mr. Freeman: At present all foods imported to the United Kingdom, regardless of the country of origin, are subject to the Imported Food Regulations 1984, which require food to be sound, wholesome and fit for human consumption. Examinations, as appropriate, to ensure that food meet these criteria are carried out by local enforcement authorities, including port health authorities.

Cervical Smear Tests

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average waiting time for the results of a cervical smear test.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not available in the form requested. Health authorities must aim to return the results of cervical smear tests to the doctor who undertook them within one month. As at December 1989, the latest available date, around 80 per cent. of health authorities were meeting this target. The average processing time of those districts which were failing to meet this target was 6·2 weeks.

Food Poisoning, London

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will specify for each London borough in each of the last 10 years (a) the number of cases of food poisoning and (b) the percentage increase of such cases over this 10-year period.

Mr. Freeman: The information is given in the table:

Ambulance Services (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Cabom: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost per day to each of the health authorities operating in south Yorkshire for the ambulance services being provided by the police, armed services and voluntary organisations.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 15 January 1990]: The cost of military assistance in individual regional health authorities has not yet been assessed. The cost of assistance by police and voluntary organisations in individual district health authorities is not available centrally. I would refer the hon. Member to the Trent regional health authority.

Cash Limits

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any changes will be made in the cash limits and running costs limit of his Department for 1989-90.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [pursuant to her reply, 29 January 1990, c. 42-43]: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XIV, vote 3, Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England, will be increased by £87,000 (from £697,307,000 to £697,394,000) reflecting a transfer from class XV, vote 7, Department of Social Security, administration and miscellaneous services as a contribution to the cost of grants to voluntary organisations and local authorities towards the cost of providing temporary accommodation for homeless people during periods of severe weather. The running cost limit for the Department remains unchanged at £244,259,000.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishing Fleet

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans there are to reduce the fishing effort in the North sea; what are the implications for fishing in the western waters of the United Kingdom; whether he has any proposals to reduce the overall size of the United Kingdom fishing fleet; and if he will make a statement about the displacement of part of the United Kingdom fleets in the North sea to the Irish sea.

Mr. Curry: I hope to make an announcement soon on arrangements to reduce North sea haddock fishing in 1990. Access to pressure stocks and non-pressure stocks in other sea areas will remain restricted to those vessels holding appropriate licences. I also hope shortly to announce new quota management arrangements which will begin the process of bringing the size of the fleet into line with the available fishing opportunities.

Poultry

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has carried out into salmonella levels in poultry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: My Department is currently funding a comprehensive programme of research on aspects of salmonella amounting to £2·4 million in 1989-90. The projects listed in the table fall into two main categories —food safety and animal health—and cover external contamination and vertical transmission, which are the two sources of infection. The programme includes epidemiological studies on the distribution of salmonella enteritidis in the laying flock.

[1] Work being carried out under the MAFF Post-Graduate Studentship Scheme.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the resistance levels to disease among poultry as a consequence of the continual use of antibiotics.

Mr. Maclean: All salmonella from animals and their environment have been monitored for antibiotic resistance continuously since 1971.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of feedstuffs for poultry is subject to prior heat treatment; what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of heat-treating feedingstuffs in reducing the incidence of salmonella in poultry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Details are not available on the percentage of poultry feedstuffs subject to heat treatment. Most broiler and turkey feeds, however, are heat-treated as part of the pelleting process. There is also a growing trend towards use of pelleted feeds for laying flocks. Published work indicates that whilst heat treatment of feedstuffs can be effective in tackling salmonella contamination, it cannot be guaranteed to eliminate salmonella completely. My Department issued last year five codes of practice which set out a range of measures to be taken by the feedstuffs industry to reduce salmonella contamination.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to ensure that the process of stripping animal bones to obtain mechanically recovered meat entails no risk of spinal tissue being included in the final product.

Mr. Maclean: As an ultra-precautionary measure my Department introduced the Bovine Offal (Prohibition) Regulations 1989, which prohibit the use of spinal cord and other specified bovine offals in food for sale for human consumption. In practice the spinal cord would be removed before recovery of MRM. Animals displaying symptoms of BSE are required to be slaughtered and disposed of so that they do not enter the human food chain.

Irradiation

Mr. Oakes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further discussions he has had, or proposes to have, with (a) consumer organisations, (b) retailers, (c) trade unions, (d) manufacturers and (e) others on the question of the irradiation of foodstuffs.

Mr. Maclean: In accordance with long-established practice in the food sector, there will be full consultation of all the relevant interests when the regulations have been prepared.

Mr. Oakes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he proposes to make available to customers of restaurants, cafes and public houses as to whether the food they have purchased there has been irradiated.

Mr. Maclean: I have already announced my intention to ensure that customers of restaurants, cafes and public houses are given clear information to enable them to choose whether or not they wish to buy irradiated food. Recently agreed European Community food legislation already provides for clear labelling of irradiated food and listed ingredients for prepacked sales. Additional requirements are needed for non-prepacked retail sales and food sold by caterers and I am currently consulting interested parties on the most effective and practical way of presenting this information to consumers.

Mr. Oakes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the Institution of Environmental Health Officers and other organisations with regard to the irradiation of food.

Mr. Maclean: I have received a number of letters from interested organisations on aspects of food irradiation. The views of the Institution of Environmental Health Officers are set out in its evidence to the recent inquiry by the House of Lords European Communities Committee, the report of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Oakes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what research is being conducted by his Department on the irradiation of food;

(2) what tests his Department recommends to discover whether food has been irradiated.

Mr. Maclean: The Department is currently carrying out research aimed at identifying and developing suitable tests for detecting irradiated foods. We are also investigating the effects of irradiation on plastic food packaging materials.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Churches (Subsidence)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will list by location the number of churches waiting compensation from British Coal due to subsidence damage; and if he will show in his answer, when the claims were first submitted.

Mr. Alison: The Commissioners do not possess this information. I am, however, writing to the hon. Member.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

City College for the Technology of the Arts

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a timetable for (a) the appointment of teachers, (b) signing of a lease for the premises, (c) closing date for application by pupils, (d) projected opening date, (e) agreement on curriculum the school will pursue, (f) the announcement of the cost of the Exchequer's contribution for capital costs and (g) the announcement of the sponsors' contribution to capital costs at the Britschool city technology college Croydon; and if he will publish a full list of sponsors for the Britschool city technology college and their projected contributions (i) in cash and (ii) in goods and services.

Mr. MacGregor: The lease of the premises of the city college for the technology of the arts (CCTA) in Croydon is scheduled to be signed today. The opening date for the college will be September 1991. The British phonographic industry has undertaken to provide capital funding of 40 per cent. of an agreed £5·9 million, of which my Department will provide 60 per cent. It is for the project team appointed by the sponsor to decide appropriate dates for the appointment of teachers to the college, a closing date for applications by pupils, and the details of the college's agreed curriculum. The college's principal was appointed on 1 January this year.

Further Education

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the expected staying on rate in full-time education for the 16 to 18 years age group in 1992-93.

Mr. Jackson: The projected participation rate for full-time students aged 16 and 17 in England for 1992-93 is 47 per cent. The ages are those at 31 August 1992.

Pupils (Attendance)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to remedy the poor attendance record of students in the later years of secondary schooling and in schools in deprived areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The national curriculum and other educational reforms being introduced by the Government will increase opportunity and motivation for all pupils and thereby help to improve school attendance. In addition, a new category of education support grants, to raise attendance at designated schools, begins in April. The grants will support three-year projects in 35 English local education authorities at a total cost in 1990-91 of £2·34 million. Most of those grants are for projects in urban programme areas. Similar arrangements apply in Wales.

The Department has recently published a survey report by Her Majesty's inspectorate which reviews school attendance and calls attention to examples of good practice in schools and local education authorities.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out the total sum of bids by local education authorities for capital spending on further education colleges for 1990-91.

Mr. Jackson: The bids by local education authorities for capital spending on further education colleges for 1990-91 totalled £186·1 million, as follows:

	£ million
Major building works[1]:
Started prior to 1990-91	50·0
To start in 1990-91	36·8
Minor works	25·4
Equipment and furniture	53·1
Other	20·8
TOTAL BIDS	186·1

[1] Projects in excess of £200,000.

Student Awards

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out, in 1987 prices, the expenditure on discretionary student awards in (a) 1984-85, (b) 1985-86, (c) 1986-87, (d) 1987-88, (e) 1988-89 and (f) 1989.

Mr. Jackson: The available data are as follows:

Real terms[1] expenditure on section 1(6) and section 2 discretionary awards[2] 1984-85 to 1987-88 England and Wales

	£ million
1984-85	156·8
1985-86	159·8
1986-87	169·0
1987-88	171·0

[1] Real terms expenditure at 1987-88 prices.
[2] Includes expenditure on fees and maintenance

Education Budget

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of the education budget will be met by local authorities in the next financial year.

Mrs. Rumbold: In the present financial year local authority expenditure on education is expected to account for some four fifths of the Department's total programme. Education budgets for 1990-91 are still being determined by local education authorities. As the bulk of central Government support for local authority spending is not hypothecated to individual services, it is not possible to determine on a service by service basis what percentage of those budgets will be met from local authorities' own resources.

Community Charge

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what sum of money was added to higher education students' grants representing 20 per cent. of average community charge; and when the calculation from which that sum resulted was made.

Mr. Jackson: The increased main rates of mandatory student grant for the academic year 1990-91 were announced on 19 December 1989. As in previous years these broadly reflected both the resources available and the net impact of several factors upon students' living costs. These factors included students' discounted liability for the community charge and the abolition of domestic rates. The basic maintenance grant is not earmarked in respect of any element of students' living costs.

Student Loans

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his estimate of the number of students in further education who will take out student loans.

Mr. Jackson: Top-up loans will mean extra resources for students in higher education. If 80 per cent. of those eligible were to apply, some 455,000 higher education students would receive top-up loans in 1990-91.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Footwear Imports

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received regarding the Government's continued policy concerning footwear and leather imports from Taiwan and Korea; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: We have received a small number of representations on this matter. The European Commision is still considering the way forward in the light of member states' views.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will indicate, or place in the Library, the details of the scheme Her Majesty's Government intend to deploy to enforce the European Commission decision on applying for a voluntary restraint agreement covering leather and synthetic footwear imports from the Republic of Korea and Taiwan;

(2) what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the recent decision by the European Commission to enter into a voluntary restraint agreement covering leather and synthetic footwear imports from Korea and Taiwan.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The Commission has still to decide what action, if any, to take. We understand that it may be considering Communitywide restraints on trade in leather and synthetic footwear from South Korea and Taiwan. Any restraints would, of course, have to be fully and economically justified. If, however, the industry has any evidence of unfair trading practices it should be forwarded to the DTI or the Commission.

Securities and Investments Board

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many of the specialists recruited for the development of the Securities and Investments Board and of its rule book are no longer required;

(2) if he will give details of the steps taken in the preparation of the planned expenditure of the Securities and Investments Board for the year 1990-91 to contain expenditure to reflect the reduction in formation and development of the regulatory role of the Securities and Investments Board;

(3) what are the premiums which the Securities and Investments Board will be required to pay in respect of salary and rental costs as a result of the decision to relocate within central London;

(4) whether he has any plans to make available free of charge to the public in Scotland access to the Securities and Investments Board's Prestel system which holds details of all authorised firms;

(5) whether the manpower levels within the Securities and Investments Board are intended only to reflect the minimum personnel required to maintain compliance standards;

(6) which locations outside London were considered for the possible relocation of the Securities and Investments Board.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 19 February 1990]: This is a matter for the Securities and Investments Board.

ENERGY

Wave Power

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will review his Department's policy concerning funding for research into and development of electricity generation from offshore wave power devices; and if he will make a statement on his Department's assessment of the likely cost of such electricity per kilowatt hour.

Mr. Peter Morrison: A thorough review of the technical and commercial viability and prospects for wave energy in the United Kingdom is currently being undertaken, following which it will be possible to review the Department's policy concerning funding for research into and development of electricity generation from offshore wave power devices. Offshore wave energy is currently considered unlikely to be competitive, with estimated costs exceeding 10p/kWh, but reassessing these costs is fundamental to the review now taking place.

Electricity Pylons

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has any plans to require pylons to be moved away from urban settlements in view of the effect of the electrical fields generated beneath them on human health.

Mr. Baldry: I have no plans to require pylons to be moved away from urban settlements in view of the presence of electrical fields. All types of electrical conductor, whether overhead or underground, and whether forming a power transmission or distribution system or simply the wiring and appliances in the home, create electric and magnetic fields.

TRANSPORT

Road Building Objections

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many road building objections in the form of Valentine cards he has received this month.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend and I and officials on our behalf have received a number of road building objections in the form of Valentine cards. All those giving names and addresses will be taken into account in the consultation process.

Motorway Service Areas

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on his policy towards the location and development of motorway service areas by the private sector;

(2) if he will make it his policy to allow the private sector to take responsibility for the location and development of motorway service areas; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what representations he has received from the major oil companies regarding the development of motorway service areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Representations have been made by certain oil companies that the initiative should be left with them to identify, seek planning clearance for, and obtain ownership of sites for new motorway service areas. The current general policy is for the Department itself to identify sites, usually on the basis of a private consultant's study, and itself to seek planning clearance and ownership, and to market the right to provide services there by competitive tender. The aim of this policy is to ensure the satisfactory choice, development and continued operation of sites, primarily from the point of view of road safety and traffic management considerations, to promote competition between operators in the interests of consumer choice and satisfaction, and to ensure an adequate return to the Exchequer by way of premium for the right to provide services at key locations on the motorway network.

There are no present proposals to change this policy. It will however be kept under review in the light of experience and representations made.

Civil Aviation Authority

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to consider the privatisation of the Civil Aviation Authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend has at present no plans to privatise the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority to discuss the shortage of Civil Aviation Authority examiners to test for the commercial pilot's licence and instrument ratings examinations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: This is a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority. I have asked the chairman of the authority to write to my hon. Friend.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he set down any ordering timetable before approving investment by British Rail in the trains necessary for the direct link from the Channel tunnel to the north of England and Scotland;

(2) what is the number of trains for the direct link from the Channel tunnel to the north of England and Scotland for which he has given investment approval to British Rail; and what is the minimum number of such trains required.

Mr. Portillo: While BR has outlined its plans for through services, it has not yet submitted its investment proposals with its estimate of the cost of the trains.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the types of trains for the direct link from the Channel tunnel to the north of England and Scotland for which he has given investment approval to British Rail.

Mr. Portillo: BR published its plans for through services on 14 December and I refer to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Lee) on that date, Official Report, column 767. It has not yet submitted its investment proposals.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what parameters for the completion and delivery of the order for the trains which will run from London through the Channel tunnel to the continent he set down before approving British Rail's investment in the new rolling stock;

(2) what requirements he imposed when giving his approval to investment in new rolling stock for British Rail about the companies to be invited to tender for the order to produce the trains necessary for the direct link from the Channel tunnel to the north of England and Scotland.

Mr. Portillo: None. These are commercial matters for the railways concerned.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the cost of the trains which will run from London through the Channel tunnel to the continent for which he has given investment approval to British Rail.

Mr. Portillo: I refer to the answer my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Fulham (Mr. Carrington) on 11 December 1989 at column 486.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when reaching his decision about investment in new rolling stock for British Rail what consideration he gave to the extent to which continental trains could run directly through the Channel tunnel to the north of England and Scotland;

(2) when reaching his decision on whether to approve investment in new rolling stock for British Rail, what consideration he gave to the extent to which existing British Rail trains would be able to run directly through the Channel tunnel to the continent from the north of England and Scotland.

Mr. Portillo: Neither existing BR nor continental trains can use the Channel tunnel for a variety of safety and engineering reasons.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive from British Rail its investment proposal for the trains to be used for the through passenger services to be introduced from the continent to the north of Britain.

Mr. Portillo: I understand that British Rail proposes to submit its proposals in April.

London Underground

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the eastern alignment of the proposed Jubilee line extension.

Mr. Parkinson: Following further work and negotiations with property developers and landowners, I am pleased to be able to authorise LRT to seek the leave of the House for the deposit of an additional provision to re-route the Jubilee line extension, from Canary Wharf to Canning Town via Greenwich point.

The east London rail study which I announced in July last year, identified two possible alignments for the Jubilee line extension between Canary Wharf and Canning Town either via Greenwich point, or via the Brunswick foreshore. The pressure of a November deadline for LRT to deposit a Bill, for the extension, made it necessary to take a decision as early as September to plan on the basis of the shorter and cheaper alignment via Brunswick. The Bill that I authorised in November was drafted on that basis. However, since then further discussions have been held with property developers and landowners whose interests would be affected by both alignments to ascertain whether they would be prepared to meet the additional costs of providing a station and changing the route, as necessary. Each of the interested groups has offered to contribute on this basis but the financial case for proceeding with the Greenwich alignment is more robust and offers a number of additional benefits. It is essential to secure the regeneration of the industrial wasteland in the Greenwich peninsula and above all, by providing two further river crossings it will open up new areas in south London to the Underground network. I am sure this announcement will be welcomed in those areas.

Mersey Docks and Harbour Company

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to dispose of his shares in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company.

Mr. McLoughlin: I have concluded that it would not be appropriate for the Government to seek to dispose of their ordinary shares in the company now in view of the inquiries by inspectors appointed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. My hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury and I have, therefore, decided that in accordance with the Government's general policy on Government shareholdings the ordinary shares should be transferred into the ownership of the Treasury. At the same time I intend to relinquish the right attaching to the special share which enables my right hon. Friend to appoint up to three directors of the company.

Road Signs

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice or instructions are given by his Department as to the signs, illumination and positioning of warning signs at major road junctions or roundabouts when the traffic lights have failed.

Mr. Atkins: Current guidance on these matters is contained in paragraph 5.7 of Department of Transport advice note TA 24/81, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Traffic Lights

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what conditions are imposed on his traffic control systems units maintenance contractor as to the urgency and intensity of the efforts to restore normal working of failed traffic lights at the Hogarth roundabout on the A4 at Chiswick and at similar major junctions.

Mr. Atkins: The priority to be given to repairing traffic signals in London is detailed in the TCSU's contract with its maintenance contractor and varies according to the seriousness of the incident and when it occurs. Complete failure such as happened at the Hogarth roundabout is accorded top priority and the contractor is required, if it is possible, to effect a full repair within two and a half or five hours of the fault, for weekdays or weekend respectively. If, as was the case recently at Hogarth roundabout, major civil engineering works beyond the scope of the maintenance contract are necessary to effect the repair, the maintenance contractor is required to make the installation safe and to place warning signs on approach roads until the civil works can be put in hand.

I can assure my right hon. Friend that all concerned are alert to the need to effect repairs as quickly as possible.

Network SouthEast (Investment)

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of investment in Network SouthEast has to earn an 8 per cent. return; and what investment projects do not have to earn this return.

Mr. Portillo: The basic criteria for all replacement investment in BR's subsidised sectors such as Network SouthEast are that the existing service should be maintained and that the chosen project should be the least cost option. An 8 per cent. discount rate is used to compare the costs and benefits of options, but there is no requirement for replacement investment as a whole to earn a financial return of 8 per cent. It is only when an option for investment includes an element of enhancement, for example the provision of first-class accommodation, or air conditioning, or represents an addition to the asset base, that this additional expenditure must normally be justified by its ability to earn an 8 per cent. return. We have however made it clear in the new objectives set for BR in December that where, exceptionally, additions to NSE's asset base cannot meet an 8 per cent. financial return, it is appropriate to consider whether there is a case on cost-benefit grounds. Most investment projects include elements of both replacement and enhancement, so it is not possible to provide the percentages requested.

Network SouthEast (Property Sales)

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the major items of property sold by Network SouthEast over the last 10 years.

Mr. Portillo: The sale of property and land no longer required for operational purposes is handled corporately by the British Rail Property Board. Its activities are covered on page 28 of the board's annual report and accounts for 1988-89, a copy of which is in the Library.

THE ARTS

Arts Funding

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many representations he has received concerning Government funding of the arts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Mr. Watts) on 12 February, at column 51. I have no immediate plans to make a statement on arts funding.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Arts what information he has received on the number of organisations, regionally and nationally, which are planning to (a) cut their staff, (b) cut their operations or performances and (c) close down completely in the coming financial year, following changes in funding available to them from the Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: It is for the management of individual arts organisations to determine the level of their staffing and operations. Like any other organisation, they must set the scope of their operations within the limits of available resources. I am confident, however, that with an increase of 22 per cent. in the Arts Council's grant over the next three years, arts organisations will continue to build on recent successes.

Book of Kells

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Arts if his Department has any plans to assist in the acquisition for the national collections of one of the two new facsimiles of the Book of Kells.

Mr. Luce: No. Decisions on acquisitions are a matter for the trustees of the national collections. I understand that a new facsimile is available for academic research in the university of London library, and that the British Library holds an earlier facsimile.

Museums and Galleries (Thefts)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many reported thefts from museums and art galleries in London there have been in each of the past five years.

Mr. Luce: Information on the number of reported thefts from museums and art galleries in London is not held centrally.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the function of the official whose signature has been sent to the hon. Member for Linlithgow under the printed phrase cleared and approved for release in the answer to written question No. 164 of 19 February from the hon. Member for Linlithgow to which the Secretary of State said he would reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Cope: It is the administrative practice in the Northern Ireland Office for the Parliamentary Clerk to satisfy himself, before answers to parliamentary questions as approved by the Ministers are dispatched to right hon. and hon. Members, that they contain no textual inaccuracies or other errors and to confirm to those responsible for their dispatch that such a check has been carried out.

Kincora Boys' Home

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will arrange for his officials to meet Sir George Terry to discuss the need for a wide inquiry into the affairs surrounding the Kincora boys' home.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 19 February 1990]: I have no plans to do so.

Integrated Schools

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a list of all primary, secondary and grammar schools in Northern Ireland which have been granted integrated status, showing the number of pupils attending each school in each of the last three years.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 21 February 1990]: The table sets out the names of the seven integrated primary and secondary schools that have achieved voluntary maintained status, together with their pupil enrolments at January in each of the years 1988, 1989 and 1990:

	Pupil Numbers
	January 1988	January 1989	January 1990
Primary
Hazelwood (Newtownabbey)	160	199	208
Forge (Belfast)	130	171	186
All Children's (Newcastle)	—	86	103
Bridge (Banbridge)	—	107	140
Milstrand (Portrush)	—	83	115
Secondary
Lagan College (Belfast)	500	558	585
Hazelwood College (Belfast)	—	215	293

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what numbers of pupils presently attend an integrated school in Northern Ireland; what percentage of pupils this number represents, for (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) grammar schools; what information he has as to how many pupils attend such schools in each education and library board area; and how many in each board area are (i) Roman Catholic, (ii) Protestant and (iii) other, or as much of such information as is available to him.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 21 February 1990]: The seven integrated schools that are grant-aided as voluntary maintained schools had an aggregate enrolment of 1,630 pupils at January 1990.

Enrolment figures for all schools are not yet available for January 1990 but at the latest date for which comparable figures are available (January 1989) the five integrated primary schools had 646 pupils, representing 0·4 per cent. of all primary school enrolments in Northern Ireland and the two secondary schools had 773 pupils, representing 0·8 per cent. of all secondary school enrolments.

In addition to the seven grant-aided integrated schools, there are three integrated primary schools operating as independent schools:

	Pupils
Windmill Integrated Primary School	59
Enniskillen Integrated Primary School	64
Braidside Integrated Primary School (Ballymena)	36

The figures for the four education and library board areas in which these schools are situated are as follows:

	Numbers
Belfast	687
South Eastern	688
North Eastern	115
Southern	140

Information as to the religious affiliations of pupils at schools in Northern Ireland is not readily available.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Paternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General what paternity leave is allowed to staff in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: At present paternity leave is not available to civil servants. The Treasury is, however, finalising arrangements for the introduction of an entitlement to two days' paid paternity leave.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Business Expansion Scheme

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has for each of the years of the existence of BES on (a) the regional distribution of BES funds and the regional distribution of small firms, (b) the distribution of BES investments by two digit standard industrial classification, or as detailed as possible and (c) the average size of investment.

Mr. Lilley: Information on the companies receiving investments through the business expansion scheme is published in chapter 7 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1989". Further information that is readily available is as follows:

Companies receiving BES investments, 1987-88

Industry	Number of companies	Amount of investment £ million
Agriculture, Horticulture, Forestry	21	9

Single Parents

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for (a) 1960, (b) 1970, (c) 1980 and (d) the latest year, the number of single people with children who work and pay tax; and if he will estimate the numbers below the tax threshold.

Mr. Lilley: In 1989-90 an estimated quarter of a million working lone parents pay tax and about the same number are in work, but below the tax threshold. Estimates are based on the 1987 family expenditure survey and are provisional. Figures for the earlier years are not available.

Personal Disposable Income

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing annual consumers' expenditure and personal disposable income from 1979 to 1988 in (a) owner-occupier households and (b) other households.

Mr. Norman Lamont: An analysis of consumers' expenditure and personal disposable income is not available in the form requested. Estimates by tenure of average weekly household expenditure and income are published annually in the report of the family expenditure survey.

Civil Service Pensions

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what data would be required to enable a reliable assessment to be made of the cost of extending payment of Civil Service widows' pensions to the widows of post-retirement marriages of civil servants who retired before April 1978;

(2) if he will estimate the numbers of surviving retired male civil servants who retired before 6 April 1978.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 9 January 1990, at column 575. I regret that the information requested could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Coins

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will undertake a review of the United Kingdom coinage so as to replace the present bronze 1p and 2p coins with copper-plated pieces; and if he will state the excess cost to the Treasury of providing these denominations in the current metal.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, South (Mr. Sumberg) on 6 February, at column 540. The excess cost to the Treasury of continuing to provide 1p and 2p coins in bronze as compared with copper-plated steel depends on metal prices and on the number of coins issued, but a reasonable estimate is between £2 million and £4 million a year.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the smaller size denomination of 5p and 10p to be issued by United Kingdom banks; if he has the coinage under review; if he will issue a £2 coin for circulation; what other plans he has for a redesign of the reverse of the coinage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The new, smaller 5p coin will be issued by the United Kingdom banks in June 1990 and the new, smaller 10p coins will be issued in June 1992. These changes followed a general review of the coinage in 1987. The Royal Mint issued a pamphlet setting out various options for change and the public were invited to comment. The smaller 5p and 10p coins were the options preferred. Aspects of the coinage are always kept under review. £2 coins are issued for circulation from time to time only as commemorative coins. Two versions of the £2 coin were, however, issued last year to commemorate the Bill of Rights in England and the Claim of Right in Scotland. There are no immediate plans to issue a further £2 coin or to redesign the reverse of the coinage.

Property Sales

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will provide a breakdown on a regional basis for the 1988 freehold and leasehold figures in table 15.1 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1989".

Mr. Lilley: I regret that reliable information is not available at the level of detail requested. Available information is in the table:

Rateable Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will provide for the boroughs of Croydon, Merton and Hounslow the number and rateable value of houses and so on with a rateable value not exceeding £100 and by (a) £50 steps to £400, (b) £100 steps to £800, (c) £800 to £1,000, (d) £1,000 to £1,500 and (e) over £1,500;

(2) whether he will provide for the boroughs of Ealing, Waltham Forest, Redbridge and Barking and Dagenham the number and rateable value of houses and so on with a rateable value not exceeding £100 and by (a) £50 steps to £400, (b) £100 steps to £800, (c) £800 to £1,000, (d) £1,000 to £1,500 and (e) over £1,500;

(3) whether he will provide for the boroughs of Wandsworth, Greenwich and Lewisham the number and rateable value of houses and so on with a rateable value not exceeding £100 and by (a) £50 steps to £400, (b) £100 steps to £800, (c) £800 to £1,000, (d) £1,000 to £1,500 and (e) over £1,500;

(4) whether he will provide for the districts of Stafford, Cannock Chase and Staffordshire, South-East, the number and rateable value of houses and so on with a rateable value not exceeding £100 and by (a) £50 steps to £400, (b) £100 steps to £800, (c) £800 to £1,000, (d) £1,000 to £1,500 and (e) over £1,500.

Mr. Lilley: This information could not be produced without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost in 1990-91 and in a full year of raising the lower limit for the reduced rate for corporation tax from £150,000 to £200,000; and how many firms would be affected.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 9 February 1990]: About 20,000 companies would be affected at a cost of £30 million in a full year and £20 million in 1990-91, assuming company incomes at 1989-90 levels and that the change took effect from 1 April 1989.

Tax Relief

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the savings in a full year at 1989-90 rates of restricting all allowances and reliefs to the standard rate of tax; and if he will provide a breakdown of the category of allowances and reliefs.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Estimates of the direct revenue yield in a full year at 1989-90 levels of income from restricting the main income tax reliefs and allowances to the basic rate are as follows:

	£ million
a. Personal allowances	1,350
b. Mortgage interest relief	430
c. Employee's superannuation and personal pension contributions	200
d. Retirement annuity relief[1]	110

[1] Including relief for retirement annuity payments made by employees.

It is not possible to provide reliable estimates for the effects of restricting other smaller reliefs to the basic rate. The direct revenue yield from restricting all reliefs and allowances simultaneously to the basic rate is likely to be in the order of £2¾ billion, somewhat more than the sum of the yields from restricting the reliefs and allowances separately; this is due to the cumulative effect of bringing more people into higher rate tax. About two thirds of those who would pay more tax as a result of this change are currently liable only at the basic rate. Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal income and are provisional. No account is taken of possible behavioural changes or the effect on receipts of capital gains tax.

WALES

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report, now or as soon as the figures are available to him, a table indicating for each county and district authority in Wales, the budgeted spending for 1990-91, the corresponding grant-borne and community charge-borne aggregate sums, and the proposed personal community charge level.

Mr. Peter Walker: I will write to the hon. Gentleman when the figures become available and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the appeal procedure after the refusal of a grant of a waste disposal licence issued under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 in Wales.

Mr. Grist: Appellants are required to give notice of appeal on the form set out in schedule 7 to the Collection and Disposal of Waste Regulations 1988 and to provide the documentation as required by regulation 10(3).

Schools

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table to show such information as he has to hand from the schemes of local management of schools submitted for his approval by local education authorities to show the relative values of the general schools budget, the mandatory exceptions, the discretionary exceptions and the aggregate schools budget, on a comparable basis to that published by his right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science, in his reply of 5 February to the hon. Member for Epping Forest, Official Report, column 451.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The following information has been taken from the local management of schools scheme submissions made by local education authorities to my right hon. Friend. The table gives the percentage figures requested; it is not possible to provide comparative cash figures because the information has been supplied using different price bases.

Local Education Authority	Mandatory exceptions as percentage of general schools budget	Total discretionary exceptions as percentage of general schools budget	Aggregated schools budget as percentage of general schools budget

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for Wales and each major administrative division the number of (a) rateable domestic premises, (b) resident adults and (c) resident children together with (i) the rateable value of the domestic premises, (ii) the yield from that rate and (iii) the estimated yield from a 1 per cent. levy on the capital value of the housing stock in 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Peter Walker: Information for Wales and each district for 1989 is shown in the following table. The estimated yield from a 1 per cent. levy on the capital value of the housing stock in 1988 and 1989 is not available.

[1] Registrar General; 1988 mid-year estimates

Local Government and Housing Act

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make it his policy that the timetable for implementation of the subsidiary legislation giving effect to part V of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 in respect of Wales should allow adequate time for local authorities to assess the nature of their relationship with companies and make necessary adjustments in the light of the subsidiary legislation;

(2) whether he will make it his policy to allow a period of six months between the publication of the subordinate legislation giving effect to part V of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 in Wales and the date from which such subsidiary legislation takes effect.

Mr. Grist: The implementation timetable will provide adequate time for local authorities to assess the implications of the controls on local authority companies. Part V of the 1989 Act defines a company and also specifies the tests which apply in establishing a local authority's relationship with companies for the purposes of the new regulatory system. The provisions are explained in greater detail in a consultation paper issued to local authorities in Wales last October.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which Welsh voluntary wildlife bodies have indicated to him support for the Government's proposals for splitting the Nature Conservancy Council.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: A number of other organisations in Wales have done so, including the National Farmers Union committee for Wales, the chairman and chief officers of the national parks and the committees for Wales of both the Nature Conservancy Council and the Countryside Commission.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will respond to the Select Committee on Welsh Affairs report, "The Channel Tunnel: Implications for Wales," published on 21 June 1989.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The command paper should be published next month.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the cost of a settlement for ambulance personnel in Wales of (a) 6·5 per cent. from April 1989 to 1990, backdated to April 1989 with an additional 3 per cent. from April 1990 with an offer of further negotiations in October 1990 and (b) 9 per cent. from April 1989, backdated to April 1989 with an offer of further negotiations in October 1990.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is as follows:
(a) £2·2 million
(b) £2·7 million

Welsh Language

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each county education authority the number of teachers needed to (a) deliver Welsh language teaching at the primary and secondary levels as required by the national curriculum and (b) deliver all national curriculum subjects in Welsh secondary schools by teachers with the appropriate subject qualifications.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The current estimate, based on 1988 pupil numbers, of the number of teachers required to deliver Welsh language teaching when the national curriculum is fully implemented is:

LEA	Primary	Secondary
Clwyd	498	128
Dyfed	933	119
Gwent	278	128
Gwynedd	969	97
Mid Glamorgan	560	165
Powys	146	38
South Glamorgan	290	115
West Glamorgan	338	105
Wales	4,012	895

These estimates are being revised and will take account of more recent information on pupil numbers.

Estimates of the number of teachers required to teach subjects within the national curriculum will be available only when the results of the 1989 secondary schools staffing survey are available and have been analysed.

Revenue Support Grant

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether under the community charge system in Wales it is possible to identify the amount of revenue support grant attributable to each county council and to each borough and district council.

Mr. Peter Walker: I calculated the revenue support grant entitlements of all Welsh local authorities, under section 82(1) of the Local Government Finance Act 1988, following the approval of the Welsh revenue support grant report 1990-91 on 24 January. Authorities were notified of their entitlements on 1 February. Those entitlements are listed in the following table:

SCOTLAND

Salmon

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice has been given to the Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust regarding the acquisition of salmon netting rights in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: Acquisitions of salmon fishing rights in Scotland are private transactions. The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland does not advise on either the acquisition or sale of such rights.

Advice is given by DAFS scientists to salmon interests including the Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust (Scotland) on possible research or monitoring activities which they might fund or take part in. Discussions on this basis took place with the Atlantic Salmon Conservation Trust (Scotland) in March 1988 and in April 1989. Similar discussions are conducted with the Atlantic Salmon Trust, other research trusts concerned with particular river systems, individual district salmon fishery boards and the River Tweed commissioners. General discussions also take place from time to time with bodies representing the collective interests of district boards, anglers and netsmen.

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to make a decision on the proposed scheme of salmon tagging being drawn up by the River Tweed commissioners.

Mr. Lang: On 26 January the River Tweed commissioners submitted formal proposals for a local scheme of tagging wild salmon in the Tweed area. The proposed scheme would be organised and financed locally but the River Tweed commissioners have sought my right hon. and learned Friend's views about possible new, local powers to support the scheme. These local powers would require primary legislation. I expect there to be further discussions with the River Tweed commissioners on these and other aspects of their proposals in the coming weeks.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what evaluation his Department has made in 1990 of alternative methods of raising finance for Scottish local government other than the community charge.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A number of possible options for financing local government were evaluated before the decision was taken to abolish domestic rates and introduce the community charge. There has been no need since then for any study of alternative methods of finance. The Labour party's proposed roof tax is essentially a return to domestic rates and if introduced would mean a return to the many anomalies and unfairness of that system.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of people who have gained financially from the introduction of the poll tax.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: At the outset of the new system it was estimated that around 50 per cent. of households would benefit from the introduction of the community charge. Other changes in the local government finance system, introduced at the same time as the community charge, and the lack of information on what local authority budgets and rate poundages would have been under the previous system make it impossible to provide further information.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to introduce regulations that allow voters to opt out or opt in to the sale of their name and address from electoral registers; whether he has had discussions with the Data Protection Registrar concerning the sale of names and addresses from the electoral register; and whether he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have no plans to introduce such regulations. The operation of the electoral registration system requires that all the information in the register should be freely available to the public. The provisions of the Representation of the People (Scotland) Regulations 1986 governing the publication and supply of the register reflect this fact and the conclusion that its use by commercial organisations could not effectively be prevented. The Data Protection Registrar was consulted before the introduction of the provisions in those regulations governing the sale of the electoral register in data form.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to introduce regulations to alert voters to the fact that their name and address are routinely disclosed from the electoral register for poll tax purposes; and whether he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have no plans to do so.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to introduce regulations to protect voters who may be vulnerable to attack if their name and address appeared on an electoral register that is available for sale or inspection by the public; and whether he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have no present plans to do so, but we shall continue to keep the position under careful review.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has provided guidance to electoral registration officers concerning the privacy implications of the inspection or sale of the names and addresses from the electoral register without the knowledge or consent of the voter; whether his Department has studied the implications of linking copies of the electoral register information to that of the census or to other large databases; and whether he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Home and Health Department has issued guidance to electoral registration officers on the electoral registration process, including the inspection and sale of the register, but not specifically on questions of privacy. Individual census records will not be available for linkage to the electoral register or other large databases.

Rateable Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each region in Scotland the number of (a) rateable domestic premises before the poll tax came into effect, (b) resident adults and (c) resident children together with (i) the rateable value of the domestic premises, (ii) the yield from that rate and (iii) the estimated yield from a 1 per cent. levy on the capital value of the housing stock in 1988 and 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The available information is set out in the table. Gross yield is calculated by applying poundages (net of domestic relief) to total rateable values. Figures on actual yield after allowing for reliefs, non-payment, and so on are not available separately for the domestic sector. Reliable estimates of the capital value of the housing stock are not available.

Population Statistics

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many households there are in Scotland with only one adult over the age of 18 years; how many of those are single-parent families with children; and how many are single people over pensionable age.

Mr. Rifkind: Information in the form requested is not available. However, it is estimated that at 31 December 1986, there were 564,000 households with one adult over the age of 16 (either living alone or with children under the age of 16) in Scotland; 70,000 of these are estimated to be lone-parent families, while 325,000 are estimated to consist of one person over pensionable age living alone.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the most recent available breakdown of the Scottish adult population by household size in (a) total and (b) percentage terms.

Mr. Rifkind: Information in the form requested is not available. The estimates in the table are of the population in private households aged 16 and over, by the number of persons aged 16 and over in the household, at 31 December 1986:

Estimated population aged 16 and over in private households 31 December 1986, Scotland

Number of persons aged 16 and over in household	Population	Percentage
One	564,000	14·4
Two	1,921,000	49·0
Three	832,000	21·2
Four	438,000	11·2
Five or more	163,000	4·2
TOTAL	3,918,000	100·0

Incomes

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the most recent household income figures for Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: The most recent family expenditure survey shows that in 1987-88 the average income per household in Scotland was £234·23 per week.

Rating System (Costs)

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost of (a) administering the (i) domestic and (ii) domestic and non-domestic rate rebate system in Scotland in 1987-88, (b) administering the poll tax rebate system in Scotland in 1989-90 and (c) administering the poll tax transitional relief scheme in Scotland in 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Rifkind: No information is held centrally on the cost of administering non-domestic rate rebates in 1987-88. Neither is it possible to distinguish between the costs for administering domestic rate rebates and those for rent rebates and rent allowances from the information which is submitted by local authorities. The total cost of housing benefit administration in 1987-88 was £15·3 million. Similarly, it is not possible to separate community charge rebates from the other elements of housing benefit administration in 1989-90, but the local authorities' estimate of the total cost is £21·7 million. The cost of administering the proposed personal community charge transitional relief scheme in 1989-90 and 1990-91 has not yet been established.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost of collecting non-domestic rates in Scotland in 1989-90.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 25 January.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Government's most recent estimate of the (a) capital expenditure, (b) revenue costs and (c) extra staff employed by local authorities in connection with the establishment and maintenance of the poll tax register and with the administration and collection of the poll tax and poll tax rebate system in Scotland for 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Rifkind: Information on actual capital expenditure is not yet available centrally for 1988-89 or 1989-90 in respect of establishment and maintenance of the community charge system in Scotland. However, in order to assist local authorities in preparing for the introduction of the community charge, additional capital allocations were provided in 1987-88 and 1988-89 totalling £26 million. The administrative cost of community charge collection for Scotland in 1989-90 is estimated by local authorities at £23·3 million and the cost of registration work is estimated at £8·5 million. These figures are exclusive of the costs of operating the community charge rebate system. These costs are offset by the savings which local authorities made by no longer having to value domestic properties or collect domestic rates.

It is not possible from the information collected to separate local authority expenditure on the administration of community charge rebates from that incurred on other housing benefits but local authorities have estimated the cost of administering housing benefits as a whole at £15·9 million in 1988-89 and £21·7 million in 1989-90.

No information is held centrally on the number of staff employed by authorities on community charge work. The organisational arrangements for community charge collection are entirely a matter for the local authorities themselves.

Health Service (Expenditure)

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total expenditure on the Health Service in Scotland in (a) gross terms and (b) net of pay costs in constant prices and indexed (1980=100) for each year since 1980 including estimated expenditure for 1990-91.

Mr. Rifkind: The information in the format requested is not fully available. Details of gross expenditure in both cash terms and adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator, are given in the table:

Total National Health Service Expenditure in Scotland

	£ million cash	Adjusted by the GDP deflator to 1989-90 prices	Index (1979-80=100)
1979-80	1,064	2,143	100·0
1980-81	1,343	2,386	106·7
1981-82	1,531	2,374	110·7
1982-83	1,660	2,401	112·0
1983-84	1,773	2,450	114·3
1984-85	1,901	2,502	116·7
1985-86	2,015	2,517	117·4
1986-87	2,144	2,591	120·9
1987-88	2,328	2,672	124·6
1988-89	2,591	2,772	129·3
1989-90[1]	2,851	2,851	133·0
1990-91[2]	3,064	2,918	136·1

[1] Projected outturn.
[2] Provisional allocation.

Rate Arrears

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of summary warrants granted for domestic rate arrears in Scotland in each year since 1985-86.

Mr. Rifkind: Information is not held centrally on the number of persons subject to summary warrant procedure for non-payment of domestic rates.

Debt Recovery

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of speculative bank account arrestments served in Scottish clearing banks for the recovery of outstanding debts to local authorities in each year since 1985-86; and how many were successful in (a) locating an account and (b) recovering the amount outstanding.

Mr. Rifkind: Information is not collected centrally on the use of bank account arrestments for the recovery of local authority debts.

Lothian Health Board

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on his allocation of £319·217 million to Lothian health board for 1990-91, giving the percentage increase over the previous year in cash, real and volume terms.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The gross allocation to Lothian health board for 1989-90 is £295·956 million. The figure of £319·217 million which I have announced for 1990-91 is likely to be supplemented later in respect of breast cancer screening, waiting list initiatives and a number of minor services. The announced figure represents an increase of 7·86 per cent. in cash terms or 2·73 per cent. in real terms. No separate NHS pay and prices index is maintained for Scotland and it is not therefore possible to calculate the increase in volume terms.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what costs have fallen to regional authorities in Scotland as a result of provision of services which otherwise would have been provided by the ambulance service during the current ambulance dispute.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Police costs will be reimbursed by the Common Services Agency. Regional authorities have not been asked to provide any other services.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the cost of a settlement for ambulance personnel in Scotland of (a) 6·5 per cent. from April 1989 to 1990, backdated to April 1989 with an additional 3 per cent. from April 1990 with an offer of further negotiations in October 1990 and (b) 9 per cent. from April 1989, backdated to April 1989 with an offer of further negotiations in October 1990.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Based on the 1988-89 pay bill of £21·6 million for ambulance men and women in Scotland, the cost of a settlement would be £2·45 million in case (a) and £2·91 million in case (b).

Revenue Support Grant

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether under the community charge system in Scotland it is possible to identify the amount of revenue support grant attributable to each regional council and to each district council.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Yes. Details of the amounts of grant payable to each local authority in Scotland in respect of 1990-91 were specified in the Revenue Support Grant (Scotland) Order 1990.

Civil Engineers

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil engineers are employed in Scotland in (a) the public sector and (b) the private sector; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The figures requested are not recorded separately in Government employment statistics. Such information may be available from the Institution of Civil Engineers. Periodically it publishes details of its members and their employment.

Grant-aided Colleges

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will announce the allocations of grant in aid for recurrent expenditure to the grant-aided colleges in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I am pleased to announce that the Secretary of State has made the following offers of grant in aid for recurrent expenditure to the 17 grant-aided colleges for the financial year 1990-91. The offers, which are conditional on parliamentary approval of the supply estimates, are as follows:

	Offer 1990-91 £ million
Central Institutions
Duncan of Jordanstone College of Art	3·844
Dundee Institute of Technology	7·273
Edinburgh College of Art	3·973
Glasgow College of Technology	12·588
Glasgow School of Art	3·557
Napier Polytechnic of Edinburgh	18·441
Paisley College of Technology	10·661
Queen Margaret College	4·603
Queen's College, Glasgow	3·183
Robert Gordon's Institute of Technology	11·953
Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama	2·468
Scottish College of Textiles	2·403
Colleges of Education
Craigie College of Education	1·555
Jordanhill College of Education	10·534
Moray House College of Education	7·906
Northern College of Education	6·337
St. Andrew's College of Education	3·803

Comparisons of these grants in aid against those made in 1989-90 need to take account of the shift of public funding towards fees and other factors. The offers are designed to ensure that no college will receive an increase of less than 3 per cent. or more than 13 per cent over the initial allocations made in 1989-90. Because the colleges will also benefit from substantial savings as a result of higher rates relief for charities, this should allow expenditure to increase by at least 5 per cent. in 1990-91, and for most colleges by substantially more.

Excluding the effect of the shift of funding to fees, which will be neutral in terms of public expenditure, but bringing into account the savings that will accrue to the colleges from changes in rates relief for charities, the overall level of public funding for the colleges will be some 11 per cent. higher than in 1989-90. I am pleased that we have been able to provide such an increase in funding, which should enable the colleges to further expand student intakes, notably for pre-service courses of teacher training.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Arms

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek a meeting with his counterpart in Buenos Aires to discuss the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no plans yet to meet the Foreign Minister of Argentina.

UN Convention on Rights of the Child

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Her Majesty's Government intend to sign and ratify the United Nations convention on the rights of the child; and what reservations Her Majesty's Government intend to enter on various articles of the convention.

Mr. Sainsbury: We intend to sign and ratify the convention on the rights of the child as soon as possible. We are currently considering what reservations, if any, may be necessary.

Yanomani Indians

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has had any discussions through United Nations organisations on the Yanomani Indians in Brazil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have not had discussions specifically through United Nations organisations, but my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for the Environment both raised this question with the Brazilian president-elect when he was in London on 8 February.

Green Island, Hong Kong

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total area of Green Island, the total area of the building in which the Vietnamese boat people are held and the total number of people so held.

Mr. Sainsbury: Green Island has a total land area of 13·4 hectares. The reception centre, where all asylum seekers arriving in Hong Kong are first taken for the normal port, health and immigration procedures before being transferred after a few days to one of the main detention centres, is situated on a site of 4,150 sq m. The two dormitories in the centre can normally accommodate 480 people but are currently being used to house 500 people. The combined floor area of the two dormitories is about 600 sq m.

Refugees

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the UNHCR lays down any minimum floor space standards for refugees pending examination of their cases.

Mr. Sainsbury: The UNHCR has not established any minimum floor space standards for asylum seekers held pending examination of their cases.

Panama

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of Anglo-Panamanian relations.

Mr. Sainsbury: We now enjoy good and friendly relations with the Republic of Panama.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 9 January, Official Report, columns 581-82, what information he has now of the number of deaths and injuries among civilians arising from the invasion of Panama by the United States of America.

Mr. Sainsbury: The latest information available to us indicates that 203 Panamanian civilians and three American civilians were killed. No figures have been released on the number of civilians injured.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what current arrangements exist in the United Kingdom to represent the interests of the Panamanian Government.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Panamanian Government are represented by their chargé d'affaires at the embassy of the Republic of Panama in London.

PRIME MINISTER

Press Office

Q91. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Prime Minister what is the estimated cost of her Department's press office in 1990.

The Prime Minister: The latest estimate of total expenditure by my press office in 1989-90 is £361,520.

West German Railways

Q101. Mr. Adley: To ask the Prime Minister when she next intends to meet Chancellor Kohl; and if she will raise with him his Government's railway investment policy.

The Prime Minister: I next expect to meet Chancellor Kohl at the annual Konigswinter conference on 29 March. I do not expect to raise the question of his Government's railway investment policy with him.

Blaby

Q108. Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister what plans she has to visit Blaby.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to visit Leicestershire.

German Unification

Q112. Sir David Price: To ask the Prime Minister what is the Government's current policy towards the pace and scope of reunification between the Federal Republic of Germany and the German Democratic Republic.

The Prime Minister: The Government, in common with the other western allies have always supported German unification provided that it comes about as a result of the freely expressed choice of the people of the two German states. It must respect the relevant agreements and treaties and all of the principles of the Helsinki final act. The Government's aim has been to see a framework within which the full implications of Germany's unification could be properly worked out. We very much welcome the achievement of that framework with the agreement at the open skies conference in Ottawa to start meetings of the four powers and the two German states.

Barley Mow Estate, Limehouse

Q.171 Ms. Gordon: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will visit the Barley Mow estate in Limehouse.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Environment (International Co-operation)

Q.183 Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a further statement on the United Kingdom's contribution to international co-operation on environmental issues.

The Prime Minister: The Government work to protect the global environment through a wide range of international organisations including the European Community, the United Nations and the OECD. Our £3 million annual contribution to the United Nations environment programme is the third highest in the world. In my speech to the United Nations General Assembly last November I drew attention to the problem of global climate change, one of the greatest threats to the world environment. I also reiterated our call for an international framework convention on climate change which has been widely supported. We are playing an active part in the intergovernmental panel on climate change and we have committed an additional £100 million over the next three years to help conserve tropical forests.

Downing Street Services

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what services at 10 Downing street are contracted out; what is the cost per service per year to public funds, respectively; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The contracted-out services regularly used by my office include the following:

Service	Estimated Annual Cost £
Window Cleaning	3,000
Catering	24,570
Laundry and Dry Cleaning	4,800
Taxis	7,420
Switchboard	223,000

In addition, in the current year, my office has made use of other contracted-out services for minor maintenance and redecoration and the management of refurbishment of the state rooms. The costs of all these contracted-out services are met from moneys voted by Parliament.

Downing Street (Security)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister what level of public scrutiny exists over the provision of security expenditure associated with Downing street.

The Prime Minister: Expenditure associated with 10 Downing street is carried on the Cabinet Office (OMCS) class XX, vote 1 and is brought to account in the annual appropriation account which is audited and certified by the Comptroller and Auditor General.

Engagements

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 22 February.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 22 February.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 22 February.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 22 February.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 22 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today, including one with the German Defence Minister and one with the National Pensioners Convention.

HEALTH

Food Safety

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what legislation to safeguard health is being considered in respect of blood gel plasma meat products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food gave the hon. Member for Truro (Mr. Taylor) on 16 February at columns 444-46. As with any other food, fitness for human consumption is subject to the Food Act 1984 and regulations made under that Act. There is no need to legislate separately on safety grounds.

Hospital Trusts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department plans the contracting out of any additional services; and whether self-governing trusts will be allowed to contract out nursing or medical services.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are no plans for another central initiative for additional specific NHS services to be subject to mandatory competitive tendering. Competitive tendering does, however, offer scope for increasing effectiveness and value for money across a wide range of services. We shall continue to support and encourage its extension. NHS trusts will be free to decide how best to provide services in order to fulfil the contracts that they make with health authorities and other purchasers.

Abortions

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the number of mentions of rape or incest in certificates for abortions performed on pregnancies of 18 weeks' or more gestation, but excluding any mention of statutory grounds 1, 4, 5 and 6.

Mr. Freeman: There was one abortion notification form received for England and Wales during 1988 for an abortion performed at 18 weeks' or more gestation, under either grounds 2 or 3 of the Abortion Act 1967, on which rape was mentioned. There were no mentions of incest in the same categories.

It should be noted that neither rape nor incest are in themselves statutory grounds for performing an abortion, and are not required to be specified on the notification form by the certifying doctor. The available data, therefore, can be compiled only from occasions on which such information is volunteered on the notification form.

Toxic Shock Syndrome

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he has any evidence as to whether women are at risk of contracting toxic shock syndrome through using tampons;

(2) whether his Department has evidence to confirm or deny the United States Federal Drugs Agency's list assessment of contracting toxic shock syndrome at one to 17 per 100,000 women and that there is a risk of death.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information received from the public health laboratory service (PHLS) suggests that in recent years there has been on average one death per year from toxic shock syndrome (TSS) associated with tampon use in the United Kingdom. The public health laboratory service intends to publish data on the incidence of toxic shock syndrome shortly—which will include data on tampon-related toxic shock syndrome.

Tampons

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to introduce standardised absorbency regulations for tampons.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This Department and the Department of Trade and Industry have asked the industry to show the grades of absorbency of tampons clearly on the packets.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he is aware of any research which has been conducted to ascertain whether tampon usage may be linked to the incidence of cervical cancer.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We are not aware of evidence of a causal link between sanitary protection products and cervical cancer.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will conduct research into the health effects of tampon usage including toxic shock syndrome, vaginal ulcerations and the possibility of tampon fibres becoming attached to vaginal membranes.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are no present plans to do so.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department has conducted any research into links between tampon absorbency and the incidence of toxic shock syndrome.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No, but there has been such research in the United States.

NHS Reform

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish of 12 February, Official Report, column 26, relating to arrangements for patients in Denton and Reddish, if he will make a statement on the implications for these arrangements of the proposed reforms of the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: Stockport and Tameside, in common with other district health authorities, will soon be making arrangements to discuss with general practitioners treating residents in their areas what future arrangements should be made for contracts for hospital treatment in a wide range of hospitals, including NHS trust hospitals, hospitals they manage themselves and those managed by other district health authorities. The reform of the National Health Service will provide for better treatment and better value for money leading to more treatment for more patients as the standards achieved by the best hospitals are rewarded by the flow of additional resources.

Tranquillisers

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the new tranquilliser Flucto-Trazepan has yet been submitted for approval; and whether it is being tested to ensure that it is not addictive and does not have dangerous side effects.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: For reasons of commercial confidentiality it is not usual practice to disclose information about whether or not an application for a product licence has been received or the progress of any such application.

Nursing Staff, Leeds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nursing staff have yet to have their regrading resolved or are currently awaiting appeals in (a) Leeds Western health authority and (b) Leeds Eastern health authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Wythenshawe Hospital

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 7 February, Official Report, column 706, if he will seek a further assurance from the chairman of the North Western regional health authority about expediting a reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe of 16 January to the chairman of the North Western regional health authority about the urgent problems facing the regional cardiac unit, raised with the right hon. Member by all the consultant cardiologists and cardiac surgeons at Wythenshawe hospital.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that Mr. Bruce Martin, chairman of the North Western regional health authority replied on 21 February 1990 to the letter of 16 January 1990 from the right hon. Member.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will open discussions with the South Manchester and Trafford health authorities to explore the possibility of a rationalisation of Wythenshawe hospital's services in conjunction with Trafford general hospital rather than Withington hospital.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is for the North Western regional health authority to consider, with South Manchester district health authority and other district authorities affected, the proposals made by the South Manchester authority to rationalise acute and priority services at the Wythenshawe and Withington hospitals. The regional health authority is well aware of the contribution that Wythenshawe hospital makes to the hospital care of residents in South Trafford, and it should certainly take account of this in considering any proposals for significant change made by the South Manchester district health authority.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the cost of a settlement for ambulance personnel in England of (a) 6·5 per cent. from April 1989 to 1990, backdated to April 1989 with an additional 3 per cent. from April 1990 with an offer of further negotiations in October 1990 and (b) 9 per cent. from April 1989, backdated to April 1989 with an offer of further negotiations in October 1990.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The increase in employers' pay costs for ambulance personnel in England for each of the proposed 18-month settlement options is as follows:

Option (a): £25·5 million
Option (b): £30·3 million

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what has been the total cost of using private ambulances during the current ambulance workers' dispute;

(2) what has been the total cost of using taxis in lieu of ambulances during the current ambulance workers' dispute.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We do not collect this information centrally.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the total cost for items other than labour arising from the current ambulance workers' dispute in the following regions: (i) Nottingham, (ii) Manchester, (iii) Essex, (iv) West Yorkshire and (v) Northumbria.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: This detailed information is not collected centrally.

Food Poisoning

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the number of cases notified to him of the following for each year since 1980 until the latest date for which figures are available: (a) food poisoning in general, (b) salmonella, (c) salmonella enteritidis, (d) salmonella enteritidis P4, (e) salmonella typhimurium, (f) campylobacter and (g) listeriosis, respectively;

(2) if he will list the number of cases notified to him of the following for January: (a) food poisoning in general, (b) salmonella, (c) salmonella enteritidis, (d) salmonella enteritidis P4, (e) salmonella typhimurium, (f) campylobacter and (g) listeriosis.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table:

EMPLOYMENT

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Eggar: At present the following firms provide security for the Department:

Reliance Security Services
Compass Security
Group 4 Security
High Peak Security Services
Chubb Wardens Ltd.
Securicor Ltd.
Securiguard Ltd.
Armaguard
Century Security
Stirling Guards
Securisystem Ltd.
Dagenham Motorsecurity Ltd.

Health and Safety

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many newly established factory premises were registered with each of the Health and Safety Executive's area offices in each of the last five years.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Hong Kong

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the annual allocation of work permits for unskilled applicants from Hong Kong will be completed.

Mr. Eggar: An announcement about the arrangements for the 1990 dependent territories quota will be made soon.

Work Permits (Domestic Servants)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many work permits were granted in 1989 to foreigners described as domestic servants.

Mr. Eggar: A total of 36 work permits were granted for employment in this category under the provision of the dependent territories quota which allows a limited number of overseas nationals from the remaining dependent territories to come for work below the normal occupational skills criteria of the work permit scheme.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what employment regulations govern persons brought into the country as domestic servants by (a) foreigners and (b) agencies based in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: Such people, once they have established that they ordinarily work in Great Britain, are covered by the employment protection legislation in the same way as British employees.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what regulations govern the establishment of agencies in the United Kingdom which import domestic servants from abroad.

Mr. Eggar: Employment agencies, including those which recruit domestic servants from abroad, must be licensed under the Employment Agencies Act 1973. Regulations made under the Act (SI 1976 No. 715) set standards of conduct to protect the interests of workers and clients.

Further Education

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will set out, in 1987 prices, the expenditure on work-related further education in (a) 1986-87, (b) 1987-88, (c) 1988-89, (d) 1989-90 and (e) the projected expenditure for 1990-91.

Mr. Nicholls: The total expenditure on work-related further education by the Employment Department Group Training Agency (and its predecessors, the Training Commission and the Manpower Services Commission) is as follows:

	£ million
1986-87	110·0
1987-88	106·7
1988-89	106·3
1989-90	93·1
1990-91	89·8

The figures shown are at constant 1986-87 prices and were calculated by use of the GDP deflator index.

Action for Jobs

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much of the total expenditure on the action for jobs campaign in 1988-89 was attributed to printed material; how much was attributed to television advertising; and how much was attributed to other expenditure.

Mr. Eggar: Expenditure on action for jobs printed material in 1988-89 was £287,000; expenditure on action for jobs television advertising in 1988-89 was £123,000; and other expenditure relating to the action for jobs campaign in 1988-89 was £190,000.

Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number and percentage of (a) people who started training with a training manager from the guarantee group and (b) people who started training with a training manager from the aim group between September 1988 and December 1989 inclusive for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: A total of 79,000 people (14 per cent. of all entrants) entered employment training from the guarantee group and 173,000 (32 per cent.) from the aim group between September 1988 and December 1989.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number in employment training of (a) people aged 18 to 25 years who have been unemployed for between six to 12 months and (b) people aged 18 to 50 years who have been unemployed for over two years in each of the months September 1988 to December 1989 inclusive for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The information is provided in the table:

Employment training aim and guarantee group entrants September 1988 to December 1989

ENVIRONMENT

Association of District Councils

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the Association of District Councils; and what issues were raised.

Mr. Chris Patten: My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities addressed the Association of District Councils national symposium on 23 January. He spoke about the revenue support grant settlement.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the proposed rate of poll tax for all councils and districts which have declared a rate, together with the average rate per head payable in the current financial year.

Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the number of charging authorities which have community charges higher than the Government estimate and how many are less than that estimate; and if he will list the authorities.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 21 February.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how the figure of £2,280·12 in paragraph 3.1a of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) was arrived at; and what effect the choice of this figure has on standard spending assessments arrived at for Grimsby.

Mr. Chope: The figure referred to was arrived at by my right hon. Friend after full consultation with local authority respresentatives. It has no effect on the standard spending assessment for Great Grimsby since, as a non-metropolitan district, Great Grimsby is not responsible for social services for children.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will set out the reasons for the variations in the standard spending assessment on a per capita basis between the London boroughs of Waltham Forest, Enfield, Redbridge, Haringey, Hackney and Barnet.

Mr. Chope: The standard spending assessments have been calculated according to the formulae set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England). The results of these calculations for each service element are listed in pounds per relevant adult for the London boroughs requested:

Standard spending assessments

	Education £ per adult	Personal social services £ per adult	Highway maintenance £ per adult	Other services £ per adult	Capital financing £ per adult	Total £ per adult
Waltham Forest	510	170	36	193	93	1,002
Enfield	452	110	38	134	82	816
Redbridge	414	99	36	136	65	751
Haringey	561	230	35	251	104	1,181
Hackney	701	344	40	359	124	1,569
Barnet	389	103	35	128	52	707

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what gain or loss has resulted for Brighton borough council as a consequence of the reduction in the standard spending assessment for the borough; what was the comparable grant in the previous four financial years; and on what basis the assessment was reduced.

Mr. Chris Patten: Brighton borough council's standard spending assessment (SSA) for 1990-91 reflects a 2·7 per cent. increase over the comparable figure for 1989-90 grant-related expenditure (GRE). It is not possible to determine what grant gain or loss has resulted for an authority as a consequence of a variation between its adjusted 1989-90 GRE and its 1990-91 SSA, because the methodology for calculating grant entitlement under the community charge system is different from that used under the domestic rating system. Brighton borough council's SSA was calculated on the same basis as that used for all other district councils, that is, the basis set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England).

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the detailed criteria leading to the standard spending assessment for Solihull borough; and what assessment he has made of the resultant effect of his calculations.

Mr. Chope: The details of the method of calculating the standard spending assessments for all local authorities are set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) approved by the House on 18 January. The result of the calculations for Solihull is an assessment of £103·664 million.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make an estimate of the total number of households in the London borough of Hillingdon that will be eligible for relief under the community charge transitional relief scheme.

Mr. Chope: I estimate that about 6 million individuals will be entitled to transitional relief in England. No estimates have been made of the number of persons eligible at the level of individual local authorities, but I understand that the London borough of Hillingdon has estimated that residents of more than 33,000 properties in the borough are potentially eligible for transitional relief.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial assistance the London borough of Hillingdon will receive under the community charge transitional relief scheme; and what estimate he has made of the amount of transitional relief available on a notional charge of £359, excluding any overspending by the council to (a) a single occupier whose rateable value does not exceed £94 and (b) two occupiers whose rateable value does not exceed £257.

Mr. Chope: For the proposed arrangements for reimbursing local authorities for the costs of the community charge transitional relief scheme, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, Central (Mr. Lord) on 15 February, Official Report, column 405. In general, the transitional relief scheme provides assistance where the assumed community charge next year is more than £156 above the assumed rates bill (defined as the rateable value times the assumed rates poundage) this year. In the examples quoted, however, the assumed charge or charges is less than £156 above this year's rates bill and no relief would therefore be payable.

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the estimated yield for the community charge in the year beginning 1 April 1990.

Mr. Chope: It is not possible to make an estimate of the actual yield until charging authorities have set their charges. However, if authorities spend in line with the assumptions used for the settlement, charge payers will have to find about £7·55 billion, after rebates and transitional relief, towards spending of £32·8 billion. If authorities increase their spending, the burden on charge payers will be higher.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the elements which make up the standard spending assessment relevant to local authorities for the purpose of the community charge.

Mr. Chope: The details of the method of assessing standard spending assessments are set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) approved by the House on 18 January.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the rate of inflation assumed for local authorities for the purposes of standard spending assessments.

Mr. Chope: There is no specific assumption about inflation incorporated in standard spending assessments. However, total standard spending for 1990-91, from which standard spending assessments for 1990-91 are derived, is 11 per cent. higher than the equivalent figure for 1989-90.

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about local authorities requiring community charge payers to make their payments by direct debits, standing orders or cash but not by cheques drawn on their bank accounts.

Mr. Chope: It is for local authorities to agree with charge payers which method they will use to make payment. I should expect the local authority to have regard inter alia to convenience for charge payers and the cost-effectiveness for the authority of particular methods of payment. I am not aware of any authority that is refusing to accept cheques in payment of the community charge.

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) for calculation purposes to determine rate support grant in (a) Middlesbrough, (b) Stockton and (c) Langbaurgh, how many (i) one-parent families and (ii) black families were assessed as resident in the relevant areas;

(2) how much Langbaurgh would receive under the new grant scheme for local council support following the introduction of the community charge if (a) 2,000, (b) 5,000 and (c) 10,000 of its residents were black; and how much it is currently expected to receive;

(3) what weighting is given in calculating the rate support grant to the proportion of immigrants in the population from (a) the West Indies, (b) Pakistan, (c) Bangladesh, (d) Nigeria, (e) India, (f) Hong Kong, (g) Israel, (h) Australia, (i) New Zealand, (j) Canada, (k) Eire, (l) EEC countries, (m) Turkey, (n) Greece and (o) the United States of America;

(4) which are (a) the five local authorities which receive most support in cash terms and (b) the five authorities which receive the least support in cash terms under the current rate support grant scheme by virtue of the number of black heads of households.

Mr. Chope: I have today written to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) in real terms what was the annual local government net current expenditure per head of population in Stockport during each of the last three years for which figures are available;

(2) in real terms what was the annual local government net current expenditure per head of population in (a) Manchester and (b) Trafford during each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Net current expenditure per head in real terms (1989-90 prices)

Manchester city council
1987-88	804
1988-89	676
1989-90	704
Trafford borough council
1987-88	493
1988-89	503
1989-90	494
Stockport borough council
1987-88	475
1988-89	487
1989-90	466

Notes:

1. The GDP deflator has been used to convert cash values to constant prices.
2. Population figures used to derive per capita values are Office of Population Censuses and Surveys mid year estimates of total population.
3. Polytechnics were transferred from the local authority sector in April 1989.

Homelessness

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a breakdown of the amounts of the additional £250 million given to local authorities to deal with homelessness according to (a) explicit or earmarked purposes, (b) region and (c) money to tenants to enter owner-occupation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department is currently considering bids for the £112 million to be made available to local authorities for schemes to relieve homelessness in 1990-91. The Housing Corporation is also considering bids for the £36 million to be allocated to housing associations for similar schemes. Announcements on the projects to be supported will be made as soon as possible.

Water Companies

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people who applied for shares in the privatised water companies have not yet received their shares despite having their cheques cashed.

Mr. Trippier: At the end of last week the receiving banks for the water share offers were dealing with about 970 outstanding requests for replacement interim share certificates.

Archaeology

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will now publish guidance on archaeology and development.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has issued today, for public consultation, draft guidance aimed at providing local planning authorities in England, developers, archaeologists, amenity societies, property owners and the general public with advice on Government policy on ancient monuments and archaeological sites and on the handling of archaeological remains and discoveries in the planning process. Its key message is that developers and local planning authorities should discuss outline development proposals at an early stage so that the needs of archaeology and development can be reconciled. A copy of the consultation paper has been placed in the Library.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in which years before 1 April 1989 the number of members of the Nature Conservancy Council has exceeded 18.

Mr. Chris Patten: Before 1 April 1989, the number appointed to serve on the Nature Conservancy Council rose to 19 only during the year April 1981 to April 1982.

Mortgage Interest Rates

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average gross mortgage rate of the building societies from March 1974 to May 1979; and what was the corresponding figure for June 1979 to January 1990.

Mr. Chris Patten: The estimated average gross mortgage interest rates of building societies for the periods March 1974 to May 1979 and June 1979 to December 1989 are 10·8 per cent. and 12·5 per cent. respectively.

River Rother

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans for a major review of consent procedures in relation to discharges into rivers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The NRA is already conducting a review of the way in which discharge consents for all types of discharge are set, and the way in which compliance with the terms of consent is assessed, to ensure that the consent system can effectively protect water quality and enable pollution control standards to be enforced. I await the NRA's conclusions with interest.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instigate an official inquiry into all discharges into the River Rother; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State does not consider that it would be appropriate for him to institute such an inquiry. This is a matter for the National Rivers Authority, which is under a statutory duty to review, from time to time, all consented discharges, and is responsible for securing such improvements as it considers will be needed to meet new statutory water quality objectives to be set up by the Secretary of State. I understand that major improvements to sewage and industrial discharges are already planned or under way which are designed to raise the quality of the River Rother.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the breaches of consent relating to the discharges into the River Rother, and the number of prosecutions, since 1980 to the present time.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Details of all breaches of consent are available on the public register maintained by the National Rivers Authority. For information on prosecutions, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 18n January 1990, at column 360.

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the ability of the National Rivers Authority to test for any substances that it considers may endanger health.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The National Rivers Authority is responsible for maintaining and improving the quality of controlled waters. The most up-to-date analytical techniques are used to test for a wide range of substances. The authority has commissioned three additional laboratories which will be in operation during 1991.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what costs have fallen to local authorities in England and Wales as a result of provision of services which otherwise would have been provided by the ambulance service during the current ambulance dispute.

Mr. Chope: Information is not held centrally about the cost of any arrangements which may have been made between local authorities and health authorities for the provision of assistance during the ambulance dispute. The cost of assistance provided by military, police and other organisations will be met by the relevant health authorities.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made to reduce the level of chlorofluorocarbons in the atmosphere; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Stratospheric chlorine levels are expected to start falling when the use of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) is cut by 85 per cent. In the current renegotiation of the Montreal protocol, the European Community position, based on our own proposals, is to require this by 1995, earlier than any other proposal. British consumption of CFCs has already been cut by over 50 per cent., 10 years earlier than the protocol currently requires.

Drinking Water

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of benzene contamination is acceptable in drinking water; and what are the standards required in Britain, the rest of the European Economic Community and the United States of America, respectively.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989, which incorporate the requirements of the EC drinking water directive, set a standard of 10 microgrammes per litre for dissolved or emulsified hydrocarbons, which includes benzene; however, the regulations do not contain a specific standard for benzene. The World Health Organisations guideline value for benzene in drinking water is 10 microgrammes per litre and the United States maximum contaminant level is 5 microgrammes per litre.

Transferred Property (Sales)

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy relating to requests for his consent under section 105 of the Housing Act 1988 to sales of transferred property, where a disposal cost was attributable to that property on transfer.

Mr. Chope: Subject to certain exemptions, notably sales under the right to buy, section 105 of the Housing Act 1988 provides that new landlords under part IV of the Act —tenants' choice—may not dispose of property acquired by them under part IV from a public sector landlord, except with the consent of the Secretary of State.

Mr. Chope: Subject to certain exemptions, notably sales under the right to buy, section 105 of the Housing Act 1988 provides that new landlords under part IV of the Act —tenants' choice—may not dispose of property acquired by them under part IV from a public sector landlord, except with the consent of the Secretary of State.

The statutory arrangements for valuation of property transferring under part IV take into account the cost of any works needed to bring property up to the state of repair required by the public sector landlord's repairing obligations. Where there is a disposal cost—"dowry"—however, the valuation cannot make provision for any additional works of improvements going beyond repair. Tenants may wish these to be carried out, particularly where the properties are below current accepted standards of amenity, as may be the case where dowries are payable. Disposals of some transferred assets may offer a prospect

My right hon. Friend will consider applications made to him for disposal consent on their merits, having regard to all the circumstances of the case. However, in instances where a dowry was attributable to the property under section 99 of the Act, he will, in principle, be prepared to entertain such applications, where proceeds from the disposals are to be used to fund improvements to, or demolition and replacement of, other acquired dwellings, for continued letting at rents within the reach of those in low-paid employment.

My right hon. Friend is also required, by section 105(4) of the Act, before giving consent to satisfy himself that appropriate steps have been taken to consult any tenants of the property to be disposed of, and to have regard to their responses.

Under section 105(4) as amended, my right hon. Friend may impose conditions on his consent, requiring the new landlord to make a payment to the public sector landlord from whom he acquired the property. Again, he will consider individual cases on their merits. However, it is his general intention that the new landlord should be required to pay to the public sector landlord the excess of any proceeds of the disposal over the amount reasonably required to fund works appropriate to the circumstances, after allowing for any contribution which might be made from projected rental income, dowry payments, or right-to-buy sale proceeds in excess of those assumed in determination of the dowry.

House Renovation Grants

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the new system of house renovation grants provided in part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 will be brought into effect in England and Wales.

Mr. Chope: With my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, I have considered very carefully requests by the local authority associations and others that introduction of the new system should be deferred to allow further consultation on the rest of resources regulations and to give local authorities more time to prepare for implementation.

In the light of these representations we have therefore decided that the main provisions of part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 should be brought into effect on 1 July 1990 and not from 1 April as originally planned. From April to June the existing system of home improvement grants will remain in force.

We have, however, decided to bring into effect the new assistance for minor works on 1 April. This will enable local authorities to continue to provide help for insulation measures for those on certain state benefits, and also for certain other purposes such as repair work for the elderly.

Part VII of the 1989 Act, introducing renewal areas in place of housing action areas and general improvement areas, will also be brought into force on 1 April, together with a number of provisions in part IX of the Act dealing with unfit housing.

My Department and the Welsh Office are writing to all local housing authorities with further details of how these provisions in respect of the repair and improvement of private sector housing are to be implemented. Advice on all those provisions coming into force on 1 April will be issued shortly before then, and further advice on the new grant system will be published well before 1 July.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the leaflet for the public on the new grants legislation will be available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 19 February 1990]: A new edition of "Housing Booklet 14" describing grants for the repair and improvement of private sector housing will be published before the new system is brought into force on 1 July 1990.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the prescribed form for application under the new grants system will be available.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 19 February 1990]: We are still considering whether to prescribe an application form for the new grants system.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the regulations on the new test of resources for assessment of housing renovation grants will be issued; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 19 February 1990]: Officials wrote to the local authority associations with a draft of the test of resources regulations on 19 January, and consultations are continuing. The regulations will be laid before Parliament as soon as possible after consultation has been completed, and will be issued to local authorities thereafter.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will delay the date of implementation of the new housing renovation grants system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 20 February 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham).

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department intends to publish guidelines to parts VII and VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 15 February 1990]: I have announced today that part VII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 will be implemented on 1 April, and the new grant system in part VIII on 1 July. My Department will issue advice to local authorities in advance of those dates, as well as publishing a booklet for the general public on the new grant system.

Buildings (Cleaning)

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any information on the annual cost of cleaning urban buildings blackened by smoke in the United Kingdom; and what his Department estimates to be the relative contributions to such blackening from the combustion of (a) coal, (b) smokeless fuel, (c) fuel oil, (d) gas oil, (e) motor spirit, (f) derv, and (g) other sources.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 19 February 1990]: My Department does not collate information on the specific costs of removing black smoke deposits from urban buildings. However, it is estimated that the total United Kingdom stone-cleaning market is of the order of £75 million.

There are no figures available for the relative contributions of fuel combustion to blackening. However, estimates of the percentage contribution of the combustion of different fuel types to black smoke emissions in the United Kingdom will be published in the next air quality statistical bulletin 90(1) of the digest of environmental protection and water statistics.

The two major sources of black smoke are domestic coal combustion and diesel fuel. Since the introduction of the Clean Air Acts (Great Britain 1956 and 1968, Northern Ireland 1964) emissions of smoke from all sources have fallen by over 85 per cent. The United Kingdom Government have long recognised the need to curb emissions from diesel engines and are pressing the European Commission to produce proposals for an EC directive providing strict standards for emissions, including particulates, from HGVs and buses. In 1988, the EC Environment Council agreed a directive setting tight particulate emission standards for cars.

New Grants System

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many civil servants have been assigned to prepare the regulations and procedures for the new grants system; what legal assistance they have; and when the work will be completed.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 19 February 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

If the hon. Member cares to say in which new grants system he is interested, we shall write to him.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by year for the last 10 years, the number of service men serving on (a) Valiant and (b) Churchill class nuclear submarines, who have been diagnosed as suffering from radiation contamination.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No personnel in any class of Royal Navy nuclear-powered submarine have received a radiation dose from radioactive contamination during the last 10 years.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the results of the inspections carried out on the five Royal Navy Valiant and Churchill class nuclear submarines, in respect of suspected reactor faults.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to comment on specific features of the Royal Navy's nuclear-powered submarines. The programme of inspections of all the Royal Navy's nuclear-powered submarines is continuing.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the expected service life of (a) Valiant and (b) Churchill class nuclear submarines.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We expect Valiant and Churchill class submarines to remain in service for their design lives of about 25 to 30 years.

NATO Exercises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contributions his Department will make to the NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no NATO exercises due to be held in Norway during March. A Norwegian national exercise, designated "Cold Winter", is planned to take place in which several members of the Alliance, including the United Kingdom, have been invited to take part. Three Commando Brigade Royal Marines together with several Royal Navy ships and RAF aircraft will form the British contribution.

Colin Wallace

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in regard to the appearance of Ministers and civil servants from his Department before the Defence Select Committee inquiry into the Colin Wallace affair.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend's policy will be to respond as helpfully as possible, in accordance with normal conventions.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total man hours performed by Army personnel involved in ambulance duties in the United Kingdom during the current ambulance workers' dispute.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A total of 960,234 service man hours were deployed in the period to 20 February.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total number of man hours performed by Army personnel during the current ambulance workers' dispute in the following regions; and how many of these hours were paid at overtime rates: (a) Nottingham, (b) Manchester, (c) Essex, (d) West Yorkshire and (e) Northumbria.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Military ambulances have not operated in Nottingham, West Yorkshire or Northumbria during the current dispute. In Manchester and Essex the number of service man hours deployed up until 20 February were 4,600 and 19,740 respectively. Service personnel are not eligible for overtime payments.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average hourly rate of pay for Army personnel employed on ambulance duties during the current ambulance workers' dispute.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Rates of pay vary according to a number of factors, such as rank and qualification. An average hourly rate of pay could be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

Officer Courses

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make arrangements for hon. Members to visit courses for prospective officers of the armed forces and higher courses for serving officers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: If the hon. Member would care to write to my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces with details of what he has in mind, my noble Friend will be glad to consider his request.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much of the April 1990 income support allowances for (a) single people and (b) married couples represents compensation for the 20 per cent. community charge contribution; and if he will consider increasing the community charge element within the allowances if the average community charge payable in 1990-91 is higher than anticipated.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 5 February at column 524.

The level of income support is reviewed each year as part of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's obligations under section 63 of the Social Security Act 1986.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are in receipt of income support in (a) west Leeds, (b) Leeds, (c) west Yorkshire and (d) England as a whole; and what are the corresponding figures for those in receipt of supplementary benefit for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is in the table:

Supplementary benefit/income support live load

	Leeds West	Leeds	West Yorkshire	England
1985-86	11,744	69,972	198,797	4,240,546
1986-87	11,939	71,146	200,432	4,308,787
1987-88	12,545	71,917	199,886	4,251,651
1988-89	11,054	63,634	177,182	3,651,273
[1]1989-90	10,538	62,374	175,827	3,602,366

[1] Data are provisional and subject to amendment.

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action, which include a number where benefit payment has ceased but other action is continuing.

Note: Data for earlier years are unavailable.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will make it his policy, when considering claims for income support and family credit, that the same methods are used in respect of each benefit for calculating the number of hours worked by claimants;

(2) if he will set out in the Official Report the detailed methods used to calculate the numbers of hours worked by claimants when determining eligibility for (a) income support and (b) family credit;

(3) why different methods of calculation are used in determining the numbers of hours worked by claimants when considering claims for income support or family credit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The method used to calculate the number of hours worked is the same in both income support and family credit. The rules are set out in regulation 5 of the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987 and in regulation 4 of the Family Credit (General) Regulations 1987. The application of these rules in individual cases is a matter for the independent adjudicating authorities.

Occupational Deafness (Refusal of Benefit)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken to identify those claimants who were wrongly refused disablement benefit for occupational deafness in the light of the Court of Appeal judgment in McKiernon's case.

Mr. Scott: The implications of this judgment are still being considered.

Students (Benefits)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a chart or table showing for each academic year since 1979 the average amount of benefit or support, of each kind, received by a student in full-time higher education.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information about the amount of benefit claimed by students is not routinely collected and is not therefore available in the form requested. However, details of students' income from all sources are contained in surveys carried out by Research Services Limited on behalf of the Department of Education and Science. Copies of the surveys, which cover the 1986-87 academic years, are available in the Library.

Disability

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will take steps to ensure that people in the areas covered by the Derby social security offices who were entitled to a severe disablement premium prior to the amendment of regulation 3(2)(c) of the Income Support (General) Regulations on 9 October 1989 receive appropriate arrears of benefit at the earliest possible date.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Entitlement to the severe disability premium is a matter for the independent adjudicating authorities, including social security appeal tribunals. In some cases, awards of this premium by such tribunals have been suspended pending appeal, by the adjudication officer, to the social security commissioners. We are not aware of any delay in paying arrears of other awards of this premium by tribunals, but if the hon. Member has a particular case in mind perhaps she will write to me.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of people, in the period 10 December 1989 to 11 January 1990, who have been excluded from unemployment benefit by the new £43 weekly earnings rule.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 21 December 1989 at columns 404-5 which gave our estimate of the numbers who will lose unemployment benefit. Figures of the number of disallowances of unemployment benefit are not yet available.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of people between 10 December 1989 and 11 January 1990 who have been excluded from the unemployment total by the new £43 limit on weekly pay introduced on 10 December 1989.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Anyone working and earning in a week at least the amount of the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions will have any claim to unemployment benefit in that week disallowed. Such people are not excluded from the unemployment count and will be included in it if they continue to register as unemployed.

Family Credit

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the cost to his Department to date of advertising family credit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In the financial year 1988-89 the following amounts were spent on advertising family credit:

Amounts spent in 1988-89 financial year

TV	2,304,617
Press	587,667
Radio	173,052
Total	3,061,336
Amount spent in 1989-90 financial year
TV	4,047,612
Posters	1,313,333
Press	475,000
Total	5,835,281
GRAND TOTAL	£8,897,281

All sums include VAT, production and COI 1 per cent. commission.

Attendane Allowance

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to ensure that full advantage is taken of the extension of attendance allowance to children under the age of two years; and if the entitlement will be on the same basis as children under the age of 16 years currently receiving attendance allowance.

Mr. Scott: Information about the extension will be included in a new edition of the attendance allowance leaflet to be published in April. This will be supported by information for doctors, health visitors and others who may be advising parents. The publicity will be timed to coincide with the extension and will be maintained thereafter to inform the parents or guardians of newly eligible children of their entitlement. The regulations which I will be laying before the House will extend attendance allowance to children under two satisfy the entitlement conditions which currently apply to children up to the age of 16.

Social Fund

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he intends to alter the social fund budget allocation for 1990-91 in the light of the release of £3 million to supplement 1989-90 social fund expenditure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We are currently considering the amount to be allocated to individual local offices for 1990-91 and will make an announcement in due course.

Relocation

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement regarding the changes in the timetable of the London Department of Social Security relocation programme.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Experience in relocating the first group of offices was that conversion of cases to the income support computer system took longer than expected because of the number of cases requiring information or action to resolve errors. Therefore we have decided to adjust the timetable of the next group of offices, all of which have large income support loads.

The eight-week conversion period in the second group has been extended to 13 weeks as follows:

Euston—17 April 1990 (no change)
Paddington—16 July 1990
Highgate—15 October 1990
Finsbury Park—28 January 1991

The timetable for the transfer of income support cases to other social security centres remains unaltered.

It has also been decided that pensions and incapacity benefits cases will now be relocated simultaneously on the dates published for the transfer of the latter.

Pensioners

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in the light of the abolition of the earnings rule for retirement pensions what guidance his Department now gives to those approaching retirement as to the financial benefit of either claiming or deferring their retirement pension especially for those who have a deficient contribution record.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is the Department's policy to make information available to help individuals make informed choices and plan for their retirement.

Information on deferring retirement and contribution conditions for retirement pension is in leaflets produced by the Department. The retirement pension forecast advisory service provides individuals with a valuable forecast of their entitlement based upon their existing and forecast future contributions record.

Also, as part of the retirement pension claims package, which is sent to individuals four months before they are due to reach pensionable age, there is information on the effect on their pension of deferring their claim and the contribution conditions for retirement pension.

Computers

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what hardware and software packages relating to social security have been sent out for tender.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department has a large number of contracts with the private sector for the supply of hardware and the development of software in support of the social security operational strategy and other programmes of computerisation.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what software packages relating to social security have so far been developed with regard to benefits and especially incapacity benefits.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Most social security benefits have some form of automated assistance; we are at present in the process of developing a computer application for incapacity benefits.

Contingency Reserves

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what process was used to determine the allocation to local Department of Social Security offices of the £3 million released from the social security contingency reserves.

Mr. Scott: The additional allocations to local offices were made from money recovered during 1989-90 from social fund loan repayments. I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 31 January 1990 at columns 194-95 regarding the basis on which those allocations are made.

Community Charge

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether foster parent allowances will be treated as income when calculating entitlement to community charge benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The community charge benefit scheme will not treat as income any fostering allowance made to a claimant.

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost of applying individually to a husband and wife the £8,000 limit on assets which cause a community charge payer to be ineligible for rebates.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information on the individual capital holding of members of couples is not available.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the likely cost of community charge rebate for 1990-91; and how much that would increase if savings were to be disregarded.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 8 February 1990]: Expenditure on community charge benefit in England, Wales and Scotland in 1990-91 is currently forecast to be £1·75 billion. Information is not available to make precise estimates but it seems probable that expenditure would increase by between £250 million and £300 million if the capital limit was abolished and no income was assumed to be derived from capital holdings.

Correspondence

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will make it his policy that when a woman writes a letter to his Department in respect of her entitlement to benefit his offices will reply to the writer of that letter rather than her husband.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is already the policy for officers of the Department to reply direct to the writer of any letters rather than to a third party. I am aware of a particular case of a letter having been sent in error to the husband of one of the hon. Member's constituents, for which the local office manager has now apologised.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Mink Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mink farms are currently in operation in each county and region in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland; and what were the equivalent figures 12 months ago.

Mr. Maclean: Fifty mink farms (premises) are currently in operation in the United Kingdom, compared with 61 a year ago, as follows:

	As at 31 March 1989	As at 20 February 1990
England
Northern	16	13
Humberside	2	2
Northumberland	1	1
North Yorkshire	1	1
South Yorkshire	1	1
West Yorkshire	11	8
Midlands and West	18	15
Cheshire	2	1
Lancashire	14	12
Staffordshire	1	1
Greater Manchester	1	1
Eastern	7	7
Herefordshire	1	1
Lincolnshire	1	1
Norfolk	1	1
Suffolk	4	4
South Eastern	5	4
Buckinghamshire	1	1
Hampshire	2	2
Isle of Wight	1	1
West Sussex	1	—
South Western	6	4
Cornwall	2	2
Dorset	1	1
Gloucestershire	1	—
Wiltshire	2	1
Total England	52	43
Scotland	8	6
Northern Ireland	1	1
Total United Kingdom	61	50

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will instruct his officials to reinspect all mink farms to ensure that after the recent storms they continue to comply with current regulations;

(2) if he will revoke the licence of the mink farm in Stansted, Essex, following the recent large-scale escape of mink into surrounding countryside and buildings;

(3) what information he has on the escape of farmed mink following damage to their cages in the recent storms;

(4) whether he has revoked the licences of any mink farms following damage during the recent storms;

(5) whether he intends to review the conditions of the Mink Keeping Order.

Mr. Maclean: On 25 January very severe winds damaged a mink farm at Stansted and several animals escaped when their pens broke open after being blown through the perimeter fence. The owner fulfilled his statutory duty by notifying MAFF immediately, and as soon as the storm subsided the damage was repaired. Most of the escaped mink have been recaptured or accounted for, but eight are still missing. The licence of the farm has not been revoked. The circumstances of the escapes were wholly exceptional and the pens and fence have been made secure. This was the only notification of escaped mink following the storm.

All farms are visited at least annually by MAFF inspectors to check that the conditions of their licences are being respected. The Mink Keeping Order expires at the end of 1992 and its renewal will be reviewed well before then.

North Sea Dumping

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's definition of inert or harmless as a description of substances permitted to be dumped in the North sea by the 1987 North sea agreement.

Mr. Curry: Her Majesty's Government accept the definition of "inert materials of natural origin" contained in Oslo Commission decision 89/1 of 14 June 1989. This is

"solid, chemically-unprocessed geological material whose chemical constituents are unlikely to be released in the marine environment".

They include such materials as sand, gravel, stones and rock material originating on land as well as colliery waste; none of which have been contaminated by anthropogenic processes.

No comparable definition has been adopted for "harmless". This is a quality which has to be assessed on a case by case basis in the light of careful scientific assessment.

I can give some examples of characteristics of liquid industrial wastes which the Government consider harmless. They include wastes which are very rapidly neutralised in the sea into substances which are naturally present in the sea, such as salts and water. Organic constituents at trace levels are rapidly biodegraded and so can have no effects on marine life. No trace of wastes can be found by the most sensitive means of analysis within five minutes of dumping. Constituents of the wastes are tested on oyster embryos to ensure that they have no effects on particularly sensitive life forms in the sea.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under which section of the 1987 North sea agreement is the authorisation being granted by the Government for the dumping of paracetamol in the North sea.

Mr. Curry: The issue of licences for the deposit of substances from the United Kingdom in the sea is subject to the provisions of part II of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. In considering whether to grant such licences we take into account paragraphs 21 and 22 of the 1987 North sea conference declaration which permit the dumping of harmless industrial waste until practical land-based alternative means of disposal are available.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department is undertaking or planning to investigate the increase of detritus and domestic rubbish being entrapped in commercial fishing nets in the North sea.

Mr. Curry: The directorate of fisheries research is planning to monitor the incidence of litter in commercial fishing nets in the course of forthcoming cruises of fisheries research vessels.

Mr. Mans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends that dumping at sea of industrial waste covered by the 1987 North sea declaration will cease.

Mr. Gummer: Ever since the 1987 North sea declaration we have been working hard to identify acceptable land-based means of disposal for the industrial wastes which we have licensed for disposal at sea. I am very glad to be able to announce that we intend that none of these wastes will continue to be dumped at sea after the end of 1992. In two cases, however, it might not be technically feasible to meet this deadline. We will extend the licences for these two last wastes into 1993 only if absolutely necessary on technical grounds and for the shortest possible part of that year.

I am also glad to emphasise that we have already stopped the dumping at sea of more than half the industrial wastes which were licensed in 1987. Only nine wastes covered by the 1987 North sea declaration remain and some of these will cease to be dumped at sea in the course of this year.

The identification and implementation of acceptable land—based disposal alternatives on this times scale requires a high degree of commitment by the companies concerned. However, although the 1987 North sea declaration accepted that wastes such as ours which do not harm the sea could continue to be disposed of at sea as long as no practicable land-based means of disposal was available, the Government have been determined to ensure that these wastes ceased to be dumped at sea as soon as possible. I am extremely pleased that we have now been able to set a firm timetable for ending all these disposals at sea.

Bottled Water

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if any representations were made by his Department to the importers of Perrier water about traces of benzene identified in tests by the food safety directorate since August 1989; and when such contamination was first identified in Perrier water in Britain.

Mr. Maclean: Preliminary results from the food safety directorate's tests of United Kingdom supplies of Perrier water became available on 14 February. My officials made clear to the company that, although the levels detected here and in the United States posed a negligible risk to health, the Government were concerned at what appeared to be adventitious contamination by benzene.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidelines govern the quality and safety of bottled water sold in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The European Community directive on the exploitation and marketing of natural mineral waters (80/777) requires, inter alia, that all natural mineral waters must be officially recongised and monitored by a competent authority and that certain chemical and microbiological criteria must be met.

Other types of bottled drinking water are covered by the EC directive relating to the quality of water for human consumption (80/778). If the Food Safety Bill is passed, I would intend to use powers therein to make regulations specifically covering such bottled water. In the meantime advice to local authorities on the type and frequency of sampling water intended for bottling is contained in Department of the Environment circular 25/84 (Welsh Office circular 51/84).

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle confirmed as bovine spongiform encephalopathy sufferers have, immediately prior to notification, been the subject of bovine somatotropin experimentation; and what percentage these constitute of the total number of bovine somatotropin-treated cows.

Mr. Maclean: I am not aware that any animal in which BSE has been confirmed has previously been the subject of bovine somatotropin experimentation. Epidemiological studies conducted by the Ministry have not found any connection between the incidence of BSE and the use of pharmaceutical products.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those species of animals known to him as having a vertically transmitted form of spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: Scrapie, which occurs naturally in sheep and goats, is the only spongiform encephalopathy which is definitely known to be transmitted maternally. It is likely that the lamb or kid may become infected at birth or soon after being born, but whether true vertical transmission —i.e. infection contracted in utero before the lamb or kid is born—can occur is not certain.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, in the light of recommendations of the British Cattle Veterinary Association, he intends to act by prohibiting surgical interference with suspect bovine spongiform encephalopathy cases.

Mr. Maclean: No. The Ministry does not encourage unnecessary surgical interference with bovine spongiform encephalopathy suspects, but the decision as to whether or not surgery is appropriate in any particular case is a matter of veterinary judgment and professional ethics in the light of individual circumstances.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy were reported in Lancashire from August 1988 until 14 February 1990.

Mr. Maclean: From 1 August 1988 to 14 February 1990, 218 suspected cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy were reported in Lancashire.

Wild Birds (Poisoning)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce measures to prevent the use of alphachloralose for the purpose of the illegal poisoning of wild birds.

Mr. Maclean: Alphachloralose is widely available, not just as a pesticide. The Government seek to deter illegal poisoning of wildlife by investigating every notified incident and pursuing those where the evidence suggests that pesticides have been abused. The cost of this is defrayed from the levy on holders of pesticide approvals.

Fishing Vessels (Decommissioning Grants)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has about decommissioning grants available to fishing vessels and the amount put in by European Community sources for decommissioning for (a) Holland, (b) France, (c) Denmark, (d) the United Kingdom and (e) Spain.

Mr. Curry: There is provision under EC regulation 4028/86 for decommissioning grants over the period 1987 to 1991. They are available to all member states.

The information requested on EC funding is not centrally available, but I will supply the information as soon as I have obtained it from the commission.

Carbadox

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his reasons for banning the feed additive carbadox.

Mr. Gummer: Carbadox is an active ingredient used in growth-promoting feed additives. It is not banned in the EC but is authorised, subject to strict conditions by the Community directive governing feed additives. This is binding on all member countries although no product containing carbadox is currently licensed in the United Kingdom.

Bananas

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the plans by the Dominican Republic to export bananas to the European Community.

Mr. Curry: Our policy on the import of bananas permits the United Kingdom to fulfil its long-standing commitment to provide preferential access for bananas from our traditional suppliers, Jamaica and the Windward Islands.

During the negotiations last autumn on the renewal of the Lomé Convention and on the accession to it of new members, the Dominican Republic gave certain undertakings to Caribbean members of the group of ACP countries with respect to exports of bananas. We consider that it is important that the DR should abide by its undertakings and hope that it and the ACP will be able to discuss and resolve their differences.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Violent Crime

12. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what, in each of the last five years, has been the increase in reported incidents of violent crime.

50. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what in each of the last five years has been the change in reported incidents of violent crime.

Mr. John Patten: Between 1984 and 1988 the average annual percentage increase in recorded crimes of violence was 7·9 per cent. Full-year figures for 1989 are not yet available.

Prison Recidivism

13. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to reduce prison recidivism within the 15 to 22 years age groups; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Our proposals for punishing more young offenders in the community should help to reduce reoffending. When young people receive custodial sentences, our aim is to help to prepare them to lead law-abiding and useful lives on their release, with greater emphasis on the development of personal responsibility.

Concessionary Television Licences

14. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received over the last 12 months about concessionary television licences for pensioners.

Mr. Mellor: In my reply to the hon. Member's question of 22 January I confirmed that in 1989 we received 212 letters and four petitions about reduced-price or free television licences for pensioners. Since 1 January 1990 we have received a further 46 such letters, 23 of them from hon. Members.

Birmingham Pub Bombings

15. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on the Birmingham pub bombings case.

Mr. Waddington: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale).

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands showing on what date and on whose initiative Assistant Chief Constable Tom Meffen interviewed the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin).

Mr. John Patten: No report from the chief constable is called for because the facts are well known to my right hon. and learned Friend. On 2 September 1986 the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin), after discussing the contents of his book with officials of the Home Office criminal department, agreed to meet officers of the West Midlands police. But when the hon. Member was seen by the assistant chief constable on 23 September 1986, and was asked to provide information supporting his claim to have interviewed people who had committed the Birmingham pub bombings, he declined to do so, and has refused to do so subsequently.

43. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to how many hours his force devoted in (a) 1986, (b) 1987, (c) 1988 and (d) 1989 to investigating the claim of the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) to have traced and interviewed all the persons responsible for the Birmingham pub bombings.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 25 January at column 1036. My right hon. and learned Friend referred to the failure of the hon. Member for Sunderland, South to disclose the names of those whom he states are responsible for the Birmingham pub bombings. A considerable amount of time, particularly in 1986, was spent by West Midlands police in attempting to identify those persons whom the hon. Member has in mind. The results of the research were discussed with him, but he neither confirmed nor denied the possible identifications which had emerged.

No records were kept of the specific number of hours dedicated to this research.

35. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on the Birmingham pub bombings case.

84. Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on the Birmingham pub bombings case.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend is considering very carefully the further material which has been presented to him by a solicitor acting on behalf of the six men convicted of the Birmingham public house bombings, and will decide as soon as possible whether it justifies any intervention on his part.

29. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has completed his consideration of the new evidence in the case of the Birmingham pub bombings.

41. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has completed his consideration of the new evidence in the case of the Birmingham pub bombings.

44. Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has completed his consideration of the new evidence in the case of the Birmingham pub bombings.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend has not yet completed his consideration of the further material which has been presented to him by a solicitor acting on behalf of the six men convicted of the Birmingham public house bombings. He will decide as soon as possible whether it justifies any intervention on his part.

27. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department first became aware of the claim by the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) to have traced and interviewed the persons responsible for the Birmingham pub bombings; and what action was taken.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office first became aware of the claims of the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) in May 1986, when extracts from his forthcoming book "Error of Judgement" were passed to my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd) by my hon. Friend the Member for Harborough (Sir J. Farr). We later obtained a full copy of the book shortly after publication in July 1986. These claims were made before the decision of my right hon. Friend on 20 January 1987 to refer the whole case to the Court of Appeal. The hon. Member for Sunderland, South has been repeatedly asked to make available any relevant material to substantiate his claims. He has not done so.

Wapping Dispute

17. Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had concerning the publication of the report by the Northamptonshire police into the policing of the industrial dispute at Wapping.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None.

West Midlands Police

18. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has anything to add to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 304, concerning DS Brian Morton.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery).

Parole

19. Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on his proposals to retain his discretion to refuse parole in the most serious cases.

Mr. John Patten: The White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" (Cm. 965) makes it clear that the Home Secretary will continue to consider the release of those offenders serving determinate sentences of seven years or more. These will have committed the most serious crimes and may be a serious risk to public safety.

46. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on his proposals for the supervision of prisoners released on parole and the liability of such prisoners committing further offences to recall to prison, and to serve all the outstanding sentence in addition to any new sentence imposed.

Mr. John Patten: Chapter 6 of the White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" (Cm. 965) sets out the Government's legislative proposals on parole. All prisoners serving imprisonment of more than one year will be supervised on release until three quarters of their sentence. All released prisoners will be liable, if convicted of another imprisonable offence committed before the end of the original sentence, to recall to prison to serve up to the rest of their sentence.

"Error of Judgement"

20. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department first received a copy of the book "Error of Judgement"; and what action was taken.

48. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department first received a copy of the book "Error of Judgement"; and what action was taken.

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department first received a copy of the book "Error of Judgement"; and what action was taken.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office obtained a copy of the book "Error of Judgement" shortly after publication in July 1986. On 2 September 1986, the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) discussed the content of his book with officials of the Home Office criminal department, and subsequently discussed a number of the points raised in the book with an assistant chief constable of the West Midlands police. The book was considered by my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd), among a number of representations which had been made to him about the safety of the convictions of the Birmingham Six, before his decision on 20 January 1987 to refer the whole case to the Court of Appeal.

Fines

21. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on his proposals to ensure that fines more closely reflect an offender's ability to pay.

Mr. John Patten: The White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public", published on 6 February, sets out our proposals for ensuring that fines are more closely related to an offender's means. We have invited comments by 30 April.

Neighbourhood Watch

22. Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the latest figures for the number of neighbourhood watch schemes now operating in England and Wales.

Mr. John Patten: At the end of December 1989 there were estimated to be over 81,000 neighbourhood watch schemes in England and Wales, covering over 4 million households.

47. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has as to the number of neighbourhood watch schemes now operating in the north-west of England.

Mr. John Patten: At the end of December 1989 there were estimated to be 19,500 schemes in the area covered by the Cheshire, Cumbria, Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Merseyside police forces.

Bail Hostels

23. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives he plans to involve the private sector in providing bail hostel places.

Mr. John Patten: We have a programme to create 1,000 new bail places at approved hostels between April 1988 and April 1993. About 160 of these places are already on stream and some 500 more are at various stages of development. Although there are no plans for privately managed bail hostels at present, we believe that there is scope now for further private sector involvement in this programme in terms of planning, building, delivery and contracting out of services.

Tyneside Metro

24. Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration was given to the cost of policing the Tyneside Metro when establishing manpower levels for the Northumbria police force.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend approved 38 extra police posts for the Northumbria police as from April 1990. Twenty of these are to deal with general problems of rising crime in the areas in which the metro operates. The cost of a further 10 posts, specifically for policing the metro system, is reimbursed by the passenger transport executive.

Electronic Tagging

25. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on electronic tagging.

55. Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on electronic tagging.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to a question from the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen).

Crime Prevention

26. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will next meet the Association of Metropolitan Authorities to discuss crime prevention initiatives.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend has at present no plans to meet the AMA to discuss crime prevention. However, the association has been kept closely in touch with the preparation of fresh interdepartmental guidance on crime prevention and it and others have been invited this week to comment on a new draft circular on crime prevention issued on 19 February. Comments should be submitted by 3 April.

Prisons (Vegan Diets)

28. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when regional catering officers last met representatives of the Vegan Society to discuss vegan diets in prisons in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The principal catering manager for the prison service met the prison liaison officer for the Vegan Society on 9 October 1989. The prison liaison officer was also invited to speak to "in charge" catering officers at the prison service national catering school on 13 December 1989 about the vegan philosophy and diet.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

30. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what future steps are being taken to reduce the time taken by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board to deal with applications for compensation.

Mr. John Patten: We authorised the board in December to recruit 10 extra staff. We have now agreed that 50 more staff may be recruited as soon as possible. This meets in full the recent request of the chairman and the recommendation of the Home Affairs Select Committee (Second Report, Session 1989-90-HC92), for 60 more staff to help the board deal with the expected level of new applications and to reduce arrears.

The reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler) on 8 December at columns 409-17, set out the revised criminal injuries compensation scheme and described other steps already take to improve the board's performance. The first phase of the board's major computer project referred to in that answer will begin in March. The board proposes to use the discretion conferred under the new scheme to delegate to staff decisions on a limited range of cases from 1 April 1990.

75. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to inform the social services departments of all local councils that criminal injuries compensation is available to all victims of child abuse or marital violence.

Mr. John Patten: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Board wrote to all social services departments in Great Britain in October 1989 giving details of the application of the scheme to victims of violence, and in particular to child victims of such crimes.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce computers into the offices of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board.

Mr. John Patten: Portable computers have been in use at the board since 1987. A major computer project—case location and information management system—was approved in December 1989. This is a centralised database system using the mainframe Home Office computer. Training has begun on the first phase of the project, which will go live in March and provide for the registration and acknowledgement of all new claims and the issue of medical and police inquiry forms. Subsequent phases will allow for monitoring of case progress, the issuing of reminder and other letters and accounting and statistical facilities.

58. Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many victims in the years 1987, 1988 and 1989 received compensation from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board for sums between £550 and £750; and what percentage this represented of the total number of awards in those years.

60. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many victims in the years 1987, 1988 and 1989 received compensation from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board for sums between £550 and £750; and what percentage this represented of the total number of awards in those years.

Mr. John Patten: The breakdown of awards by size of award is given in paragraph 8.1 of the board's annual report for the year ended 31 March 1989 (Cm 900). These figures indicate that the number of awards of between £550 and £750 in the three years ended 31 March 1987, 1988 and 1989, were about 3,800, 3,700 and 5,700, a percentage of the total awards in these years of 17·3, 17·7 and 20·6, respectively.

Special Constables

31. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will consider the payment of a bounty or other remuneration to encourage recruitment of special constables.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This has been considered a number of times by the Police Advisory Board, most recently in October 1988, and the conclusion each time was that an incentive award (bounty) was not necessary. However we are asking the board to consider the option of running pilot schemes on an experimental basis in some forces when it discusses further initiatives to strengthen the special constabulary on 27 February.

Football Exclusion Orders

32. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the number of exclusion orders imposed on football supporters for the years 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The exclusion order provisions of the Public Order Act 1986 came into force on 1 August 1987. The number of exclusion orders recorded by the Football Association since then is as follows:

	Number
1987	[1]320
1988	1,029
1989	1,038

[1] Five months.

Central European Time

33. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to publish the responses he received in respect of the Green Paper on central European time; and if he will make a statement.

39. Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received with regard to central European time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received with regard to the proposed changes in British summer time.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend will be announcing a breakdown of the responses to the consultation exercise in the near future.

Electoral Systems

34. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he is giving to the reform of electoral voting systems in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None.

Pornography

36. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with his EEC opposite numbers about harmonising the laws relating to the display and sale of pornographic films and magazines.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. and learned Friend has had no personal discussions on this topic, but the Department has contributed to the work of the Council of Europe in encouraging its members to strengthen controls against the distribution of videograms having a violent, brutal or pornographic content, and to the work of the Council and the European Community in securing international agreement on minimum standards in broadcasting. We shall continue to stress to our European partners the need to maintain high standards in published and broadcast material. Within the European Community, article 36 of the treaty of Rome allows member states to prohibit or restrict imports on grounds of public morality, provided that there is no arbitrary discrimination or disguised restriction on trade between member states. We intend to maintain strong controls over the display and sale of pornographic material within the United Kingdom.

All-seater Football Grounds

37. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has considered the financial implications of the proposed installation of all-seater stadia for football grounds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I understand the football authorities provisionally estimate the cost to be £130 million for clubs in the English football league. But, as set out by Lord Justice Taylor in his final report, the cost could be lower. The Football Trust has indicated that about £75 million should be available to the professional game over the next 10 years. This is in addition to any income from television and pools companies which currently amounts to about £26 million each year.

Prison Officers Association

38. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met officials of the Prison Officers Association; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. and learned Friend met members of the Prison Officers Association on 18 December. The terms and conditions of service for prison officers, resources, the possibility of agency status for the prison service and the possible use of the private sector to escort prisoners and to run remand centres were discussed.

Permanent Residents

40. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the net inflow or outflow of permanent residents of the United Kingdom for the last full year for which data exist.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available data on net migration to or from the United Kingdom are the estimates produced by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys from the international passenger survey. This defines a migrant as a person leaving one country where he has been resident for more than a year with the intention of residing in a new country for a year or more. The 1988 estimates were of a net outflow from the United Kingdom of 21,000 migrants, resulting from an inflow of 216,000 and an outflow of 237,000. These figures include British citizens and are on a different basis from the figures of people subject to immigration control accepted for settlement in the United Kingdom. More detailed information on these migration estimates is published by OPCS in "International Migration 1988".

Welsh Broadcasting

42. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the heads of BBC Wales and HTV; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. and learned Friend has not yet met the heads of BBC Wales and HTV, either jointly or separately, but he may have the opportunity at some time in the future.

Taylor Report

45. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has received following the publication of the Taylor report and his statement on 29 January, regarding proposals contained within the report.

Mr. John Patten: We have received 13 letters from hon. Members and 52 letters from members of the public. In addition, the Football Supporters Association has requested a meeting to discuss the role that supporters can play in implementing the report.

Distress Warrants

49. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of persons against whom distress warrants were issued in 1987, 1988 and 1989 were dependent on state benefits.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is not available.

74. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of distress warrants issued by magistrates courts in 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. John Patten: Around 185,000 distress warrants were issued by magistrates courts in 1987 and 560,000 in 1988. Information for 1989 is not yet available.

Metropolitan Police Commissioner

51. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis; and what was discussed.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend last held a meeting with the Commissioner on 21 December 1989, when the Commissioner's strategy statement for 1990 was discussed.

Crime Detection

52. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the crime detection rate in the west midlands in 1989.

Mr. John Patten: Incomplete information for the West Midlands police force area for 1989 indicates the detection rate could be slightly lower than the 42 per cent. for 1988.

Vagrancy

53. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to repeal sections 3 and 4 of the Vagrancy Act 1824; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Government have no present plans to repeal sections 3 and 4 of the Vagrancy Act 1824, as amended.

Victim Support Schemes

54. Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many victim support schemes there are in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Three hundred and fifty-five.

68. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the level of Government funding for victim support.

Mr. John Patten: For this year £3·7 million has been granted for victim support schemes in England and Wales. Subject to parliamentary approval, around £4·5 million will be granted for 1990-91. This represents a 200 per cent. increase over four years.

Senior Police Officers

56. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to improve the selection and training of senior police officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government's response to the Home Affairs Select Committee's report on higher police training and the police staff college outlined their plans to identify at an early stage those officers with the ability to reach chief officer ranks and to provide them with the training they need to perform their jobs effectively.

Assaults on Police

57. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of serious assaults committed against police officers in the north Wales area during 1989; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 1979, (b) 1983 and (c) 1986.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the chief constable of North Wales that there were 308 assaults on members of his force in 1989. There were 109 assaults in 1979, 81 in 1983 and 91 in 1986. Information on the number of serious assaults is not readily available.

Dogs

59. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dogs are kept as domestic pets in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Home Office collects no statistics on the numbers of domestic pets. A report prepared by the London School of Economics for the RSPCA in 1988 estimated the United Kingdom dog population to be 7·3 million.

Prisoners

62. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many were in prison at the most recent count.

Mr. Mellor: On Friday 16 February there were 47,103 people held in prison service establishments in England and Wales. This represents a fall of 2,288 people since the same time last year.

Metropolitan Police Forensic Science Laboratory

63. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received calling for an increase in the staffing level at the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am not aware of any such representations. The staffing ceiling of the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory is set by the Commissioner, within the total ceiling for civil staff set by my right hon. and learned Friend as the police authority.

66. Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current establishment at the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory; and in how many months in each of the past three years the numbers in post reached full complement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that the current complement of the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory is 297, of which 279½ posts are currently filled. The numbers in post have not reached full complement during the last three years.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the performance of the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that no systematic management information about the performance of the laboratory is available, but that the time taken to deal with some types of case, particularly the less serious, has increased in the last year or so. We are discussing with the receiver a case for pay improvements to help deal with staffing problems, and we shall be looking at other management issues and their effect on performance.

81. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the change in the workload of the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory in each of the last three years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that no management information system exists to provide data on workload, as opposed to the cruder measure of caseload. However, the available figures show that cases dealt with by the laboratory fell from 27,985 in 1987 to 18,053 in 1989, a fall of 35 per cent. I understand that this reduction reflected in part a decision not to carry out forensic examination in certain types of low priority case, such as possession of cannabis cases where a guilty plea is expected.

71. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that no systematic management information about the performance of the laboratory is available, but that the time taken to deal with some types of case, particularly the less serious, has increased in the last year or so. A factor affecting performance is difficulty in retaining scientific staff, though I understand that the staffing position has recently improved and that the laboratory is now within 5 per cent. of its authorised complement for forensic scientists. We are discussing with the receiver a case for pay improvements to help deal with staffing problems. However, it is important that we look at all the management issues which may have a bearing on performance—not just pay.

Prisons (Fire Inspections)

64. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to lift Crown immunity in relation to fire inspections in prisons.

Mr. Mellor: Although prisons are exempt from the arrangements for fire certification under the Fire Precautions Act 1971, governors are instructed to arrange periodic fire surveys by the local fire brigade, and the advice of Her Majesty's fire service inspectorate is taken if necessary, with the aim of meeting the joint objectives of fire safety and prison security. I see no compelling need to alter these arrangements.

Pregnant Prisoners

65. Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider setting up an independent inquiry into the treatment of pregnant women in Holloway prison.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Criminal Justice White Paper

67. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has received to his criminal justice White Paper.

Mr. John Patten: We have invited comments on the proposals in the White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" (Cm 965) by 30 April. The initial reaction has been favourable and my right hon. and learned Friend's statement of 6 February received widespread support in both Houses.

South Yorkshire Police

69. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the current manning levels in the South Yorkshire police.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: At the end of December 1989 there were 2,946 police officers on the strength of the South Yorkshire police matched against their establishment of 2,978.

My right hon. and learned Friend has approved an increase of 20 posts for the force establishment subject to the police authority's confirmation of its willingness to meet its share of the cost.

Police (Operational Duties)

70. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the additional police posts announced for 1990-91 will be deployed on operational duties.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The deployment of police officers is an operational matter for chief officers of police. Of the 1,008 extra police posts for provincial forces announced for 1990-91, however, 953 were intended for deployment to operational duties.

The deployment of the 150 posts approved for the Metropolitan police has yet to be decided, although the great majority will go on operational duties.

Coach Parking

72. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the level of observance of "no coach parking" signs.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that no separate figures are recorded for non-compliance with "no coach parking" signs. Police and traffic wardens take action against instances of illegal coach parking whenever possible, which may include the removal of offending coaches to police car pounds. The Metropolitan police will be conducting a special coach parking advice and enforcement campaign during the summer months in the central London area.

Disturbances, Granby

77. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received a report from the chief constable of Merseyside police concerning the recent disturbances in the Granby area of Liverpool; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We are informed by the Merseyside police that at about 8.20 pm on 5 February a police inspector and a sergeant responded to a report of youths, armed with bricks, gathering in Granby street, Liverpool 8. The officers were driving along Granby street when their car was rammed by a stolen vehicle. Bricks were thrown at the police vehicle. The sergeant suffered minor facial injuries.

Two police vehicles summoned to assist the two officers were also attacked.

Three other vehicles were later set on fire. When the Merseyside fire service arrived they were attacked with missiles and withdrew. Police reinforcements and a police helicopter were then deployed. The youths dispersed and order was restored by 11 pm. The police estimate that about 200 people were involved in the disturbances. Following the disturbances one person was arrested and charged with violent disorder and criminal damage to a police vehicle.

Prisons (Education and Training)

78. Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for increasing the educational and training opportunities for prison inmates.

Mr. Mellor: It is estimated that between 1989-90 and 1992-93 expenditure through LEAs for educational provision in prison service establishments will rise from £19·152 million to £27·387 million. Between 1987-88 and 1988-89 student hours rose by 23 per cent. and attention will continue to be paid to both efficiency and effectiveness in the delivery of education in prisons. The prison service is exploring the implications of the national vocational qualifications initiative and progress on this and other developments will be contained in the annual reports of the prison service.

Immigration and Nationality Department

79. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any proposals to further disperse the immigration and nationality department to the regions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler) on 31 January at column 205.

NACRO

80. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met representatives from the National Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders; and what was discussed.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend and I met the chairman, director and an assistant director from the National Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders on 23 January. The meeting provided an opportunity for the representatives of NACRO to give a presentation of their work and to discuss their ideas about criminal justice issues.

Visas

76. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in respect of implementing a common visa regime for the European Economic Community after 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to questions from the hon. Members for Ashfield (Mr. Haynes) and for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 25 January 1990 at columns 1037-39.

Football Hooliganism

82. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce his decision on whether to implement the recommendations of Lord Justice Taylor to create three new specific offences to tackle football hooliganism.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) earlier today.

Crime (Devon and Cornwall)

83. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest figure for recorded crime in Devon and Cornwall.

Mr. John Patten: Information for 1988 was published in tables 2.5 and 2.7 of "Criminal statistics England and Wales, 1988", Cm. 847, a copy of which is available in the Library. Further detailed figures for the 12 months to the end of September 1989 for local police areas have also been placed in the Library. In the 12 months to September 1989, Devon and Cornwall police recorded 74,905 offences, 1,046 more than in the previous 12 months.

Mr. Kenneth Carter

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now reply to the questions tabled by the hon. Member for Stockton, South about Mr. Kenneth Carter, a prisoner in Durham prison.

Mr. Mellor: I have today replied to the questions tabled by my hon. Friend.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why deductions are being made from Mr. Kenneth Carter for association expenses in Durham prison.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 8 February 1990]: It has been common practice in all Her Majesty's prisons for a small deduction to be made from inmates' earnings as a contribution to the establishment's general purposes fund. This practice has been reviewed and instructions are to be issued for it to cease.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will arrange for Mr. Kenneth Carter, prisoner No. AD3434, to be transferred from Durham to another prison;

(2) on how many occasions Mr. Kenneth Carter, prisoner No. AD3434, has moved cell in Durham prison; and what was the reason in each case;

(3) what complaints he has received concerning harassment of Mr. Kenneth Carter, a prisoner in Durham prison, following the death of his former cellmate; and if he will make a statement;

(4) when a representative of the board of visitors of Durham prison last met Mr. Kenneth [illegible]r, prisoner No. AD3434;

(5) why Mr. Kenneth Carter, prisoner No. AD3434, has been recategorised as category A in Durham prison.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 8 February 1990]: Mr. Kenneth Carter has been charged with the murder of a former cellmate at Durham prison on 5-6 January 1990. For this reason his prison security status is now category A and he will stay at Her Majesty's prison Durham until his trial.

No record is kept of cell movements, but immediately after the death of his former cellmate, Mr. Carter was moved to the prison hospital to which members of the board of visitors make regular visits. Mr. Carter saw a member of the board of visitors on 11 February 1990.

Other than a letter which my hon. Friend forwarded to me on 16 January 1990, no complaints about harassment of Mr. Carter have been received.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement about the allocation of shoes to Mr. Kenneth Carter, a prisoner in Durham prison;

(2) why Mr. Kenneth Carter, a prisoner in Durham prison, was denied an exercise period on 29 and 30 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: On 29 January 1990, inclement weather prevented Mr. Carter from taking exercise. On 30 January 1990 he took no exercise as he had been refused a request to wear slippers while on exercise. There are no medical reasons why Mr. Carter should not wear the prison shoes with which he has been issued.

Rottweiler Dogs

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he is taking to prevent further attacks in the light of recent attacks by rottweiler dogs on children; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he has any proposals to restrict the domestic ownership of rottweiler dogs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in the light of recent incidents involving rottweiler dogs, he will seek powers to introduce a total ban on such breeds of animal.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

The law concerning attacks by dogs was strengthened only last year by the Dangerous Dogs Act 1989. We are studying recent incidents closely and will consider whether the law would benefit from further revision.

Police Rent and Rates Allowances

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes in police rent and rates allowances have been made to coincide with the abolition of domestic rates.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend expects shortly to lay regulations changing the police rent allowance arrangements with effect from 1 April. The main changes will be that the new housing allowance for each force will no include an element for the reimbursement of rates; the community charge will not be reimbursed; the new housing allowance will be updated biennially in line with movements in the retail prices index; and compensatory grant will be abolished. Special arrangements will, however, be made to ensure that police officers who are in receipt of rent allowance and compensatory grant on 31 March will receive no less than they were receiving on that date.

Immigration (Domestic Servants)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many Kuwaitis entering the United Kingdom in 1989 were permitted to bring with them domestic servants;

(2) how many Saudi Arabians entering the United Kingdom in 1989 were permitted to bring with them domestic servants.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if all persons described as domestic servants brought into the United Kingdom by foreigners require entry visas; and what steps are taken to ensure that such persons are treated in accordance with United Kingdom law;

(2) if all persons described as domestic servants brought into the United Kingdom by foreigners require work permits; and what steps are taken to make sure such people are treated in accordance with United Kingdom law.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Under exceptional arrangements outside the immigration rules and the work permit scheme a domestic servant who has worked abroad for at least the previous 12 months for an employer who comes to the United Kingdom will normally be admitted to continue working for that employer here. Prior entry clearance is necessary if the servant is a visa national or if the employer is coming in a capacity for which he needs an entry clearance. While in the United Kingdom domestic servants are entitled to the normal protection of our law.

Homosexuality

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is held centrally relating to discrimination against lesbians and homosexual men; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proposals he has to deal with discrimination against lesbians and homosexual men with regard to (a) the age of sexual consent, (b) the right to serve in the armed forces and (c) legal recognition of long-term homosexual partnerships;

(2) what proposals he has to improve the legal rights of lesbians and homosexual men; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what provision exists in the European social charter on the rights of homosexuals; whether he has any proposals for legislation arising from Britain's obligations under the charter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 1 February 1990 at columns 304-06.

Drug Command Informant Scheme

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the drug command informant scheme;

(2) if he will require the drug command informant scheme to publish an annual report describing the general nature of cases handled and the level of reward given; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I understand that the Community Action Trust, a registered charity, intends to launch in the near future an informant reward scheme entitled drug command. The scheme will be funded entirely by the trust but will be operated in close consultation with the enforcement agencies. Publication of reports about the operation of the scheme is a matter for the Community Action Trust.

Prisons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the minimum permitted space per prisoner.

Mr. Mellor: The prison design brief for training establishments published in 1989, which will form the basis for the design of other categories of establishments, lays down the standards for new prison buildings. The brief requires an area of 6·8m² to be provided for a single-person cell with integral sanitation. The area of a cell without integral sanitation in existing establishments built to earlier standards varies.

Armley Prison, Leeds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the prison officers' dispute at Armley prison, Leeds.

Mr. Mellor: Officials of the local branch of the Prison Officers Association at Armley prison, Leeds have advised the governor that they are in dispute over staffing arrangements. A meeting between management and union representatives under the agreed disputes procedure has been arranged for 23 February.

Ambulance Dispute

16. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has issued guidelines to police authorities on charging for cover during the ambulance dispute; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Guidance was issued in October to chief officers and police authorities on the arrangements which might be made for reimbursement by regional health authorities when the police were called upon to assist in providing an ambulance service.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total man hours performed by police personnel involved in ambulance duties in the United Kingdom during the current ambulance workers' dispute.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand that the total number of man hours which forces have provided in assisting ambulance services in England and Wales up to and including 13 February has been about 1·1 million.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total number of man hours performed by police personnel during the current ambulance workers' dispute in (i) Nottingham, (ii) Manchester, (iii) Essex, (iv) West Yorkshire and (v) Northumbria; and how many of those man hours were paid at overtime rates.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested readily available up to 13 February is shown in the table:

Approximate number of man hours

	Number
Nottinghamshire	1,130
Greater Manchester	14,930
Essex	28,930
West Yorkshire	53,300
Northumbria	66,000

All these man hours were paid at overtime rates.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average hourly rate of pay for police personnel employed on ambulance duties during the current ambulance workers' dispute;

(2) what is the hourly overtime rate of pay for police constables involved in ambulance duties in (i) Nottingham, (ii) Manchester, (iii) Essex, (iv) west Yorkshire and (v) Northumbria;

(3) what is the hourly overtime rate of pay for police personnel of ranks other than constable involved in ambulance duties in (i) Nottingham, (ii) Manchester, (iii) Essex, (iv) west Yorkshire and (v) Northumbria;

(4) what is the hourly rate of pay for police constables involved in ambulance duties in (a) Nottingham, (b) Manchester, (c) Essex, (d) west Yorkshire and (e) Northumbria;

(5) what is the hourly rate of pay for police personnel of ranks other than constable involved in ambulance duties in (a) Nottingham, (b) Manchester, (c) Essex, (d) west Yorkshire and (e) Northumbria.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Police pay for each rank is on a scale connected to number of years' service. It is not, therefore, possible to give an hourly or overtime rate per officer for each force or nationally.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost of (a) converting a police van for use in ambulance duties and (b) reconverting a police van after use in ambulance duties.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand that in converting vehicles some forces have simply removed seats but others have done more work including the installation of some special equipment. The costs range, therefore, from minimal to several hundred pounds per van.

No vans have yet been reconverted.

Art Galleries (Thefts)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of theft have been reported to the Metropolitan police by museums and art galleries in each of the last three years.

Mr. John Patten: Information in the detail requested is not collected.

Metropolitan Police (Damages)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much in compensation, both in court and in out-of-court settlements, the Metropolitan police has paid to members of the public who have brought civil cases for damages since 15 December 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the amounts paid by the Metropolitan police under awards made by the courts and in settlements out of court arising from allegations of wrongful acts by Metropolitan police officers are as follows:

	Awards made by the courts £	Settlements out of court £
1988 (16-31 December)	5,500	18,831
1989	252,904	266,850
1990 (to 21 February)	65,000	160,050

Downing Street

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost in each year since 1979 arising from the presence in Downing street of police officers from the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is not the practice to give details of security costs.

Community Penalties

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the development of community penalties for offenders.

Mr. John Patten: The White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" (Cm 965) sets out our proposals for providing a wider and more flexible range of strengthened community penalties to reduce reliance on custody for less serious offenders.

Sentencing

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on his proposals to enable sentencers to sentence above the normal for the particular crime where the offender's record is such that he is a danger to the public.

Mr. John Patten: The White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" sets out our proposals for empowering the Crown court to give custodial sentences longer than would be justified by the seriousness of the offence alone to persistent violent and sexual offenders, if this is necessary to protect the public.

Durham Prison

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a table showing the number of suicides in Durham prison in each of the last 15 years.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The table gives the numbers of deaths at Durham prison since 1975 for which a suicide verdict was returned at the inquest:

	Number
1975	—
1976	—
1977	—
1978	2
1979	—
1980	—
1981	—
1982	1
1983	—
1984	1
1985	2
1986	—
1987	3
1988	1
1989	2
[1]1990	—

[1] To 8 February 1990.

An inquest has yet to take place on a death in Durham prison in January 1990.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 23 February 1990

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members' Interests

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will bring forward proposals for a Standing Order to require all commercial interests to be duly declared at oral Question Time.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: In the first instance this is a matter for the Select Committee on Members' Interests and the hon. Member should write to the Chairman.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Loans

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the new courses referred to in the Official Report, 15 February, column 464, for which 50,000 students will be eligible for student loans who are not presently eligible for student grants.

Mr. Jackson: Some full-time home students will be eligible for loans but not for mandatory awards. This group will include some students on courses leading to qualifications such as the BTEC higher national certificate, and other qualifications offered by professional institutions and public bodies. The full range of eligible courses is defined by schedule 1 of the Education (Student Loans) Bill.

London Schools

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has received a copy of the confidential report on London schools which sets out examination results and subjects taken by children in the Inner London education authoritiy area; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received a copy of the report on the school examination results in inner London for the year 1988.

The results are not good. I am sure that the new inner London local education authorities will give a high priority to improving them, and will be assisted in this by the Government's education reforms.

Teacher Shortage, Manchester

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many children are sent home from schools in Manchester each day because there are no teachers to cover for any absences.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not available to the Department.

Education, St. Helens

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to reach a decision on the reorganisation of both secondary and primary education in the metropolitan borough of St. Helens.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend notified St. Helens education authority on 30 November 1989 of his decision to approve the proposals for the reorganisation of the Church of England primary schools in Rainford. He is currently considering proposals for the reorganisation of county secondary schools in St. Helens, and for the significant enlargement of Carmel Roman Catholic sixth form college. Decisions on these proposals will be reached as quickly as is compatible with a full consideration of all the issues involved.

Schools, Bradford

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to ensure that the 33 first and 10 middle schools in Bradford continue to receive funding of more than £1·2 million in 1990-91, under the local management scheme to meet special needs and social disadvantages; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The levels of funding to be allocated by LMS formulae with reference to individual factors such as specific needs and social disadvantage are for local determination. Ministerial approval is limited to the criteria and ground rules which govern the distribution of resources.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received urging that 33 first schools and 10 middle schools in Bradford continue to receive funding to meet special needs and social disadvantages.

Mrs. Rumbold: None.

Under-fives

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the quality of provision for children under five years old.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government welcome the good practice in schools and other centres which Her Majesty's inspectors have documented in recent reports, including "The Education of Children Under Five" a copy of which is in the Library. They believe much more needs to be done. A committee of inquiry under my chairmanship is considering how to achieve improvements in the educational content of all forms of provision for three and four-year-olds.

PRIME MINISTER

US Forces, Europe

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister what is her policy on the minimum number of United States troops which should be stationed in Europe; what discussions Her Majesty's Government have had with the United States Administration on this policy; and whether she has any plans to revise her policy in the light of recent discussions between the United States of America and the Soviet Union.

The Prime Minister: The presence of substantial numbers of United States troops in Europe makes an essential contribution to Western security. The United States Government have made it very clear that they intend to maintain this contribution. The agreement at Ottawa between the United States and the Soviet Union, by which the two countries' stationed forces in the central region of Europe would each be subject by the CFE treaty to a ceiling of 195,000, is fully compatible with this.

Mid-Staffordshire Constituency

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to make an official visit to the Mid-Staffordshire constituency.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

10 Downing Street

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if she will give the percentage change since 1979 in the cost of the upkeep of No. 10 Downing street.

The Prime Minister: This information is not readily available for earlier years and cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost. However, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 18 October 1989 at column 128.

Homelessness

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister when was the last occasion on which she visited (i) a bed and breakfast hostel for the homeless and (ii) homeless people at other venues.

The Prime Minister: During my visits to various regions I visit a wide variety of people. I have not recently paid an official visit to a bed and breakfast hostel for the homeless, or held a formal meeting with homeless people.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is taking forward, with urgency, action following our review of the homelessness legislation. This includes the allocation of additional resources to relieve homelessness pressures in London. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and the Minister for Housing and Planning have had a number of meetings with homeless people in London and with voluntary agencies which work with the homeless.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Security Searches

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will request co-operation from employers in Northern Ireland to ensure that employees genuinely delayed in lengthy hold-ups during security searches will not be financially penalised or threatened with loss of employment.

Mr. Cope: Continuing terrorist activity requires the police and armed forces to take measures for the protection of life and property and the police and Army do their utmost to keep any resulting delay and inconvenience to a minimum. The Government hope that all law-abiding citizens will understand the need for these measures and co-operate with them since they are taken for the benefit of the community at large.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was (a) the district rate and (b) the regional rate for the last three years in percentage and financial terms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The figures for the last three years for the average district rate and the regional rate are as follows:

	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90
Average district rate	60·07p	62·62p	64·11p
Percentage change from previous year	+5·00	+4·25	+2·38
Regional Rate	113·53p	122·59p	138·07p
Percentage change from previous year	+2·90	+7·98	+12·63

The regional rate for 1990-91 will be announced in early March.

Security Forces

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to improve public confidence in the security forces.

Mr. Cope: Securing and maintaining confidence in both the fairness and effectiveness of the security forces is a major Government objective. To this end careful and constant attention is being given to ways of improving relations between the security forces and all parts of the community in Northern Ireland. A number of measures have been taken; others are in hand.

Explosives

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what quantities of explosives have been recovered by the security forces in Northern Ireland in each year since 1968.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 21 February 1990]: Readily available information on explosives found is as follows:

Year	Explosives (tons)
1969	0·1
1970	0·3
1971	1·2
1972	18·5

Fair Employment Agency

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all the firms which have been investigated by the Fair Employment Agency from its inception until the latest available date.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 21 February 1990]: The organisations listed are those which have been investigated by the Fair Employment Agency (now renamed the Fair Employment Commission) for which reports have been published. It is not the commission's policy to reveal the names of organisations which are under investigation or where investigations are complete but reports are still unpublished.

Religious Discrimination

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many specific cases of claims of religious discrimination have been upheld by the Fair Employment Agency in each year from its inception until the latest available date; and of these how many were of (1) Protestants being the victims of discrimination and (2) Roman Catholics being the victims of discrimination.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 21 February 1990]: Information is as follows:

Findings of unlawful discrimination by the Fair Employment Agency

Stevens Inquiry

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made by the Stevens inquiry into allegations that members of the security forces are leaking information to paramilitary groups; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The investigation by Mr. Stevens and his team still continues. I understand, however, that he expects to submit a full report to the Chief Constable of the RUC in the near future. Thereafter the Government will address expeditiously any implications of the report that are for them, and will consider whether any further measures are needed.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys-based adult population figures were replaced as a basis for the underlying data for calculating revenue support grant by information from the community charge register; if he will publish a table giving for each local authority the difference between the two and the financial effect of this on that authority's standard spending assessment; and if he will make a statement on the accuracy of these measures.

Mr. Chope: We announced our intention to base certain revenue support grant calculations on information from the community charges register in July 1989, following representations from the local authority associations and individual authorities that this was the most appropriate basis. OPCS-based estimates were used for illustrative exemplifications of the effects of our proposals when we issued a consultation paper in November last year because they were then the only population data available. I have placed in the Library a table showing for each charging authority the difference between OPCS-based estimates and those derived from community charges registers. Apart from one minor aspect, standard spending assessments are based on estimates of the whole population and the number falling within certain age bands and are therefore calculated using OPCS estimates rather than community charges registers.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish in the Official Report the information placed in the Library with his written reply dated 14 February, Official Report, column 222, concerning the amount of poll tax payable in 1990-91 per adult in each region etc.

Mr. Chope: Where tables relating to local government finance run to more than about a page of A4 it is our practice to place the tables in the Library rather than publishing the figures in the Official Report.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government will provide for a national referendum on the poll tax.

Mr. Chope: No.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those chemicals or chemical compounds that are classed as toxic waste in England and Wales.

Mr. Trippier: Waste which is dangerous or difficult to dispose of is classed as "special waste" and the substances used in its definition are listed in regulation 2 and schedule 1 to the Control of Pollution (Special Waste) Regulations 1980 (SI 1980 No. 1709). On 25 January we published a consultation paper reviewing the 1980 regulations and proposing a new definition of special waste. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those firms that are licensed to import toxic waste into England and Wales.

Mr. Trippier: United Kingdom firms do not require a licence to import toxic waste. However, the waste must go to suitably licensed waste disposal facilities and the shipment must be notified under the Transfrontier Shipment of Hazardous Waste Regulations 1988 or the Control of Pollution (Special Waste) Regulations 1980, as appropriate.

Council House Sales (Camden)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much lower or higher on average the determinations of the district valuer are on council house sales in the London borough of Camden for the past three years than the price quoted by Camden; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: In the year ending 31 December 1989, the district valuer made 440 determinations of value under section 128 of the Housing Act 1985 on the application of tenants of the London borough of Camden. The value determined was lower than the borough's in 321 cases by an average of £11,201 or 11·03 per cent., higher in 19 cases and the same in 100 cases.

In the year ending 31 December 1988, the equivalent figures were 287 determinations, 258 reductions (by an average of £12,665 or 13·4 per cent.), no increased valuations and 29 unchanged valuations. In the year ending 31 December 1987, there were 26 determinations, 24 reductions (by an average of £10,812 or 10·83 per cent.), no increased valuations and two unchanged valuations.

Water Services

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he has received any requests from water authorities to help finance a system of charges for water services following the abolition of domestic rates, other than by meters; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if the Director General of Water Services has requested financial assistance to help with research into any alternative to charging for water services following the abolition of domestic rates, other than by water meters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No.

Downing Street

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 9 January, Official Report, column 592, what was the cost of all works associated with the erection of railings at the Whitehall end of Downing street that did not involve security matters.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 22 February 1990]: The sole purpose of these railings is to enhance the security of Downing street and all works were directed to achieve that objective.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provision is made for public scrutiny of expenditure on No. 10 Downing street.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 22 February 1990]: Vote expenditure by the Property Services Agency at No. 10 Downing street is subject to the same arrangements for public scrutiny as apply to all such expenditure by the agency.

TRANSPORT

Roads, London

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) by how much levels of traffic in London would rise if the public transport proposals suggested in the London assessment studies were adopted in isolation and the road building options were not;

(2) by how much levels of traffic in London would rise if the road proposals suggested in the London assessment studies were adopted in isolation and the public transport options were not.

Mr. Atkins: Tests carried out for the London assessment studies of the way road and rail traffic levels would change if either major roads or major railways were to be built without the other indicate Londonwide differences of only 1 to 2 per cent. Changes would be greater locally, depending upon the schemes tested. Further work would be needed to assess traffic levels should any of the options, which comprise both road and public transport schemes, be taken forward.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will update the number of responses he has so far received to the London assessment studies consultations; and if he will list in percentage form how many of the total are (a) in support of and (b) in objection to the proposals.

Mr. Atkins: No. Interim counts would involve disproportionate cost.

London Underground

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many incidents have been reported of tube doors opening in between stations on each line on the London Underground for each of the last 12 months; and what measures exist to prevent this happening;

(2) how many incidents have been reported of tube doors opening on the wrong side of the platform on each line on the London Underground for each of the last 12 months; and what measures exist to prevent this happening.

Mr. Portillo: No incident in either category was reported during 1989, although there was one case of a train leaving Piccadilly Circus station with two doors open, due to malicious tampering with a valve. This good record is attributable to the training undertaken by London Underground Limited staff, the design of the equipment and the methods by which the doors are operated.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times passengers have been asked to detrain on each line on the London Underground, for each of the last 12 months; and what were the reasons for these decisions.

Mr. Portillo: This is a matter within London Underground's management responsibility, for which it should answer.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times tube services have been interrupted for more than 20 minutes on each of the lines on the London Underground, for each of the last 12 months; and what were the reasons for these delays.

Mr. Portillo: This is an operational matter for London Underground Limited.

Hidden Report

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much additional funding his Department will make available to British Rail for the implementation of the safety measures mentioned in the Hidden report.

Mr. Portillo: BR is currently assessing the costs of implementing the Hidden report, and will include them in its 1990 corporate plan. We will continue to ensure that BR has adequate funds for safety.

A12, Brentwood

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to alter the A12 in the vicinity of Brentwood to a six-lane highway; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: We have no plans to widen the existing A12 near Brentwood. The proposed new motorway between the M25 and Chelmsford provides the best solution to relieving not only that section of A12 but the M25, in terms of both economics and advantages to road users.

Electrified Track Closures

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passenger lines of electrified track have been closed by British Rail since 1970; and what was the mileage of these lines.

Mr. Portillo: Since 1970, British Rail has closed four electrified passenger lines of approximately 34 miles in total.

Goods Vehicles

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what provisions were made for full consultations when the reviews of the goods vehicles operators' licensing provisions was undertaken in 1986 and 1989; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he received from individuals or organisations on the review of the goods vehicle operators' licensing provisions in 1986 and 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Department sought views from the road haulage industry, traffic commissioners, the transport tribunal, local authorities, parish councils, the police, trade unions, environmental interest groups and a number of private individuals who had expressed an interest.

Both reviews attracted wide-ranging and evenly balanced opinion. Overall reactions suggest that our approach is about right.

Airline Failures

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether, in the light of the recent failure of a scheduled service airline, he has any plans to introduce a compensation scheme similar to that which applies to charter airlines under the air tour operators licence scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: There are no plans to introduce such a scheme at present. However, the International Air Transport Association, of which most international scheduled service airlines are members, has guidelines to protect passengers in these circumstances. Passengers holding tickets for flights with an airline providing scheduled services which ceases trading but which is a member of the association should be able to transfer at no extra cost to a flight of another airline which is also a member.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek powers to enable him to commit public funds to ensure the early completion of the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: No.

ENERGY

Plutonium Exports

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many permissions, and on what dates since the United Kingdom joined the European Community, the United Kingdom has sought from the European Commission through Euratom, for the right to export civil plutonium created in the United Kingdom and allocated to the European Community under Euratom treaty article 86 to (a) the United States of America, (b) Japan and (c) any other state outside the European Economic Community.

Mr. Baldry: In accordance with articles 59 and 62 of the Euratom treaty producers must seek the authorisation of the Commission for exports outside the Community of special fissile material produced within a member country and kept under safeguards. Since 1979 such authorisation has been applied for and granted only once. This covered an export to Canada in 1983.

Sizewell B

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) whether he has undertaken a comparative cost-benefit analysis of proceeding with the construction of the Sizewell B pressurised water reactor nuclear power station and an enhanced programme of investment in energy conservation and efficiency.

(2) whether he will undertake a comparative assessment of the costs of continuing the construction of the Sizewell B pressurised water reactor with an expanded programme of investment in energy conservation and efficiency.

Mr. Baldry: Sizewell B will maintain the PWR technology as an option for the future, contribute to diversity and security of supply, and help to reduce fossil fuel emissions. For these reasons the Government attach the highest importance to the completion and operation of the station.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Accountants

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the number of accountants seconded to his Department by accountancy firms during 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Redwood: The numbers were as follows:

1988: 7
1989: 4

Professional Qualifications

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the organisations which have or will be seeking recognition as qualifying bodies under the Companies Act 1989.

Mr. Redwood: Formal applications cannot yet be made. The following bodies have inquired about the procedures for seeking recognition of a professional qualification under part II of the Act:

The Association of International Accountants.
The Chartered Association of Certified Accountants.
The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy.
The Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales.
The Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland.
The Institute of Chartered Accountants in Scotland.

South Africa

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's ban on new investment in South Africa.

Mr. Ridley: We have made clear our view that the steps President de Klerk has taken have transformed the political climate in South Africa. He has opened the way to a peaceful end to apartheid through negotiation. This deserves a constructive response from the international community.

In 1986 European Community Foreign Ministers and, separately, Heads of Government participating at the Commonwealth review meeting agreed to impose a number of measures against South Africa, including a ban on new investment in South Africa. The then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced the implementation in the United Kingdom of the ban on new investment in a written answer to a parliamentary question on 30 October 1986, Vol. 103, column 220. In our case the measure was voluntary.

When imposing the measures European Community Foreign Ministers reaffirmed the urgent need for a genuine national dialogue, across lines of colour, politics and religion. To this end they called on the South African Government to release unconditionally Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners, to lift the bans on the African National Congress, Pan Africanist Congress of Azania and other political parties. Separately they expressed their wish to see the state of emergency brought to an end.

The steps President de Klerk has taken open the way to such a dialogue. It would be logical, therefore, to respond by lifting the measures imposed at that time.

When the participants in the Commonwealth review meeting in London in 1986 agreed to impose certain measures they referred in their communiqué to the deteriorating situation in South Africa and to a spiralling cycle of violence and counter-violence. They called on the South African Government to initiate a process of dialogue and said that if this call received a positive response and the South African Government took the steps demanded of them, they would review the situation and, if appropriate, rescind the measures. The then

Secretary of State for Trade and Industry referred to that undertaking when announcing our ban on new investment in 1986.

Accordingly Her Majesty's Government are now withdrawing the advice on new investment in South Africa which they issued in 1986. It will, as before, be for companies and firms to make their own judgment about whether to invest in South Africa. The Government will no longer discourage them.

Our goal remains the peaceful end of apartheid through negotiations leading to a democratic and non-racial South Africa. We shall continue our efforts to contribute to the rapid achievement of that goal.

Import Restrictions

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions in each of the last three years and in respect of which items of trade the United Kingdom Government has invoked article 36 to restrict imports into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 22 February 1990]: Under article 36 of the treaty of Rome my Department operates longstanding restrictions on imports from Community members of firearms and ammunition and certain fissile materials. My Department has not, over the last three years, used article 36 to introduce new measures on Community products. Other Government Departments operate similar longstanding restrictions on such products as drugs, explosives and indecent or obscene articles for reasons of health, safety or public policy.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General whether, further to his reply of 21 December 1989, to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby, Official Report, column 455, any person with a professional accountancy qualification is being prosecuted for offences under section 47(2) of the Financial Services Act 1986.

The Attorney-General: No person with a professional accountancy qualification is at present being prosecuted for offences under section 47(2) of the Financial Services Act 1986.

Miss L. Ritchie

Mr. Butler: To ask the Attorney-General when the protection division of the Public Trustee Office will complete its consideration of the application relating to Miss L. Ritchie and the estate of the late Rita Dennison, deceased.

The Attorney-General: There is currently no outstanding application in either the Court of Protection or the protection division of the Public Trust Office to consider.

There is, however, an application in Warrington county court under the Law of Property Act 1925 and this application will be considered when the parties apply to the court for the matter to be set down for trial.

County Courts

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list all the county courts in England and Wales and the current level of unopened correspondence in each of them.

The Attorney-General: I am informed that there is no unopened correspondence at any of the 275 county courts in England and Wales and I refer the hon. Member to my previous reply on 21 February 1990.

"The Blooding"

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General when he intends to complete his review of the report concerning Leicestershire police and the book "The Blooding".

The Attorney-General: Two reports have been received from the police which are being considered by the Director of Public Prosecutions. He expects to reach a decision concerning criminal proceedings in the near future.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the Director of Public Prosecutions; and whether he discussed the Director of Public Prosecution's evidence to the Home Affairs Select Committee on relations between police forces and the Crown prosecution service.

The Attorney-General: I last met the Director of Public Prosecutions on Wednesday 14 February when we discussed matters of departmental interest. It is not my practice to particularise these.

Lord Chancellor's Department

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Attorney-General whether any changes will be made to the Lord Chancellor's Department's cash limit and running costs for 1989-90.

The Attorney-General: Pursuant to the answer which I gave my hon. Friend on 29 January, column 28, and subject to parliamentary approval of the revised supplementary estimate, the cash limit for the Lord Chancellor's Department, class XI, vote 5, will be further increased by £4,000,000 from £260,278,000 to £264,278,000. This increase is necessary to maintain progress on the court building programme and will be charged to the Reserve.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Single Parents

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is (a) the weekly benefit entitlement when not working of a single parent with one child aged 15 years and (b) the weekly income of a single parent with one child aged 15 years with earnings of (a) £10, (b) £15, (c) £20, (d) £30, (e) £40 and (f) £50.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is set out in the table.

Net income after housing costs at various levels of gross earnings from October 1989

Gross earnings (per week) of parent	Net income after housing costs £
a. Not working	63·69
b. £10·00 part-time	73·69
c. £15·00 part-time	78·69
d. £20·00 part-time	78·69
e. £30·00 full-time	81·68
f. £40·00 full-time	83·18
g. £50·00 full-time	84·46

Notes:
1. The assumptions and methods are those used in the tax benefit model table, copies of which are available in the Library.
2. At earnings £30·00, £40·00 and £50·00 it is assumed that the person works over 24 hours a week and therefore qualifies for family credit. At these levels of part-time earnings, net income after housing costs would remain constant at £78·69 as the person would remain on income support.

Pensions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners aged over 75 years have been awarded the new additional pension introduced by the Government.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Around 2·5 million pensioners who were already entitled to income support or housing benefit will have benefited automatically from the premium changes introduced in October 1989. This includes pensioners aged 75 or over and disabled pensioners aged 60 or over.

Information is not yet available on which to estimate the number of pensioners who newly qualified for benefit from October as a result of the changes. However, over the five months from the start of the publicity campaign in July 1989 until the end of November 1989 there were 232,000 successful income support claims from pensioners. This compares with 82,000 successful claims over the previous five months.

Information on new claims for housing benefit is not yet available.

Child Benefit

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many additional (a) families and (b) children in families will be eligible for income related benefits as a result of the freeze in child benefit (i) since April 1987 and (ii) since April 1989.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 9 February 1990]: It is impossible to give any meaningful estimate of the number of people who have or will become dependent on income-related benefits as a direct consequence of not uprating child benefit in April 1988, 1989 and 1990 because the effects cannot be viewed in isolation. It is important to remember that eligible populations and their constituents for all the income-related benefits change constantly as family incomes and circumstances change. Gross earnings have risen, and our policies to reduce tax and national insurance contributions have succeeded in enabling families with children to keep more of their earnings. In addition, we have channelled extra help to families with children through the income-related benefits.

Family Incomes and Expenditure

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish tables employing the assumptions in his answer to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 22 June 1988, Official Report, columns 575-80, but using expenditure and benefit figures appropriate for families in Greenock and Port Glasgow, together with a column showing the extent of the difference resulting from the April 1988 social security changes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 12 February 1990]: I regret that the information requested is not available for Greenock and Port Glasgow. Moreover, the passage of time and subsequent changes to the benefit system have rendered increasingly meaningless any attempt to make hypothetical comparisons between what people get now and what they might have got under a system which was almost universally recognised as being riddled with anomalies and failing to target help sensibly. With this in mind, the Government do not intend to publish tables making such comparisons any longer.

Social Fund

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many social fund applications are currently outstanding in offices covering the London borough of Newham.

Mr. Scott: The latest information available is for January 1990. For the offices serving the London borough of Newham 306 applications were brought forward as uncleared from December 1989. These were made up of 234 loan and 72 grant applications.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current level of refusals for social fund community care grants in London social security offices.

Mr. Scott: The number of refusals can be derived from the information on applications processed and awarded which is in the Library.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of income support recipients are now having deductions made from benefit as a result of paying back social fund loans (a) nationally, (b) regionally and (c) in each local Department of Social Security office area.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 19 February 1990]: The information requested is in the tables. The percentages have been calculated by referring to provisional data on the number of loans being recovered at the end of January 1990 compared with the number of income support recipients.

HEALTH

Capital Investment

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in descending order the levels of capital investment of each health district in the Northern region since 1974, and then give the figures adjusted for inflation.

Mr. Freeman: Information is not available in the form requested. Information derived from the annual accounts of the Northern regional health authority (RHA) and the district health authorities (DHAs) comprising the Northern region since the establishment on 1 April 1982 of DHAs is shown in the table.

Northern Region—District Health Authorities total capital expenditure 1982-83 to 1988-89 (inclusive)

Districts	£000 (cash)	£000 (at 1988-89 prices)
Newcastle Upon Tyne	50,098	58,778
South Tees	38,050	43,646
South Cumbria	34,845	40,124
Northumberland	31,587	36,799
South Tyneside	24,473	27,130
North Tyneside	21,309	25,937
Hartlepool	20,308	24,235
Gateshead	20,215	24,901
Sunderland	16,409	19,350
East Cumbria	14,780	17,615
Durham	12,373	14,899
South West Durham	8,132	9,600
West Cumbria	8,033	9,397
Darlington	7,675	8,824
North Tees	5,783	6,766
North West Durham	3,235	3,794
Districts total	317,305	371,795

Notes:

1. The cash based figures are the aggregate totals derived from the series of annual accounts. In deriving the aggregate figures at 1988-89 prices each year's figures have been seperately expressed at 1988-89 prices by the use of the gross domestic product deflators.

2. Capital expenditure recorded in the annual accounts of the Northern RHA in respect of district schemes has been included in the figures for the districts concerned but capital expenditure incurred by the RHA for the region as a whole is excluded.

3. Capital investment in particular regions and districts tends to fluctuate year on year mainly reflecting changes in the pattern of capital investment throughout the country and at district level it is also influenced by other local factors.

4. Prior to 1 April 1982 many of the DHAs predecessor health districts formed part of larger area health authorities and in those cases district based figures were not collected centrally.

HIV 2

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will make it his policy to screen all blood supplies for HIV 2.

Mr. Freeman: Samples from blood donors who have visited those countries where HIV 2 is common are tested for antibodies to the virus. This selective screening policy has been in existence since June 1988.

Combined tests for the antibodies to HIV 1 and HIV 2 were recently developed and the desirability of extending screening for antibodies to HIV 2 to all blood donations is under review in light of the results of their evaluation.

Disabled People

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of disabled employees in his Department and in the regional health authorities; and what is the applicable statutory quota on the recruitment of disabled persons.

Mr. Freeman: In the Department of Health in February 1990 there are 31 registered disabled employees, representing 0·74 per cent. of the work force. In addition, two appointments have recently been made under the sheltered placement scheme and another person with a disability is working for the Department at home under a remote working arrangement.

Responsibility for employment matters in the NHS rests with individual employing authorities. Figures recently published by the employment service show the number of registered disabled people employed by regional health authorities, at May 1989, to be:

Regional Health Authority	Registered disabled staff	Per cent. of work force
Northern	11·0	0·4
Yorkshire	15·0	0·5
Trent	[1]13·5	0·4
East Anglia	3·0	0·2
North West Thames	3·0	0·9
North East Thames	0·0	0·0
South East Thames	4·0	0·3
South West Thames	4·0	0·4
Wessex	4·0	0·3
Oxford	11·0	0·6
South Western	9·0	0·5
West Midlands	46·0	0·9
Mersey	9·0	0·4
North Western	10·0	0·2

[1] Staff employed between 10 and 30 hours a week are counted as half a unit.

The figures are likely to understate the number of people with disabilities because many choose not to register as disabled.

Employers of more than 20 staff have a statutory duty to employ a 3 per cent. quota of registered disabled people. This is not binding on the Crown, but Government Departments, including the Department of Health, and health authorities aim to meet or improve on this quota.

We have made clear to authorities the importance that we attach to equal opportunities for disabled people in employment, for example through our endorsement of the then Manpower Services Commission's code of practice on the employment of disabled people. We have also encouraged the formation of direct links between NHS personnel managers and the major organisations development unit of the disabled peoples service.

Child Care

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made by Her Majesty's Government to establish and develop positive child care policies to date; and if he will make a statement outlining his proposals for future child care initiatives.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government's positive child care policies have been reflected in legislation over a number of years culminating in the Children Act 1989 which updates and consolidates previous child care legislation in respect of England and Wales and will be implemented in October 1991. Regulations and guidance will follow as part of the process of implementing the Act. In addition, the Government have set up a number of specific initiatives in the child care field in England including a central training initiative on child abuse; the extension of the training support programme to inclde local authority child care staff; a central training initiative to promote the development of work with children who have been abused and young perpetrators of abuse; and a new under-fives initiative to fund local projects for young children and their families.

Free Prescriptions

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to entitle men aged 60 to 64 years to free National Health Service prescriptions;

(2) what would be the cost of extending entitlements to free National Health Service prescriptions to men aged 60 to 64 years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is not possible from the information available to estimate accurately the cost of extending the present arrangements for exemption from NHS prescription charges to include men aged 60 to 64 years. The existing arrangements, particularly those for persons on low income, ensure that no one, regardless of age, needs to forgo necessary medication on financial grounds, and we therefore have no plans to change them. As a result of these arrangements over 75 per cent. of prescription items are dispensed free.

Hospital Laundering

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures exist to ensure that the cost of laundry services provided by National Health Service laundries is properly monitored and controlled.

Mr. Freeman: It is for individual health authorities to lay down procedures that monitor the costs and control the laundry services they receive.

Sweet Cigarettes

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward legislation to ban the renewed sale of imitation sweet cigarettes to children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Existing legislation covers items which can be shown to be intrinsically unsafe. While we deplore any attempt to encourage children to regard smoking as a game, we believe it would be very difficult to try to define in legislation confectionery products which might be regarded by some people as imitations of cigarettes. We believe the better course is for the Government, and groups of people concerned with the risks of smoking to maintain public awareness of these risks, particularly among children and young people.

Nurses

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of places available to state-enrolled nurses to convert to registered general nurses in 1989 and 1990; what is the total number of applications received for these courses; what is the average waiting time for successful applicants; and if there are any plans to increase the number of places available for state-enrolled nurses wishing to undertake the conversion courses to registered general nurses.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Not all the information requested is held centrally.

Information supplied by the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting shows that 2,639 enrolled nurses were on conversion courses at 4 January 1990. By 14 February 1990 conversion courses in 210 educational institutions had been approved by the board. This compares with six by 31 March 1985.

Enrolled nurses converting to the first level qualification of registered general nurse must receive training which meets the EC equivalent for a nurse responsible for general care. The number of places available may be constrained in some areas by the availability of clinical placements, particularly in obstetrics and mental illness-handicap. We are asking health authorities to make plans for further conversion courses and to consider the more flexible modes of conversion agreed by the board which build on additional experience gained since qualification. We have also provided funding to the first 13 Project 2000 demonstration districts for an expansion of 232 places for enrolled nurses in 1989-90. We are considering further bids from schools and colleges of nursing to commence Project 2000 training in 1990-91 and are ensuring that these plans contain firm proposals for conversion courses.

Correspondence

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he intends to reply to correspondence from Dr. Bryan Scaife of Queens Park medical centre, Stockton on Tees sent to him by the hon. Member for Stockton, South;

(2) when he intends to reply to a letter from Dr. Bryan Scaife of Queens Park medical centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I have now written to my hon. Friend.

Community Hospital Sales (Shropshire)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on Shropshire health authority's proposals to sell off five community hospitals for use as private nursing homes;

(2) what revenue savings will result from the proposed selling off of five community hospitals by Shropshire health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: This is a matter for Shropshire district health authority.

I understand, however, that members of the health authority are considering outline proposals for the transfer of some continuing care services currently provided in its cottage hospitals to independent charitable trusts. Any such proposal to change the use of these hospitals would be consulted on by the DHA in the normal way, and might in due course come to Ministers for approval. Ministers' decisions would be on the proposals as finally approved by the health authority following consultations.

Any savings which might result would clearly depend on the health authority's final plans. If the hon. and learned Member wants details of possible savings from the options currently under consideration or any further details of the health authority's proposals, I suggest he should contact the district chairman direct.

North West RHA

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the allocation of funds to the North West regional health authority and South Manchester health authority for 1990-91.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 19 February 1990]: North West regional health authority's initial revenue cash limit for 1990-91 is £1,237,876,000. It is for regional health authorities to decide on the allocations to be made to their districts.

CIVIL SERVICE

Civil Service Unions

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service when he last met representatives of the Civil Service unions; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Luce: I met members of the National Union of Civil and Public Servants on 29 January to discuss physical security of Government establishments.

THE ARTS

National Film and Television School

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Minister for the Arts what is his policy on increasing training provision at the National Film and Television School.

Mr. Luce: I shall be increasing the grant to the National Film and Television School from £1·7 million in 1989-90 to £1·85 million in 1991-92. The school plays an important role in providing training for directors, camera staff and other specialists for the audio-visual industry. It is currently drawing up plans for its longer-term future which I hope to consider shortly.

Nottingham Playhouse

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will pay an official visit to the Nottingham Playhouse to discuss funding for the performing arts.

Mr. Luce: I have no plans at present to do so.

HOME DEPARTMENT

EC Computer System

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the intended use of the computer system advertised in the supplement to the official journal of the European Commission No. S244/50, dated 19 December 1989; and what new functions and facilities will it provide.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that this system will provide a computerised indexing facility for the force's general registry. No new functions or facilities will be provided, but computerisation will allow the registry to accomplish its tasks with greater speed and accuracy.

Missing Persons

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received concerning the establishment of a national missing persons register.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The only recent representations that we have received are the questions which were asked by the hon. and learned Member earlier this month.

Prisons (Inmate Committees)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Tooting on 16 January, Official Report, column 176, if he will list prisons in England and Wales that have inmate committees; how often such committees meet; what is their composition of members; how their agendas are prepared; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Information on inmate committees is not kept centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Chief Officers of Police (Cars)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many chief constables of police have chauffeur-driven cars; and if he will list them.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Transport arrangements in forces are matters for police authorities and their chief officers.

Passports

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passports have been issued by the Belfast passport office to people who lodged their applications at the Glasgow passport office in the past year; and if he will make it his policy that passports should be marked as having been issued at the office to which the application was sent, regardless of any other administrative arrangements which may be made by his Department.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since September 1989, about 50,000 passport applications sent to the Glasgow passport office have been transferred to the Belfast office for processing under the passport department's arrangements for balancing workloads between offices to reduce delays. To show on a passport an issuing office other than that which issued the passport would be administratively difficult, confusing, and contrary to international passport practice.

Firearms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of shotgun and firearms certificates issued in 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not yet available. The 1988 figures for England and Wales are published in Home Office statistical bulletin 18/89, a copy of which is in the Library.

Cable Television

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cable franchises have been allocated since 1984; to which companies and when; what is the proportion of foreign ownership in each; and how many homes have been cabled up by each contractor.

Mr. Mellor: Since 1984 the Cable Authority has allocated 53 cable franchises. I understand that on 1 January 1990 a total of 303,427 households were connected to cable systems, of which 88,006 were connected to broadband cable. I have placed in the Library a list of the other information requested, where this is not commercially confidential.

Criminal Injuries (Compensation)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many victims in the years 1987, 1988 and 1989 received compensation from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board for sums between £550 and £750; and what percentage this represented of the total number of awards in these years.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given yesterday to questions from the hon. Members for Don. Valley (Mr. Redmond) and for Torfaen (Mr. Murphy).

"Error of Judgement"

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department first received a copy of the book "Error of Judgement"; and what action was taken.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office obtained a copy of the book "Error of Judgement" shortly after publication in July 1986. On 2 September 1986, the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) discussed the content of his book with officials of the Home Office criminal department, and subsequently discussed a number of the points raised in the book with an Assistant Chief Constable of the West Midlands police. The book was considered by my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd), among a number of representations which had been made to him about the safety of the convictions of the Birmingham Six, before coming to his decision on 20 January 1987 to refer the whole case to the Court of Appeal.

Police Pensions

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the difference in annual pension between police constables, sergeants and inspectors and their respective widows where their police service was completed (a) prior to 1960 and (b) since the current police pension scheme was introduced.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is as follows:

Retirement date	Constable £	Sergeant £	Inspector £
1959	3,510(1,400)	4,010(1,610)	4,700(1,880)
1989	7,560(5,040)	8,300(5,530)	9,420(6,280)

1. The figures assume that each officer had the maximum period of reckonable service of 30 years and opted to commute part of his pension for a lump sum payment.

2. Widows' entitlements are shown in brackets; the figures in the first line reflect cost of living increases during the intervening period and assume that each officer opted for a widow's award based on one third of his pension (before commutation).

Mr. Kenneth Carter

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now give a substantive answer to the questions for priority written answer on 8 February from the hon. Member for Stockton, South relating to the case of Mr. Kenneth Carter, a prisoner in Durham prison, to which a holding answer was given.

Mr. Mellor: I replied to my hon. Friend yesterday.

North Africa (Visas)

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to impose a visa requirement on nationals of Algeria, Morocco or Tunisia who wish to enter the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: I will shortly lay before Parliament a statement of changes in the immigration rules which will include provisions requiring nationals of Algeria, Morocco or Tunisia to obtain visas before travelling to the United Kingdom. The Governments of the three countries have been informed, and the necessary formal notice of one month under our agreements for the abolition of visas with Morocco (1958, Cm. 623) and Tunisia (1962, Cm. 1989) will be given to those two Governments. The United Kingdom has no such agreement with Algeria. The new visa requirements will come into effect on 1 April.

This change, like that in June 1989 in respect of Turkey, should be seen in the context of the increasingly close co-operation between the member states of the European Community on immigration matters. EC Ministers with responsibility for immigration matters have for some time had under consideration possible additions to the list of countries for whose nationals all member states require visas; and among the countries which have been given particular consideration in this context are Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia. A majority of member states already require visas of Algerian and Moroccan nationals, and six member states already require visas of Tunisian nationals. In the light of increasing operating difficulties with nationals of these countries, the Government have decided that the time has come for the United Kingdom also to require visas of all three nationalities. Growing numbers of nationals of these countries are proving ineligible for entry on arrival at United Kingdom ports. This had placed strains on the immigration control and created delays and inconvenience for passengers.

The introduction of these visa requirements should benefit all bona fide travellers, who will know before they depart that they are eligible for admission to the United Kingdom, and will be less likely to encounter delays on arrival. Our visa issuing posts in the three countries are being strengthened to ensure an efficient service. Regular visitors to this country will be eligible for multiple-entry visas.

London Underground (Smoking)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the level of fines imposed by magistrates on those convicted of smoking on the London Underground.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 26 January 1990]: Our records show that since November 1987 we have received five letters on this subject.

Murder Trials

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about enabling the families of murder victims to be legally represented in court during trials; and what has been his response.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 20 February 1990]: We are acutely conscious of the sense of grievance felt by the families of some murder victims that they have no opportunity to be heard in court. Entitling the victim's family to be represented at the trial would mean fundamental changes of principle and practice in how criminal proceedings are brought and conducted, and would need careful consideration. There may be other mechanisms for ensuring that the views of families in murder cases and of victims themselves in other cases are taken properly into account. These are difficult issues on which the Government are inviting views in their victims charter published yesterday.

WALES

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West of 2 February, Official Report, columns 372-73, (1) which authority or company will be responsible for the cost of works undertaken within the inland bay to maintain water quality under the provisions of the Cardiff Bay Barrage Bill after the 20-year period following the commencement of impoundment;

(2) which authority or company will be responsible for the ownership and maintenance of works undertaken within the inland bay to maintain water quality under the provisions of the Cardiff Bay Barrage Bill after the 20-year period following the commencement of impoundment.

Mr. Grist: The responsibility for the ownership maintenance and costs of works undertaken within the inland bay to maintain water quality lies with the promoters of the Cardiff Bay Barrage Bill. There are provisions within the Bill to enable the development corporation's responsibilities to pass to a successor body on the dissolution of the development corporation.

Nursing

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total number of places available to state enrolled nurses to convert to registered general nurses in 1989 and 1990; what is the average waiting time for successful applicants; and if there are any plans to increase the number of places available for state enrolled nurses wishing to undertake the conversion courses to registered general nurses.

Mr. Grist: The number of places available to second level general nurses to convert to first level general nurses in Wales in 1989 and 1990 is as follows:

1989—130
1990—142 (to date)

Information about the average waiting time for successful applicants is not held centrally.

The Government's response to Project 2000 stressed the need to increase the number of second level nurse conversion courses, and the United Kingdom Central Council and the Welsh National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting are examining the provision for more flexible modes of conversion. Health authorities in Wales have been encouraged to increase opportunities for second level nurse conversion wherever possible.

DEFENCE

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many army personnel have been injured in their duties as temporary ambulance workers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Nine service personnel have been injured while assisting in providing temporary accident and emergency cover during the present ambulance workers' dispute. None of the injuries were serious.

D Notices

Mr. Graham Allen: To Ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the subject of each D notice issued in the last six months.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No new D notices have been issued in the past six months, although the eight standing D notices on which the system has been based since 1982 were reprinted and reissued to the media in November 1989. At the same time, D notice No. 4, formerly entitled "Radio and Radar Transmissions", was revised, to take account of advances in technology, and is now entitled "Electronic Equipments and Electro-Magnetic Transmissions". Copies of the D notices are held by the Library of the House.

Low Flying

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints the Government have received about low flying planes in Scotland in the years 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990 to date.

Mr. Neubert: The Ministry of Defence has received inquiries and complaints about military low flying training in Scotland as follows:

	Number
1987	729
1988	875
1989	1,440
1990	93

The figure for 1990 covers the month of January.

SCOTLAND

Police Forces

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will list, for each year since 1979, the countries from Latin America and other non-democratic states that have sent delegations of police officers or military to study the police technology, crowd control techniques and computers used by Scottish police forces.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The table gives details of all centrally recorded visits by police officers and associated civilian personnel to Scotland from overseas, in the course of which interest has been shown in the subjects specified.

Year	Technology	Computers	Crowd Control
1986	Sudan	Sudan	—
		Guyana	—
1987	Australia	—	—

Farm Incomes

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average net income from livestock farms in Scotland of 50 to 100 acres 100 acres to 200 acres and other small farms under 50 acres; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is not available in the form requested. Data on average net income by type of farm and farm business size are published in "Farm Incomes in Scotland, 1988-89", a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many YTS trainees receive a top-up from their employers over and above the basic YTS rate, giving the results by region.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available.

Tourism

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate (a) the number of foreign tourists coming to Britain in 1989 and (b) the value of tourism to Britain in 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: During the first 11 months of 1989, the latest period available, overseas residents made an estimated 16·1 million visits to the United Kingdom, 9 per cent. more than in the same period of 1988. For the same period it is provisionally estimated that overseas residents spent £6,285 million in the United Kingdom, 9 per cent. higher than for the equivalent period in 1988.

Tourism (South Africa)

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a statement on the United Kingdom ban on the promotion of tourism to South Africa.

Mr. Howard: The Government have made clear their view that the steps President de Klerk has taken have transformed the political climate in South Africa. He has opened the way to a peaceful end to apartheid through negotiation. This deserves a constructive response from the international community.

In 1986 European Community Foreign Ministers and, separately, Heads of Government participating at the Commonwealth review meeting agreed to impose a number of measures against South Africa, including a ban on the promotion of tourism to South Africa. The then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Employment announced the implementation in the United Kingdom of this ban in a written answer to a parliamentary question on 30 October 1986 (c. 213, Vol. 103). In our case the measure was voluntary.

When imposing the measures European Community Foreign Ministers reaffirmed the urgent need for a genuine national dialogue, across lines of colour, politics and religion. To this end they called on the South African Government to release unconditionally Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners, and to lift the bans on the African National Congress, Pan Africanist Congress of Azania and other political parties. Separately they expressed their wish to see the state of emergency brought to an end. The steps President de Klerk has taken open the way to such a dialogue. It would be logical, therefore, to respond by lifting the measures imposed at that time.

When the participants in the Commonwealth review meeting in London in 1986 agreed to impose certain measures they referred in their communiqué to the deteriorating situation in South Africa and to a spiralling cycle of violence and counter-violence. They called on the South African Government to initiate a process of dialogue and said that if this call received a positive response and the South African Government took the steps demanded of them, they would review the situation and, if appropriate, rescind the measures. The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Employment referred to that undertaking when announcing our ban on the promotion of tourism in 1986.

Accordingly Her Majesty's Government are now lifting the ban on the promotion of tourism to South Africa. It will be for individual organisations in the tourist trade to decide whether or not to promote tourism to South Africa. The Government will no longer discourage them.

Our goal remains the peaceful end of apartheid through negotiations leading to a democratic and non-racial South Africa. We shall continue our efforts to contribute to the rapid achievement of that goal.

Adult Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total estimated expenditure on adult training in each of the years 1988-89 to 1992-93 inclusive, in cash and real terms, for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Expenditure on adult training[1] in the years 1988-89 to 1992-93 in cash prices and constant 1988-89 prices is given in the following table:

	Cash prices £ million	Constant prices[2] £ million
1988-89 outturn	690	690
1989-90 forecast	1,158	1,082
1990-91 planned	1,280	1,139
1991-92 planned	1,250	1,074
1992-93 planned	1,271	1,061

[1] Adult training includes the following programmes: business enterprise programme, business growth training, employment rehabilitation centres, employment training, industrial language training service, local collaborative projects, local grants to employers, national priority skills, new job training scheme, old job training scheme, residential training for the disabled, training for enterprise, voluntary project programme, wider opportunities training programme. It does not include the community programme.

[2] Cash figures adjusted to 1988-89 price levels by excluding the effect of general inflation as measured by the gross domestic product deflator.

Employment Training

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total expenditure both outturn and planned on employment training and those programmes subsumed by employment training for each of the years 1985-86 to 1992-93, in both cash and real terms, for Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: The following table shows planned expenditure and outturn expenditures on employment training and the programmes subsumed by employment training[1] for each of the years 1985-86 to 1992-93 in both cash and real terms, for Great Britain.

	Cash prices		Constant prices[2]
	Planned £ million	Outturn £ million	Planned £ million	Outturn £ million
1985-86	909	867	1,061	1,012

1991-92	1,180	n/a	1,057	n/a
1992-93	1,200	n/a	1,002	n/a

[1] Programmes subsumed by employment training were: community programme, job training scheme, new job training scheme, residential training for the disabled, voluntary projects programme, wider opportunities training programme.

[2] Cash prices adjusted to 1988-89 price levels by excluding the effect of general inflation as measured by the gross domestic product deflator.

[3] Forecast.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of employment training trainees in (a) employer/work-based schemes and (b) project-based schemes for each quarter between December 1988 and December 1989 and for each of the standard regions, Scotland, Wales and Great Britain.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Information is not available in the precise form requested. Information is available only for the eight Training Agency regions in England and for Scotland and Wales and is given in the following table.

Radiation (Exposure)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to reduce the maximum exposure of workers to radiation to 10 mSv a year.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 21 February 1990]: No. On 5 February 1990 the Health and Safety Commission published a consultative document inviting comments on additional guidance on dose limitation. This proposed that decisions on whether doses are as low as reasonably practicable should take account of the latest revisions of estimated risk from exposure to ionising radiations and additional action where a worker's annual dose exceeded 15 mSv on average. My right hon. and learned Friend is awaiting further advice from the Health and Safety Commission as to any additional measures that may now be seen as necessary.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Soviet Union

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise with the Soviet Union, under the terms of the Helsinki agreement the question of the provision of direct flights between the Soviet Union and Israel.

Mr. Waldegrave: We welcome the greatly increased flow of Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union. The question of direct flights between Israel and the Soviet Union is not covered by the Helsinki final act, and is for the two countries themselves to decide.

EC Directives

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many European Community directives have been (a) implemented, (b) not implemented and (c) infringed, by each European Community country; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Under the EC treaties it is for the Commission to monitor the implementation of Community legislation. The most recent information available on the implementation and application of Community law was contained in the fifth annual Commission report to the European Parliament (Official Journal of the European Communities, c. 310; volume 31 of 5 December 1988), a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Publication of the sixth annual report is expected shortly.

In respect of single market measures alone, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 9 January by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Corporate Affairs to my hon. Friend the Member for Corby (Mr. Powell), which gave details of implementation and confirmed the United Kingdom's excellent record.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost of enabling married couples who wish to share the benefits of married couples allowance equally between them from 1990 to do so; and what would be the income distribution of those couples who would financially gain.

Mr. Lilley: The costs to the Exchequer of allowing married couples who wish to share the married couple's allowance equally between them are uncertain, but they might be up to £20 million per annum. In addition there would be a substantial cost of extra staff required by Inland Revenue. About 50,000 couples where the wife pays tax at the higher rate and the husband at the basic rate would benefit, as would some other couples where the husband receives income subject to composite rate tax. Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional. I regret that further information is not available.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to revise the estimate of direct costs of abolishing income tax rates above 40 per cent. in the 1988 Financial Statement and Budget Report, in the light of the Exchequer's receipts since then.

Mr. Lilley: No. Updating the estimates of the direct costs of the higher rate tax cuts on the basis of later information on incomes or tax receipts would be misleading as increases resulting from the incentive effects of lower marginal tax rates would inflate the calculated costs.

It is not possible to isolate the incentive effects of the 1988 Budget measures on income and employment. However, the buoyancy of income tax receipts in 1988-89 and 1989-90 suggests that the tax yield from the improvements to the supply side of the economy have helped to offset the direct costs of the reductions in the basic and higher rates of income tax.

Leasing Schemes

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total amount of money disputed between the Inland Revenue and taxpayers involved in leasing schemes based on the artificial manipulation of capital allowances which the Revenue's special investigation section are challenging through the special commissioners of income tax.

Mr. Lilley: The total amount of tax in dispute in all such cases is approximately £135 million. Separate figures are not available for cases before the special commissioners.

Profit-related Pay

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the change in employment in each year in firms with profit-related pay and in firms without profit-related pay.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information is not available.

Domestic Premises (Sales)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish a table showing for sales of domestic premises in 1988-89 (a) the number of transactions in each region and (b) the number which were exempt for falling under the duty threshold.

Mr. Lilley: The available information is given in the following table. Reliable estimates for Scotland and Northern Ireland are not available.

Sales of residential property in 1988-89 by region in England and Wales

	Total number of transactions (thousands)	Number not above stamp duty threshold of £30,000[1] (thousands)

Works of Art

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what taxes the vendor of a major work of art is liable to pay on the price obtained; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: Assuming that the work of art is not being sold as part of a trading activity, the vendor may be liable to capital gains tax on any gain realised on disposal. If the work of art has previously been conditionally exempted from capital taxation an inheritance tax charge may also be triggered. Special rules apply if the sale is by private treaty to an approved museum, art gallery or heritage body.

Manufactured Goods

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for manufacturers, less food, drink and tobacco, the percentage and value increase between 1984 and 1989 in purchases of (i) imported and (ii) home-produced manufactures less food, drink and tobacco, together with the value of sales including income from employment and gross profit etc. as separate items.

Mr. Norman Lamont: This information is not available. No estimates yet exist of purchases by manufacturers in 1989.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report for the input-output tables for the years 1979, 1984 and 1989, a table showing for manufacturing industry less food drink and tobacco the value of purchases of (i) imports and (ii) home-produced manufactured goods less food and drink and tobacco, together with the value of sales and the contribution made by employment and gross profits etc.;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report, input tables for the United Kingdom for 1984, 1986 and 1989, which exclude food, drink and tobacco from manufacturing on both sides of the account and, if required, a reconciliation with the trade figures; and if he will addk for manufactures so defined the total input showing income from employment and gross profit etc.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information requested is available for 1984 only, within cost limits. The table for 1984 following the classifications and definitions used in table 2.6 of the "United Kingdom National Accounts" (the CSO Blue Book), 1988, has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Workplace Nurseries

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to collect information to enable him to make a reliable estimate of tax liability on the benefit of subsidised workplace nurseries provided by employers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: Employers give details of employee's taxable expenses and benefits to tax offices on form P11D. The forms for years up to 1988-89 do not separately identify the taxable benefits of subsidised workplace nurseries.

Conveyancing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish a table further to table 15.1 of Inland Revenue Statistics 1989, showing for 1988 the same information on conveyances of freehold and leasehold residential property in the London borough of Lambeth.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that reliable information is not available at the level of detail requested.

Housing Stock

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the ratio of the capital value of the housing stock to the rateable value in each of the standard regions; and if he will provide a separate figure for council housing.

Mr. Lilley: An estimate of the capital value of the housing stock is contained in the book "United Kingdom National Accounts 1989". The other information could not be produced in the form requested without a disproportionate expenditure of time and resources.

Royal Mint

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to respond to the report of the Comptroller and Auditor General on the Royal Mint especially in regard to quality assurance procedures (British standard 5750) and fixed costs borne by the taxpayer in regard to marketing, promotion and sales.

Mr. Ryder: The Public Accounts Committee heard evidence on the Comptroller and Auditor-General's report on 19 February. It will issue its own report in due course and the Government will then give their considered response. I therefore do not wish to anticipate what the Public Accounts Committee will say at this stage.

Community Charge Records

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate what instructions or guidance have been given to the Inland Revenue in relation to access to community charge records for income tax purposes.

Mr. Lilley: None.

Tax Relief

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much it would cost to restrict (a) personal tax allowances, (b) age allowance, (c) mortgage interest tax relief and (d) tax relief for occupational and private pensions to the basic rate in 1990-91 and in a full year.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 12 February 1990]: Estimates of the direct revenue yield in a full year at 1990-91 levels of income from restricting the main income tax reliefs and allowances to the basic rate are as follows:

	£ million
Personal allowances	1,100
Age allowances	nil
Retirement annuity relief[1]	100

[1] Including relief for retirement annuity payment made by employees.

It would be premature to provide an estimate for mortgage interest relief, since the cost will depend on the amounts of mortgage lending and level of interest rates. Similarly, the estimate for employees' superannuation and personal pension contributions would depend on take-up.

Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional. The estimates allow for the introduction of independent taxation and assume that the tax regime for 1989-90 has been indexed to 1990-91 in accordance with the rules for statutory indexation.

Privatisation

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total sale price received and the net asset value of each public undertaking sold since 1980.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 20 February 1990]: The information the hon. Member requested is as follows. In the case of the 10 water companies I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for water to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 5 February 1990, Official Report, columns 436-37.

Net asset values do not take account of contingent liabilities (for example, liabilities to employees, etc).

Balance of Trade

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the data on which he based his conclusion that the balance of payments deficit in manufactured goods in 1989 was due to excessive consumption; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the balance of trade in manufactures less erratics in 1978 and 1989 in terms of 1988 prices together with the percentage of gross domestic product spent by consumers on goods other than fuel, food, drink and tobacco.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 22 February 1990]: It is not possible to make precise estimates of the contributions of various elements of expenditure to the increase in the deficit in trade in manufactured goods. Data on the trade deficit, and on the components of consumers' expenditure, are available in the Library. The balance of trade in manufactures at constant 1988 prices can be derived from the CSO databank which can be accessed through the Library.

Building Societies

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to building societies as a result of the composite rate of tax; and what assessment he has made of the extent of the relief that could be extended to borrowers if the tax were ended.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 22 February 1990]: Building societies and other deposit-takers account for composite rate tax on interest paid to depositors and I am not aware of any particular cost to those institutions. It is not clear that any relief would be extended to borrowers if the tax were ended.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 167

SESSION 1989–90

12th February—23rd February 1990

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
